"(7) The following control measures shall be carried out at the first stage. On-the-spot international control shall be established over the destruction of rocket weapons, military aircraft, surface naval vessels, submarines and other means which could be used as carriers of atomic and hydrogen weapons. International inspection teams shall be dispatched to the places of deployment of military bases and troops on foreign territories to supervise the elimination of the said bases and the withdrawal of military personnel and troops to within their own national territories. Control shall be also established on airfields and at ports to ensure these airfields and ports not being used for military purposes. At the same time, the destruction of missile launching sites shall be carried out under the supervision of an international control organization with the exception of the sites which will be maintained for the launching of rockets for peaceful purposes.

"The Control organization will be entitled to unrestricted inspection of all enterprises, plants, factories and shipyards which were previously engaged fully or in part in the production of missiles, aircraft, surface naval vessels, submarines and all other means of delivering nuclear weapons, to prevent clandestine production of armaments which could be used as carriers of atomic and hydrogen weapons. On agreement, fixed control teams may be established at some works and installations. International inspection teams dispatched by the Control organization shall be entitled to carry out comprehensive examination of rocket devices being launched for peaceful purposes and to be present at the time of launching. The inspectors shall communicate with the Control Council through existing channels of communication and there shall be provided such privileges which will ensure prompt delivery of reports and instructions.

"(8) At the first stage, joint studies shall be undertaken of the measures on the discontinuance of the manufacture of nuclear, chemical and bacteriological weapons and on the destruction of the stockpiles of such types of weapons, i.e. of the measures which are to be implemented at the second stage.

"(9) The first stage must be accomplished within one to 1½ years. The Control organization shall review the results of carrying out the measures of the first stage to report on them to the States, parties to the Treaty, as well as to the Security Council and the UN General Assembly.

The second stage:

"(1) There shall be a complete prohibition of nuclear, chemical, bacteriological and other weapons of mass destruction along with the cessation of the manufacture and destruction of all the stockpiles thereof.

"(2) The armed forces of all States shall be reduced to agreed levels. The armed forces level for USA and USSR shall not exceed 1,700,000 men. Conventional weapons and ammunitions thus released shall be destroyed and military equipment shall be either destroyed or be used for peaceful purposes. Military expenditures of States shall be reduced accordingly.

"(3) The following measures of control shall be undertaken at the second stage. Representatives of the Control organization shall make on-the-spot inspection of the destruction of all available stockpiles of nuclear, chemical and bacteriological weapons. The Control organization shall be entitled to inspect all enterprises engaged in the extraction of atomic raw materials, in the production or use of atomic materials and atomic energy. Fixed control teams may be established, subject to agreement, at some enterprises and installations. On-the-spot international control shall be established to supervise the disbandment of troops and the destruction of armaments. Inspectors shall supervise the exact and timely compliance with the decisions on the disbandment of military formations and units, elimination and destruction of material of conventional arms, military equipment and ammunition and report to the Control Council and to the Government of the host-country. International inspection groups shall include experts depending on the nature of units subject to disbandment and the types of weapons to be destroyed. The Control organization shall have unrestricted access to the documents pertaining to budget allocations of States for military purposes including all the decrees of legislative and executive bodies on this subject.

"(4) Joint studies shall be undertaken at the second stage of the following measures to be implemented at the third stage:

"(a) Measures to assure compliance with the Treaty on general and complete disarmament upon the implementation of all measures stipulated in such a Treaty;

"(b) Measures to safeguard peace and security in accordance with the UN Charter in conditions of general and complete disarmament.

"(5) Similar to the transition from the first to the second stage, the Control organization shall sum up the results of the second stage steps to report them to the States, parties to the Treaty, as well as to the Security Council and the General Assembly of the United Nations.

The third stage:

"(1) The elimination of the armed forces of all States shall be completed. States shall retain at their disposal only strictly limited contingents of police (militia), the size of which shall be agreed upon for each country and which shall be equipped with small fire-arms and be intended for the maintenance of internal order and the protection of personal security of citizens.

"(2) All remaining types of conventional armaments and ammunitions both in the armed forces and in depots shall be destroyed and the military equipment shall be subject to destruction or use for peaceful purposes.

"(3) Military production at all factories shall be terminated including the manufacture of conventional armaments with the exception of the strictly limited manufacture of small fire-arms designed for the contingents of police (militia) retained by the States after the completion of the programme of general and complete disarmament.

"(4) War ministries, general staffs and all military and para-military establishments and organizations shall be abolished. All military training of reservists shall be terminated. In accordance with their respective constitutional procedures, States shall enact legislation prohibiting military education of young people and abolishing military service in all its forms.

"(5) The appropriation of funds for military purposes in any form, whether from State bodies, private individuals or public organizations, shall be discontinued. The funds released as a result of the implementation of general and complete disarmament shall be used to reduce or abolish taxation of the population, to subsidize national economies and to furnish economic and technical assistance to under-developed countries.

"(6) At the third stage, the following additional measures on control shall be undertaken. The Control organization shall send Controllers for on-the-spot inspection of the abolition of war ministries, general staffs, military and para-military establishments and organizations, and of the termination of military training and all other kinds of military activities. Control shall be established over the discontinuance of the appropriation of funds for military purposes. The Control organization may, when necessary, institute a system of aerial observation and aerial photography over the territories of States.

"(7) After the implementation of the programme of general and complete disarmament, the Control organization shall be preserved and shall carry out constant supervision over the implementation by States of the obligations assumed. The Control Council shall have the right to send mobile inspection teams to any point or any establisnment in the territories of States. States shall furnish to the Control organization data concerning the places of deployment of the contingents of police (militia), their strength in every place (area) as well as any transfer of sizable contingents of police (militia) near the State boundaries. International inspection teams shall carry out comprehensive control so that the strength of police (militia) and their armaments be in conformity with the norms agreed upon for each country.

"(8) Other measures worked out to assure compliance with the Treaty on complete disarmament shall enter into force.

"(9) Measures for preserving peace and security in accordance with the UN Charter shall be implemented. States shall undertake to place, when necessary, at the disposal of the Security Council formations out of the contingents of police (militia) remaining at the disposal of States. Gradually, with the implementation of the programme of disarmament and the reduction of military expenditures of States, the funds thus released as a result of this shall be partly used to render economic assistance to under-developed countries.

"This is the proposal of the Soviet Union concerning the order of the implementation of general and complete disarmament with considerations expressed by the Western Powers taken into account.

"Submitting this proposal, the Soviet Government expresses its readiness to reach agreement on the implementation of disarmament on the basis of the present proposals constituting an elaboration of the programme put forward on September 18, 1959. The most important thing is to conclude an Agreement and to finally commence general and complete disarmament which is awaited by the peoples and urged by the United Nations. The Soviet Government is prepared to do it without delay, without waste of time, and it expresses its sincere hope that other States will do likewise, being fully conscious of the responsibility for disarmament which rests upon the Governments of all States, particularly on the Governments of the Great Powers."

Mr. N. Khruschev's Letters To Heads Of Governments:

Tass said later that Mr. N. Khruschev had sent letters to the Heads of Governments explaining why he had made his new disarmament proposals.

Mr. Khruschev said in his letters that the new Soviet proposals took into account some of the suggestions made by Russia's partners in the disarmament talks at Geneva. Specifically, they took account of the French Government's suggestion that measures should be taken at the start of the disarmament programme to destroy the means of nuclear delivery.

He said that he had grave doubts about the intentions of the Western Powers represented at the 10-nation Disarmament Committee. His impression was that the Western Powers were not prepared in effect to carry out the resolution on general and complete disarmament which they themselves voted for in the United Nations General Assembly on November 20, 1959.

Mr. N. Khruschev On New Proposals:

Mr. Nikita Khruschev referred to the new Soviet proposals again at a news conference in Moscow on June 3 when he said that all nuclear weapon-carriers and foreign bases should be banned and liquidated as a first step towards complete world disarmament.

He also called for an International Police Force under the UN Security Council to enforce disarmament.

He declared that the Soviet Union stood by its warning to nations housing American bases—that they would be the first targets in case Soviet air-space was violated.

He said that the Soviet Union still stuck to its plan for general and complete disarmament, but she was willing to go along with arguments by some nations, especially France, that practical implementation of disarmament should start with the destruction of the means of delivering nuclear weapons. The Soviet Union made this proposal even though it was generally known to be superior in up-to-date effective delivery vehicles including inter-continental ballistic missiles.

He added that the proposal for an International Police Force did not mean that the Soviet Union was ready to drop the UN veto, "because it is a very wise thing and must stay." This was because the "imperialist camp" had a majority in the Council.

He said that Mr. Eisenhower was a man without will-power and without initiative, a simple instrument in the hands of his entourage.

Mr. Khruschev went on to say that the Soviet Union would like to have as a future partner a "wise man" invested as US President. The Soviet Union was not concerned about the US elections, since neither its future nor that of the rest of the world depended on the purely internal choice of the American people.

If Mr. Eisenhower came to the Soviet Union after his term as US President had ended, he would give him a job as manager of a children's home. He would be kind to children. But to have such a man as head of a mighty State was very dangerous.

Even at the last moment in Paris, Mr. Eisenhower had wanted to come to the Soviet Union. At the 'Summit' Conference in Paris, the Soviet Union was approached for permission for the Presidential party to enter the country. "I was amazed at this, because I could not imagine that it was possible for him to come to the Soviet Union after what he had done." Mr. Eisenhower's term in office would remain "a dark period in American history."

Committee's Debate:

Making the first British comment on the new Soviet proposals, the British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore, said in the 10-nation Disarmament Committee on June 8 that a ban on nuclear weapons without corresponding reductions in conventional armaments would be "a fraud on the peoples of the world."

If a conventional war started, he said, nuclear weapons "would certainly re-appear within a year."

Reviewing the progress made so far at the talks, he said, he was inclined to agree with the Soviet delegate, Mr. Valerian Zorin, that they had served a useful purpose and that certain areas of agreement had emerged.

He then went on to re-affirm the four principles tabled by the Western Powers at the Conference on April 26, which, he said, had not been rejected by the Soviet Union: (1) Disarmament by stages; (2) A military balance between States and between nuclear and conventional disarmament; (3) Effective and continuing international controls and prevention of evasion; and (4) Building of international confidence and the need for disarmament measures to be negotiated progressively.

On June 9, the Canadian delegate, General E. L. M. Burns, said that the Western Powers appreciated the changes made by the Soviet Union in its latest proposals.

On June 10, the US delegate, Mr. Frederick Eaton, said that the latest Soviet disarmament Plan was an "encouraging" move toward Western views on some points; but, at the same time, the Soviet Union stood to gain by a triple ban on nuclear weapons vehicles, foreign bases and stationing of troops abroad.

The Soviet Plan, he said, took positive steps by giving details on disarmament control, suggesting an immediate halt to the production of fissionable material for military purposes and dropping the four-year deadline for complete disarmament.

Another encouraging sign was the proposal for an International Police Force to keep the peace till disarmament is achieved.

On the other hand, the Soviet Plan was unbalanced, cumbersome to operate and disadvantageous to the West so far as the ban on nuclear vehicles and troops and bases abroad were concerned.

Mr. Valerian Zorin (USSR) said in reply that he did not feel the West had taken a step toward the Soviet views.

He said that the Soviet Union rejected piecemeal disarmament and insisted on a deadline for the disarmament process, however long, but was ready to examine any Western proposal aimed at going ahead with conventional and nuclear disarmament.

The French delegate, M Jules Moch, said on June 13 that while the Russians appeared to have accepted some French ideas on disarmament, it was a serious error to suppose that they could disrupt the solidarity of the Western alliance.

But, he said, he did not think the Russian Plan had been drawn up with this intention.

Some features of the Soviet Plan were unacceptable to the West. If the disarmament proposals were carried out before effective control measures were established, it would jeopardize Western security.

M Moch suggested on June 15 that artificial satellites carrying nuclear weapons should be eliminated at the very start of any programme to ban vehicles carrying atomic arms.

From this, he said, they could go on to ban other types of vehicles like rockets, aircraft and sea-going vessels.

M. Moch said that he was making this proposal because there might not be an agreement in the beginning about banning all vehicles. Military satellites were not now in mass production and a ban on them could easily be agreed upon.

In regard to rockets which had already become an operational weapon, he said, launching sites could be controlled, and there should be some 200 centres throughout the world to detect any secret launching. There should be a limit on present stocks of rockets as well as on their future production.

On June 16, the British delegate, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore, said that the Soviet proposal to include the withdrawal of foreign bases in the first stage of disarmament would give Russia a big strategic advantage over the Western Powers.

He said that the withdrawal of Western troops from Europe would in no way be compensated by similar Soviet withdrawals from the Warsaw Pact countries, because the Soviet troops, in his opinion, could return quickly.

He also justified the Western bases around the Soviet Union on the ground that there were numerous missile institutions within the Soviet Union and the Soviet leaders had repeatedly spoken of the possibility of total destruction of smaller neighbours. Small countries had every right to have bases and foreign forces on their territories to ensure their own freedom. This would be necessary as long as the present distrust among the Big Powers continued.

On June 17, Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) accused the United States Government of deliberately trying to create a deadlock and intensify the arms race.

Referring to the question of foreign bases, he said that the world would heave a sigh of relief if these bases were eliminated. It was not accidental that the Japanese people had rejected the visit of the American President, Mr. D. Eisenhower, because they directly linked this visit to the policy aimed at perpetuating American military bases in Japan. From this incident, which had happened for the first time in history, USA should draw practical conclusions.

Mr. F. Eaton (USA) said that the argument frequently advanced by Mr. Zorin that USA was not interested in disarmament and that the Soviet Union was the 'apostle of peace' did not advance the cause of the negotiations.

Committee Breaks Up:

On June 27, the Soviet Union and her communist allies walked out of the Disarmament Committee and said that they would take the problem to the United Nations General Assembly in September, 1960.

In a statement before the walk-out Mr. Valerian Zorin blamed the West for the deadlock and said:

"The Soviet Government is seriously worried by the fact that through the fault of the Western Powers the negotiations in the 10-nation Committee on Disarmament have reached a stalemate.

"The programme for universal and complete disarmament submitted by the Soviet Union for the 14th session of the UN General Assembly and the adoption by the General Assembly on November 20, 1959 of a resolution calling upon Governments to make every effort to achieve a constructive solution of the problem of universal and complete disarmament gave the peoples of the world a new hope that the cause of disarmament would be shifted from the position of deadlock.

"Unfortunately, the Western Powers, instead of tackling in the Committee of 10 the working out of a disarmament programme, put forward proposals which aim at establishing control without disarmament and, as before, reduce the whole matter to an arid discussion of control.

"It is significant that special emphasis is being placed on the establishment of control of military cosmic rockets. It is easy to understand that USA and its partners expect thus to obtain unilateral military advantages for themselves and the military blocs which they head.

"As against the Western Powers, USSR and other socialist countries are not aiming at gaining any military advantages for one of the parties. The proposals of USSR meet the interests of the security of all countries in equal measure.

"The implementation of the programme for general and complete disarmament would lead to a liquidation of all means of warfare and this would place all States in an equal position and would ensure stable peace on earth."

The Chairman of the day's session, Mr. Marian Naszkowski (Poland) denied several Western delegates the right to speak before the walk-out.

Mr. Zorin took the floor first, followed by other communist delegates, and then they all withdrew.

After the walk-out, the five Western delegates remained seated at the table to discuss the situation.

Mr. David Ormsby-Gore (UK) said that there was no agreement that the Conference should break off its discussions. "We have witnessed this morning a most shocking action by the Soviet Union and other communist delegations."

Mr. Frederick Eaton (USA) told his fellow Western delegates: "This is a sad moment."

He expressed regret that the communist delegates should have left the room in spite of an ardent request that they should stay. "It is abundantly clear that the Russians have no intention of reaching a disarmament agreement."

He said that before he left for Washington, he had spoken privately to Mr. Zorin and had told him that he was going to USA to discuss the Soviet views as well as those of the West. Mr. Zorin had replied that he would be very glad if his trip helped their discussions to make progress.

He went on: "I saw Mr. Zorin again this morning (June 27) and told him that my visit to Washington had been very fruitful and that I had returned with proposals that would help our negotiations. Mr. Zorin's only comment was that the discussions had been going badly for the past few days."

Mr. Eaton then said that he wished to table the new US proposals as a Conference document, so that the Soviet Union and the world could see that the West had something genuine and worthwhile to say.

The Russians had repeatedly charged the West with lack of faith in these negotiations. "But who will believe this now? There is no way of negotiating or discussing with these people. America and her partners have sought with absolutely no success to get the Soviet side to discuss the Allied plan. We have got absolutely nowhere.

"The new proposals were not a world-shattering approach to disarmament, but they are an amplification and a clarification of the Western Plan tabled when the Committee began in March, 1960. The West had invited the Soviet side to choose any among nine points on disarmament for negotiation and they had steadfastly refused."

Speaking after Mr. Eaton, the French delegate, M Jules Moch, said: "We leave full responsibility for this to Mr. Khruschev. The Committee has been treated to the ludicrous spectacle of the five Eastern delegates making what they hope will appear to the world as a display of monolithic solidarity."

He said it was improper to decide to break off negotiations only a few hours after Mr. Eaton had returned from his trip to Washington.

He added: "The Soviet contention that they had adopted French views on the means of delivering nuclear weapons in their latest Plan is totally inaccurate. I intended to tell Mr. Zorin that this morning (June 27), and now I want it on record.

"The meeting today was adjourned to a coup de force without precedent in international affairs. We are not prepared to negotiate under an ultimatum."

The following communique was issued by the five Western delegations at the close of the meeting on June 27:

"The 47th meeting of the 10-nation Committee on Disarmament was held at the Palais des Nations, Geneva, on June 27, 1960 under the chairmanship of Poland and the representative of UK.

"The representatives of the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Poland announced the intention of their respective Governments to withdraw from the work of the conference.

"The Chairman (representative of Poland) having denied the right to speak to the representatives of the Western Powers inscribed on his list, was replaced as Chairman by the representative of UK.

"The representatives of Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania and USSR withdrew from the conference.

"By unanimous agreement, the representatives of the Press were then admmitted to the conference.

"Statements were made by the representatives of USA, France, Canada, Italy and UK.

"A document entitled 'Programme for General and Complete Disarmament under effective international control' was tabled by the representative of USA with a request that it be circulated by the UN Secretariat as a conference document.

"The conference decided that the verbatim record of the 47th meeting should be made public as soon as possible.

"The conference adjourned at 12-30 p.m.

"The next meeting will be held on June 28 at 10-30 a.m."

New US Disarmament Plan:

The new Disarmament Plan, which USA prepared and which the rest of the Western Powers approved, was introduced in the Disarmament Committee on June 27 by the American delegate, Mr. Frederick Eaton.

The Western allies had intended to introduce the Plan as a joint document. But before this could be done, the Eastern Powers had walked out of the Conference.

The new American Plan, it was stated, represented an effort to reconcile East-West views.

The new US Plan contained these eight stage-one steps:

(1) Establishment of an International Disarmament Control Organization (IDCO) within UN framework;

(2) Prohibition of putting into outer space vehicles carrying mass destruction weapons;

(3) Measures against surprise attacks, including notification of all space vehicle and missile launchings, establishment of agreed zones of aerial and ground inspection, including USA and USSR, and reciprocal observation of agreed military bases, both domestic and foreign;

(4) On-site inspection at mutually-agreed air bases, missile-launching pads, submarine and naval bases to establish a basis for controlling nuclear delivery systems in subsequent stages;

(5) Establishment of troop ceilings for USA and USSR first at 2.5 million, subsequently at 2.1 million, with agreed appropriate ceilings for other militarily-significant States;

(6) Placing agreed types and quantities of armaments in storage depots under IDCO supervision pending their final destruction or conversion;

(7) Cutting off production of fissionable materials for military use under effective control and transfer of agreed quantities to non-weapons uses, conditional upon satisfactory progress in conventional disarmament; and

(8) Submission to IDCO of data relating to military expenditure.

In its second stage, the Plan would:

(1) Further reduce American and Soviet troop ceilings to 1.7 million, with agreed appropriate levels for other States;

(2) Call for reduction to agreed levels and destruction or conversion of excess of all kinds of armaments of each State, including nuclear, chemical, biological and conventional weapons and all means for their delivery, including agreed categories of missiles, aircraft, surface ships, submarines and artillery designed to deliver nuclear and other mass-destruction weapons;

(3) Reduce military expenditures by amounts relating to the agreed reductions in armed forces and armaments; and

(4) Establish an International Peace Force within UN sufficient to preserve world peace when general and complete disarmament is achieved.

In its third and final phase, the Plan foresaw:

(1) Final reduction of forces and military establishments to levels required for maintaining internal order and providing agreed contingents to the International Peace Force;

(2) Arming of the International Peace Force only with agreed types and quantities of arms while all other armaments—conventional and nuclear—and their means of delivery are destroyed or converted to peaceful uses;

(3) Further reduction in military expenditures in relation to the agreed armed forces and armaments reductions; and

(4) Cessation of the manufacture of all armaments except for agreed types and quantities for the International Peace Force and agreed remaining national contingents.

Throughout all the three stages of the Plan, and following its completion, there would be strict and effective international control to ensure against the violation of the Disarmament Agreement.

Seven "controlling principles" would govern the whole Plan:

"(1) At no time shall any State gain military advantage over other States through the disarmament process;

"(2) Through the three stages, each of the balanced, phased and safeguarded measures shall be carried out in a strictly-defined period of time under supervision of IDCO;

"(3) Each measure shall be started simultaneously by each participating State after the establishment of necessary verification procedures;

"(4) Transition from one stage to the next shall start when the UN Security Council agrees that all measures in the preceding stage have been fully implemented and effective verification is continuing;

"(5) Disarmament treaties shall remain in force indefinitely—subject to the right of any State to withdraw if it is proven that any other State is not honouring its commitments;

"(6) The IDCO shall comprise all participating States in addition to a Control Commission and a Director-General whose responsibilities shall be specified in the Treaty; and

"(7) The Treaty shall also specify the means and methods of operation of IDCO, which shall have the power to go beyond verifying declarations by States to ascertain that the retained armed forces and armaments do not exceed agreed levels at any stage."

The 48th and probably the last session of the 10-nation Disarmament Committee was held in Geneva on June 28 in the absence of the five communist delegations who had walked out the previous day.

The meeting lasted 35 minutes and then adjourned, probably sine die.

The five Western delegates waited for about ten minutes in case the communist delegates decided to come back; and then, the British delegate, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore, took over the chairmanship from the absent Rumanian delegate (whose turn it was) and opened the session.

He gave a report to his colleagues of his last-minute attempt to salvage the negotiations when he saw the Soviet delegate, Mr. V. Zorin, on June 27.

He said he had asked Mr. Zorin to reconsider his action (walk-out) in view of the fact that the Western leaders had not received Mr. Khruschev's letter at that time.

Soviet Union Refers Issue To UN:

It was announced in Moscow on June 27 that the Soviet Union had asked for the disarmament issue to be placed on the agenda of the next session of the UN General Assembly.

The Soviet request was contained in a letter from the Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, to the UN Secretary-General.

Mr. Gromyko asked in his letter that the disarmament question should be treated by the General Assembly as "an important and urgent problem".

Statement By Mr. N. Khruschev:

In a television interview in Vienna on July 7, Mr. N. Khruschev said that the Soviet Union was ready to sign immediately an Agreement on disarmament under strict international control.

He asked: "Why are we ready to do this? Because we regard it as necessary to guarantee peaceful co-existence between States with different social orders.

"We want peace, but we are not begging for it. The Soviet Union is at present the most powerful country militarily and although we are militarily the strongest country—and that is a generally recognized fact—we go to war against no one, and threaten no one.

"We offer the capitalist world peaceful competition—we are certain of our future.

"The leading personalities of the capitalist world say they are also certain of their future. What is at issue then?

"We say to the Western Powers: destroy weapons, disband armies, cut out military spending and let us compete in a peaceful arena.

"The Western 'Open skies' proposal has nothing to do with disarmament.

"The aggressive flight of the American U-2 spy-plane which was shot down over Soviet territory on May 1 shows convincingly enough who wants an 'open sky' and what for."

He said that the Western Powers should follow the example of the Soviet Union which had cut down her army by over 2,000,000 men within the last four years. The Soviet Union had given up its foreign bases, and the Western Powers should follow this example also. "We have stopped nuclear tests unilaterally and are prepared to give them up for ever, if the Western Powers are also prepared to do so."

US Statement:

In a Note to the Soviet Union on

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

July 2, USA said that the need to begin a disarmament programme was urgent and expressed the hope that the communist side would return to negotiations in Geneva.

The US Note blamed the Soviet Union and its four communist allies for walking out of the Geneva conference and said that the reasons for their action remained unclear.

The US Note was in reply to a personal letter from Mr. N. Khruschev to President Eisenhower on the day the Geneva talks broke down (June 27).

Mr. H. Macmillan's Statement:

In a letter to Mr. Khruschev on June 29, the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, said that the whole world would be deeply disappointed that the Geneva 10-nation Disarmament Committee could not proceed because of the Soviet Government's unwillingness to take further part in it.

He said: "I must tell you frankly that I am deeply disappointed, as well as surprised, at your decision to withdraw from these negotiations. It (Committee) cannot be properly broken off by any one group.

"Even after your delegate had said on June 27 that the Soviet side would not participate further in the Committee, our delegate and those of the other Western Governments went back to the Committee on June 28 in the hope that your side would re-consider their decision not to take part, but in vain.

"You and I had important and, as I believe, sincere talks together in Moscow about the problems which divide the world today. We both agreed on the importance of the disarmament problem. We both know it is a most difficult problem to solve. You yourself have admitted the need for patient negotiations on it. The points you make in your latest letter seem to ignore all this.

"Your letter severely criticises the attitude of the Western delegates. Even if these criticisms are warranted, it would not, in my view, justify your action in breaking off the Geneva talks. I cannot emphasize too strongly that we want to reach an agreement on disarmament. We, for our part, do not agree with many of the points which your delegate has put forward in Geneva, as you do not agree with ours. But, the whole purpose of the negotiations is to try to eliminate points of difference and find common ground.

"It seems to us that some progress was being made. And it was well known that the Western delegates hoped soon to put forward new proposals which would take into account the points made during the previous proceedings, including your new Plan. Yet, at this very moment, you chose to break off negotiations as if you did not want to know what we were going to propose. Frankly, I find this incomprehensible.

"In your letter you say that the Western delegates have been carrying on futile and endless discussions. You describe the Plan which the Western delegates put forward in March, 1960 as amounting only to 'legalized military espionage'. This is most unfair. You know yourself that the most difficult thing about disarmament measures is control over them. And you yourself, in your letter to which I am replying, describe your own Plan as one for 'disarmament under effective international control'.

"You also refer to the recent visit of our Defence Minister, Mr. Harold Watkinson, to the United States. Until agreement on disarmament is reached, we intend to maintain our collective defence arrangements. There is nothing provocative in this. You do the same.

"You have also rehearsed in your letter certain recent developments in the disarmament negotiations. We see them as follows. In September, 1959, both the Soviet and British Governments presented to the UN General Assembly, almost simultaneously, separate plans for comprehensive disarmament. We thought ours was a good one. You thought the same of yours.

"Mr. Selwyn Lloyd (British Foreign Secretary) spoke on September 17, and you the next day (September 18). Mr. Lloyd said that our aim was to move forward by balanced stages towards the abolition of all nuclear weapons of mass destruction and towards the reduction of other weapons and armed forces to levels which will rule out the possibility of an aggressive war. I thought this indication of how to attain general and complete disarmament corresponded to your own declared objectives.

"I hope you will re-consider your decision in the light of the views I am now expressing so that negotiations on disarmament can be resumed as soon as possible."

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's View:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, said at a news conference at UN Headquarters on June 16 that he welcomed as an advance the latest Soviet disarmament proposals, which had been rejected in their present form by the leading Western Powers.

He told a news conference at UN Headquarters on July 1 that the disarmament problem would be kept out of UN for the time being.

He said he did not think there was very much use in having UN's own 82-member Disarmament Commission meet in a rush.

He expressed agreement with Mr. Nehru's emphasis on the need for elimination of foreign bases and means of delivery of nuclear weapons as envisaged in the revised Soviet Plan. These formed "a part—an essential part—of the general disarmament problem."

He added: "There is another point. If the Disarmament Commission is not in a position to embark on more positive discussions but runs the risk of getting stuck, if I may use this phrase, in a rehash of what has happened in the past, that would not help UN, disarmament, or any nation. There is always some dust which should settle down before you start driving again after such an event as the collapse of the East-West talks at Geneva."

Mr. Nehru On Soviet Plan:

The Prime Minister of India, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, at a news conference in New Delhi on June 24, characterized the Soviet proposals on disarmament as "a constructive and helpful approach to the problem of disarmament."

He added: "It is a straightforward and good approach, undoubtedly exhibiting a desire to bring about disarmament."

There were two or three elements in the Soviet proposals, he said, which were good. From complete disarmament the proposals came down to lower levels. Secondly, the proposals stood out in one respect, namely, the elimination of carriers of atomic and other weapons of mass destruction.

Various countries had been talking about the actual destruction of atomic weapons. On behalf of India, it was suggested in UN some time ago that one of the essential pre-requisites for disarmament should be the elimination of carriers of atomic weapons. It was simpler to deal with carriers of weapons rather than with actual weapons. If the carriers were removed, the capacity to attack with nuclear weapons was reduced. It would also take away the surprise element from it. India had made this proposal but nobody accepted it in UN.

Speaking about the other aspect of the Soviet proposals, namely removal of foreign bases, he said: "We dislike the idea of foreign bases completely. We dislike it for a variety of reasons. On principle, we do not like it. From a strictly practical point of view, too, it is not helpful ultimately, as you have seen in recent cases. It can only be helpful in territories where there is a hundred per cent popular support. Foreign bases are always symbols of foreign Powers in the countries where they are situated."

Q. "Do not your remarks show that you are not in favour of the US-Japan Security Pact?"

Mr. Nehru: "It is not for me to discuss security pacts. After all, what has happened in Japan does indicate that some people are not in favour of it. That itself reduces its value."

Q. "Do you still believe that Mr. N. Khruschev and Mr. D. Eisenhower are men of peace?"

Mr. Nehru: "This kind of personal questions are hardly desirable. Each one of us, I hope, is a man of peace at heart. Each one of us is a bit of a devil too at times. How can we sit in judgment over others holding positions of high responsibility? One can judge the actions with approval or disapproval. I have no doubt that both of them (Mr. Khruschev and Mr. Eisenhower) are anxious for peace, desire peace and would like to have peace. I have not a shadow of doubt about it."

Col. G. A. Nasser Welcomes Soviet Plan:

Addressing a large gathering at Alexandria where he arrived from Yugoslavia on June 24, the President of the United Arab Republic, Colonel Gamal Abdel Nasser, gave full support to the latest Soviet proposals on disarmament and described them as "opening the way to a constructive solution of the problem."

USA Calls For Early Meeting Of UN Disarmament Commission:

In a statement issued from Newport (Rhode Island) on July 21, the US President, Mr. D. Eisenhower, announced that USA would call for an early meeting of the UN Disarmament Commission to reduce the risk of war.

He said that the Soviet walk-out from the 10-nation disarmament talks in Geneva in June "makes it desirable to take further steps so that the vital issue of disarmament can be considered promptly once again".

He instructed the head of the US delegation to UN, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, to seek an early meeting of the 82-nation Disarmament Commission.

He said that he was taking the action "so that we and other members of the international community can continue to search for ways and means to achieve the universal desire to reduce the risk of war by controlled steps of disarmament".

He added: "Our efforts to get the Soviet Union to return to the conference table through normal diplomatic channels have not met with success. Disarmament in the present world situation is too important to be set aside at the present time when deliberate efforts are being made to increase tensions. The United Nations, under the Charter, has primary responsibility in disarmament. I have, therefore, today instructed Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to request an early meeting of the Disarmament Commission of United Nations."

The White House Press Secretary, Mr. James Hagerty, told newsmen that with the filing of the letter asking for an early meeting of the Disarmament Commission on July 22, the US representatives would be recalled from Geneva because the whole question of disarmament was going before the UN Disarmament Commission.

In accordance with the US President's statement, Mr. H. C. Lodge formally asked the Chairman of the Disarmament Commission, Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, on July 22 to convene the Commission early in August, 1960 to consider the Soviet walk-out from the disarmament talks in Geneva.

USA-UK-USSR Letters On Early Meeting Of Commission:

The Soviet Union rejected on August 1 a US request for an early meeting of the 82-member Disarmament Commission and said that such a meeting would only "aggravate the situation" and hinder discussions in the UN General Assembly.

The Chairman of the UN Disarmament Commission, Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo (Mexico), had earlier formally proposed that the 82-nation Commission convene on August 15.

But the Soviet Union, in a communication to Dr. Nervo, stated: "The Soviet Government believes that the convocation of the Disarmament Commission in the present situation on the eve of the General Assembly session of United Nations, urged to thoroughly consider the disarmament problem, can only aggravate the situation and hinder the fruitful discussion of this most important issue of the present time at the forthcoming General Assembly session."

The United States had asked for a Disarmament Commission meeting to consider the collapse of the East-West 10-nation disarmament negotiations in Geneva in June, 1960.

Soviet Reply To American Note:

In reply to the American Note of July 2 on disarmament, the Soviet Government sent a reply to the United States Government on July 25 as follows:

"The Soviet Government has clearly indicated in its statement on June 27 that the Soviet Union no longer deems possible its participation in the fruitless discussions of the 10-nation Disarmament Committee in view of the open refusal of USA and other Western Powers to draft a concrete disarmament programme and their unwillingness to conduct talks on anything but individual measures of control without any disarmament.

"Failing to submit in the course of the 10-nation Committee's protracted sittings any concrete proposals on disarmament, the US Government is trying, nevertheless, in its Note of July 2 to lay the blame for torpedoing the 10-nation talks at the Soviet Union's door.

"The Soviet Government categorically rejects such claims of the US Government as absolutely incompatible with obvious facts.

"The Soviet Government is compelled to state that at the time when it is taking every possible step to create a favourable climate for the success of the disarmament talks, the US Government stubbornly continues along another road, which has nothing in common with the interests of genuine disarmament.

"It is common knowledge that precisely when the US delegate on the 10-nation Committee came out, immediately after the Committee met following its recess, against the basic provisions submitted by the Soviet Union, provisions which constitute a detailed programme of total and universal disarmament under effective international control, failing on his part to submit a single constructive proposal on this programme or to exert efforts to draft any concrete measures for constructive disarmament.

"This obstructionist policy of the US delegate, in effect, was a continuation of the US Government's former line on disarmament matters. As seen from the Note of the US Government dated June 7, 1960, the US Government did not even instruct its delegate on the Committee to strive for a constructive discussion of the plan for total and universal disarmament in conformity with the UN General Assembly's resolution of November 20, 1959 but reduced the matter to mere attempts at establishing control without disarmament.

"As shown by the Committee's deliberations after the Soviet Union submitted its new proposals, drafted with due account taken of the wishes expressed by the Western Powers themselves, the United States and the other Western Powers did not take a single step forward from their position aimed at establishing control without disarmament and securing unilateral military advantages for themselves and their war blocs to the detriment and contrary to the very idea of disarmament.

"Due to the position of the Western Powers the 10-nation Committee's discussion became obviously pointless and turned into mere word-mongering.

"Nor could the Soviet Government ignore the fact that the tactics of endlessly dragging out the disarmament talks, used by the US Government in the 10-nation Committee, were coupled with the fanning up of war hysteria in USA itself and with the stepping up of war preparations by the aggressive blocs headed by the United States.

"At the same time, the US Government undertook several foreign policy moves aimed at increasing international tensions. As follows from Western Press reports, the American and British military authorities worked out in June, 1960 a plan for round-the-clock patrol flights of British and American H-bombers.

"At the same time, the US Government continued preparing the ground for arming with rockets and nuclear weapons its allies under military alignments, above all West Germany. It is known that during his recent trip to Washington the West German War Minister, Mr. F. Strauss, 'showed interest' in the American Polaris ballistic missiles and now, as seen from the statements of the US Secretary of the Army, Mr. E. Brucker, who visited Bonn for talks with the West German Government, the United States is ready to supply Polaris missiles to the West German Bundeswehr.

"It is absolutely obvious that in this situation the 10-nation Committee ceased to serve a useful end. On the contrary, it became harmful, for it gave the peoples illusions that something is being done in the sphere of disarmament, while actually it was used by the Western Powers as a screen for stepping up the arms race, as a means of deceiving the peoples.

"In the prevailing situation, the Soviet Government deems it fully reasonable to submit for the consideration of the next session of the United Nations General Assembly the question of disarmament and the unsatisfactory state of fulfilment of the General Assembly's resolution of November 20, 1959 on this question.

"The Soviet Union's recourse to United Nations naturally does not contradict in the least the Security Council's resolution of May 27, 1960 to which the United States Government refers. It is germane to note that this resolution was adopted after the Security Council's discussion of the aggressive actions of the US Air Force and contains chiefly an appeal to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of other nations.

"Whom that appeal of the Security Council was meant for is well known. It was meant for those who are pursuing the dangerous policy of provocation, ignoring the fact that such a policy may entail the gravest consequences for mankind.

"The US Government suggests no more than resuming the pointless debate in the 10-nation Committee, this time with the 'new' American plan as its subject.

"What is, after all, behind this 'new' plan which is being presented under the high-sounding title of the 'programme of general and complete disarmament under effective international control'?

"This 'new' plan is, in point of fact, but slightly garnished, hastily drawn up version of the earlier Western plan submitted to the 10-nation Committee on March 16, 1960. It represents one more attempt at misleading the peoples and a screen meant to cover up the US Government's policy of carrying on the arms race, including that of nuclear arms.

"Indeed, even the very first examination of the American document shows that this plan, just like the Western Powers' proposals of March 16, 1960, focusses all attention right from the first stage on devising far-reaching measures of control without disarmament and limits the whole thing to concluding an agreement on the first stage alone.

"Nor does USA propose any reduction of the armed forces in the first stage, while seeking to bring all the armed forces and armaments of USSR and other States under foreign control. This clearly is nothing short of a desire to use so-called international control as a screen behind which to collect espionage information. And this is, quite obviously, something which no nation caring about its security can accept.

"Instead of a real reduction and abolition of armaments, the United States proposes certain amounts of armaments to be stored, under the supervision of international controllers, in the depots of the States situated in their own territory. But it is clear to everybody that a State that would choose to use these weapons for aggressive purposes could remove the controllers at any moment, withdraw these weapons from the depots and put them into action. It does not take hours but minutes to set modern weapons into operation, and the United States Government knows this very well.

"The US proposals make no mention at all of the removal of foreign military bases in other peoples' territories and of the withdrawal of foreign troops from those territories. Nor do they provide for the destruction of the means of delivery of nuclear weapons, or the banning of these weapons themselves. What practical value can the US proposal for stopping the production of fissionable materials for weapons purposes have in these circumstances for the solution of the problem of banning nuclear weapons? Everybody knows that even the present stocks of atomic and hydrogen bombs are enough to wipe out whole nations. Therefore, the implementation of this measure would in no way remove the danger of a nuclear war being started by an aggressor, the less so if one bears in mind that the nuclear weapons and materials already produced are easy to conceal even if there should be an attempt to detect them.

"As to the measures for disarmament, which are provided for in the second and third stages of the disarmament programme, the way the American plan is drawn up means never getting down to putting them into practice at all, because they do not specify any time limits for their fulfilment, and the transition from the first stage of disarmament to the second and third is predicated on a number of additional conditions which would enable the opponents of disarmament to drag out the implementation of the disarmament programme interminably.

"The foregoing leaves the USSR Government in no doubt as to the fact that the so-called new US proposals do not pursue the aim of genuine disarmament but are capable only of being used for misleading world public opinion. To take a realistic view of things means frankly stating that these proposals could not provide a basis for negotiations and contribute to the success of the Committee's work.

"The Soviet Government has always advocated talks on the urgent international issues and, in particular, on so pressing and imperative an issue as that of disarmament.

"It still considers that parity representation conduces to the favourable consideration of disarmament. However, considering the record of disarmament discussions in the 10-nation

Committee, the question is one of inviting some other countries, in addition to those represented on the Committee, to participate in the talks.

"It is the Soviet Government's firm conviction that the disarmament problem, on which the destinies of the whole of mankind depend, can and must be solved. It hopes that progress in this matter will be promoted by the consideration of the disarmament problem at the coming session of the UN General Assembly, the forum which adopted the resolution on general and total disarmament.

"Naturally, a practical solution of the disarmament problem is possible only if the US Government reconsiders its approach to this problem and adopts a policy of serious negotiations on disarmament."

Mr. N. Khruschev's Reply To Mr. H. Macmillan:

In a message to the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, stated on July 25 that Mr. Macmillan's assurances on disarmament "do not accord, unfortunately, with the contents of your message."

Mr. Khruschev's message was in reply to an earlier communication from Mr. Macmillan in which Mr. Macmillan had asked him to re-consider the Soviet decision to withdraw from the work of the 10-nation Disarmament Committee meeting in Geneva.

Mr. Khruschev said that the Western Powers had "indulged for a whole month in empty talk" in the Committee. America's latest proposals for "universal and complete disarmament under effective international control" were in effect only a slightly edited version of the West's old proposals. "Their fallacy and unacceptability has already been proved at the initial stage of the work of the 10-nation Committee."

On August 2, the US State Department described Russia's suggestion for a 'summit' UN Disarmament Conference as a "tactical manoeuvre to divert the Disarmament Commission from considering the question of disarmament."

It said that USA still strongly believed that the 82-nation Disarmament Commission should meet as soon as possible, and pointed out that any Head of Government who wished to participate in UN deliberations about disarmament could do so in the Commission.

B. Russia Launches Rocket Carrying Two Dogs And One Rabbit: The Soviet News Agency Tass reported on July 4 that the Soviet Union launched successfully in June a one-stage ballistic rocket carrying two dogs and one rabbit. The animals were returned to Earth in good condition. The rocket reached a height of about 130 miles.

It added that the launching was for research into the upper layers of the atmosphere and cosmic space.

The Director of the Pulkovo Astronomical Observatory, Mr. Alexander Mikhailov, said on July 4 that the launching of the rocket was another chapter towards the launching of a manned cosmic vehicle.

It was the fifth space journey for one of the dogs, Otvazhnaya ("Courageous").

The total weight of the scientific apparatus, including power sources and the animals, was 2,100 kilogrammes (about 4,620 lbs.)

Tass stated that valuable information had been obtained on ionized clouds, which form at high altitudes, the ion composition of the atmosphere and its electrical properties, radiation of the Earth and the Sun, and also new data on the effects on animals in conditions of weightlessness. The measurements and observations were being analysed.

C. Two "Polaris" Missiles Fired From A Submerged US Submarine: A US Navy announcement on July 20 said that the Navy had fired two Polaris missiles for the first time from a submerged submarine. The firing was successful.

The launchings were made from a submarine cruising 90 feet under water off the coast of Florida and the missiles' warhead hit the target area over 1,100 miles away, north of Puerto Rico.

D. US Nuclear Test Programme—Eleven New Devices To Be Exploded: The US Defence Department announced on July 17 that America would explode 11 low-yield nuclear devices in underground tests during the next two years as part of research to improve methods of detecting underground atomic explosions.

It added that another 21 conventional explosions would be made as part of the same programme.

It was stated that the cost of the research explosions would be $66,000,000 during the fiscal year 1961 alone.

The US President, Mr. D. Eisenhower, had announced in May, 1960 that underground testing would be resumed by the United States.

E. France To Have Hydrogen Bomb: The French Government, in a preface to its Military Equipment Bill tabled in the National Assembly in Paris on July 20, announced its determination to "engage without delay" in giving France the Hydrogen bomb.

The Bill provided for 11,790 million new francs (about Rs. 11,227,000,000) in extra military expenditure by the end of 1964, aimed at giving France a tactical and strategic striking force and for developing the Hydrogen bomb.

F. France Grants Independence To Seven African States: On July 11, the French Government granted complete independence to four former French colonies in West Africa. Agreements to this effect were signed in Paris on July 11.

Under the Agreement, the four States—Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Upper Volta and Niger—would assume full responsibility for foreign affairs, finance and defence.

The leaders of these States said that they intended to remain within the French Community.

It was announced the following day (July 12) that France had granted independence to three more African States. They were the Central African Republic, Chad and the former French Congo.

Leaders of these States signed Agreements on July 12 for future co-operation with France.

Only two of the 12 African States of the French Community have still to achieve independence. They are Mauretania and Gabon.

France has accepted the principle of independence for both of them as well.

G. Central Land Mass Of Antarctica Cleft By A Great Depression—Results Of International Research: The New York Times reported on June 12 that soundings of the Antarctica taken by Soviet scientists had indicated that the central land mass of Antarctica was cleft by a tremendous depression and that the depression might extend under the South Pole.

The Russians, it said, had named it the International Geo-physical Year Valley in acknowledgment of the role played by the Australians, Britons and Americans in progressively bringing it to light.

Where the Valley emptied into the Indian Ocean, it said, it was filled by what appeared to be the world's largest glacier. This mountain-flanked river of ice had been charted by Australians for more than 200 miles.

If the Valley, or the down-vaulting of which it was a part, extended to the South Pole, it would be more than 1,300 miles long. The ice river had been named the Lambert Glacier by Australia.

The view that the feature extended far inland was based primarily on the soundings of the ice-sheet by a Soviet Union tractor party travelling to the Pole of Inaccessibility.

On the way, the group passed 10,000-ft. high mountains buried under 3,300 feet of ice. However, as the Russians reached the Pole of Inaccessibility—the point farthest from the sea—the ice sloped down slightly and the land beneath it dropped radically.

A similar drop had been observed at the South Pole by Sir Vivian Fuchs and his men on their Trans-Antarctic journey in 1957-58. Twenty-five miles on either side of the Pole, the ice-buried land was 7,000 to 8,000 feet above sea-level, but at the Pole its level dropped to about 6,000 feet.

The ice-buried trough reported by the Soviet scientists was the second to have emerged from the exploration of Antarctica during the International Geo-physical Year of 1957-58. The first, discovered by a series of American tractor journeys, linked the Ross and Bellingshausen Seas.

A trough was also found running along at least a part of the northern side of Antarctica's main mountain system.

ISRAEL

A. Arrest Of Mr. A. Eichmann—Differences With Argentina Settled: Argentina and Israel announced on August 3 that they had resolved their differences over the arrest of Mr. A. Eichmann.

The joint announcement, released in Jerusalem and Buenos Aires, said: "The Governments of Israel and of the Republic of Argentina, animated by the wish to comply with the resolution of the Security Council of June 23, 1960, in which hope was expressed that the traditionally friendly relations between the two countries be advanced, have decided to regard as closed the incident that arose out of the action taken by Israel which infringed the fundamental rights of the State of Argentina."

It made no mention of "reparations" which Argentina had demanded from Israel for the 'kidnapping' of Mr. Eichmann.

Argentina's Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Angel Miguel Centeno, who read the announcement to newsmen in Buenos Aires, said in answer to questions that the withdrawal of the Argentine Ambassador from Israel, the declaration that the Israeli Ambassador in Buenos Aires was persona non grata and the admission by Israel that it had violated Argentine sovereignty could be taken as accounting for the "reparations".

LEBANON

A. New Government: A new Government was formed on August 2 under the Premiership of Mr. Saeb Salam.

Mr. Nassim Majdalani was named as Deputy Prime Minister.

The Cabinet comprised 18 Ministers—the biggest in the country's history. [There is one Minister for every five members of Parliament].

The Premier, Mr. Saeb Salam, combined his office with that of the Minister of the Interior.

The Foreign Minister, Mr. Phillipe Takla, retained his portfolio in the new Cabinet. [This was regarded as a guarantee that the Lebanon would continue its policy of moderation in foreign affairs.] Mr. Takla is the only Minister in the Government who is not a member of the Chamber of Deputies.

NEPAL

A. King Mahendra's Tour Abroad: King Mahendra, accompanied by his Queen, left Khatmandu on April 9 on a world tour which took him to Thailand, Japan, USA, Canada, Mexico, Portugal, France, West Germany, Switzerland, Iran, Afghanistan and Kashmir.

After visiting Thailand and Japan first, King Mahendra arrived in USA on June 26.

Address To US Congress:

Addressing a joint session of the US Congress in Washington on April 28, King Mahendra said that all nations of the world should make an effort to pool their resources and wipe out poverty wherever it existed.

He said that even if a small fraction of the $100,000,000,000 that was now being spent on defence by the nations of the world was devoted to the development of under-developed countries, the world would be an infinitely better and happier place to live in.

Nepal, he declared, believed in an independent foreign policy, judging every international issue on its merits without fear or favour. Nepal's policy of non-alignment did not arise from a desire to sit on the fence or to evade responsibility in any way. It was a mere manifestation of their reluctance and unwillingness to compromise their freedom of judgment by supporting one side or the other.

He said: "We do not believe in shirking action once we feel satisfied and convinced about the right course. We shall certainly not be neutral when we are confronted with the choice between good and evil, or right and wrong."

He described the present world situation as "a state of uneasy peace and tension between nations". The sooner this state of fear and uncertainty ended, the better it would be for mankind as a whole. This was something which was realized by all, but still it appeared as though it would be some time before this realization could be translated into practice for the benefit of all concerned.

Earlier, the King and Queen attended a State banquet at the White House.

On April 27, King Mahendra had a formal meeting with President Eisenhower. They were together for 40 minutes.

After the meeting, the King said that they exchanged views on ways and means of further strengthening the friendly relations between the United States and Nepal.

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique released in Washington on April 28, President Eisenhower and King Mahendra said that any attempt by any nation to impose its own economic system or political beliefs on any other nation should be condemned.

The communique added that Mr. Eisenhower and King Mahendra agreed that Nepal and USA believed in the sovereignty and independence of nations and in non-interference in the affairs of others.

Speech At National Press Club:

Addressing the National Press Club in Washington on April 29, King Mahendra said that the efforts of his country to build a democratic system provided a "test case" for the world.

He said: "Nepal's is a test case as to whether a small country situated between two big countries (India and China) can, in the realities of power relations in the mid-twentieth century world, preserve its independence, freedom and sovereignty in its own way and manner.

"On the answer to this question will depend the life and future of the principles of international justice and the ideas of co-existence of big and small nations."

In New York:

King Mahendra and the Queen of Nepal were given a big welcome in New York on May 2.

They drove along streets lined with cheering crowds and a 21-gun salute was fired.

As the King and Queen drove through the City, they were accorded the city's traditional ticker-tape welcome. Some 300,000 people turned out to cheer the royal procession.

Later in the day (May 2), the King visited United Nations headquarters where the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, gave a reception in their honour.

The King met the Afro-Asian delegates in a private conference room.

Assurances To Private Investors:

The King was the guest of honour at a dinner given by the Far East American Council of Commerce and Industry in New York on May 2.

In a speech on the occasion, King Mahendra asked American businessmen to make investments in his country and gave the promise that they would get the fullest possible scope for private enterprise in Nepal.

He added that the standard of living in Nepal was one of the lowest in the world; if democracy was to survive in that country, it must be able to deliver the goods as quickly as possible.

King Mahendra told a news conference in Los Angeles on May 11 (where he arrived on May 10) that he would like Americans to invest in his country's economy.

He said: "Nepal is a good field for investment; and we are prepared to guarantee any private investors against their properties being nationalized in the future. Our tax structure is very low."

The United States, he noted, had given Nepal $36,000,000 in subsidies; Russia had given cigarette and sugar factories; and China had furnished a paper mill and a cement factory. "But we do not make military pacts. We don't believe in them, nor do we believe in aid with strings attached."

Investment Guarantee Agreement With USA:

In Washington on May 16, USA and Nepal signed an Investment Guarantee Agreement under which USA would offer three types of guarantees for investment of private American capital in Nepal.

These were: (1) guarantee that capital and local currency receipts from such investments would remain convertible into dollars; (2) guarantee against losses from expropriation; and (3) guarantee against losses due to war damage.

The Investment Guarantee Programme was extended to Nepal by a formal exchange of Notes between the acting Secretary of State, Mr. Douglas Dillon, and General Subarna S. J. B. Rana, Deputy Prime Minister of Nepal and Finance Minister.

With the addition of Nepal, the US Investment Guarantee Programme is now available for new private investment of United States capital in 34 countries.

King Mahendra received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Detroit on May 23.

In Mexico:

The King of Nepal arrived in Mexico City on May 17 and was welcomed by the Mexican President.

Speaking to newsmen in Mexico City on May 18, King Mahendra said that the failure of the 'Summit' Conference in Paris meant unrest for all countries.

Also on May 18, the King attended a reception given in his honour by the Mexican Foreign Minister. Earlier, he was entertained at a private luncheon by the Mexican President.

From Mexico City, King Mahendra and his party arrived in Miami (Florida) on May 19.

In Canada:

King Mahendra began his visit to Canada on May 25 with a visit to the Niagara Falls.

After spending a few hours at the Falls, the King travelled to Montreal.

[The Queen of Nepal was, however, detained in a New York hospital. Officials in the King's party said that her ailment was not serious but gave no indication of its nature.]

At a news conference in Montreal on May 26, King Mahendra said that Nepal's relations with communist China were strictly formal and cordial. Though there were border differences between the two countries, these did not amount to a dispute.

The Nepal Army, he said, was being reorganized along modern, effective lines. This measure had not been taken as a result of China's occupation of neighbouring Tibet though the Army re-shuffle had started after that event. It now numbered 10,000 men. In an emergency it could be speedily increased to a total of 100,000 from reserves of trained man-power.

Referring to the political situation in Nepal, he said that Nepalese communists had been thwarted by the 18-month-old democratic Constitution. "Wherever the communists are not banned but are allowed to work openly, they have made slow progress".

From Canada, King Mahendra returned to USA and left for home on June 16.

On his way back, he visited Lisbon, Paris, Frankfurt, Vienna, Tehran, Kabul, Srinagar and New Delhi.

After 3½ months of tour abroad, King Mahendra returned to Khatmandu on July 28.

Addressing a huge public meeting convened to welcome him in Khatmandu, King Mahendra said that every Nepalese was hurt by the incident on Nepal's northern border at Mustang in June, 1960, and added: "I believe our neighbour will not commit such a mistake again. Wisdom lies in peaceful co-existence."

Both the King and the Queen were given a great welcome and a civic reception.

B. Chinese Envoy Presents Credentials: The Chinese Ambassador, Mr. Chang Shih-chuh, presented his credentials to King Mahendra at a durbar held in Khatmandu on August 5.

In a message he read on the occasion, Mr. Chang Shih-chuh said that China and Nepal had common boundaries and close historical and cultural relations of long standing.

He added: "Since our two countries established diplomatic relations and affirmed the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence, the relations between our two countries have undergone a change."

He recalled the visit of the Nepalese Premier, Mr. B. P. Koirala, to Peking, Mr. Chou En-lai's visit to Khatmandu and the Treaties signed during these visits and said that the Chinese Government and people "highly treasure" their friendship for Nepal.

He added: "I am convinced that the strengthening of the neighbourly relations and friendly co-operation between the two countries not only conforms to the fundamental interests of our two peoples but is also beneficial to the consolidation of peace in Asia and the world."

In his speech, King Mahendra reciprocated the sentiments expressed by Mr. Chang Shih-chuh and said that he appreciated the Chinese Government's desire to maintain friendly relations with Nepal.

He referred to China's "generous assistance" for Nepal's development and said that the exchange of visits by the Nepalese and Chinese Prime Ministers was a clear proof of their mutual desire to strengthen these friendly traditional ties. It was his wish that Sino-Nepalese friendship should be an example of co-operation and peaceful co-existence between the two neighbouring countries.

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Trade Pact With Portugal; Rawalpindi As Seat Of Central Government; Retirement Age Of Government Servants Raised To 60; Tree Plantation Week; Essential Personnel To Register Themselves.

A. Agreement With Portugal On Trade With Portuguese India: Pakistan and Portugal began talks in Karachi on July 26 for the review and expansion of the existing Trade Agreement between Pakistan and "Portuguese India".

[The Portuguese colony of Goa in India was described in an official Pakistan handout as "Portuguese India". Pakistan had already recognized the territory of Goa as a "Portuguese Overseas Province" under the Agreement concluded two years earlier between Pakistan and Portugal.]

The Portuguese delegation for the talks was headed by Mr. Pamplona Moniz Corte Rael, Secretary-General of the Portuguese Department of Imports and Exports, while the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. I. A. Khan, Joint Secretary in the Ministry of Commerce.

Pakistan increased her trade with Goa when India imposed an economic blockade against the Portuguese colony in 1955, and Goa received her much-needed supplies of rice and other daily necessities from Pakistan. Pakistan also gave facilities to Portuguese commercial and military planes and ships moving between Portugal and Goa in Pakistan.

Pakistan's exports to Goa in 1956 totalled Rs. 5,300,000 and imports Rs. 320,000. After a fall in these figures in 1958, Pakistan's exports increased to Rs. 5,200,000, while her imports stood at Rs. 117,000. Pakistan's main item of export to Goa is rice. Other items include cotton yarn, hosiery, tobacco and fruits. Pakistan's imports include coal-tar dyes, bottles and iron and steel.

The Portuguese Ambassador to Pakistan, Dr. Jose De Deus Ramos, in his speech at the opening of the trade talks, offered the Government of Pakistan a full supply of iron-ore for her projected steel mill from what he called "Portuguese India".

[Pakistan proposes to establish a steel mill with a capacity of 200,000 tons during her Second Five-Year Plan.]

Reciprocating the Portuguese Ambassador's gesture, Mr. I. A. Khan pledged his country's friendship to the "neighbourly Portuguese Province of Goa."

A Karachi message said on August 5 that Pakistan and Portugal had initialled an Agreement for increased trade between Pakistan and "Portuguese India".

The Portuguese colony of Goa offered 20 items for export to Pakistan which include oilseeds, iron-ore and machinery. Pakistan offered to export 30 items, including cotton, jute and rice, to Goa.

Gomantak Dal's Protest:

The Bombay Branch of the Working Council of the Azad Gomantak Dal, in a resolution adopted on August 1, said that the Pakistan Government had grossly violated the Bandung principles and had committed its people to collaborate with and support colonialism by signing a Trade Agreement with the Portuguese Government of Goa.

The Council said that the sole purpose of the Trade Agreement was obviously to prop up the tottering Portuguese regime in Goa from the onslaught of the liberation forces.

It added: "The Working Council of the Azad Gomantak Dal strongly protests against this reactionary stand of F-M Ayub Khan's Government and appeals to the people of Pakistan to render this Trade Agreement ineffective in order to help the liberation struggle in Goa."

B. F-M Ayub Khan Asked To Postpone Visit To Japan: It was made known in Karachi on August 3 that the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, had been asked to postpone his visit to Japan, which was scheduled in the Autumn of 1960, as the timing of the visit might coincide with the Japanese General Elections.

F-M Ayub Khan, accordingly, postponed his visit to Japan.

C. Rawalpindi To Be Principal Seat Of Government — President's Order: The President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, issued an Order on August 1 to the effect that Rawalpindi shall henceforth be the principal seat of the Government of Pakistan.

The Order said that the territory demarcated by the Pakistan Establishment of the Federal Capital Order 1948, and known as the Federal Capital, would henceforth be known as the Federal Territory of Karachi, and would continue to be administered by the President from such day as he might appoint, acting to such extent as he might think fit, through an agent to be appointed by him.

The Order, called the Seat of Government Order, 1960, came into force at once and was deemed to have taken effect from October 20, 1959.

A place in East Pakistan, to be appointed by the President, shall be the second seat of Government.

Both Rawalpindi and the place to be chosen in East Pakistan would remain under the executive authority of the Province, subject to such directions as the President or the Chief Administrator of Martial Law may give.

D. Retirement Age Of Government Servants Extended To 60 Years In West Pakistan: The Chief Secretary to the West Pakistan Government announced at a news conference in Lahore on August 2 that in anticipation of the advice from the Central Government regarding the enhancement of the retiring age of Government servants to 60, the Government of West Pakistan had decided that no Government servant who was nearing superannuation should be retired. This would apply to such Government servants as were fit to be retained beyond the age of 55.

He said that the Central Government had raised the age of retirement of Government servants from 55 to 60 subject to the condition that 'the competent authority' would scrutinize the conduct of an officer at two stages—first, when he had completed 25 years of service, and, secondly, when he attained the age of 55. At both the stages, he would also be medically examined. If 'the competent authority' certified that he could be retained, his retirement age would be raised to 60 years.

In reply to a question, the Governor of the Province, Mr. Amir Mohammed Khan, who took the news conference, said that the Central Government had taken the decision to raise the retirement age in view of the fact that there was paucity of experienced Government servants, particularly technical staff. This was also the reason why the Government had been liberally re-employing retired Government servants in some of the departments.

The Chief Secretary said that yet another reason for enhancing the retirement age was a general improvement in the expectation of life and there was general improvement in the health of Government servants. Most of them were physically fit enough to serve beyond the age of 55.

Replying to a question, he said that the Government had no intention of raising the recruitment age limit of 25 years as a consequence of the enhancement of the retirement age.

He did not agree that the raising of the retirement age would result in much unemployment.

E. Tree Plantation Week In West Pakistan: The Tree Plantation Week was formally launched throughout West Pakistan on August 5. The Week was marked by the distribution of over 8,000,000 plants in various parts of the Province.

'Basic Democracies' were asked to look after the maintenance of the plants.

F. Essential Personnel To Register Themselves: The President, F-M Ayub Khan, promulgated an Ordinance on August 6 under which certain categories of people termed as 'essential personnel' had to register themselves at an Employment Exchange.

The Ordinance listed 85 such categories, including engineers, doctors and nurses.

The Ordinance came into force immediately.

TURKEY

A. Turco-Soviet Relations — Mr. L. Brezhnev's Views: At a ceremony in Moscow on August 6, when the new Turkish Ambassador, Mr. Fahri Korutugk, presented his credentials, the Soviet President, Mr. L. Brezhnev, said that Turkey's membership of NATO and CENTO could not prevent the development of good-neighbourly relations between Turkey and the Soviet Union.

He added that respect for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of Turkey was the basis of Soviet policy towards her.

B. Mr. Celal Bayar To Be Tried For High Treason: A spokesman of the National Union Committee told newsmen in Ankara on July 13 that the deposed President, Mr. Celal Bayar, would be tried for high treason.

He disclosed that the decision was taken on July 7. The trial would take place shortly and in public.

[The Committee, however, must first define under the terms of a new law what would constitute high treason and then designate a court to try the case.]

Under the 1924 Constitution, a President of the Republic could be tried only by Parliament, sitting as a Court of Justice.

An amendment to an Article of the Penal Code adopted on July 11 provided the death penalty for high treason, whatever the age of the defendant.

C. Generals And Admirals Retired To Make Room For Younger Officers: A communique issued by the National Union Committee on August 3 said that the Minister of Defence, Gen. Makri Ojtilek, had been retired from the Army at his own request, but that he would remain in charge of the Defence portfolio.

Gen. Ojtilek (62) was the Military Governor of Istanbul at the time of the revolution and became Defence Minister as soon as the Government of Gen. Cemal Gursel took over.

Gen. Ojtilek told a news conference in Ankara on August 3 that 235 Generals and Admirals, including himself, had retired to make the armed forces younger. Younger officers would be appointed immediately to fill the posts left vacant by the older men.

Another of the Generals to retire was the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, Gen. Gumuspala. His place was taken over by Gen. Cevde Sunay, Commander of the Land Forces.

Gen. Cemal Gursel (65), Head of State, Prime Minister and Chairman of the Committee of National Union, would keep his rank of General.

D. Ten-Point Code Of Ethics For Press: Turkish newspaper owners and editors signed a Code of Ethics for the Turkish Press at a ceremony in the precincts of the Turkish Journalists Association in Istanbul on July 24.

The ceremony was held on the 50th anniversary of the freeing of the Turkish Press from censorship after the Young Turk Revolution and the 100th anniversary of the publication of the first Turkish newspaper in 1860.

The Code of Ethics is based on similar codes in some Western countries and has been drawn up by Turkish editors with the advice of the International Press Institute in Zurich.

The Code consists of 10 points, covering obscenity and libel, distortation of news, publicity about the private lives of individuals and correction of misinformation.

One of its clauses forbids the exploitation of religion in any form.

A Press Court of Honour has been set up somewhat on the lines of the Press Council in Britain. It is composed of 10 members, seven of them from the journalistic profession, a judge, a barrister and a university professor.

The Court will have no power to inflict penalties, but in cases of abuse of the Code of Ethics by a journalist or a newspaper, it will pronounce its decision, which will be given the maximum publicity by Press and radio.

In serious cases, the Court may ask the relevant Press organization, to which the offending journalist belongs, to consider his expulsion.

on August 3 the formation of a Central Bank for the Egyptian Region to take over the central banking functions of the National Bank of Egypt, as from August 18, 1960.

A Government decree stipulated that the National Bank of Egypt, which was nationalized in February, 1960, would continue to serve only as an ordinary commercial bank.

The new Central Bank, in its capacity as a "banker's bank", will handle banking operations connected with Government accounts, the accounts and deposits of international monetary oganizations, reserve funds, gold cover and foreign currency.

B. Baha'i Movement Banned: By a special decree on August 1, the President, Col. G. A. Nasser, banned the Baha'i religious movement in the United Arab Republic and ordered the confiscation of the properties of its followers.

Diplomatic sources in Cairo interpreted this action as a retaliation against Iran's recognition of Israel.

UAR officials, however, denied that the decree was intended to persecute the Baha'is. They said that the Baha'i movement had political connexions.

A large number of the followers of Baha'i sect have settled down in Israel, as the son of one of the founders of the sect was buried in Haifa, in Israel.

The number of Baha'is in the Egyptian Region is said to be negligible; but a sizeable number of them are reported to be living in the Syrian Region, although the actual figures are not available.

A. Agreement With France On Repatriation Of Viet-Namese From New Caledonia: An Agreement was concluded in Hanoi on June 4 between the representatives of France and the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam providing for the repatriation of Viet-Namese residents in New Caledonia to North Viet-Nam.

The Agreement concerned about 7,000 Viet-Namese, mostly employed as workers in mines and farms in the French Protectorate.

For sometime past, relations between the Viet-Namese nationals and other residents in the French Protectorate had been strained and there had been cases of violence in which houses of Viet-Namese had been bombed.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Russia Shoots Down An American RB-47 Reconnaissance Bomber—Mr. N. Khruschev's Statement—Soviet Union Protests To USA, UK And Norway—Statements By Mr. D. Eisenhower And Mr. H. Macmillan—Debate In UN Security Council—Russian Resolution Defeated—Russia Vetoes US And Italian Resolutions; African Foreign Ministers' Conference; More African States Become Independent.

A. Russia Shoots Down An American RB-47 Reconnaissance Bomber: The Soviet Union announced on July 11 that an American RB-47 reconnaissance aircraft operating from a base in Britain was shot down over Soviet territorial waters in the Barents Sea on July 1.

Two survivors of the plane were rescued. The body of the Commander of the plane, Capt. W. A. Palm, was later discovered by Soviet naval craft. The body was drifting in a rubber dinghy. The Soviet craft took the body on board.

Earlier, US authorities had announced that one of its reconnaissance aircraft had been missing while on a electro-magnetic survey over the Arctic region. A search was made without result. The search was called off at midnight on July 7. The aircraft had a crew of six officers. It was a six-engined turbo-jet plane.

A Norwegian Air Force officer had stated on July 3 at Bodoe Air Base (northern Norway) that Russia had joined in the search for the missing US aircraft and that a Soviet freighter was heading for the plane's last reported position in the Barents Sea.

The aircraft had taken off from Brize Norton Air Base in Oxfordshire, England, on what was officially described as "an electro-magnetic survey flight over the Arctic Ocean."

The Soviet Union said that its aircraft defence posts discovered an unknown military plane over the Barents Sea, near the Kola Peninsula, on July 1.

A fighter plane was immediately ordered to take off. The fighter established that the plane was an American bomber with the markings of the US Air Force.

The Soviet authorities handed over the body of one of the crew of the RB-47 to the US authorities in Moscow on July 25.

Comment By US Defence Department:

The US Defence Department said on July 11 that the RB-47 bomber which, according to a Soviet announcement earlier in the day, was shot down on July 1 over Soviet territory, was not on a mission over USSR.

The US Assistant Secretary of Defence, Mr. Murray Snyder, expressed his conviction that the bomber had not made any deliberate attempt to fly over the Soviet Union.

Soviet Protest Notes To USA, UK And Norway:

On July 11, the Soviet Government addressed protest Notes to the Governments of USA, UK and Norway on the violation of the Soviet frontier by the American RB-47 on July 1.

Below is the text of the Soviet Note to USA:

"The Government of USSR refers this Note to the Government of USA in connexion with the new gross violation of the air-space of the Soviet Union by a USAF plane.

"An unidentified military aircraft heading for the frontier of the Soviet Union was sighted by the aerial observation service of the Soviet anti-aircraft defence forces over the Barents Sea, in the vicinity of the Kola Peninsula, on July 1, 1960. A fighter plane was sent up to identify the nationality of the plane and prevent it from invading the territory of USSR.

"The pilot of the Soviet fighter plane established that the unidentified plane was a bomber with the markings of USAF. The American plane violated the State frontier of USSR 22 kilometres north of the Svyatoi Nos Cape and was moving in the direction of the city of Archangel.

"Despite the signals given by the Soviet fighter plane to follow it and to prepare for landing, the violating plane continued moving deeper into the air-space of the Soviet Union. In accordance with the order issued to the armed forces of the Soviet Union on safeguarding the Soviet frontiers, the violator plane was shot down at 6-03 p.m. (Moscow Time) over Soviet territorial waters east of the Svyatoi Nos Cape.

"Some time later, a Soviet ship picked up in the territorial waters of USSR two members of the crew of the American plane that had been shot down.

"They were the plane's navigator, First-Lieut. of USAF, John R. McKone of Missouri, born in 1932, and co-pilot, First-Lieut. of USAF, Freeman Olmstead of the State of New York, born in 1935.

"As McKone and Olmstead testified during the interrogation, the plane in which they had flown—a 6-engined RB-47 reconnaissance bomber-belonged to an air unit of the American military strategic reconnaissance group included in the 55th Wing and fulfilled special military reconnaissance missions. The plane was armed with two 20-mm guns and a set of shells and had a compartment enclosing special reconnaissance photo and radio electronic equipment.

"According to Olmstead and McKone, the plane had a crew of four men besides themselves: the Commander of the plane, Capt. William A. Palm and three officers—specialists in photo and radio electronic equipment—Capt. Eugene Posa and First-Lieut. Oscar L. Goforth and First-Lieut. Dean B. Phillips. The body of the first pilot, Capt. William A. Palm, was discovered by a Soviet vessel in a rubber boat and taken aboard. The search for other members of the plane's crew yielded no results.

"According to the testimony of Olmstead and McKone, the RB-47 plane, on board of which they flew, took off on July 1, 1960 at 10 a.m. GMT from an American military base situated in Brize Norton, Britain, on a route lying along the northern frontiers of Norway and the Soviet Union. It was under instruction to return, after fulfilling its assignment, to the same base in Britain where the USAF unit to which this plane belonged was stationed.

"Before the take-off, the crew of the plane had been warned by their unit commander at the Brize Norton base, Major Debelle, that the flight had to be kept top secret and the crew were, therefore, forbidden to maintain regular radio communication with the base.

"It is only two months ago that the aggressive actions of USA, which found expression in the pre-determined intrusion of an American military aircraft into USSR on a spying mission and in the proclamation of such provocative acts to be a matter of the national policy of USA, led to the wrecking of the 'Summit' Conference by the US Government and were unanimously condemned by the public opinion of the world. The new violation of the frontier of the Soviet Union by an American aircraft proves that USA is still following the same course dangerous to peace. Everybody sees now what is the real worth of the solemn assurances by the US Government and by President D. Eisenhower in person about the President's alleged order to discontinue American spying over-flights of the territory of USSR.

"The question arises: What purposes does the US Government pursue by continuing the policy of aggressive incursions into the air-space of the Soviet Union? There can be only one answer. The actions of the US Government constitute a deliberate violation of the generally accepted norms of international law, a policy of deliberate provocations aimed at aggravating the situation, at increasing the war danger.

"In so doing, as formerly, USA continues using for its aggressive actions against the Soviet Union the military bases which USA has set up in the territories of other countries —its allies in military blocs.

"Even if the fate of American fliers, whose lives, apparently, are of little value to the US Government and are deliberately sacrificed for organizing espionage flights over USSR, can be regarded as an internal affair of USA, this can, by no means be said about the tremendous threat to world peace created by the provocative activities of the US Government.

"This is a matter which cannot be treated with indifference either by the Soviet Union or by any other nation earnestly concerned with preserving peace.

"Considering that the violation of the frontier in this case was stopped in its early stage, the Soviet Government found it possible to confine itself to destroying the intruder plane and having the surviving members of the crew brought to trial under the full rigour of the Soviet laws.

"At the same time, the Soviet Government warns the US Government in full earnest against the dangerous consequences to which the continuation of the provocative activities of USAF will lead and the responsibility which will rest with the US Government.

"The Government of USA is certainly aware of the consequences its policy of deliberate provocations against the Soviet Union may entail. It may, for one or other reasons, withhold them from its people. But, the Government of USSR deems itself in duty bound to warn the US Government that it has no right to gamble with the destinies of the world. This warning must be made known to the American people too, as well as the fact that the Soviet Union has been and is doing everything in its power to save the peoples from the horrors of another war and that the blame for the hard ordeals to which the world is being now subjected fully rests with the Government of USA.

"The Soviet Government deeply regrets to have to state that the Governments of certain countries—the US allies in the military blocs—have still not drawn the due conclusions from the well-known facts connected with the aggressive actions of USAF. By allowing the American military bases in their territory to be used, they continue the policy of complicity in the above-mentioned aggressive actions, thereby inviting a great danger on the peoples of their countries.

"In view of the new violation of the Soviet frontier by the American plane on July 1, the Government of USSR declares a strong protest to the Government of USA."

Similar Notes were addressed to the Governments of the United Kingdom and Norway.

Mr. N. Khruschev's Statement:

Addressing a news conference in Moscow on July 12, the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, called Britain "an accomplice to the aggressive actions of the United States in its espionage flights."

He said: "Britain has now become an accomplice to the aggressive actions of USA and that is the responsibility of the British Government and, in the first place, of Mr. H. Macmillan. We will wait for the reaction of the British Government to our latest Note."

He said he did not know whether President Eisenhower or Mr. Macmillan had given any instructions about the flight, but they were certainly responsible for any action undertaken by their armies.

Asked about earlier warnings that bases would be attacked in the event of further flights, Mr. Khruschev replied that the warning given by Marshal R. Malinovsky, Defence Minister, should be understood "just as he had declared it."

As to the question as to when and how this retaliation would be carried out, he said that very specific orders had been given to the Minister of Defence and he, in turn, had passed them on to rocket commanders.

Mr. D. Eisenhower's Statement:

In a statement issued from Newport (Rhode Island) on July 13, the US President, Mr. D. Eisenhower, described as "wanton" the shooting down of the RB-47 and said that USA was ready and willing to take the matter to United Nations.

He said: "The US Government is ready and willing to go to the Security Council for a full discussion on the Russian shooting down of the USAF RB-47 plane in international waters on July 1."

He added that in the Security Council, USA "will focus attention on the lawless actions and reckless threats of the Soviet Government."

US Protest:

The US Government lodged a protest with the Soviet Union on July 13 over the "unwarranted shooting down" of its RB-47 plane.

The US protest Note maintained that the plane was never within 30 miles of Soviet territory.

It was evident, it said, that the Soviet Air Force planes "wantonly attacked" the American RB-47 aircraft over international waters. "It should be clear to the Soviet Government that a repetition of acts of this nature cannot fail to have the most serious consequences, the responsibility for which would rest upon the Soviet Government alone."

It also rejected an "attempt" by the Soviet Union to establish some kind of link between the flight of RB-47 and U-2 which was shot down over the Soviet Union on May 1.

It demanded the release of the crew of RB-47.

Soviet Reply To US Note:

In reply to the American Note on the RB-47 plane incident, the Soviet Union said on July 15 that the survivors of the plane incident would be tried with all the severity of Soviet laws.

It said that the only way to avoid the loss of American pilots' lives as well as to avoid putting the world on the brink of war was to stop in fact, and not in words, the "aggressive" policy of USA. If this was not done, the Soviet Union would take the necessary steps to guarantee the security of the Soviet people with all the means at its command.

It rejected the US claim that the plane was shot down outside Soviet territorial waters.

A spokesman of the US State Department re-iterated in Washington on July 15 that the RB-47 plane was shot down outside Soviet territorial waters.

Mr. H. Macmillan's Statement:

The British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, told the House of Commons on July 12 that he was "taking up" with the US President the arrangements under which US planes at present operate from British bases.

He said: "We have good working arrangements between ourselves and the Americans, but I am taking up with the US President whether there should be any modification or improvement of these arrangements."

On July 19, Mr. Harold Macmillan revealed in the British House of Commons the contents of the Note sent by Britain to the Soviet Union in reply to the Soviet protest, as also the contents of a personal letter he had written to Mr. Khruschev.

The Note rejected the Soviet allegation of British complicity in the American RB-47 incident.

It said that the Soviet Government bore a heavy responsibility for the shooting down of the RB-47. The shooting down took place over international air-space and Britain viewed it with the utmost seriousness.

It added that the British Government could not agree that the use of British territory by USAF for legitimate operations in international air-space could, in any way, be regarded as aggressive action.

Mr. Macmillan said that the trend of events since the failure of the Paris 'Summit' Conference had been disturbing. If the present trend continued, they might all one day, by miscalculation or by mischance, find themselves caught up in a situation from which they could not escape. All acts of intelligence or espionage on either side were symptoms and not causes of the world tensions which they should try to reduce.

Norway Rejects Soviet Charge:

On July 22, the Norwegian Government rejected as "groundless" the Soviet protest of July 11 about Norwegian involvement in the RB-47 incident.

The Norwegian reply denied the Soviet claim that Norway had given permission for the use of her territory to the RB-47 in the event that it should have found it necessary to land in Norway.

It said: "That is not the case. No landing permit was sought and none given by the Norwegian Government or any other Norwegian authority."

Soviet Union Calls For Meeting Of Security Council:

On July 14, the Soviet Union formally called for an urgent meeting of the Security Council to consider the question of "new aggressive acts by the US Air Force against the Soviet Union, creating a threat to universal peace."

The call for a meeting of the Council was contained in a cable from the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, to the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld.

The Security Council was convened to meet on July 22.

Opening the debate in the Security Council (on July 22), the Soviet representative, Mr. Vasily Kuznetsov, said that the action of USA in sending its RB-47 bomber into Soviet air-space was a danger to world peace.

He said: "Only two months have passed since the Security Council considered US aggressive, peace-endangering action in having deliberately sent the American U-2 plane on a spying mission into the Soviet Union and in proclaiming such provocative acts to be a matter of the US national policy.

"In its resolution of May 27, the Security Council called upon all the Governments of the United Nations member-countries to respect each other's sovereignty, territorial inviolability and political independence and to refrain from any action likely to increase tensions. Whom this appeal was meant for, above all, is well known to everybody. Yet, the US Government, as shown by the recent events, entirely disregards the above-mentioned principles which should underlie international relations.

"The USSR Government has had to bring the continued aggressive actions of USA before the Security Council for the second time this year in view of the new provocative violation of the Soviet air-space by an US Air Force plane. The latest violation of the Soviet frontiers shows that the US Government riding rough-shod over international law, is stubbornly following its officially declared policy of deliberately violating the sovereign rights of other nations by the provocative dispatch of its military planes into the air-space of the Soviet Union.

"The United States' defiant action has created what is, indeed, an unprecedented international situation where one of the Great Powers—permanent members of the Security Council—is systematically committing provocative acts against another Power, thereby deliberately confronting the world with a hard trial. America is toying with the destinies of peace and making one move after another which might bring on a new world war with all its horrors and disastrous consequences for the people of all nations and, in the first place, for the people of USA.

"We consider that the members of the RB-47 bomber crew, who were carrying out the criminal order to violate the frontiers of the Soviet Union, bear their share of responsibility. But it is clear to everybody that the Pentagon leaders and the US Government which directs their activity are principally responsible for the aggressive intrusion of the RB-47 bomber into the air-space of the Soviet Union.

"Some of US allies still allow USAF planes to use the bases on their territory for acts of aggression against the Soviet Union. Such countries, in the case of the U-2 intelligence plane, were, you will recall, Turkey, Pakistan and Norway, and in the RB-47 bomber case—Britain and Norway. It is not from US territory but from the American military base at Brize Norton in Britain that the RB-47 bomber took off. And it is to the same base that it was to have come back after completing its mission. The Soviet Government has already warned the British Government of the gravity of the situation where British territory is allowed to be used for US military bases. The British Government has not reacted to these warnings of the Soviet Union with due seriousness and has, in this way, become a virtual accomplice in the US hostile act against USSR.

"Norway, too, found herself cast in the role of an accomplice in the US act of aggression against USSR.

"Since the American military bases on other peoples' territory are being used by USA for aggressive purposes, there arises a direct danger to the security of the countries which have granted USA these bases. The conclusion that has long been prompted is that the sooner all the American military bases on other peoples' territory are removed the better it will be for peace and for all nations and peoples.

"The Soviet Government cannot afford to under-estimate the dangerous nature of the violations of Soviet frontiers by American military planes or fail to take the necessary measures towards curbing them.

"The Soviet Government considers necessary for the Security Council, which is the United Nations' principal body responsible for the maintenance of the peace and security of all nations and peoples, to condemn the American aggressors who sent the RB-47 bomber into the air-space of the Soviet Union. The Security Council must take steps to prevent USA from undertaking any more acts of provocation against other countries."

Soviet Resolution:

On behalf of the Soviet Government, Mr. Kuznetsov submitted the following draft resolution for the Security Council's consideration:

"The Security Council,

"Having considered the further aggressive actions of the Air Force of the United States of America against the Soviet Union, which are a danger to world peace,

"Recognizing that the Government of the United States of America continues its deliberate practice of violating the sovereign rights of other nations, which leads to a heightening of international tensions and imperils world peace,

"Condemns these continued provocative actions of the United States Air Force and qualifies them as acts of aggression,

"Insists on the Government of the United States of America taking prompt measures towards stopping such actions and preventing their occurrence ever again."

Mr. H. C. Lodge's Reply And Statement:

Replying to Mr. Kuznetsov, the American delegate, Mr. H. C. Lodge, said that the Soviet action in shooting down the RB-47 could "only be described as criminal and piratical."

He said that at the time when, according to the Soviet Union, the plane was shot down in Soviet waters, it was actually 50 miles off the Soviet coast. Twenty minutes later, it was still over the high seas, 200 miles from the point alleged by the Soviet Union, and flying in a north-easterly direction. At no time during the flight was it closer than 20 miles from the coast of the Soviet Union. That is one truth.

"A further truth is that it became the victim of an action by the Soviet Union, the details of which I shall give later, which can only be described as criminal and piratical. Moreover, when Soviet activities on their own are considered, the speech to-day appears as a pretty revolting piece of hypocrisy."

Noting Mr. Kuznetsov's statement that the surviving members of the crew would be tried under Soviet law, Mr. Lodge again appealed to the Soviet Union to release the men.

In a statement in the Security Council on July 25, Mr. Lodge described the shooting down of the RB-47 plane as "a criminal and reckless act of piracy."

He said: "On July 1, 1960, an American plane of the type known as RB-47 was proceeding on a mission over the international waters of the Barents Sea.

"This mission involved flying northward from England over the high seas to a point approximately 200 miles north of the nearest land mass. From there the plane flew east into the Barents Sea on a prescribed course which at no time was to bring it closer than 50 miles from Soviet territory.

"The plane in question was on an electromagnetic observation flight. The route was over international waters at all times. The crew of the plane had every reason to enjoy safe and uncontested passage through international air-space during this flight.

"The only weapons the plane carried were two 20-mm tail guns to protect it from attack from the rear. It carried no offensive weapons of any kind. As the world knows, the plane disappeared.

"United States personnel who monitored this flight could pin-point the precise location of this plane at 3-33 p.m. GMT—even though the plane maintained radio silence. At that moment, the plane was over international waters, as it had been throughout its flight, and was on its prescribed course approximately 200 miles north-east of the Kola peninsula.

"The plane disappeared; it became the object of widespread search, in which the Soviet Government appeared at first to be participating in good faith.

"Ten days after, however, the Soviet Union proclaimed to the world that it had shot down the missing plane. At the same time, the Soviet Union claimed that the aircraft had penetrated Soviet air-space and that the plane was engaged in a premeditated aggressive mission. The Soviet Government also accompanied its announcement with new threats of force and violence of a type with which the entire world has unfortunately become familiar in recent months.

"This internal delay of ten days, as Mr. Khruschev informed us, had the cynical purpose of 'confusing' us.

"These facts are clear and incontrovertible—and the Soviet Union knows that they are.

"The aircraft was equipped with the most modern and reliable systems for navigation, and the crew had had many years of experience in celestial and other forms of navigation, including electronic means. The crew would have had no reason whatever to depart from their prescribed course, on which they could perform their duties fully. Indeed, they had every reason to stay away from Soviet territory and territorial waters. The plane was equipped with the most sensitive available radar to tell them—with the degree of accuracy only possible through electronic means—how near they were to any land mass. Their instructions required them to rely on this radar for navigation. Further, they were instructed that before they got closer than 75 miles from Soviet territory and before they started on this portion of the prescribed course, they should make a special check to assure themselves that the radar was functioning properly and accurately.

"These elaborate precautions were taken because the crew knew, as do so many of us, that the Soviet Union had in the past lured planes towards its frontier. [Mr. Lodge produced charts and maps to prove his point].

"The Soviet allegation that the plane violated the Soviet national frontier at a point 22 kilometres (12 miles) north of Svyatoi Nos, was moving in the direction of the city of Archangel, and was shot down in Soviet territorial waters east of Svyatoi Nos, is a complete fabrication and must be dismissed as a poor attempt to cloak a wanton attack on a plane over international waters. The plane was never 12 miles north of Svyatoi Nos or in Soviet territorial waters east of Svyatoi Nos. I repeat, the plane was never in either of these places, At no time did it penetrate Soviet territory or even areas which have been claimed at one time or another as territorial waters or air-space of the Soviet Union. And never at any time was it proceeding in the direction of the city of Archangel.

"The RB-47 did not fall at 3.03 p.m. either in Soviet territorial waters, as the Soviet Union claims, or into the high seas 50 miles north-east of Svyatoi Nos, where it actually was at that moment. The plane was brought down by the Soviet Union neither at the place nor at the time which the Soviet Union claims.

"What actually happened was this. Before it reached the point more than 50 miles north of Svyatoi Nos, at which it was scheduled to turn to the north-east, a Soviet fighter pressed in from the sea-ward side and tried to force the plane off its course and into Soviet territory.

"The Soviet fighter was successful in forcing our plane off its course and in delaying its planned turn to the north-east. But it was not successful in forcing the plane into Soviet air-space. It caused our plane to make a detour. Our plane had to go around and get back to the point.

"This astonishing and criminal fact is established beyond doubt by the evidence of our scientific devices, which followed the RB-47 through all the events I have described.

"It is noteworthy that the plane strove to get back on its prescribed north-easterly course, and succeeded in doing so. In the process of its delayed turn, and while flying away from the Soviet Union, the RB-47 made its closest approach to Soviet territory. This was at a point 30 miles off the tip of the Kanin peninsula—still far from Soviet territory.

"Twenty minutes after the time that the Soviet Note says that the plane was destroyed, it was 200 miles away from Svyatoi Nos, far from Soviet territorial waters. We ask the Soviet Government: what did you do to this plane when it was at this point at 1522 hours? What did you do?

"Let me dwell on these events for a moment. The approach of the Soviet fighter, which took place over international waters, was from the sea-ward side. It prevented our plane from making its prescribed turn to the north-east, which means that it prevented a prescribed turn away from the Soviet coastal region and out toward the open waters of the Barents Sea. If the RB-47 had tried to make its prescribed turn on schedule, it would have had to turn toward the Soviet fighter.

"And note this well: if the RB-47 had turned toward the Soviet fighter, this turn might have been used as an excuse by the fighter pilot to open fire on the US plane. The plane, therefore, was forced to over-shoot its turning point.

"Shortly afterward, the Soviet fighter broke off from the RB-47, perhaps because it was running low on fuel.

"Then finally the RB-47 was able to make a delayed turn—still well outside Soviet air-space, to the north-east and to resume its prescribed course. Through the technical means we have, we were able to follow all this in detail.

"Only one conclusion can be drawn from this. The Soviet fighter was trying to force, compel the RB-47 to fly southward over Soviet territory. There it could have been shot down on land. But their attempt failed.

"Now, we wonder why the Soviet Union presented so many distortions about this. Perhaps, the Soviet Air Force was reluctant to admit to Mr. Khruschev that the aircraft could not be shot down over Soviet air-space—for the very good reason that it was not there—and, therefore, did not inform him of the facts. Perhaps, they did not tell him that they had to go 200 miles from Cape Svyatoi Nos to follow the RB-47. Perhaps Mr. Khruschev has been lied to. That often happens in dictatorships."

"In these circumstances, the United States would be fully justified in asking the Security Council to condemn this outrageous attack and to call upon the Soviet Union to make prompt payment of indemnities for the loss of lives of innocent air-men and the destruction of our RB-47 plane. But, in the hope that the Security Council can persuade the Soviet Union to abandon its unco-operative attitude, we simply ask the Council, as a first step, to call on the Soviet Union to accept an impartial investigation.

"We do not ask the Security Council to take our word for what happened. We thought we knew that it's true, but we do ask the Council to help ascertain the facts. We, therefore, are introducing a resolution which provides for an investigation of this matter or an adjudication of it by the International Court of Justice."

US Resolution:

Mr. Lodge then submitted the following draft resolution:

"The Security Council,

"Having considered the item submitted by the Soviet Union on July 13, 1960;

"Having heard the statements of the representatives of the United States and the Soviet Union;

"Noting the existence of differences between the two Governments as to the facts of the incident of July 1, 1960, in which a United States Air Force plane was brought down by Soviet military forces, and as to the questions of legal liability arising from the incident;

"Recalling its resolution of May 27, 1960 in which the Council (1) stated its conviction that every effort should be made to restore and strengthen international goodwill and confidence based on the established principles of international law, (2) recommended to the Governments concerned to seek solutions of existing international problems by negotiation or other peaceful means as provided in the Charter of the United Nations, and (3) appealed to all member-Governments to refrain from the use of threats of force in their international relations, to respect each other's sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence and to refrain from any action which might increase tensions;

"Recommends to the Governments of the Soviet Union and the United States to undertake to resolve their differences arising out of the plane incident of July 1, 1960 either (a) through investigation of the facts by a Commission composed of members designated in equal numbers, by the United States, by the Soviet Union, and by a Government or authority acceptable to both parties, charged with inquiring into the incident by inspecting the site, examining such remains of the plane as may be located and interrogating survivors and other witnesses; or (b) through referring of the matter to the International Court of Justice for impartial adjudication."

Mr. V. Kuznetsov's Reply To Mr. H.C. Lodge:

Replying to the US delegate, the Soviet representative, Mr. V. Kuznetsov, said:

"I want to say that everything that the US delegate has said to the effect that the RB-47 allegedly had not invaded the air-space of USSR represents a crude fabrication from beginning to end, designed to mislead the people of USA and world opinion. It is not enough to say fine words about 'scientific data.'

"This statement is not backed by any factual material. The maps, however nicely made, are fake. It is permissible to ask Mr. Lodge: does he really think that the theatrical dodges he is resorting to more and more frequently of late in the Security Council can convince anyone? It is high time that he should realize that the Security Council is not a stage for spectacles of this kind designed for cheap effect.

"The armed RB-47 bomber which was flying on an espionage and sabotage mission had violated the state frontiers of USSR and invaded the air-space of the Soviet Union, having committed thus an act of aggression against our country. Those who organized this act must bear responsibility for their actions.

"The US delegate is hypocritically attempting to invoke the feelings of wives and mothers of the members of the RB-47 crew.

"This is unparalleled cynicism.

"We fully understand the feelings of the wives and mothers of the RB-47 crew and, in this connection, I should like to tell Mr. Lodge that the responsibility for the tears and grief brought to these families rests fully and squarely with the organizers of the provocative intrusion of the RB-47 aircraft into the air-space of the Soviet Union. It is to them that should be addressed the legitimate questions of the victims, of all those who seek to preserve peace: what right did they have to play with the lives of the crew by sending the RB-47 aircraft to commit a definite act of aggression over a distance of more than 10,000 kilometres from USA? Do have the courage, Mr. Lodge, to reply to this question. It is not the first time that the Pentagon and those who endorse its actions wantonly played with the lives of their subordinates for the sake of their aggressive policy. All this should have been ended long ago.

"The Soviet Union resolutely objects to any investigations, to the setting up of any Commissions. The Security Council had been supplied with exhaustive data which clearly and unequivocally prove the aggressive nature of the flight of the RB-47 which was shot down in the air-space of USSR. The proposal to set up a Commission to conduct an investigation of some kind can have only one aim—to muddle a clear issue, to mislead public opinion and thus enable the organizers of the provocative flight to evade responsibility. What is needed, therefore, is not to set up a Commission but to condemn the aggressor and to call him to order.

"It goes without saying that I reject most resolutely what has been said here about the policy of the Soviet Union as malicious and arrogant slander of my country and its people.

"It will be easily seen that the exponents of stepping up the 'cold war' policy, whose mouthpiece here is Mr. Lodge, are attempting to lay the blame at other people's doors and mislead public opinion.

"But no one will succeed by any underhand tricks and machinations to conceal from the peoples the truth about the peaceable foreign policy of the Soviet Union."

Mr. H. C. Lodge's Further Reply:

In the debate on July 26, the US delegate, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, said: "Mr. Kuznetsov asked today the question: if we knew where our plane was, why did we search so far out to sea? The reason is very simple. We knew that the plane had reached this point 200 miles north-east of Svyatoi Nos. We, therefore, conducted our own search along the portion of the plane's planned route which had not yet been flown. And, for that purpose, our search was on the prescribed return route. We knew that the plane had eluded the Soviet fighter 50 miles north of Svyatoi Nos and, certainly, there was, therefore, no reason for searching. That is a very simple answer, a very simple set of facts."

He went on: "In his opening statement of July 22 presenting the Soviet case against USA, Mr. Kuznetsov asked what USA would do 'if the American radars were to detect a Soviet bomber flying in the air-space of USA towards New York, for instance, or Chicago, and, the more so, if this bomber were to refuse to obey an order to land?

"Well, in the first place, it is a loaded question. The implication is in that question that the US RB-47 which disappeared on July 1 flew over Soviet territory—which, as I have already shown in detail, it did not do. So the question is not a parallel question at all. The course which the RB-47 followed never brought it closer than 30 miles from the nearest Soviet land. It would not have come even that close if its prescribed turn-away from the Soviet coast had not been prevented by a Soviet fighter coming at it from the sea-ward side and forcing it—not turning it, Mr. Kuznetsov—towards the land. It was instructed not to violate Soviet air-space and it did not violate Soviet air-space.

"Mr. Kuznetsov asked in his speech for the grounds on which the United States maintains this account of facts. It was explained on July 25 that USA possesses scientific devices which followed the RB-47 throughout the flight. I am sure that Soviet military authorities would like to know all about these devices, but I can assure you that USA is not going to give them that satisfaction—it is not going to divulge our military secrets.

"The surprising thing is that Mr. Kuznetsov sees no need to present evidence for his assertion. He makes the charge and then I make an answer, and he expects me to prove my answer, but he does not prove his charge. What kind of backward thinking is that? For Mr. Kuznetsov it is enough that someone in Moscow in authority has made up this story and for that reason it becomes holy writ. But we are not in Moscow; we are in United Nations. It makes a great difference.

"Well, now, let us unload the loaded question. And if you unload it, there remains another question which is very much to the point. Sir Pierson Dixon told us on July 25 that the Soviet Union engages extensively in reconnaissance activities in the vicinity of the British Isles. It has long been Soviet practice to engage in similar activities off the shores and air-space of the United States. So the question arises: what does USA do about Soviet aircraft and Soviet ocean vessels which come near our shores with electronic gear?

"I shall cite two recent examples.

"On April 26, 1960, the Soviet trawler Vega appeared off the Atlantic coast of USA, about 105 miles south-east of Cape Cod, Massachusetts. In this area, at that moment, the US nuclear submarine George Washington was conducting tests of the Polaris missile ejection system. Our ships instructed the Vega to stand clear of the area. It disregarded these instructions. It actually tried to retrieve, to pick up one of the loaded test vehicles which had been shot by the George Washington at about 7 a.m. that day. Indeed, one of our support ships, the Nimpuc, managed to recover the test vehicle but, in doing so, had to manoeuvre sharply to avoid colliding with the Vega.

"The Vega then sailed south-west, until it arrived at a point 30 miles off New Jersey—not far from UN—in the vicinity of Fort Monmouth, which is the site of the US Army Signal Centre and, therefore, an excellent place for USSR to try to gather electronic intelligence. From there, the Vega sailed south to a point off Wallops Island, Virginia, which is the place where our National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) carries on major scientific testing work with high altitude balloons and other devices. The Vega then moved westward, directly toward Wallops Island, until it stood 13 miles off Cape Henry. This was its nearest approach to United States territory—13 miles. Of course, when the Soviet Union does it, it isn't spying; it is virtuous, because they do it.

"Now, perhaps the Vega was one of the 'Soviet trading and scientific vessels,' about which Mr. Kuznetsov spoke with such an air of injured innocence in his statement which, he said, had been subjected to 'provocative buzzing' by US aircraft. Our air-ships did indeed come close to the Vega and took photographs of her. And here is one right here. This is one of the photographs—and there is a difference between taking a picture of that boat and shooting the men on it. I'll tell you that right now.

"And this photograph shows that the Vega carried a mobile van mounted on top of her pilot house and partly concealed by square life-rafts. On this van were installed numerous antennas used for co-electronic intelligence capable of picking up radio and radar emissions ranging from very long range to the so-called 'X-band,' which is above ultra high frequency. The van appeared to be completely portable and, probably, could be moved easily to another vessel or platform.

"This is what our photograph revealed—and I may add that they did not show any fishing gear at all—a very funny kind of a fishing boat!

"Now, on this chart, you can see the course sailed by the Vega parallel to US coast. At one point, it came within 13 miles of land—much closer than the nearest approach of our RB-47 to Soviet territory.

"But we did not sink it. We did not shoot at it. We photographed it.

"Then, there are the Soviet electronic reconnaissance flights off the coast of USA. We are coming to air-planes now, this time off the State of Alaska. These have been going on for years, as I am sure Mr. Kuznetsov knows. I can see one of his aides nodding his head—he knows.

"I have here a chart on which are plotted the dates and courses of six such flights by Soviet reconnaissance planes which took place in 1959 and 1960.

"March 18—5 miles. Matthews Island—5 nautical miles—that's US territory;

"March 19—15 miles from Cape Lisburne;

"March 24—25 miles from Point Barrow;

"March 26—20 miles from St. Matthews Island;

"In 1960:

"February 3—10 miles from St. Matthews Island. I wonder what they are interested in St. Matthews Island for?

"February 5—12 miles from St. Lawrence Island.

"Now, here is a photograph of the type of Soviet plane which made these flights. This was taken when it was going at high speed over the north Pacific. That is one of your planes, Mr. Kuznetsov; there is the Red Star right there. It is a two-engine jet bomber modified for electronic reconnaissance, which the Soviet call the TU-16 and which we call the 'Badger.' Under the wing there is a pod which houses electronic equipment for making electronic observations.

"In other words, the Soviet Union had been sending these electronic reconnaissance planes regularly off the coast of Alaska as close as five miles from our territory to gather intelligence on our radar and other electronic signals.

"The difference between USA and the Soviet Union is that we shoot their planes with cameras. They shoot ours with guns and rockets and kill or imprison our crew."

Italian Resolution:

Italy called on the Soviet Union to authorize the International Red Cross to contact the survivors of the RB-47.

The appeal was made in a draft resolution submitted at the UN Security Council.

The resolution expressed the hope that the International Red Cross would be authorized to carry out a neutral and humanitarian mandate as regards the survivors.

It stated that in any event, the action of the Red Cross should be independent of any other inquiry which might be undertaken on the incident.

The Argentine delegate, Dr. Mario Amadeo, said that the "most benevolent interpretation of intentions could not lead us to believe that the Soviet description of events actually happened that way."

The Soviet delegate, Mr. V. Kuznetsov, said: "The question the Security Council now has before it is crystal clear. For a number of years, the US Government has been pursuing a policy of overt provocations against the Soviet Union by systematically sending its military planes into the air-space of the Soviet Union, violating the sovereignty of our country.

"Such actions aggravate the international situation and increase the danger of another war, and must be ended once and for all.

"Yet, the US Government, as shown, among other things, by the speech of its representative in the Security Council on the question under discussion, is still pretending not to see the threat to world peace created by the deliberate incursions of US planes and trying to assert groundlessly that these actions do not constitute aggression. More than that, the US representative, Mr. H. C. Lodge, approved the provocative flight of the RB-47 and, for all intents and purposes, confirmed that this dangerous practice with regard to the Soviet Union, proclaimed to be the official policy of USA, will be continued in the future as well."

Soviet Resolution Rejected:

On July 26, the Security Council rejected the Soviet bid to condemn USA for the RB-47 incident.

The Soviet Union then cast its 88th veto against the US proposal to set up an International Commission to investigate the RB-47 incident.

The Soviet Union's 89th veto was cast against the Italian bid to allow the International Red Cross to make contact with the survivors of the crew of RB-47.

Poland voted with the Soviet Union against the American and Italian drafts, which the nine other members of the Council supported.

Russia and Poland voted for the proposal to condemn USA.

In a further Note delivered to the Soviet Government on August 4, the United States demanded the release of the two US Air Force officers, Lieut. Olmstead and Lieut. McKone who were detained "illegally" in the Soviet Union and that a representative of the US Embassy in Moscow should be permitted to see them without delay.

B. African Foreign Ministers' Conference: Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia opened in Addis Ababa on June 14 a Conference of the Foreign Ministers of independent African States.

In his address, Emperor Haile Selassie urged the independent African countries to "resolutely unite as fearless and resolute advocates for our South African brothers".

He said: "The bloodshed and sufferings that we have witnessed during the past year in various parts of this continent are too vivid in our memory. They are tragic and we must see to it that they do not recur. We must devise ways and means to arrest the senseless destruction of African lives. Africans have committed no sin unless the pursuit of independence and freedom from colonial oppression is considered one."

The Foreign Ministers of Algeria, Cameroons, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, Libya, Liberia, Morocco, Sudan, Tunisia and the United Arab Republic attended.

Angola, Kenya and South Africa were represented by nominees of nationalist organizations in these countries, while Tanganyika and Uganda were represented by Observers.

The Conference decided to take Somalia, Congo and Nigeria—all becoming independent in 1960—as full members of the Conference.

Merger Into Unions—Idea Discussed:

On June 15, the President of the Tanganyika African National Union, Mr. Nyerere, proposed a federation of East African territories.

The Secretary of the Kenya African National Union, Mr. Tom Mboya, referred to this suggestion the following day (June 16) and said that he favoured it. He suggested that leaders of the East African territories should meet to discuss the proposal.

During the session on June 16, several African leaders were sharply divided on the question of merger of African States into unions or into one union.

While Ghana and Guinea advocated complete union as an inevitable goal, Nigeria rejected it as premature. Liberia supported Nigeria.

The President of the Tanganyika African National Union referred to the plans for an East African Federation of Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika and Zanzibar and said that at this time it was not "practical politics" to think about it. These territories must become independent before the question could be considered.

Ghana's Foreign Minister, Mr. Ako Adjei, said that it might be necessary and wise for African States to establish a Council for Economic Co-operation to establish liaison with the existing United Nations Economic Commission for Africa for co-ordinating national economic plans.

He also said that the Prime Minister of Ghana and the Prime Minister of Togoland had reached agreement on their form of co-operation in economic matters and on matters relating to education, science, health and social and cultural development.

He added that Ghana felt the need for an African 'summit' conference to discuss the question of disarmament and suspension of nuclear tests.

Leading politicians of Kampala (Uganda) expressed disagreement on June 16 to the plans for an East African Federation of Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika and Zanzibar.

African 'Summit' Conference:

On June 17, most delegates welcomed the proposal made by the Foreign Minister of Ghana, Mr. Ako Adjei, for a 'summit' conference between Heads of independent African States.

According to a message from Addis Ababa on June 17, there was a general desire among the delegations for a Bandung-like conference of Afro-Asian leaders to discuss common problems.

[Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who opened the Conference, had also urged the need for a second Bandung Conference to discuss problems arising from the failure of the Paris 'Summit' Conference.]

Four-Point Programme Against South African 'Apartheid':

It was stated on June 17 that the delegates had obtained full support for a four-point programme against South African apartheid.

The four points were: (1) A ban on all shipments to South Africa from the African countries; (2) A ban on South African overflights on African countries; (3) A boycott of South African exports at official Governmental levels; and (4) Support to take the case of South-West Africa before the International Court at The Hague.

In addition, they hoped for concerted action to aid refugees from South Africa's apartheid policy.

Algerian Movement:

All the speakers on June 18 urged more aid for the Algerian nationalist movement.

At the session on June 17, the leader of the Algerian "Provisional Government" delegation, Mr. Mohammed Yazid, alleged that the US Government, "not content with supplying money and arms to the French Expeditionary Force in Algeria, was now sending technicians to maintain on-the-spot American aircraft supplied to France".

There were shouts of "shame, shame" when Mr. Yazid said: "USA is today the banker of French colonialism, whom she provides with arms."

He alleged that some Western Powers had set up imperialist groups to keep Africa in bondage and had found full support among their allies. "For instance, NATO has become an instrument in the war of re-conquest which France is conducting in Algeria."

Conditions In Angola:

An Observer from Angola, Mr. Jose Gilmore, told the Special Committee of the Conference discussing colonialism on June 20 that the Portuguese authorities in Angola were taking land from the local population and giving it to Portuguese immigrants who were arriving there in large numbers.

He said that the Portuguese authorities were freely distributing arms and ammunition to Portuguese settlers. This, according to him, had led to large-scale assassination and pillage.

He said: "The basic characteristic of colonialism as practised by the Portuguese is an exacerbated form of fascism marked by the most inhuman type of racialism. A racial policy in cultural, social and economic matters was in fact being pursued in the Portuguese colonies with an unusual degree of ferocity. Forced labour in Angola existed in the most brutal form. Semi-official statistics for 1957 put the number of workers at 700,000, including men, women and children. From the beginning of 1959, a policy of intimidation by bloodshed was initiated. Massacres in so-called Portuguese Guinea and the arrival of military re-inforcements in Angola were accompanied by the distribution of arms to settlers who have been converted into militia-men free to mow down anyone they regard as suspect. Nearly 500 people have been tortured in convict prisons of Angola, while about 50 are due to appear before the military tribunal this month."

Appeal To France On Algeria:

On June 24, the Conference decided, with one abstention, to make a joint representation to France urging a peaceful settlement of the Algerian issue based on the right of self-determination for the Algerian people.

The lone abstention was the Cameroons, the former French colony, which became independent within the French Community in January, 1960.

The Conference urged that a joint representation be made by the independent African States to NATO Powers with a view to urging them to persuade France to desist from using in Algeria the arms supplied by NATO for defensive purposes.

It also urged NATO to withdraw all African troops being used by France in Algeria.

Resolutions:

At the closing session on the night of June 24, the Conference unanimously adopted a resolution urging the colonial Powers to fix dates in conformity with the will of the people for the immediate attainment of independence by all non-independent countries and to communicate those dates to the peoples concerned.

It also resolved that independent African States should continue to exert concerted action to achieve through all possible peaceful means the complete eradication of colonial rule from Africa.

It urged "African States which are members of the British Commonwealth to take all possible steps to secure the exclusion of the Union of South Africa from the British Commonwealth."

A UAR suggestion that African countries within the Commonwealth should withdraw from the Commonwealth in the event of Britain's failure to expel South Africa was, however, defeated.

A resolution on South Africa called on the member-States "to sever diplomatic relations or refrain from establishing diplomatic relations as the case may be (with the South African Government), close African ports to all vessels flying the South African flag, enact legislation prohibiting their ships from entering South African ports, to boycott all South African goods, to refuse landing and passage facilities to all aircraft belonging to the Government and companies registered under the laws of the Union of South Africa and to prohibit all South African aircraft from flying over the air-space of independent African States."

It invited "Arab States to approach all petroleum companies with a view to preventing Arab oil from being sold to the Union of South Africa and recommends that African States refuse any concession to any company which continued to sell petroleum to South Africa."

A UAR suggestion that boycott measures against South Africa be extended to include Israel to protect the rights of Palestine refugees was vigorously opposed and rejected.

The resolution on colonialism condemned the practice of colonial Powers in enlisting Africans against their own will in foreign armed forces to suppress liberation movements in Africa. It appealed to the conscience of all Africans to resist enlistment in foreign armed forces.

The Conference also decided to establish a Special Fund to aid freedom fighters in Africa to be known as the African Freedom Fund.

The Fund would be administered by an organ to be established by the Conference and contributions to it would be on the basis of equitable shares to be agreed upon by the Conference.

C. Taxation Of Soviet Factory And Office Workers: It was announced in Moscow on July 22 that factory and office workers earning up to 500 roubles a month would be exempted from taxes in the Soviet Union as from October 1, 1960.

This decision was taken by the USSR Council of Ministers, which considered questions relating to the implementation of the law on the abolition of taxes levied on factory and office workers, which was adopted by the fifth session of the USSR Supreme Soviet.

The Council of Ministers also endorsed lower income-taxes and lower taxes on bachelors, single persons and people with small families earning from 501 to 600 roubles a month.

As a result of all these measures, the cash incomes of this group of factory and office workers, it was stated, would increase by 3,600,000,000 roubles a year.

D. Dahomey Becomes Independent: Dahomey, one of the most advanced of the French-speaking African territories, proclaimed its independence on August 1.

The new State, which has a population of 1,70,000, stretches along a narrow belt of territory for some 435 miles between Nigeria on the east, Togo to the west and Upper Volta and Nigeria to the north.

It has long been colonized by Europeans, but it is only during the last years of the last century that the French gained a definite foothold there following a difficult struggle between the famous King Behanzin, chieftain of one of the three kingdoms of which the country was formed.

Niger's Independence:

The independence of the Niger Republic was formally proclaimed at midnight on August 2-3.

The Niger, formerly part of French West Africa, had negotiated its independence from France together with Dahomey, the Ivory Coast and Upper Volta.

All the four States are within the French Community.

Ivory Coast And Upper Volta Become Independent:

The independence of Ivory Coast was proclaimed at a solemn session of the National Assembly in Abidjan (Ivory Coast) on August 7.

Its Prime Minister, Mr. Felix Houphouet-Boigny, told the Assembly that there was urgent need for African unity and a "speedy Round Table Conference."

He declared: "What, above all, we must bring to this torn and uneasy world is our sincere love of peace and justice. Africans should come together and unite in order to remove from their countries the troubles of competition in order to make of this Africa a land of reconciliation among peoples. That is our vocation."

He also paid a tribute to the French President, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, and read out Gen. de Gaulle's message on the occasion.

With the Ivory Coast becoming independent, four African States in the French Community attained full sovereignty within a week.

The other three States are Dahomey, Niger and Upper Volta.

Upper Volta was formerly part of French West Africa and one of the four African States forming the Council of Understanding which proclaimed its independence on August 6.

Upper Volta was the third member of the group to assume full sovereignty, following Dahomey and Niger.

Chad And French Congo Become Independent:

The Chad territory of French Equatorial Africa became independent at midnight on August 10-11.

Another French colony in Africa—French Congo—became independent on August 15.

Madagascar Becomes Independent:

Three days of almost continuous public functions, culminating in a fireworks display on July 31, marked the end of French colonial rule and the independence of Madagascar, the third biggest island in the world.

Madagascar remains a member of the French Community and the French presence was very noticeable throughout the proceedings.

French officials and experts of all kinds are still participating to a very considerable extent in the administration and general conduct of affairs in Madagascar, but this is by agreement and with the consent of the ruling party.

The correspondent of The Hindu in London wrote as follows:

"There are different trends in Madagascar politics, and they are expected to come more and more to the surface as the country adjusts itself to its newly-acquired independence, beginning with the elections scheduled for September, 1960.

"Lying as it does off the coast of Africa and belonging to the Indian Ocean region, the Island is not without strategic significance and possible political developments in the Island will be watched carefully by both the East and the West.

"Apart from the French, the biggest minority (70,000 out of a total population of 5,000,000), the main foreign element numbering about 25,000 consists of people of Indian and Chinese origin.

"Some 4,000 out of the 16,000 Indians have already acquired French nationality, but the exact status of the bulk of the community will not be clarified until the new nationality law is published.

"President Philibert Tsiranana, Head of the State and of Government, has said that aliens in Madagascar had no reason to be apprehensive about the future so long as they observed the laws of the country. He was, however, strongly critical of any direct or indirect political activity on their part.

"Referring particularly to the Chinese, he said that some wealthy members of the community in the Island were contributing funds to the opposition parties, meaning the communists, and he was determined to stop that."

E. US Rocket Ship Sets New Record Of 2,150 MPH For Manned Flight: An American X-15 rocket plane attained a speed of 2,150 miles an hour over Edward Air Base. This was the fastest flight on record for a manned aircraft.

The previous highest speed record was the 2,094 miles per hour set on September 27, 1956 by a US Air Force Captain in Milburn in a X-2 research plane. He was killed seconds later when the aircraft went out of control and crashed.

The record for conventional jet planes is 1,525 miles per hour set by a Convair Delta plane in December, 1959.

The X-15 rocket plane was dropped from beneath the wing of a B-52 parent plane at 45,000 feet over Silver Lake.

In a four-minute burst of all its engines, the plane climbed to 78,000 feet, beating the speed record on the way. Then, it glided down, back to the test centre.

F. First French-Built Atomic Clock: The first French-built atomic clock, whose accuracy does not vary more than a single second during an entire century, was formally inaugurated in the watch-making centre of Besancon on July 14.

The clock was built by the laboratory of the University of Besancon, with the co-operation of the National Committee for Scientific Research and the Committee for Scientific Research in National Defence.

The clock is used not only as a precise measuring instrument but is also adapted with radar installations to permit it to calculate the velocity of artificial satellites.

The principle of the clock revolutionizes the system of measuring time. Up to now time has been largely determined by the movement of heavenly bodies. The new clock measures time independently, permitting greater precision in studying any irregularity in the rotation of the Earth.

G. New Soviet Multi-Stage Rocket Tests: The Soviet Union announced on June 28 a new programme of tests over the Central Pacific in July, 1960 with powerful new multi-stage rocket-carriers. The announcement asked ships and planes to stay clear of the spot, north-east of the Gilbert and Ellice islands.

The announcement added that the launchings would be carried out between July 5 and 31 in accordance with the programme for further scientific research and experimental designing in the sphere of space problems.

The following is the text of the announcement:

"In accordance with the space exploration programme, the Soviet Union launched a powerful carrier-rocket without the final stage in the Pacific in January, 1960.

"On May 15, 1960, the space-ship satellite of the Earth weighing four tons was launched by the Soviet Union by means of this rocket.

"In accordance with the programme for further scientific research and experimental designing in the sphere of space problems Soviet scientists and designers have prepared for tests new types of powerful multi-stage carrier-rockets.

"The launchings of these carrier-rockets without the final stage will be also effected in the area of the Central Pacific with the co-ordination: 7 degrees 05 minutes latitude north, and 169 degrees 09 minutes longitude west; 7 degrees 53 minutes latitude north and 167 degrees 33 minutes longitude west; 5 degrees 26 minutes latitude north and 166 degrees 15 minutes longitude west; 4 degrees 38 minutes latitude north and 167 degrees 51 minutes longitude west. [All these positions are roughly north Phoenix Island around the Hawaii-Brisbane shipping route.]

"Special vessels of the Soviet fleet equipped with measuring instruments will be dispatched to the area of the fall of the penultimate stage of the carrier-rocket to conduct necessary measurements.

"The launching of the rocket will be effected, as provisionally planned, between July 5 and 31, 1960.

"To ensure the security of navigation and aircraft flights during the launching of the carrier-rockets towards the Central Pacific, Tass is authorized to announce that the Government of the Soviet Union requests the Governments of the countries whose vessels and planes may find themselves during this period close to the area of the penultimate stages of the carrier-rockets that the competent authorities should instruct the Captains of vessels and Commanders of planes not to enter the sea and air-space of the Pacific within the above co-ordinates."

As announced, the Soviet Union launched a rocket into the Pacific testing ground on July 5.

Tass said that the flight of the rocket took place as planned and that the rocket dummy final stage reached the ocean in close proximity to the target, about 8,000 miles from the launching site.

American navy planes saw the Russian rocket hit the Pacific about 1,000 miles south-west of Hawaii.

The American Defence Department announced in Washington: "It appears that today's shot travelled about 7,700 miles."

A vapour trail was the first evidence of the Russian rocket. It was sighted by two US Navy patrol planes.

On July 7, the Soviet Union launched its second multi-stage rocket.

Describing it as a multi-stage ballistic rocket designed for outer space flights, Tass said that the dummy final stage hit the water right at the target point after a flight of about 8,000 miles. During the flight, the rocket strictly followed its pre-set course.

Tass added that this completed "the present series of tests" and the target area in the Central Pacific was declared open to normal shipping from July 8.

It said that the tests had been due to continue until the end of July, but in view of the satisfactory results obtained by the two launchings, there was no further need for testing this type of rocket.

It added: "The launching of the two rockets gave all the necessary data regarding the processing of the carrier-rocket designed for further investigation of outer space."

H. European Free Trade Association Comes Effectively Into Being: The European Free Trade Association (EFTA) came effectively into being on July 1 when the first reduction, one of 20 per cent in the customs tariffs on industrial products traded between members, came into force.

EFTA—sometimes referred to as "The Outer Seven"—consists of seven nations: Austria, Denmark, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

The Convention establishing EFTA was initialled in Stockholm in November, 1959 and came into force on May 3, 1960, when member-Governments deposited their Instruments of Ratification. Its headquarters is in Geneva.

The aims and purposes of EFTA are economic expansion, full employment, rational use of resources, financial stability and higher standard of living.

Starting on July 1 with the first tariff cuts of 20 per cent, the Stockholm Convention will progressively establish a free market between the members of the Association. This will be achieved by the abolition of tariffs and other obstacles to trade in the industrial products of members over a period of ten years or earlier if so decided (there are special provisions for trade in agricultural produce and fish). Insofar as the member-States still have import restrictions, these quotas will also be relaxed. But each country will be free to decide her own external tariffs.

I. UN Economic And Social Council Session: The United Nations Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) opened its session in Geneva on July 5.

In his opening address, the President of the Council, Mr. C. W. A. Schurmann, said that the Council must help mankind to rid itself of the appalling sufferings and frustrations which still prevailed.

He said that the Council must use a wide variety of approaches and not make the "absurd attempt to impose one uniform pattern all over the world."

He added that two main events would mark the session: (1) The discussions that take place at ministerial level to review the world economic situation and, in particular, the economic development problems of less advanced countries between July 11 and 14; (2) The over-all appraisal that would be attempted of the economic, social and human rights activities of UN and its related agencies.

These tasks would be new experiments for the Council, and they were an expression of the Council's efforts to measure up to its responsibilities.

The Council's session offered an opportunity, he said, to assist mankind to get rid of "appalling sufferings and frustrations."

At the start, the Council decided to consider emergency measures for the earthquake-stricken economy of Chile and the representative of Chile, Mr. Daniel Schweitzer, expressed his country's gratitude.

A United Kingdom request that Kuwait's request for admission to UNESCO be considered, was also accepted.

The problems of economic development and the special needs of the newly-independent countries were the major items on the Council's agenda. Items in the social field included the right of asylum, refugee problem, the status of women and the efforts to stamp out illicit traffic in narcotics.

UN World Economic Survey:

The United Nations World Economic Survey released on the eve of the ECOSOC session revealed a further growth in economic activity in 1959 in both Western and Eastern countries.

It said that in the West some measures were taken to slow down the pace of expansion to keep the economic balance, while in some countries of the East the fall in agricultural production resulted in the slowing down of the rate of growth.

The first part of the Survey, released on June 1, 1960, offered a review of post-War trends in investment and investment policies in countries of the West, of the East and of the under-developed areas. The second part, released before the ECOSOC session, dealt with the economic changes in all three of these groups of countries.

Speaking of the countries of the industrial West, it said that "the recent up-swing in economic activity....continued into the early months of 1960," and was "particularly characterized by a rapid rise in residential construction, public investment and consumer expenditures on durable goods." Concurrently, the volume of foreign trade "showed an even more vigorous recovery than domestic production."

The ability of the free enterprise system to initiate new measures putting an end to the harmful effect of recurring economic fluctuations was shown. It noted that the public sector played an important part in this development, through which Governments adopted deliberate anti-cyclical measures in addition to the "well-known built-in stabilizers."

In general, it expected that "for the year 1960 as a whole the gross national product in the industrial group of countries will be higher in real terms than in the preceding year—the rate of growth in total product will, however, probably be lower than that recorded in 1959."

Turning to the countries of the Soviet bloc, it said that "the economic situation in the centrally-planned economies in 1959 was characterized by the continuation of high rates of growth in output and an acceleration of the rate of growth in foreign trade."

It added: "The pace of expansion in national production increased somewhat in Hungary and very substantially in Bulgaria and Rumania but it slackened in Czechoslovakia, Soviet Union and mainland China."

The slackening was particularly marked in mainland China, which was not able to maintain the extremely high rate of growth achieved in 1958.

The "agricultural production....in several countries was affected by bad weather" and "only in Bulgaria and Rumania did agricultural output increase at a much higher rate than in 1958. In countries where the output of crops declined, the effect of the fall on total agricultural production was, in part, offset by better farming, but this was hardly sufficient to raise production to the level attained in 1958.

"In mainland China, the system of communes established in 1958 was consolidated in a slightly modified form; in the Soviet Union, the tendency towards gradual elimination of differences between State and collective farms was reflected in the introduction of the guaranteed minimum wage in a sizeable proportion of collective farms; in Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Hungary, collectivization of agriculture was accelerated."

As to the expansion of industrial production in the Soviet bloc, it noted "a slightly lower rate" in 1959 than that achieved in the previous year, the deceleration having been "almost entirely due to the reduction in the rate of growth in mainland China.

"However, industrial production in China, according to Peking's claims, increased by 39 per cent in 1959, the second year of the 'Forward Leap'. Next to mainland China, the largest increase in industrial production was reported by Bulgaria, where it rose by 24 per cent. In the other countries of the Soviet bloc, the rate of expansion ranged from 9 per cent in Poland to 12 per cent in East Germany."

The acceleration in industrial output, however, covered mostly producer and not consumer goods; thus "the spread between these two sectors" widened as compared with the situation in 1958, except in China, Soviet Union and Hungary.

Finally, taking up the trade picture in the East, the Survey reported expansion by 19 per cent in 1959, exceeding the 5 per cent rise in 1958 and even the 15 per cent advance achieved in 1957. However, "the increase was more a result of an expansion in trade within the group....than of increase with the rest of the world." The Soviet bloc trade with the rest of the world increased by only 6 per cent during the first 10 months of 1959, while the growth in 1958 was 9 per cent and in 1957 even more—16 per cent. This slackening of Soviet bloc trade with the rest of the world was "due to the drop in trade of mainland China."

Inside the bloc, the share of each of the countries among themselves increased, while the Soviet share declined.

OPEX Programme Recommended:

In a report submitted to the Council, the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, recommended that the experimental programme of United Nations to provide operational and executive personnel, recruited by UN to serve as members of the civil services of the requesting countries, should be authorized on a continuing basis with increased financial resources.

The programme, known as OPEX (for operational and executive personnel) and started on a modest scale in 1959, received a total of 176 requests from 39 countries for this type of assistance.

On June 1, 1960, 22 officers were either on duty or about to begin service; two had been nominated and were awaiting Governmental approval; and 11 additional posts were in various stages of recruitment. The number represented all the recruitment feasible within the $300,000 budgeted for the programme in 1960.

Ministerial Meetings On World Economic Problems:

World economic problems were discussed at a series of ministerial meetings between July 11 and 14.

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, in his speech, expressed the hope that these meetings, which were an innovation in the Council's activities, would, in due course, lead to a much-needed "bold economic programme".

Several weeks earlier, in preparation of the ministerial meetings, Mr. Hammarskjoeld had suggested, among other things, concerted mic problems in a statement in which he had suggested, among other things, concerted action for the expansion of exports from poorer countries and the possibility of United Nations activities in the field of capital investment.

The Soviet delegate, Mr. M. A. Lesechko, spoke on the question of multilateral and bilateral trade and said that certain delegates counterposed in their statements bilateral trade agreements to multilateral trade and presented the case as though bilateral methods of trading were out-dated and even fraught with certain dangers.

He added that the Soviet Union was for such methods of trade, whether bilateral or multilateral, as would make for the development of commercial relations on a mutually beneficial and equitable basis.

Mr. Lesechko said that the Soviet Union, desirous of stepping up United Nations aid to the young African States offered an additional 2,500,000 roubles of aid in her national currency through UN.

The US Under-Secretary of State, Mr. C. Douglas Dillon, urged Governments to increase their contributions to the Expanded Technical Assistance Programme and the UN Special Fund so that these two agencies, between them, would have $100 million annually at their disposal. The UN programme for providing operational and executive personnel (OPEX) should be strengthened and based on a continuous basis. The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) now covered 80 per cent of the world's trade, but he opposed making GATT universal if this had to be done by "sacrificing liberal multilateral trade."

He also spoke against barter trade which he described as "primitive." It diminished the ability of the less-developed countries to buy and sell freely on the world markets and curtailed the basis of their national independence. The risk was even greater when trade was made an instrument of State policy.

He agreed with Mr. Hammarskjoeld that regional institutions presented some dangers but he stressed that there was a need for "limited-scope" institutions of this kind.

The Netherlands Foreign Minister, Mr. J. M. A. H. Luns, called for better co-ordination of economic policies through the Economic and Social Council.

He suggested that the Council's membership might be increased to 24.

Britain's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore, welcomed Mr. Hammarskjoeld's proposals for extended UN assistance to Africa. United Nations would be one of the most important sources of help to the newly-independent African countries.

Bulgaria's Minister of Foreign Trade, Mr. Guergui Keumbeliev, contested Mr. Dillon's attack on barter trade which, he said, was useful because it reinforced the economic independence of the under-developed countries.

He regretted existing policies barring the Soviet Union and other socialist States from participation in GATT and the proposed Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Venezuela's Minister of Finance, Mr. Jose Antonio Mayobre, proposed that ECOSOC's ministerial meetings be held annually.

France's Minister of State, M. Giscard d'Estaing, expected that the development of the poorer countries would dominate world life over the next 100 years. The establishment of the European Community conformed with the need of independence and the European Common Market would help mobilize resources and trade throughout the world.

Denmark's Foreign Minister, Mr. J. O. Krag, called for concerted action to stabilize the prices of primary commodities and for the development of trade, notably between East and West.

In a concluding statement at the ministerial meeting, the Council President, Mr. C. W. A. Schurmann, said that the four days of discussions had facilitated a useful exchange of views on a wide range of major economic problems and demonstrated the wide recognition of the Economic and Social Council as a major forum for the consideration of basic economic and social objectives of the world community.

Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld's Proposals:

A significant increase in the activities of United Nations in the economic field was envisaged in the proposals made by the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, in his statement on the world economic situation to the Ministerial level Conference of the Economic and Social Council.

In his proposals, Mr. Hammarskjoeld said that United Nations should explore the possibilities of concerted action for the expansion of international markets for the exports of under-developed countries.

He said: "To the extent to which it might prove feasible to relax—policies of the industrial countries in the interests of promoting the exports of under-developed countries, whether it be primary products or the output of newly-established manufacturing industries.—it would be possible to make a significant contribution to their economic development and to the economic integration of the world community."

Report On UN Special Fund:

Reporting on the activities of the United Nations Special Fund, the Fund's Managing Director, Mr. Paul Hoffman, said that some of the Fund's projects were already producing an impact on the economy of the assisted countries.

He said that the Fund could play its part properly only if given more adequate means.

[The UN Special Fund came into existence on January 1, 1959. Its main purpose is to assist pre-investment surveys and the development of training and research facilities].

He said that through the Special Fund the most modern skills were being used to find desperately needed water, to provide plans for irrigation and hydro-electric plants and to investigate mineral deposits. The critical need was for knowledge to indicate where precisely capital could be most productively invested and for man-power to be properly trained.

The Governments were expecting more and more UN leadership in economic development. Pre-investment activities were being increasingly appreciated and it might be too difficult to procure the necessary investment capital.

Delegates from the Soviet Union and Bulgaria were among those who supported a Japanese proposal that the Fund's report be noted "with satisfaction" by the Economic and Social Council.

Resolutions:

The Social Committee of the Council unanimously adopted a Sudanese proposal which noted progress towards the elimination of ritual operations but also expressed the hope that speedier results may be achieved with UN help.

A draft convention on the age of marriage, prepared by the Commission on the Status of Women was not adopted but it was suggested that it first be sent to the Governments for comment.

A resolution on the possibility of ministerial meetings to be held from time to time as part of the Council's proceedings was unanimously adopted.

On July 22, the Council unanimously adopted a resolution calling for greater economic and technical aid to countries gaining independence.

The resolution said that special efforts must be made to provide prompt and effective assistance to those countries within the frame-work of UN and its Specialized Agencies.

It also urged that efforts be made to obtain increased contributions to the UN Special Fund.

The resolution was introduced by seven countries, including UK and USA.

A resolution recommending that the United Nations programme for operational and executive personnel (OPEX) be placed on a continuing basis was adopted by the Council's Technical Assistance Committee with five abstentions.

Arrangements were unanimously endorsed for a UN Conference on New Sources of Energy to be held in Rome between August 21-31, 1961.

UNESCO would be advised that the Council had no objection to the admission of Kuwait to UNESCO.

The UN High Commissioner for Refugees, Dr. August R. Lindt, said that the refugee problem could not be solved in spite of the tremendous impact of the World Refugee Year.

The Council concluded on August 5 when it completed a substantial part of its work and heard an address by the Vice-President, Dr. Joao Goulart.

Before concluding, the Council was informed by the UN Secretariat that revised estimates for supplementary UN aid to newly-independent countries called for $5,000,000 annually in 1961 and 1962 instead of the previous figure of $2,500,000 annually.

BURMA

A. Progress Of Gift Projects: Work is said to be in progress on three projects undertaken by the Special Gift Projects Administration and Implementation Board.

According to a spokesman of the Board, the projects will be completed before April, 1961.

The projects involve the construction of a 206-apartment hotel, a technological institute and a hospital. They are estimated to cost K79,000,000.

The Board was set up early in 1957 following the signing of an Agreement between Burma and the Soviet Union. Under the Agreement, Russia undertook several construction projects for which the Burmese Government agreed to make payment in rice over a period of 20 years.

According to present estimates, the Soviet contribution to the projects will be about 60 per cent of the total cost and the Burmese contribution of 40 per cent will be paid in rice in the next 20 years.

CEYLON

SUMMARY: Governor-General's Speech From The Throne; Press Commission To Be Appointed; Plan To Take Over Newspapers—Commonwealth Press Union Criticism; Mrs. S. Bandaranaike Nominated To Senate.

A. Governor-General's Address To Parliament: The first session of the new Parliament elected in July, 1960 opened in Colombo on August 12 with the Throne speech by the Governor-General, Sir Oliver Goonetilleke.

In it, Sir Oliver announced that the Government would appoint a Commission to inquire into the functioning of the Press in connexion with the "General Elections held in March and July, 1960 and the abuse of power or authority by the 'care-taker' Government of Mr. W. G. Dahanayake and Government officials."

He announced that the Government would also introduce legislation to take over the newspapers controlled by the Associated Newspapers of Ceylon and The Times of Ceylon and "to vest such newspapers in statutory public corporations with unlimited share capital in which individual holdings will be restricted so as to ensure a broad-based ownership."

He said: "This legislation will ensure the democratic character of newspapers in the country and prevent abuse by the formation of unhealthy monopolies."

He said that a Commission would also be appointed to investigate the political aspects of the assassination of Mr. S. W. R. D. Bandaranaike.

The Government would maintain its foreign policy of "non-alignment with the rival Power blocs and of neutralism and co-existence."

He said: "My Government's relations with the Commonwealth as well as foreign countries continue to be friendly. My Prime Minister will take up the case of persons of Indian descent resident in Ceylon with a view to achieving a satisfactory solution of this problem."

He announced that steps would also be taken to revise the Constitution and establish a Republican form of Government.

He guaranteed freedom of conscience and worship to all.

He announced that a national system of education would be established in the country in conformity with the cultural, religious and economic aspirations of the people.

He said: "My Government proposes, without discrimination on religious grounds, to introduce legislation to take over assisted Grade III schools, including primary, post-primary and rural schools.

"Grade I and Grade II assisted schools will be taken over subject to the privilege which will be allowed to such schools to remain without State aid as private schools in conformity with the Education Code."

A Commission would be appointed to report on the re-organization of the content of education and other allied matters and another Commission to advise the Government on the development of technical education.

Buddhism which was the religion of the majority of the people would be given due recognition and its proper place.

The Official Language Act and the Act providing for the reasonable use of Tamil language would be implemented so as to make Sinhalese in reality the official language of the country by December 31, 1960.

Outlining the Government's economic policies, he said: "In pursuance of my Government's policy of progressive nationalization, life insurance business will be nationalized and legislation will be introduced to regulate and control insurance business generally in order to prevent abuses.

"My Government does not consider it advantageous to undertake the nationalization of estates and plantations."

He promised that a statement would be made in due course giving the conditions which would apply to the investment of foreign capital, which the Government would welcome.

A National Planning Department would be set up as also a Department to handle foreign aid.

In the realm of trade and commerce, he said, the Government intended to expand markets for Ceylon products to new spheres while continuing to intensify exports to traditional markets.

Small loans would be given on easy terms for housing and for purposes of trade, agriculture and cottage industries.

During the coming years, work would be started on a rubber tyre and tube factory and an iron and steel project. Both were being undertaken with assistance from the Soviet Union.

He also hoped to make a start with the projects for the manufacture of certain fertilizers.

He said: "My Government will provide incentives to the private sector for the production of essential commodities now being imported. For this purpose, a Bureau of Standards will be set up to ensure quality products to the consumer."

Other points from the Address were:

(1) Religious instruction as a subject would be made compulsory in all Government schools, which would be administered through an Education Board with representation for all religious persuasions.

(2) Both Western and Ayurvedic systems of medicine would be developed. Assistance would be given in general for Ayurvedic research and services.

(3) Strict measures would be enforced to prevent illicit entry into Ceylon.

(4) Legislation would be introduced to provide for members of Parliament, of local bodies and of statutory corporations, officers or employees of registered trade unions and public servants, their spouses and children to declare their assets and liabilities every year.

Commonwealth Press Union's Criticism:

The Commonwealth Press Union announced in London on August 13 that it had sent a telegram to the Prime Minister of Ceylon, Mrs. S. Bandaranaike, expressing "deep concern" at her Government's proposals to take over the country's two largest newspaper groups.

The telegram said: "The Commonwealth Press Union views with deep concern the proposals of your Government relative to the Press of Ceylon.

"In our opinion, these proposals, if implemented, will deny to the Ceylon subject his fundamental right of access to sources of information outside Government control.

"We further believe that the proposals are inconsistent with representative Government and will be injurious to the reputation of Ceylon throughout the Commonwealth."

IPI Protest:

A Zurich message said on August 13 that the International Press Institute (IPI) had protested against the Ceylon Government's plans to take over the country's two largest newspaper groups.

In a communique, the Institute said: "The IPI protests strongly against the plans of the Ceylon Government to take over the Press. Whatever form legislation may take, the Speech from the Throne makes it clear that the Government, under the guise of broadening the ownership, means to exercise direction over a Press which has opposed it politically in the last Elections.

"Government's intrusion into newspaper ownership and forced sale of newspaper interests will mean the end of Press freedom and can only undermine confidence in the Government's intention to maintain that democracy which the people of Ceylon have so far enjoyed."

Mrs. S. Bandaranaike's Broadcast:

The Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo

Bandaranaike, in a broadcast to the nation on August 23, declared that the Government would not buy shares in public statutory corporations to be set up to run two groups of national newspapers and would allow everybody to start or run newspapers in competition with the corporations.

"The Government," she said, "does not propose to take up any part of the share capital in the new corporations so as to acquire a controlling interest and to create thereby a Government monopoly. The policy of the Government does not prevent any one from starting or running a newspaper in competition with the statutory corporations'.

"It is quite clear that the steps contemplated in the Throne Speech are in reality calculated to serve the interests of democracy and not to destroy it. The spontaneous burst of applause which greeted the announcement in the Throne Speech is perhaps the clearest indication that the people agree that the interests of democracy have not been served by the existing newspaper companies in the past."

Mr. M. Senanayake's Clarification:

The Home and Industries Minister, Mr. Maithripala Senanayake, told a public meeting in Anuradhapura on August 21 that the Government would not solicit the support of national newspapers after they were handed over to public corporations.

He said that during the March and July, 1960 General Elections, both groups of newspapers became an organ of a certain political party and by means of false propaganda and indecent cartoons, tried to damage the cause of the Sri Lanka Freedom Party.

By the take-over, the Government intended to restrict individual holdings in newspapers to ensure broad-based ownership of them. So long as nothing was done to restrict individual holdings, a handful of people would try to mould the newspapers to their own whims and fancies, which were normally contrary to the views of the majority. That was not democracy.

B. Mrs. S. Bandaranaike Nominated To Senate: The nomination of the Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, to the Senate (Upper House) was announced on August 4, and the following day (August 5) she took the oath as its member.

[This is the first time that a Prime Minister is from the Upper House. Under the Constitution, Ministers drawn from one House do not have the right to participate in the proceedings of the other. This practice would deprive Mrs. Bandaranaike of the right of addressing the House of Representatives. Originally, it was Mrs. Bandaranaike's intention to secure a seat in the House of Representatives through a by-election, but a lacuna in the electoral laws made this difficult for the time being.]

Also, on August 4, the Government announced the choice of Mr. S. Thondaman, the leader of the Ceylon Democratic Congress, for one of the six places of nominated members in the House of Representatives.

His appointment gave plantation workers of Indian origin representation in Parliament for the first time in nearly a decade after Indian settlers were disenfranchized.

The other members nominated to the Senate were: Dr. Badiruddin Mahmud, Minister of Education and Broadcasting; Dr. L. O. Abeyratne, a well-known pediatrician; Dr. M. P. Drahman, a Malay Muslim leader; Mr. R. S. V. Poulier, a nominee of the Burgher Community; and Mr. R. Singleton-Salmon, representing European interests.

The new list reduced the representation for European interests from two in the previous Parliaments to one.

Speaker's Election:

On August 5, Mr. R. S. Pelpola, nominee of the ruling Sri Lanka Freedom Party, was unanimously elected Speaker of the House of Representatives at its first sitting after the General Election.

Mr. Pelpola (62) is a businessman and was elected from the Nawalapitiya constituency in Central Ceylon. He was Deputy Speaker in the last Parliament.

C. Parliamentary Secretaries Sworn-In: Eleven Parliamentary Secretaries took the oath of office on July 29 before the Governor-General, Sir Oliver Goonetilleke.

One of them was the Finance Minister, Mr. Felix Dias Bandaranaike, who was sworn-in also as Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister and Minister of Defence and External Affairs.

His position was unprecedented in that he would hold the dual offices of a Minister and a Parliamentary Secretary at the same time.

The others sworn-in were: Mr. W. P. G. Ariyadasa (Industries, Home and Cultural Affairs); Mr. D. S. Goonasekara (Commerce, Trade, Food and Shipping); Mr. N. H. A. M. Karunaratne (Justice); Mr. V. T. G. Karunaratne (Education and Broadcasting); Mr. J. P. Obeyesekere (Health); Mr. D. T. Pasqual (Local Government and Housing); Mr. G. Rajapaksa (Finance); Mr. M. P. CHINA

A. Mr. Chou En-lai Re-iterates Proposal For Nuclear Arms-Free Zone: During a visit to the Swiss Embassy National Day garden party in Peking on August 1, the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, offered to conclude a Peace Treaty (which would include America) setting up a zone free of nuclear weapons in Asia and the Western Pacific.

He said that peaceful co-existence and good relations between China and Switzerland were a "good example to all the world."

He added: "Today, there are in the world military blocs such as S-EATO which is hostile to China and trying to encircle our country and pose a threat to it, but we stand for peaceful co-existence.

"We have proposed the conclusion of a Peace Treaty for a nuclear-free zone in Asia and the Western Pacific.

"This, of course, will include the United States.

"This is a long-standing effort on our part, but we must persist in our efforts.

"Some provocators have accused China of having given up a policy of seeking peaceful relations with countries with differing social systems.

"These are slanders and not at all correct."

China, he said, had good relations with her neighbours and was doing her best to achieve peaceful co-existence "not only in Asia but also in Europe and other parts of the world."

[Mr. Chou En-lai first proposed an all-Asian Collective Peace Treaty in reply to a question from the Secretary of the British Labour Party, Mr. Morgan Phillips, during a Geneva interview in July, 1954. At that time, he referred to the "Five Principles of mutual non-interference" among the Asian countries. He made a similar proposal at the Afro-Asian Conference at Bandung in April, 1955, and in July, 1955 he expanded his original proposal to include the United States. On August 18, 1955, Hsinhua News reported that he had called for a conference of all Pacific nations—including the United States and Australasia—to discuss an Asian Collective Peace Treaty. On April 10, 1960, Hsinhua News reported that in his speech to the closing session of the People's Congress, he had said that the Chinese Government would "go on" striving for the realization of its proposal that "the whole Asian and Pacific region" be made an atom-free zone and that all its countries sign a Mutual Non-aggression Pact.]

US Reaction:

In a statement issued in Washington on August 2, the US State Department said that Mr. Chou En-lai's proposal was "meaningless propaganda."

The Department said that it seemed to be the same one "which has been made on a number of occasions by the Chinese communist leaders during a period which has been marked by extreme communist Chinese belligerence".

It listed examples of belligerence as "aggression in the Taiwan Straits, the savage repressions of Tibet and persistent anti-American propaganda".

It referred to a channel of communication which existed between China and the United States in Warsaw where ambassadorial contacts take place and added: "To-date, there has been no basis whatever in these ambassadorial talks with the Chinese communists for the hope that Peking will abandon its belligerence. We have been trying for five years to get the Chinese communists to take the first step in this direction, to agree to the renunciation of the use of force in the Taiwan area.

"From these facts, it would seem apparent that this latest proposal is only another meaningless propaganda gesture on the part of the Chinese communists."

Message To Tokyo Conference:

In a message to the sixth annual World Conference Against Atomic Bombs and For Total Disarmament in Tokyo, published on August 3, Mr. Chou En-lai again called for the creation of a nuclear-free zone in the Western Pacific.

He said that the prohibition of nuclear weapons and general disarmament were commonly desired by the people of the world.

He added: "Towards this end, the Chinese Government and people have made a series of sincere efforts. We have repeatedly proposed that all countries of the Asian and Pacific area conclude a peace pact of mutual non-aggression and make this area a nuclear-free zone.

"We support with all our efforts the proposals made and actions taken by the Soviet Union and other socialist countries on disarmament and the prohibition of nuclear weapons. We firmly believe that obstructions

The Congress passed a resolution saying that it had "greatly encouraged" the delegates.

It said that the Congress adhered to the principle of letting "a hundred flowers bloom and a hundred schools of thought contend and to develop the new out of the old".

It called on peasants, soldiers and all those working in literature and in art in the country to diligently study Marxism-Leninism and the writings of Mao Tse-tung.

INDIA

A. Chinese Violation Of Border In Kameng Division: The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, informed the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 13 that the Government of India had lodged a strong protest with the Chinese Government against a fresh violation of the Indian border on June 3.

Describing this action of the Chinese as "highly reprehensible", Mr. Nehru stated that there had been no clash or contact with Chinese armed patrols since his report to the last session of Parliament on the border situation.

Mr. Nehru said that the Chinese authorities, local or other, had committed a breach of the provisional understanding that neither country would send out patrols.

He did not know what exactly could be done when some people came in secretly "like thieves" and then left within 10 minutes. Apart from taking some local steps, the Government could only lodge a protest. Along a long border, even with regular patrolling, it was difficult to know who had crossed it from some odd corner or the other.

Earlier, in the Lok Sabha, the Deputy Minister for External Affairs, Mrs. Lakshmi Menon, gave details of the Chinese incursion.

She said that on June 3, a Chinese patrol of 25 men crossed into Indian territory in the Kameng Frontier Division. The soldiers came up to the Taksang monastery, about 4½ miles within Indian territory, but withdrew soon after their presence was noticed by the people there.

B. International Jurists' Legal Committee's Report On Tibet: The International Commission of Jurists published in New Delhi on August 7, 1960 the final 340-page report of its Legal Inquiry Committee on Tibet.

The Secretary-General of the Commission, Dr. Jean-Flavien Lalive, said that the Committee's findings constituted "a detailed condemnation of the Chinese rule in Tibet."

Based on an exhaustive examination of three specific legal issues arising from the occupation of Tibet by the Chinese communists, the report presented the unanimous view of nine eminent jurists from seven countries that : (1) genocide had been committed against Tibetans as a religious group but not as a race; (2) the Chinese communist authorities in Tibet had violated human rights; and (3) Tibet was at least a de facto independent State when the Sino-Tibetan Agreement was signed in 1951, and the repudiation of this Agreement by the Tibetan Government in 1959 was fully justified.

A summary of the conclusions was released by the Commission on June 20, 1960.

The findings of the Committee were supported in the report by voluminous evidence — extracts from publications in the official Chinese and Chinese-controlled Tibetan Press and radio, statements by the Dalai Lama, his Kashag (Parliament) and other Tibetan refugees, published official documents and accounts of Tibet by authoritative writers. The Chinese authorities refused to permit the members of the Committee to enter Tibet.

In a foreword to the report, Dr. Jean-Flavien Lalive, said that the report was being submitted to United Nations and to all delegations of member-States.

On the question of the usefulness of the report in finding a remedy for the situation in Tibet he said: "Whether injustice can be alleviated through the force of moral condemnation can never be foretold. The only force at the Commission's disposal is the force of ideas; the only sanction which the findings of the Legal Inquiry Committee possess is that same force of ideas. This force may or may not ultimately prevail, but it is with the conviction that it must be tried that this report is presented for the consideration of all who are concerned for the right to live in peace and liberty with their fellow-men."

He added that the report of the Committee did not purport to be a complete account of all significant events which had taken place. To avoid entering into political controversy and "invidious selection of additional topics, it omitted the consideration of problems arising from India's frontier dispute with China over the Tibetan border with India.

The International Commission of Jurists is a non-governmental and non-political organization which has consultative status with the Economic and Social Council of United Nations.

As a body made up of judges, professors and practising lawyers, the Commission has, as its main objective, the defence of the rule of law. Among its current undertakings is an inquiry into the situation in South Africa.

The Legal Inquiry Committee on Tibet was appointed in July, 1959, and it presented its unanimous report to the Commission in June, 1960, after its final meetings in Geneva. The members of the Committee were: Mr. Purshottam Tricumdas (India) Chairman, Mr. Arturo A. Alafriz (Philippines), Mr. Kwamena Bentsi-Enchill (Ghana), Mr. Rolf Christophersen (Norway), Mr. N. C. Chatterjee (India), Mr. T. S. Fernando (Ceylon), Mr. R. P. Mookerjee (India), Mr. Ong Huck Lim (Malaya) and Mr. M. R. Seni Pramoj (Thailand). The secretaries were Mr. G. B. Pai and Mr. I. N. Shroff, both from India.

According to Mr. Tricumdas, about 65,000 persons were killed in Tibet since the beginning of the Khampa rebellion against the Chinese early in 1956.

He confirmed that a mass migration of people from the eastern part of Tibet to the western part was in progress. Not only had Tibetan refugees, who had recently arrived in India, testified to it but also the Chinese Press and radio had also admitted it. One of the reasons for this large-scale movement of people was that the so-called reforms under the Chinese were spreading from east to west.

C. Credit Agreement With Britain: An Agreement for a credit of Rs. 13.33 crores from the UK Government to the Government of India was signed in New Delhi on August 17.

The credit would bear an interest equal to the interest currently charged by the British Treasury on loans for a comparable period out of UK Consolidated Funds plus a quarter per cent for administrative charges. At present, this rate works out to 6 to 6-1|8 per cent.

One-third of the credit is repayable in 10 years and the balance in 20 years. Repayment of the first instalment of the credit on either portion is due to start on May 31, 1966.

The Agreement was signed by the UK High Commissioner in India, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, and the Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Economic Affairs, Mr. L. K. Jha.

With the present credit, UK assistance to India for the Second Five-Year Plan totals Rs. 100.66 crores. India will be able to draw on the present credit for a broad range of imports from UK.

frame-work of Indian control over its defence, foreign affairs and communications.

The delegation was headed by Kazi Lhendupdorji, President of the Congress.

The memorandum sought parliamentary form of government and parity in representation in the proposed State Legislature for the 25 per cent Bhotia and Nepcha minorities, with the 75 per cent people of Nepali origin. Stress was also laid on reservation of seats for the minorities.

The delegation also asked for the abolition of the post of Diwan, who is appointed by the Government of India with the approval of the Maharaja.

A suggestion for setting up a Constituent Assembly to forge a Constitution for Sikkim was also made.

The Committee also decided to set up an interim body, with a maximum membership of 12, to advise the Governor in the administration of the Naga Hills—Tuensang area until the creation of the new State.

It asked each major tribe to elect four representatives and each minor tribe two. These representatives would then elect the 12 members to the interim advisory body. [There are 14 main Naga tribes.]

Thirty-six of the 41 members of the Working Committee attended. All the tribes except the Chaksang tribe were represented.

The members of the Working Committee were asked to contact persons who had gone underground and seek their co-operation in bringing the new State into being and their participation in the advisory body.

The reactor first became critical on August 4, 1956—the first reactor to go into operation in Asia outside USSR.

For some months past, the Note added, it was desired to close down the reactor for routine maintenance and for effecting alterations and improvements, but it was kept running at the insistence of scientists who were doing important experiments. These experiments were completed and the reactor was closed down for maintenance, repairs and improvements on August 5.

In the course of the debate, the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant told the House that of about 27,000 persons suspended during the strike, more than 15,000 had already been re-instated and the services of only 244 temporary hands had been terminated.

About 3,00,000 Central employees, he said, had struck work during the five-day strike. Of these, only 1,630 had been convicted. The sentence on 669 persons had been remitted. Only about 44 employees were still in custody.

Asked about the advantages of the new set-up, he said that the magnitude of the task involved and the important day-to-day decisions necessary in the planning and construction of the new railway lines which passed through extremely difficult areas required an organization headed by a General Manager to ensure timely completion of the work.

He added that the following new lines would be constructed by this organization: (1) Sambalpur-Titilagarh (BG) 115 miles, at a cost of Rs. 14.58 crores; (2) Bimlagarh-Kiriburu (BG) 28 miles, at a cost of Rs. 6.5 crores; and (3) Balladilla-Kottavalasa (BG) 310 miles, at an approximate cost of Rs. 50 crores.

K. Gujerat Budget: The Gujerat Budget for the period from May 1, 1960 to the end of the current financial year, presented to the State Legislative Assembly in Ahmedabad on August 22 by the Chief Minister, Dr. Jivraj Mehta (who also holds the Finance portfolio) showed that despite the financial assistance amounting to Rs. 6.02 crores, to be received by Gujerat from the residuary State of Maharashtra, there would be a deficit of Rs. 1.93 crores.

Dr. Mehta disclosed that the State's revenue expenditure would be of the order of Rs. 50.55 crores as against the revenue receipts of Rs. 48.62 crores.

However, he did not announce any fresh taxation measures or rise in the rate of the existing taxes to meet the deficit which, he said, would be reduced to nearly Rs. 43,00,000 after the proposed transfer of the part of realization from the motor vehicles tax and motor spirit tax to revenue account.

The Government, he added, would try to economize in the expenditure to reduce the deficit further.

The Budget showed an overall deficit of Rs. 2.32 crores with a deficit of Rs. 39,00,000 in the capital expenditure and Rs. 1.93 crores in revenue. The total revenue receipts included Rs. 15.63 crores as the State's share in Central taxes.

INDONESIA

A. National Front Statute: The Statute of the National Front, decided upon by a Presidential decision of July 15, was made public in Djakarta on August 4.

The Statute envisaged the establishment of the National Front—a new organization to help in the completion of Indonesia's national revolution.

The Front would have an unlimited membership of cadres who would be those "imbued with the spirit of the Independence Proclamation of 1945."

The Front, which has President Sukarno himself as Chairman, has three aims: (1) to consummate the Indonesian national revolution; (2) to effect an overall development for the establishment of a just and prosperous society; and (3) bring West Irian within the authority of the Indonesian Republic.

It provided that the Front should base its programme on the principles of guided democracy, guided economy, Indonesian socialism and national identity.

IRAN

A. Shah On Relations With Israel: In a telegram to the Rector of Al Azhar University in Cairo, Sheikh Mahmoud Shaltout, on August 2, the Shah of Iran said that his country had no intention of extending full de jure recognition to Israel.

Sheikh Mahmoud Shaltout had asked the Shah to re-consider his decision to recognize Israel de facto.

The Shah's telegram said: "As you already know, the Iranian Government accorded de facto recognition to Israel in 1950.

"This recognition was re-affirmed during Dr. A. Mossadeq's Government (1951-53) when the Iranian envoy to Israel was recalled.

"There has been no de jure recognition of Israel to this date. This attitude of ours has been repeatedly appreciated by Moslem States and nations. We have no intention of changing this attitude. There can, therefore, be no cause for alarm among the Ulemas (religious leaders) and the Islamic community.

"I wish to make clear in order to assure you and the Al Azhar Ulemas that our attitude towards Islamic community interests has always been clear and based on upholding the rights of Moslems in every part of the world, irrespective of racial or communal differences.

"There is no need to recall that when the Suez question was before the Security Council the Iranian delegate to UN had defended the legitimate rights of Egypt.

"Also, when foreign forces invaded Egypt in 1957 during the Suez crisis, the Iranian Government did not refrain from condemning the aggression of foreign troops although we had no interests there except those of the Islamic community.

"Moreover, I personally took all possible action necessary for the withdrawal of foreign troops from Egypt."

Relations With UAR:

A spokesman of the Iranian Foreign Ministry said in Tehran on August 4 that Iran had no intention of resuming diplomatic relations with the United Arab Republic and would not accept mediation from any foreign Power.

He added that Iran's stand remained the same as was announced the previous week by the Foreign Minister, Mr. Abbas Aram—that Iran would have no diplomatic relations with UAR while President Nasser was in power.

Arab League Session:

The Arab League Council met in Cairo on August 7 to discuss the de facto recognition of Israel by the Shah of Iran.

The United Arab Republic delegate, in a statement before the Council, said: "The thing which we had feared has happened. Israel has snatched from the Shah, not from the Iranian people, the recognition of its State after attempts for over 10 years. It opens the door for Israel to make diplomatic, political, economic and propaganda moves at the expense of the rights of Palestinians.

"Iran has a special situation and her de facto recognition of Israel and her sympathy toward Israel have very serious significance.

"It is necessary to take quick action towards Iran's recognition so as to eradicate the dangerous results affecting the Palestinian case and the security and safety of all Arab States."

He added that Israel's record towards Arabs was full of crimes and aggression. "How can we ignore what the Arabs have suffered at the hands of Israel for the past 12 years?" Iran's recognition of Israel had caused a break in the diplomatic blockade which had been imposed on Israel by the Arab countries. It was up to the Arab States to take a unified and decisive stand against Iranian-Israeli relations.

KOREA (South)

A. Democratic Party's Victory In General Elections: In the first General Elections held under the new Constitution on July 29, the Democratic Party, which had been in opposition during the regime of Dr. Syngman Rhee, won a resounding victory.

The candidates for 233 National Assembly seats and 59 seats in the House of Councillors ranged from extreme right to mild socialism, but only the Democratic Party was nationally organized.

Besides, there were assorted remnants of Liberals (the former ruling party of Dr. Syngman Rhee), Socialists and splinter groups and a host of Independents.

On August 3, the Central Election Commission announced that final returns gave the Democrats 174 seats, Independents 40, Socialists 4, Liberals 1 and a minor party 1.

Three unauthorized Democratic candidates who won against official party men will be admitted to the party, giving it a total of 177.

Fresh elections were expected to be held later in the remaining 13 districts where counting was incomplete because of the burning of ballot-boxes or the non-delivery of ballot papers.

On August 8, about 200 students carrying placards against "counter-revolutionary elements" picketed the main street in Seoul as the National Assembly met to introduce parliamentary Government for the first time in the country.

Nearly 600 policemen cordoned off the two Assembly buildings to prevent disturbances, and all traffic to Capital Avenue was blocked. The placards referred to Liberal or former Liberal members of the Assembly under the former President, Dr. Rhee.

The House of Representatives (Lower House) elected Mr. Kwak Sanghoon, 64-year-old Democratic Party member, as its Speaker. He held this office in the last Assembly following the death of Mr. Lee Ki Poong, the Liberal Party Speaker, and had been a member of the Assembly for the past 12 years.

On August 12, Mr. Yoon Bo Sun, leader of the "Old Guard" faction of the ruling Democratic Party, was elected by the National Assembly as the new President.

A. Mr. Kim Il Sung Proposes Federal Union With South Korea: In a speech marking the 15th anniversary of the Korean liberation from the Japanese in Pyongyang on August 16, the Prime Minister, Mr. Kim Il Sung, proposed a federal union of North and South Korea as a step towards the re-unification of the two countries.

He said that this proposal was an interim one designed to meet South Korean objections to the suggestion of "all-Korean elections without outside intervention."

Once the federation was established, the two countries could form a "Supreme People's Council" and discuss economic and cultural exchanges while acting independently of each other. The re-unification should be obtained through democratic elections without foreign interference. If re-unification or federation was unacceptable to South Korea, then North and South Korea should reduce their armed forces to 100,000 men each, and simultaneously consider mutual economic co-operation. A 200,000-man defence force would be sufficient for the whole of Korea.

He proposed that a conference on these issues be held either in Pyongyang or at Panmunjon, the Korean truce headquarters on the 38th Parallel.

The same day (August 16), the official Peking newspaper Ta Kung Pao again called for American troops' withdrawal from South Korea and warned that if they resumed the Korean war, China would again send Volunteer troops across the Yalu river to fight alongside the North Koreans.

In Moscow, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda praised North Korea's economic achievements and pledged Soviet support for her demands for the Americans to leave South Korea and for peaceful re-unification of the country.

In Seoul, the anniversary celebrations were mostly devoted to welcoming the overthrow of the post-War Syngman Rhee regime, though the new President, Mr. Yoon Bo Sun, warned that the communist threat and the scars left by Dr. Rhee were too serious to permit "a moment of ease."

LAOS

SUMMARY: Army Captain Leads 'Coup'; National Assembly Passes No-Confidence Motion Against Mr. Tiao Somsanith; Prince Souvanna Phouma Appointed Premier; Pathet Lao's Terms To End Guerrilla War.

A. Army Captain Leads 'Coup': Captain Kong Lae of the Army seized all the governing powers of Laos in the capital, Vientiane, on August 9. There seemed to have been no resistance and Capt. Kong Lae and his supporters took control of vital installations in the city.

Following the coup, King Savang Vathana, Head of State, Commander-in-Chief of the Army and the supreme religious authority, went to Luang Prabang.

A communique broadcast soon after the coup from Radio Vientiane claimed that a "Revolutionary Committee" had taken control of all civil and military authority in the kingdom.

It said: "The High Command of the revolutionary forces informs the people that the military coup is aimed at consolidating the nation, religion, Throne and Constitution. The Committee assumes the task of maintaining the neutrality of Laos and preserving friendly relations with countries which respect our internal agreements."

A second communique ordered officers and ranks of the Royal Laotian Army and the police to remain calm and continue their duties until further orders were issued by the High Command of the revolutionary forces.

[The Government which was displaced came into office in June, 1960 when a "care-taker" Government which had been in power since the elections at the beginning of May, 1960 resigned. At the elections, two right-wing groups, the Rally of Lao People and the Committee for the Defence of National Interests, won 51 out of the 59 seats in the Laotian National Assembly. A few weeks later, the Committee for the Defence of National Interests, composed of right-wing Army officers and civil servants and with 28 of the seats in the Assembly, formed a new political party of a strongly anti-communist colour.]

Capt. Kong Lae said in a statement on August 10 that all foreign troops must leave the country and all foreign military bases would be liquidated.

He said that infiltration by an unnamed Great Power was increasing every day and that every organization in the country had a group attached to it.

He went on to specify that "even my own battalion has 10 Americans whom the Government has allowed to infiltrate...."

He said that the country's leaders had "led us completely astray" and had induced the people to "accept the money of a Great Power".

According to a Hanoi report on August 12, the Revolutionary Committee decided to nominate the President of the National Assembly, Prince Souvanna Phouma, as Prime Minister.

Hanoi Radio quoted Capt. Kong Lae as saying that the new Government would follow the path of peace and neutrality.

He added that the Government would accept unconditional aid from all countries and establish diplomatic relations with them. The policy of the new Government should make provision for talks with Pathet Lao leaders, "for this fratricidal war among Laotians must cease." A messenger had been sent to the Royal Government in Luang Prabang urging the Government to return to Vientiane as soon as possible for talks with the Committee and the Assembly.

Asked if Prince Souvanna Phouma had accepted this offer, Capt. Kong Lae said that Prince Souvanna would act only in strict legality and only if the King and the National Assembly agreed.

Prince Souvanna was himself astonished that his name had been put at the head of the list of the Revolutionary Committee.

He said that as President of the National Assembly, a neutral organization, he protested against this action, and had asked the Committee to issue a correction.

Meanwhile, peace negotiations were going on in Vientiane.

On August 10, the Royal Government sent the Army C-in-C, Maj-Gen. Oune Ratiku, to Vientiane to negotiate with Capt. Kong Lae.

On August 13, the National Assembly meeting in Vientiane passed a no-confidence motion against the Government of Mr. Tiao Somsanith.

The following day (August 14), Mr. Tiao Somsanith submitted his resignation to the King in Luang Prabang,

On August 15, the King appointed Prince Souvanna Phouma as Prime Minister, succeeding Mr. Tiao Somsanith.

Prince Souvanna Phouma's appointment brought to an end the crisis which had racked the kingdom since Sept. Kong Lae seized power on August 9.

Prince Souvanna Phouma was the Prime Minister of Laos in 1957 and it was during his regime that a Peace Agreement was signed between the Government and the rebel Pathet Lao fighting units led by his half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong.

Prince Souvanna Phouma was expected to follow a less pro-Western course than his predecessor. He was backed by the neutralist Shantiphab Party and is not opposed by the pro-communist Neo Lao Haksat Party.

Pathet Lao Conditions:

On August 13, Hanoi Radio broadcast a statement listing the conditions laid down by Prince Souphanouvong for terminating the guerrilla war.

His demands were: (1) Form a coalition Government composed of representatives of the various Laotian nationalities and progressive and patriotic parties in order to carry out the policies laid down by the Revolutionary Committee headed by Capt. Kong Lae. This meant that the Pathet Lao rebels would call off their armed action against the Laotian Government only if the Pathet Lao was included in the Government and pro-Western parties such as the Reassemblement du Peuple Lao (RPL) and the Committee for the Defence of National Interests (CDNI) were suppressed. (2) Expand the coup d'etat movement, punish the henchmen of US imperialism, and "combine the actions of the Revolutionary Committee and the Pathet Lao forces to oppose US imperialist schemes for interference and schemes designed to re-establish pro-American elements in authority." (3) Promulgate concrete policies so as to ensure the democratic freedoms of the people.

MALAYA

A. State Of Emergency Ends: The State of Emergency which had been in force in Malaya since July 17, 1948 ended on July 31, 1960 when a proclamation was issued by the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, formally repealing all Emergency regulations and ordinances promulgated during the 12-year war against communist insurgents.

The proclamation said that the Government was satisfied that the Emergency ordinances were no more needed as the communist rebellion had been successfully crushed.

During the 12-year struggle, Government forces lost a total of 1,830 men killed and 2,473 civilians murdered by the communists.

The total cost of the Emergency worked up to 3,000 million Malayan dollars.

The insurgents too suffered heavily. They lost 6,710 killed and 2,819 wounded.

[The Government has still to reckon with about 500 armed men and women hidden behind or in the thick jungle along the border with Thailand, and it also may expect to be struggling with communist penetration in one form or another for perhaps the life-time of any of its present Ministers. For this reason, it has retained powers of preventive detention.]

Speaking in a broadcast on the end of the Emergency, on July 31, the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman said that the communists would not forget their defeat and would not relent even though their forces were reduced to a few hundreds skulking across the borders of Thailand. What they had failed to achieve by armed force they would try to do in other ways, through subversion and "irresponsible political parties."

The Paramount Ruler, Tuanku Sir Hisamuddin Alam Shah, also warned the people that the dangers of subversion remained.

Speaking on the proclamation ending the Emergency, he said: "These subversive elements use various tactics to achieve their aims. Tactics such as trying to disrupt the good relations existing between the various communities, tactics such as instigating and poisoning the minds of the public or members of trades unions, youth organizations or students."

Title For Sir Gerald Templer:

On July 30, the Government conferred on Field-Marshal Sir Gerald Templer, a decoration in the senior grade of the Malayan Order of Chivalry in appreciation of his contribution towards the ending of the Emergency.

In its English rendering the decoration is that of Grand Knight of the Most Distinguished Order of the Defender of the Realm and carries the title of "Tun."

Sir Gerald was unable to accept the invitation to attend the Kuala Lumpur celebrations.

The same day (July 31), the British Premier, Mr. Harold Macmillan sent a message to Tengku Abdul Rehman offering the congratulations of the British Government and people on the success of the campaign against communist terrorism.

He said: "We in Britain, who in company with other Commonwealth countries have fought beside you in the long struggle, join with you in your rejoicings today. The victory you have won is an inspiration for the whole of the free world and we pay our tribute to the courage and statesmanship of your Government and the faith and endurance of the Malayan people who have made this great achievement possible."

B. Attitude Towards China: The Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, told the House of Representatives in Kuala Lumpur on August 8 that Malaya would support the admission of China to United Nations provided China recognized the independence and sovereignty of Formosa.

He thus qualified the pronouncement he made on his return home in June, 1960 from the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference when he declared that Malaya would support China's admission to UN but would not establish diplomatic relations with Peking.

In an interview published in a Hong Kong paper in July, 1960, he had re-affirmed his stand that "both Chinas must be recognized."

Observers said that the latest statement attaching a condition to Malayan support was prompted by diplomatic inquiries for an elaboration of the Malayan attitude.

PAKISTAN

A. Soviet Offer To Help Exploit Oil And Other Mineral Resources Accepted: The Central Government announced on August 9 that it had accepted in principle an offer from the Soviet Union to help Pakistan exploit her mineral resources, particularly oil.

The announcement said that preliminary discussions between the two Governments about Pakistan's requirements would take place when a five-man delegation arrived in Karachi.

The Soviet Union first made the offer to help Pakistan in her oil and mineral exploration programme in 1958, but no decision was taken on it for two years.

The Soviet news agency, Tass, reported that a group of Soviet experts would leave for Pakistan "in the near future" to assess work in prospecting for oil and minerals.

Pakistan had been informed, it said, that Russia was prepared to consider favourably the question of granting credit for the supply of Soviet equipment, to pay for the services of Soviet specialists and to train Pakistani technical personnel.

According to a Karachi report, the Government's announcement caused complete surprise in Western diplomatic circles, particularly American.

The report added: "Only recently, Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, had stated that he had no details of any offer, but an offer had been made by the Soviet Union to help Pakistan explore oil a long time ago.

"At present, American and British companies are carrying on test oil drilling. But most of the test wells have been declared either 'dry' or not suitable for commercial exploitation."

B. National Income: It was stated in Karachi on August 14 that according to a survey carried out by the Central Finance Ministry, Pakistan's national income had gone up by about 25 per cent during the past 10 years.

The national income of Pakistan, which was put at Rs. 1,723 crores (one crore is equal to 10 million) in 1949-50, was estimated to have risen to Rs. 2,190 crores in 1959-60. The main increase was in the industrial sector.

The per capita income, which was estimated at Rs. 232 in 1949-50, was now put at Rs. 252, taking into account the increase in population.

PHILIPPINES

A. Magsaysay Awards: The Prime Minister of Malaya, Tengku Abdul Rehman, was named in Manila on August 13 as the winner of the 1960 Ramon Magsaysay Award for community leadership.

He was cited for guiding Malaya's multiracial society through a constitutional struggle for independence towards communal alliance and national identity. In 1959, the award went to the Dalai Lama.

Three other winners of Magsaysay Awards were: Chief of the Burmese Defence Staff and former Prime Minister, Gen. Ne Win, for Government service; Dr. James Yeofn (Formosa) for international understanding; and Sir Henry Tristam Holland and his son, Dr. Ronald Holland, for public service.

No award for journalism and literature was made for this year.

The Awards were established in June, 1957 with the aid of the Rockefeller Foundation to honour the late President of the Republic of the Philippines by encouraging those ideals and the spirit of service which characterized his life.

The Awards seek to recognize meritorious individuals in Asia whose contributions enhance this creative tradition.

SINGAPORE

A. Mr. Lee Kuan Yew's Warning To Extremists: The Prime Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, told the Legislative Assembly on August 3 that if a collision had to take place between "Left-wing adventurers" and "colonial imperialists", the People's Action Party Government would "let them break their heads."

According to him, the British and the communists were quite prepared to use his Party as a buffer in their "machinations against each other."

The Communist Party, he said, was the only organization in Singapore which could challenge the Government in a bid for power. In the 14 months since the General Election in 1959, a build-up of communist strength had been taking place in the trade union movement through ground cadres influencing the workers. Because the Communist Party was underground, there was no way of preventing several different lines of pro-communist groups.

The less adept of the communist followers were Left-wing adventurers who tried to exploit the affair of Mr. Ong Eng Guan. By taking up such impracticable causes as full independence for Singapore separate from the Federation of Malaya, they wished to arouse false expectations and create excitement and tension.

He said that extremism, either from the right or left, would have to be smacked down good and hard. To allow one would inevitably mean acute reaction from the other. The problem was not one of allowing absolute liberalism and democratic rights to prevail but of exerting that right amount of restriction on absolute rights so that a tolerant democratic society could endure and not turn into a totalitarian State.

THAILAND

A. King's Visit To Britain: King Bhumibol Adulyadej of Thailand and his consort, Queen Sirikit, arrived in England on a four-day State visit on July 19.

As the royal visitors stepped from the special train which had brought them to Victoria Station, they were met by Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Later at night (July 19), Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh gave a banquet in honour of King Adulyadej and Queen Sirikit in Buckingham Palace.

The following day (July 24), messages were exchanged between King Adulyadej and Queen Elizabeth.

King Adulyadej, in his message, said that the kindness shown to him and his Queen had touched them.

He added: "The British people have always been wonderful. These demonstrations of friendly feelings are the spontaneous response of Your Majesty's subjects to the message of greeting and good wishes from my people. I am sure our visit to your country will bring our two nations and our two Royal Houses much closer together, resulting in mutual benefit."

Queen Elizabeth, in her reply, said: "Your Majesty and Queen Sirikit have been very welcome guests, and I am sure that the reception which you have received from my people will leave you in no doubt of their affection for you and for Thailand. The friendship which has existed for so long between our countries has been re-affirmed by your presence among us."

TURKEY

A. Cyprus Becomes Independent Republic: Eighty-two years of British rule in Cyprus ended at midnight on August 15-16 when the Island's new Constitution came into force and the representatives of Britain, Cyprus, Greece and Turkey signed Treaties of Establishment and Guarantee.

At the same time, representatives of Greece, Turkey and Cyprus also signed a Treaty of Alliance.

Messages from Queen Elizabeth and the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, were read by the retiring Governor, Sir Hugh Foot, at a ceremony in Nicosia.

In her message, Queen Elizabeth said: "On this day of independence, I send to the people of Cyprus the expression of my warmest good wishes for the prosperity of the Republic. I pray and trust that the settlement in Cyprus will enable the links between our two countries to be maintained and strengthened."

Mr. Macmillan's message was as follows: "On the inauguration of the independent Republic of Cyprus, I send to you, on behalf of the Government and people of the United Kingdom, the expression of our sincere goodwill and best wishes for the future progress of your country. Over the centuries, Cyprus has played her part in the long and varied history of the Eastern Mediterranean, and we look forward to the Republic becoming and remaining the centre and symbol of concord in this important area. In this role, Cyprus will always have the assurance of the continued interest and friendship of the United Kingdom."

The Governor, Sir Hugh Foot, read Queen Elizabeth's Decree-in-Council accepting the Constitution of the Cyprus Republic and approving its implementation.

The President of the Republic, Archbishop Makarios, said after signing the documents (relating to the setting up of the new Republic) that the independence of Cyprus was a landmark in the evolution of democratic institutions and the implementation of the international principle of freedom.

He said it was obvious from the documents he had signed that the smooth functioning of the new State would depend on the close collaboration of all parties concerned.

In a message of greetings to President Makarios, the President of India, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, said that on behalf of the Government and people of India, he welcomed Cyprus into the ranks of independent nations.

Sir Hugh Foot, as the last British

Governor of Cyprus, sailed for home in a Navy frigate on August 16.

As the frigate sailed out of Famagusta harbour, ships carrying contingents of Greek and Turkish troops to be stationed in Cyprus under the Independence Agreement arrived off Famagusta ready to enter together at noon.

The Turks numbered 650 officers and men and Greeks 950.

In a farewell broadcast the previous night (August 15), Sir Hugh Foot said: "You will astonish the world with your progress."

He added: "I do not believe the forecasts of dismal commentators that the Greeks, who form a 4 to 1 majority in the Island, would turn against the Turks, right would fight left, and the Republic would go down in a sea of blood and hate.

"It could be, but I do not believe it. People who have been at the edge of hell do not want to go back."

The people of Nicosia gave a hero's welcome to the 21 EOKA leaders who returned to Cyprus on August 16 from exile.

Archbishop Makarios, welcoming the EOKA leaders, invited them to join in a new campaign to be fought not with hand grenades but with the power of the soul to build up the Republic.

On the morning of August 16, Archbishop Makarios and Mr. Fadhil Kutchuk took over as the Republic's first President and Vice-President respectively.

The newly-elected House of Representatives was also sworn-in.

In a message to Cypriots before taking over as President, Archbishop Makarios declared that the new State would apply the principle of equal rights, treatment and opportunities to all citizens.

It would also make education accessible to all and would try hard to give the peasants a good break.

The Vice-President, Dr. Fadhil Kutchuk, in a statement said: "We are shouldering a heavy burden. One thing cannot be denied and that is the fact that the Island is facing a great crisis. Peasants and workers are groaning under poverty while the merchant class and intellectuals are waiting in unbearable conditions for better and happier days."

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

A. USA Recovers Capsule From A Satellite In Orbit: The United States took a step forward in its man-into-space programme on August 11 by recovering for the first time an instrument-loaded capsule from a satellite in orbit.

The capsule picked up from the Pacific Ocean, about 330 miles from Honolulu, was carried into orbit by Discoverer XIII satellite and circled the Earth 16 times before being ejected over the target area.

Planes which tried to catch the capsule in mid-air were unsuccessful. But they spotted the pay-load parachuting into the Pacific and guided a helicopter to the spot to fish it out of water.

Lieut-Gen. Bernard Schriever, Chief of the Air Research and Development Command, told newsmen that the recovery "really marks a space age first".

"Until now," he said, "we were only part way into the space age."

Gen. Schriever quoted Gen. O. J. Richland, West Coast Commander of the Ballistic Missile Division, as saying that the capsule recovered "was in very good shape, with no damage".

Of the 12 previous Discoverer satellites, five failed to go into orbit, and the capsules from the others were never recovered.

The Discoverer XIII capsule, weighing 300 lbs. was recovered about 29 hours after the satellite was launched into an egg-shaped Polar orbit from the Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

B. America Launches A Balloon Satellite: America launched into orbit on August 12 a 100-ft. inflatable balloon satellite intended to act as an experimental relay station for radio signals. The balloon was as large as a 10-storey building.

The balloon satellite (Project Echo) was designed to test the feasibility of using several satellites as "radio-mirrors" for transmission of radio, television and telephone communications throughout the world.

The balloon was put to prompt use in bouncing a message from the President, Mr. D. D. Eisenhower, across USA.

The recorded message—sent from Goldstone (California) and picked up at Hoimdel (New Jersey)—said in part: "This is President Eisenhower speaking. This is one more step in the US programme of space research and exploration....for peaceful purposes for the benefit of all mankind....

"This satellite balloon which has reflected these words may be used freely by any nation for similar experiments in its own interests."

At the White House in Washington, Dr. Keith Gennan, chief of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), told newsmen that Britain and France had the necessary equipment for using the balloon for communications—and were planning to do so.

Scientists at Bell Telephone Laboratories at Holmdel, said that the balloon could transmit a phone call in seconds from USA to Japan. It could also bounce "live" television pictures of Rome Olympic Games around the world.

The Laboratory transmitted a message from President Eisenhower to the satellite, and it replied with a message from Senator Lyndon Johnson. Both voices came through distinctly.

C. US Experimental Rocket Plane Attains 24 Miles Altitude: The American X-15 experimental rocket plane climbed more than 24 miles above the Earth to a new altitude record of 131,000 feet on August 12. This was the highest manned flight yet achieved.

The plane, piloted by Major Robert White (USAF), who set a world speed record in the same aircraft of 2,196 miles an hour the previous week, climbed at supersonic speed to the edge of space. The pilot pointed the dart-like plane up at an angle of 30 degrees after being dropped from a jet bomber at 45,000 feet. In a four-minute burst of power from the twin rocket engines, the X-15 zoomed upward to the edge of space. Major White became "weightless" for a few seconds before the plane arched back and plunged towards the Earth.

D. International Law Association's Resolution On Outer Space: The International Law Association, which met in Hamburg, unanimously recommended on August 13 that no State should be entitled to sovereignty rights over outer space.

The Association also urged the immediate conclusion of an International Agreement regarding other planets.

It said that space should be used for peaceful purposes in accordance with the principles of United Nations.

The Conference was attended by more than 750 lawyers from 37 nations, including Soviet Russia. It ended its annual six-day Conference on August 13.

E. Mr. Aneurin Bevan Passes Away: The Deputy Leader of the British Labour Party and one of the greatest self-made men in British public life, Mr. Aneurin Bevan, died in London on July 6. He was 62.

He underwent a major abdominal operation in December, 1959 in a London hospital and had been confined to his home since leaving hospital in February, 1960.

Mr. Bevan started his life as a butcher's errand boy and a coal-miner. He rose to be Minister of Health and Minister of Labour in the Labour Governments of 1945 and 1950.

Messages of condolence went out from all parts of the world on the death of Mr Bevan.

Mr. J. Nehru expressed deep sorrow at the death of Mr. Bevan and said: "He was a great man and a personal friend. Quite apart from his policies, which often appealed to me, he was a man of great stature and very lovable."

F. Soviet Publication On "Dead Sea Scrolls": It was stated in Moscow on August 2 that the first Soviet popular book on the famous "Dead Sea Scrolls" found in the Qumran caves on the shores of the Dead Sea had been prepared for the Press by the Leningrad historian, Mr. Joseph Amusin.

The book is meant for non-specialists. It makes an attempt to systematize the materials on the Hebrew and Aramaic language scrolls on the basis of an independent study of the originals and an analysis of the work done by foreign scholars.

A brief review is given of the historical conditions and world outlook of the time (first to second centuries AD) with information about the ancient library consisting of 600 manuscripts found in the caves.

ASIAN RECORDER

September 10—16, 1960

Vol. VI No. 37

BURMA

A. U Nu On Border Agreement With China: The Prime Minister, U Nu, told Parliament on August 22 that agreement had been reached with China on the area of disputed border territories which would be ceded by Burma.

Burma, he said, would cede to China 2.7 square miles in excess of the Burmese proposals made in 1957 for the cession of 56 square miles in the Hpimaw, Gawlum and Kangfang area and nine square miles in excess of the area of 60 square miles in the Panghung and Panglao areas in exchange for 73.5 square miles of the Nanwan tract.

With these minor adjustments, the border settlement would be written into a Treaty which would be signed in Peking on October 1, 1960.

To speed up the delimitation of the 1941 border line in time for the signing of the Treaty, he added, the two countries had agreed that the boundary should be marked by cairns after alignment surveys, to be replaced by boundary pillars later. There was every prospect that the work would be completed before the end of September, 1960.

To remove the administrative inconvenience of the 1941 boundary line which cut certain villages in two, it had been agreed that minor adjustments should be made in the line so that entire villages fell either inside Burma or inside China. The drafting of the Boundary Treaty was expected to be finished by the middle of September, 1960.

CEYLON

A. Motion Of Thanks Passed: The House of Representatives approved on August 27 the Motion of Thanks to the Governor-General, Sir Oliver Goonetilleke, for his Address to Parliament (see page 3519), outlining the programme of the Sri Lanka Freedom Party Government. The voting was 99 to 31, with 19 abstentions.

All parties except the Communist Party had tabled amendments to the Motion. All amendments were rejected.

An amendment tabled by the Lanka Sama Samaj Party which, like the Communist Party, had agreed to support the Government's progressive policies, regretted the Government's rejection of the policy of nationalization of tea estates.

The Federal Party (of Tamils), through its amendment, sought to advocate a federal system of government for Ceylon as, according to the Party, the present unitary system would result in the eventual subjugation of the Tamil-speaking people.

The United National Party (UNP) regretted the Government's move to take over newspapers and schools.

The People's United Front, led by Mr. Philip Gunawardene, regretted that the Government had not made any fundamental departure from the policies of the UNP Government with regard to foreign capital and planned development.

During the four-day debate, Mr. Dudley Senanayake, Leader of the United National Party and of the Opposition, said that the Press takeover was unjustified because there were two groups of newspapers in Ceylon and, between them, they would ensure freedom of expression.

He asked the Government to revive the Nehru-Kotelawala Agreement of 1954 as the basis for the settlement of the citizenship problem of Indian settlers.

Dr. N. M. Perera, leader of the Lanka Sama Samaj Party, said that the breaking of the Press monopoly was essential for the establishment of freedom of expression in Ceylon.

Dr. E. M. V. Naganathan (Federal Party) said that the fear that Indian settlers would overwhelm Sinhalese in the Kandyan areas if citizenship was granted to them was unfounded. The settlers numbered fewer than 900,000, while the Sinhalese population was over 2,000,000 in those areas. The rate of growth of the Sinhalese population was higher. It was wrong to call these settlers State-less. If they were not Indian nationals, then they should be regarded as British subjects since they had been in Ceylon before the withdrawal of colonial rule. "There is no use going to Mr. Nehru for a settlement. They are citizens of UK. You should go to Queen Elizabeth."

At an earlier stage in the debate, Mr. S. Thondaman (nominated member representing settlers of Indian origin) said in answer to those who had criticised his nomination that he was not in the House on sufferance. He was there representing a million people. He did not ask for concessions but recognition of the rights of these million people as enunciated in the UN Charter of Human Rights.

The Minister of Commerce and Trade, Mr. T. B. Ilangaratne, defended Mr. Thondaman's nomination and said that if a few thousand Europeans resident in Ceylon could be given representation in Parliament, he did not see why Indian settlers, who were numerically stronger, should be denied representation.

The Minister of Education, Mr. Badiruddin Mahmud, announced that no compensation would be paid when assisted schools were taken over. "In our view, compensation is out of the question and it is immoral to ask for compensation. But any exceptional situation will receive due consideration".

He said that the take-over would cover 2,653 schools.

Winding up the debate for the Government, the Finance Minister, Mr. Felix Dias Bandaranaike, said that there was nothing undemocratic in the Government's decision to break the "vicious monopoly" that was strangling the freedom of the Press in Ceylon.

The Government considered, he said, that the setting up of corporations was the best method of breaking the Press monopoly. The Government would, however, give serious thought to various suggestions made to secure diffusion of ownership.

Answering Left-wing demands for the nationalization of estates, he said that the Government had not abandoned the policy of nationalization. "We have made a declaration in the Throne Speech that we consider nationalization of estates disadvantageous to us. What we mean by that is that it is not advantageous to us now." There were two conditions to be fulfilled before nationalization could be undertaken. The first was the creation of the necessary machinery to run nationalized ventures and the second was to make sure that the nationals of the country derived benefits which they did not already enjoy.

He described the problem of the citizenship of workers of Indian origin as one of the obstacles to nationalization and hoped that the problem would be solved speedily.

SUMMARY: Parliament Approves Draft Third Five-Year Plan; More Soviet Credit For Third Plan; Chinese Reply On Intrusion Into N-EFA; Export And Import Advisory Councils' Meetings; Central Zonal Council Meeting; Jan Sangh Council Session; Reserve Bank Credit Control Measures; Co-operative Movement During 1958-59; State Loans Over-subscribed.

A. Third Five-Year Plan Draft Approved By Lok Sabha: The Lok Sabha (House of the People) began a four-day debate on the Draft Outline of the Third Five-Year Plan on August 22 with an indication from Mr. Nehru of the possibility of an expert probe into the distribution of the increase in the national income during a decade of planned development.

Initiating the discussion, Mr. Nehru said that the national income had increased by 42 per cent and the per capita income by 20 per cent during the first two Plan periods. The villagers appeared to be "better fed and better clothed"; but it was "desirable" to inquire "more deeply" into where "all this increase has gone."

It was important, he said, that the benefit from the increase was spread out and there was no accumulation of wealth and economic power in any quarter. "If only five or 10 per cent of the people have benefited and the rest have not, then that is not a good result."

He admitted that the implementation of various policies set out in the Second Plan required much to be desired. Everybody had been responsible for everything far too long with the result that nobody was actually responsible.

He also confessed that the real problem before the country was one of implementation of the policies and effective decentralization of authority. It was important to have an "audit of performance" to measure progress in terms of achievement and not in terms of mere expenditure.

At the same time, he deplored that the nation had not yet learnt the lesson of hard work. There was constant diversion of activities to narrow conflicts based on linguism, communalism and regionalism. All this—such as the happenings in Assam and the Punjabi Suba agitation—was causing "enormous obstruction" to planned development.

The Plan, he added, was not ambitious, though large, in terms of resources. The prospect of foreign aid was "fairly good." But the raising of internal resources was going to "be a very big strain." These would have to be raised through heavier taxation, loans and savings. The problem had to be faced.

Among other things, he criticised the slow pace of land reforms, indicated the likelihood of "selective controls" to keep prices under check and assured the private sector that he did not mind how much it spread out so long as this was "subject to the prevention of monopoly and concentration of wealth and economic power."

Mr. Asoke Mehta (P-SP) welcomed the size of the investment in the Third Plan and warned the House that it would be tragic if the country was not able to carry it through. Indeed, he feared that a 20 per cent erosion in the money value was likely to result in a perilous slowing down of the development momentum.

He hoped that lessons would be learnt from the failures in the Second Plan. He complained that monetary and fiscal reins had been held "loosely," the performance on the "farm and fibre front" had been sluggish, various objectives (including one of encouraging small-scale industries) had not been held fast and the foreign exchange component had been grossly under-estimated.

The Communist Party spokesman, Mr. A. K. Gopalan, pleaded for proper implementation of the Plan. He complained that the aims and objectives of the Second Plan had been "reversed" in the implementation of various schemes. He particularly referred to the implementation of land reforms and described the Government's proposals on the subject as "most barren."

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Swatantra Party) expressed his opposition to the Plan on the ground that the country did not have adequate resources.

This, he complained, did not mean that his Party did not believe in a Plan. It believed in a "Gandhian plan, a plan founded on dharma and one which stands for self-employment of people."

Swatantra Party Amendment Lost:

At the end of the four-day debate, the Lok Sabha generally approved the Draft Outline of the Third Plan on August 26. A Swatantra Party amendment disapproving the Draft as "anti-people and unrealistic" was rejected by 221 votes to nine.

Both the Communists and the Praja-Socialists, including Mr. Asoke Mehta, opposed the Swatantra Party amendment standing in the name of Prof. N. G. Ranga.

The Central Planning Minister, Mr. G. L. Nanda, earlier wound up the debate with an 80-minute speech in the course of which he not only expressed confidence about carrying through the Plan but conveyed to the House some tidings on the crucial issues of growing unemployment and rising prices.

It was the Government's intention, he said, to provide another 1,000,000 jobs during the Third Plan through labour-intensive schemes in the rural areas. This would help them to break even in regard to new entrants to the labour force. [The Draft already provides for 14 million new jobs.]

It was being urged, he said, that the resources in the rural areas were not being fully utilized and not enough was being done, for instance, to check soil erosion. There was thus a possibility that the Third Plan would "also enable us to cover some of the back-log."

There were "good prospects," he said, of checking any further rise in prices, thanks to the buffer-stocks of rice and wheat. Buffer-stocks of other essential goods might also be necessary to prevent any rise in prices during the time-lag between investment and production. However, the solution lay in producing more and developing consumer co-operatives.

A Committee of the National Development Council was already formulating precise measures to hold the price-line. Selective controls had been mentioned. But these did not necessarily mean rationing. Controls would be administered through fiscal and monetary policies designed to curb inflationary pressures.

Steps were already under way for an expert probe (as suggested by Mr. Nehru above) broadly into trends in the distribution of the additional income and wealth generated by the First and Second Plans and the "changes in the living conditions of the people" during the last decade.

Of interest was his declaration that the Government would have to "go a long way" to put an end to incomes through "speculation, underhand dealings and black marketing." This was required for reducing income disparities since it was his belief that "honest incomes" revealed by genuine economic surveys were "a smaller proportion of the total income in the trade and industry."

He defended the growth of the public sector and said that it was not correct to say that Mahatma Gandhi would have disapproved of it. Indeed, his idea was "that even the textile industry should be nationalized." The Government had not gone that far and hurriedly added to the relief of some: "Not that we are intending to."

When at one stage Mr. M. R. Masani (Swatantra) agitatedly interrupted to assert that "we want equal competition, but you want monopoly," Mr. Nanda retorted: "Yes, whose monopoly? It is the people's monopoly." It was only a question of time, he said, that not only the workers but the consumers also would participate in the management of the public sector.

Among other things, he declared that the Plan to increase the national income by five per cent annually was "not a big aim," urged the need for a balanced development of large-scale and small-scale industries, and re-affirmed the planners' intention to secure for every citizen a national minimum of various facilities.

The debate ended on an exciting note. A few minutes before Prof. Ranga's amendment was pressed to a division, Acharya J. B. Kripalani (P-SP) pleaded that there should be no voting as the matter under consideration was only a Draft, capable of radical change. But Mr. Nehru said that in view of Prof. Ranga's attitude, he would like the House to be committed for or against his approach and the amendment was lost by 221 votes to 9.

The Rajya Sabha (Council of States) discussed the Draft Outline on September 5 and 6 and also approved it.

B. More Soviet Credit For Third Plan: The Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 30 that the Soviet Union had offered an additional credit of Rs. 60 crores (500 million roubles) for the Third Five-Year Plan.

The Government of India, he added, had accepted this assistance, which was in addition to the Rs. 180-crore credit offered earlier. The rate of interest would be 2½ per cent—the same as for all previous Russian loans. The purpose for which this credit was to be utilized would be further discussed with representatives of the Soviet Government.

Replying to a number of supplementaries, Mr. Morarji Desai confirmed that the credit was meant for purchases from the Soviet Union only. In all, India had received a total credit of Rs. 385.6 crores from Russia.

This offer, he stated, was the result of his talks in Moscow during his last visit in July, 1960. He could not say anything about any future loans.

A similar statement was also made in the Rajya Sabha (Council of States).

The following is the text of the statement:

"As the House is aware, the Soviet Government offered a credit of 1,500 million roubles (Rs. 180 crores) in July, 1959) as assistance for the Third Five-Year Plan and an Agreement was signed on September 12, 1959. An additional Agreement was signed with the Soviet Government on February 12, 1960, in regard to the projects to be financed under this credit.

"In my statement of August 3, 1960 to this House on my recent tour abroad, I made a reference to the discussions I had with the leaders of the Soviet Government. During these talks in Moscow in July, 1960, the question of further Soviet economic assistance for India's Third Five-Year Plan was touched upon.

"The Soviet Government has considered this question and expressed its readiness to grant India an additional credit of 500 million roubles (about Rs. 60 crores) to be utilized towards the implementation of the Third Five-Year Plan. The Government of India has gratefully accepted this welcome assistance.

"The manner in which and the purpose for which this credit will be utilized will be further considered in consultation with the Planning Commission and discussed with the representatives of the Soviet Government".

C. Chinese Reply On Intrusion Into N-EFA: Speaking in the foreign affairs debate in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 31, 1960, the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, referred to the northern borders of India and said that the Chinese had replied to India's protest against the violation of Indian territory in the Kameng Frontier Division of the North-East Frontier Agency (N-EFA) by Chinese soldiers in June, 1960. (See page 3521).

According to the Chinese, he said, nine working personnel had gone out to fell bamboos in the forest. They had travelled some distance and lost their way into Indian territory due to low clouds and thick fog. But as soon as they discovered their mistake, they returned.

The Indian Government, he added, was making further inquiries into the matter.

D. India To Set Up Hospital In Congo: Initiating the foreign affairs debate in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 31, 1960, Mr. Nehru said that apart from other help which India had rendered to Congo, very recently another demand—rather a heavy demand—came for the setting up of a 400-bed hospital in Congo.

The hospital, he said, could be set up only on a military basis because all the apparatus, medicines and men would have to be made available there within a fortnight.

He said that India had agreed to the setting up of the hospital on the understanding that UN would replace the things supplied by India. That had been the normal method of help rendered by India so far. India would continue to pay the normal salaries to the personnel in the hospital but any extra expenditure would come from UN funds.

Explaining the reasons why India was approached for the setting up of the hospital, he said that in the circumstances now obtaining in the Congo, some countries were ruled out. "The country that is asked to do this job has to be an acceptable country and we are among the very few acceptable countries. Also, obviously, it has to be an efficient country which can do the job efficiently."

G. Lama Loshang Thupden's Claim As Panchen Lama: The man who claims to be the real incarnate of the Panchen Lama—Lama Loshang Thupden—passed through New Delhi recently on his way to Dharamsala in order to meet the Dalai Lama.

Lama Loshang Thupden was in the famous Drepung monastery near Lhasa until March, 1960 when he was arrested by the Chinese and put in a labour camp near Lhasa. He was made to carry 250 baskets of stone chips, each weighing about a maund and a half every day and was also instructed in communism. But he managed to escape from the camp in April, 1960 and trekked to Bhutan. He reached India in June, 1960.

Speaking to newsmen in New Delhi on August 29, he said that the "Panchen Lama" who now presided over the Tashi Lhumpo monastery at Shigatse (in Lhasa)—the traditional seat of the Panchen Lama—was a Chinese puppet. He was never accepted by the monastic hierarchy in Tibet. Even so, the Chinese did not trust this Panchen Lama any more and were holding him prisoner in his own monastery.

Lama Loshang Thupden said that he was born in a nomadic family at a place called Paksho in Chamdo province (Eastern Tibet) 22 years ago and was soon afterwards "discovered" by religious leaders. He was brought to the Drepung monastery for religious education when 11 years of age. But, before he could be installed in the Tashi Lhumpo, the Chinese had imposed the present "Panchen Lama."

There was, he said, a third claimant to the Panchen Lama's seat.

H. Export Advisory Council Meeting—Bright Prospects: Addressing a meeting of the Export Advisory Council in New Delhi on August 28, the Central Minister for Commerce and Industry, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, expressed confidence that the Second Five-Year Plan's export target of Rs. 2,964 crores would be reached and said that the exports had already totalled Rs. 2,445 crores.

He said that the target of Rs. 650 crores for exports during the current year was well within the realm of realisation.

He, however, made it plain that it depended on the co-ordinated efforts of industry, trade and the State Trading Corporation.

The Government, on its part, was doing everything possible to accelerate the pace of exports. In this connexion, he hinted at the possibility of abolishing export control on 70 items shortly.

The items would include engineering goods, such as electrical instruments and gas and petroleum engines, metal manufactures such as copper wires, copper circles, strips and plates, lead alloys, chemicals such as calcium carbide, agricultural commodities such as green coconuts, gum arabic and miscellaneous seeds, and other items including rubber belts and vessels for inland and harbour navigation.

He also announced that the Government proposed to appoint a small committee of officials and non-officials, headed by the Deputy Minister of Commerce, to consider the possibilities of increased exports of half-a-dozen items and recommend the necessary steps for the fulfilment of that objective. These items would include tobacco and oilseeds and sugar.

A scheme to afford better credit facilities, now being worked out by a Study Group, would be given careful consideration by the Government.

Another announcement made by Mr. Lal Bahadur was that the foreign exchange allocation for the machinery requirements of the jute industry would be increased to Rs. 1 crore from Rs. 30,00,000.

He suggested that each Export Promotion Council should appoint a capable, experienced and whole-time Secretary to follow up its decisions and keep in close touch with the Government. It would also be profitable if these Secretaries met him or officials of his Ministry every month so that many decisions could be taken on the spot. The Ministry had prepared a complete commodity-wise export plan for 1960-61 after taking into consideration the estimates of production, possible consumption within the country and the likely demand in foreign countries based on previous exports. While this plan was almost complete, a comprehensive country-wide plan was also nearing completion.

Foreign Trade Review:

Reviewing the country's foreign trade, he expressed satisfaction over the fact that exports during the first half of 1960 had amounted to Rs. 302 crores as against Rs. 226 crores in the corresponding period of 1959.

This, he said, was "good but not good enough in view of our foreign exchange position."

He particularly appealed to the tea industry to increase its exports during the next six months and to the textile industry to reduce its prices and maintain the present level of exports.

As regards India's trade with OEEC (Organization for European Economic Co-operation) countries, he said that the actual trade deficit during the first five months of 1960 had amounted to Rs. 60.28 crores. This slight improvement was mainly due to a fall in imports.

During the same period, India's exports to the "Outer Seven" countries of Europe showed an improvement of Rs. 8.89 crores. Even so, the adverse balance of trade with these countries increased to Rs. 29.36 crores as compared to Rs. 18.66 crores in the first five months of 1959, mainly because of higher imports from UK.

As regards the six European Common Market countries, he said, India had an adverse balance of Rs. 142.6 crores in 1959, which was more than 50 per cent of the country's total trade deficit of that year. The imbalance in trade of this order could not be allowed to continue for a long time. Although some concessions had recently been announced by the West German Government with regard to Indian exports into that country, such concessions had only touched the fringe of the problem. India had to find out ways and means of balancing its overall trade by exporting more to this area, or alternatively she might have to cut down her imports from these countries.

I. Import Advisory Council Meeting: Addressing a meeting of the Import Advisory Council in New Delhi on August 27, the Central Minister for Commerce and Industry, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, announced that a few items were likely to be eliminated altogether and the import of some others would be curtailed in the import policy for the next six-month period which would be made public on October 1.

Another of his announcements was the Government's intention to set up a Committee under a non-official chairman to review the system of priorities for the import policy in the context of a tight foreign exchange position, which was likely to continue for the next 10 or 15 years.

The following other announcements were also made by him:

(1) A stage had been reached when his earlier suggestion to the film industry that the length of Indian films be cut to conform to a maximum of two hours' showing-time would have to be enforced.

(2) It was not possible to increase the supply of newsprint.

(3) The Jute Commissioner was being advised to import 1,00,000 bales of jute cuttings from Pakistan.

(4) In view of the misuse of import licences, mainly by established importers and profiteering in many imported raw materials and goods, the State Trading Corporation was being entrusted, in the first instance, with the import of mercury and cork—the worst affected in this list. The distribution of these items would be arranged partly through associations of established importers and partly through the STC's own agency.

(5) A $10-million credit for small-scale industries was being finalized with the US Development Loan Fund.

It was felt at the meeting that the export drive could not gather momentum till the Government did everything possible to maximize production particularly in the agricultural sector.

Mr. Lal Bahadur went a step further to undertake a detailed justification of the establishment and expansion of consumer industries like rayon, artificial silk, watches and motor cars.

He further seemed to disagree with the stand taken by Mr. B. K. Nehru, India's Commissioner-General for Economic Affairs in Washington, who had held that foreign loans were meant for developmental expenditure, not to meet the maintenance needs of the economy.

Mr. Lal Bahadur said that while he would not ask for such loans to feed consumer industries, he would appeal to the aiding countries to make them available for industries engaged in export trade and such other vital work.

The State Trading Corporation and the Import Licensing Organization—the target of much criticism in the past—were complimented by many participants on their usefulness and efficiency. In response to the demand by some speakers, Mr. Lal Bahadur promised to have the functions and role of STC clearly defined and duly published for general information.

In answer to a demand for an economic boycott of countries like West Germany which had raised barriers against the import of Indian goods, he said that the trade climate had changed in Western Europe and there was today a livelier appreciation of our problems and a willingness to help. They were actually hoping that a distinct improvement would follow the talks shortly to be held with these countries, particularly West Germany.

J. Standard Vacuum Suspends Oil Exploration In West Bengal: It was announced in Bombay on August 26 that the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company had decided to suspend further oil exploration in West Bengal and that the decision had been conveyed to the Government of India.

Despite the employment of the best equipment and techniques known to the industry, it was stated, not one of the ten wells drilled under the Indo-Stanvac Project had yielded any trace of oil. The experts felt that it would not be advisable to continue further exploration, as this would entail heavy unnecessary expenditure.

In 1959, Standard-Vacuum had retained Mr. Lewis MacNaughton, a leading consulting geologist, for appraisal and technical evaluation of work. His report, submitted to the Government of India in January, 1960, stated that "unless oil or gas is found in the next two wells, it is unlikely that further drilling would be warranted."

Since the submission of the report, all the three wells drilled were found dry.

Standard-Vacuum began oil exploration in West Bengal in 1949, and the expenditure in the first five years amounted to about Rs. 64,00,000. Later, the Indo-Stanvac Project was launched and the total investment up to the end of June, 1960 was approximately Rs. 7,54,000, of which 75 per cent was borne by the Company and 25 per cent by the Government.

Mr. K. D. Malaviya, Minister for Mines and Oil, expressed regret that the Indo-Standard Vacuum Project for oil exploration in the West Bengal basin had not produced any results.

He said: "We are considering how to continue this search for oil in the West Bengal basin."

K. Bhilai Steel Plant's Third Blast Furnace: It was stated in New Delhi on August 27 that the erection of the third blast furnace at the Bhilai Steel Plant had been completed.

The Plant, which would produce 1,000,000 tons of steel ingots yearly, would have three blast furnaces for the production of pig iron.

Two such blast furnaces are already in production.

L. Central Zonal Council Meeting: The Central Zonal Council, which met in New Delhi on August 28, reaffirmed its earlier decision that, as agreed upon in the past, Uttar Pradesh should construct the Bhander canals in Madhya Pradesh as soon as possible. A representative of the Central Water and Power Commission would be associated with the project to expedite it and the Madhya Pradesh Government would extend all facilities to surveyors from UP.

The UP Government, it was stated, would also honour its commitment regarding the supply of electricity to Madhya Pradesh. The two Chief Ministers would look into the agreements entered into in the past on the subject and ensure their implementation.

Both the States agreed to the principle on which payments are to be made for land and houses to be acquired in Madhya Pradesh for the Rihand Dam. Compensation would be paid to all tenants at the present market value for the land, houses and trees as in Chambal.

The Madhya Pradesh Government would receive compensation for all Government land, trees, wells, public buildings and tanks, the capitalized value of land revenue at 25 times the land revenue for the loss suffered by the State Government, and royalty on minerals at the prescribed rate.

The Council also recommended that the Committee to report on man-power planning in the States of the zone should immediately assess the demand and availability of manpower for the Third Five-Year Plan. The information regarding surpluses and deficits in the various categories of technical personnel in the zone would be supplied to the other zones.

The two States postponed for the time being the consideration of a scheme to co-ordinate technical education facilities in the zone.

The Council referred back to the Inspectors-General of UP and Madhya Pradesh the scheme for forming a common zonal police reserve force.

It was explained that the force would not entail any extra expenditure to the States. A portion of the present strength of the police of the two States would be earmarked for the reserve for use in emergencies.

The two States agreed that toll be levied on all vehicles and animals crossing inter-State river bridges costing Rs. 5,00,000 or more. The toll receipts, after deducting the cost of collection, would be distributed between the two States in the proportion of their contribution towards the cost of the bridges.

The Chief Secretaries of the two States would evolve arrangements for maintaining and improving the bridges and their approaches.

M. Jute Wage Board Set Up: The Central Deputy Minister for Labour, Mr. Abid Ali, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 25 the setting up of a Central Wage Board for the jute industry.

The Chairman of the Board, he said, would be Mr. L. P. Dave. It would have two independent members—Mr. G. Oza MP and Dr. Parmanand Prasad. The members representing the employers were Mr. D. C. B. Pilkington and Mr. D. P. Goenka, and the members representing workers, Mr. Indrajit Gupta MP and Mr. Kali Mukherjee.

Within two months from the date that the Board started working, he said, it would submit its recommendations regarding the demands of labour in respect of interim relief, pending submission of its final report.

The terms of reference of the Board would be to determine the categories of employees (manual, clerical, supervisory, etc.) who should be brought within the scope of the proposed wage fixation and to work out a wage structure based on the principles of fair wages set forth in the report of the Committee on Fair Wages.

The Board would also be required to work out the principles that should govern the grant of bonus, if any, to workers in the jute industry.

N. Assam All-Parties Hill Leaders' Conference — Demand For Separate State: The open session of the second All-Parties Hill Leaders' Conference was held in Shillong on August 24 when decisions taken earlier at the closed-door session were announced and explained.

Sixty-two delegates representing all the parties attended the Conference.

Speakers, including Mr. Stanley Nichols-Roy, General Secretary of the Council of Action appointed by the Hill Leaders' Conference, Mr. Hoover Hynniewta, MP and Mr. Saprawanga, President of the Mizo Hills District Council, clarified the stand taken on the formation of a separate State.

They, however, made it plain that any movement launched to achieve their objective of a separate State would be on peaceful and constitutional lines.

It was further emphasized that the hill people would never accept Assamese as the official language of the State.

Mr. Nichols-Roy said that the Action Council, in its review of developments since the first Conference, had come to the conclusion that they should take a decision on an alternative if their protest against the declaration of Assamese as the State language was not respected. After discussions, they had decided that separation was the alternative and was "inevitable". They had told the President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, so.

Several delegates from different districts who spoke at the meeting emphasized that there was unanimity in arriving at the decision.

The Conference also adopted a resolution assuring all non-tribal residents in the autonomous hill districts that their legitimate interests would be fully safeguarded in the proposed State.

On the question of official language, the first Conference had resolved that Hindi should be the official language and that until the people were ready to adopt Hindi, English should continue.

The leaders of the five hill districts of Assam authorized the Council of Action "to prepare a plan or pattern of separation" (from Assam) with a view to forming a separate State.

The Conference decided that the draft plan for separation should be submitted by the Action Council to the next Conference fixed for November 16, 1960.

Meanwhile, the draft would be circulated among all political parties and District Councils in the hill districts.

In a memorandum sent to the President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, on August 21 and also presented to the Parliamentary delegation which recently toured Assam, the Action Council said: "The only solution in the face of the controversy over the State language is to have separation."

Memorandum On Official Language:

A memorandum, which the Assam Hill Leaders' Convention approved at its concluding session on August 23 and submitted to the Governor of Assam the same night (August 23), gave the reasons for the hill people's opposition to Assamese as the official language of the State. Their main fear was "Assamization."

The memorandum said: "There prevails among the tribal people of the autonomous districts of Assam a feeling of apprehension that their existence as separate and distinct entities in Assam is being threatened. The declaration of Assamese as the official language of Assam would mean the beginning of a process by which the tribal communities would be disintegrated and gradually assimilated into the Assamese community."

Assam has a total of 13 districts.

The five hill districts—Mizo Hills, North Cachar Hills, Mikir Hills, Garo Hills and the United Khasi Jaintia Hills—cover 22,734 sq. miles with a population of just over 1.1 million against the State's total of 9.1 million.

Besides the Congress, there are seven political parties in the district—the Mizo Union, Eastern India Tribal Union, Garo National Council, People's Welfare Union of North Cachar Hills, Kareya Durbar of Mikir Hills, National Conference of Khasi and Jaintia Hills and Jaintia Durbar.

O. Jan Sangh General Council Session: Addressing the Jan Sangh General Council in Hyderabad on August 27, its President, Mr. Pitamber Das, demanded military action by India to throw out the Chinese from the Indian territory occupied by them.

Such action, he added, was "imperative for our national dignity and our sovereignty". The Prime Minister had allowed "a clear case of aggression" to be converted into just a "boundary dispute" by avoiding the use of the word "aggression" and by agreeing to examine at official level the matter regarding the border. "The situation today simply stated is this: China continues nonchalantly to consolidate her illegal hold on Indian territory while India continues to look on in abject helplessness."

China's growing strength and ambition, he said, posed a peril to Asia, and unless all the countries bordering China chalked out short-term and long-term measures to meet it, the consequences could be equally detrimental for all. The Mustang incident should serve as an eye-opener both to the Government and the people of Nepal. "Nepal's security and India's security are so inextricably inter-related that neither can be considered apart from the other." Even otherwise the two countries had inseparable cultural, political and economic ties stretching back to thousands of years and a common faith in democratic ideals lent a new touch to these age-old affinities.

Resolutions On Nagaland, Military Training, Punjabi Suba And Third Plan:

The Council unanimously passed a resolution urging the Government of India to re-consider and alter its decision to carve out a separate Naga State.

The resolution said that the Central Government had "erred" in agreeing to the Naga delegation's insistence on having a new State and for having it administered by the External Affairs Ministry. This insistence was a significant pointer to their contention that the Naga region was entitled to an independent sovereign status. The submission of the Central Government to the Naga demand would encourage other hill tribes of Assam and also the tribal population scattered throughout the country to put forth similar demands.

To strengthen national defence and to prevent any further incursions by the Chinese, another resolution suggested the following measures:

"Military potential of the country should be specially augmented and the Himalayan passes through which Chinese incursions have been taking place should be effectively fortified. Steps should also be taken to create a net-work of advance bases in the Himalayas and link them with the plains by roads and other media of communication.

"Steps should be taken to give military training to all youths and re-vitalize the strings of Indian patriotism and nationalism.

"The communist activities in the border areas should be strictly and effectively checked. At the same time, steps should be taken for rapid economic development and cultural renaissance of the people living in the border areas to make them immune from communist influence and develop in them a feeling of emotional kinship with their brethren in the rest of India."

In a resolution on the Punjab situation, it said that any further partition of Punjab on a communal basis, as demanded by the Akalis, would be "anti-Punjabi and anti-national." It would also be undemocratic because all non-Akali Punjabis unequivocally opposed the demand.

The resolution on the subject said that the language problem, with which the Akalis were covering their political objective, was a comparatively minor problem, which had been deliberately exaggerated out of all proportion to serve ulterior political ends both by the Akalis and the ruling Congress party. The Punjabi language, it declared, was the cherished heritage of all Punjabis, and everyone wanted its all-round progress.

To solve the language problem of Punjab, it suggested a single uniform formula for the whole State, providing for an equal place to Hindi and Punjabi with both Gurmukhi and Devnagari as official scripts and the option to use either of them.

The resolution on the Draft Third Five-Year Plan called for a fundamental change in the objectives, priorities and technique of the Plan to rectify the economic imbalance created by the "misguided policies and ill-conceived" programmes.

It said that the Government should give up its "megalomaniac attitude and doctrinnaire approach" and plan in a modest way for the real well-being of the people.

As regards resources for the Third Plan, it stated that heavy reliance on foreign loans was neither politically wise nor economically sound. "Besides mortgaging our future, it will mean transplanting foreign patterns of production in India" which were not suited to the requirements of the country.

P. Communist Party Central Executive On Punjabi Suba And Assam Disturbances: On August 18, the Central Executive of the Communist Party of India demanded the bifurcation of the present Punjab State into two separate linguistic States and the institution of a judicial inquiry into the recent language disturbances in Assam.

The demands were contained in two separate resolutions released in New Delhi at the conclusion of an eight-day meeting of the Executive.

The resolution on the Punjab situation described the Akali agitation as "communal in character" but added that Punjab alone could not be refused re-organization on the basis of language when linguistic States had been formed throughout the country.

It added: "The Central Government should immediately so re-organize the present Punjab State that contiguous Punjabi areas, including the district of Kangra, are formed into a separate Punjabi State and contiguous Hindi areas of the present Punjab State are formed into a separate State of Greater Delhi."

The resolution on Assam said that there should be a judicial inquiry into the language disturbances there which should also probe into the "behaviour of the State Government and its police and the role of the Central Government."

On the language question itself, the Executive recognized that Assamese should be the principal official language of the State but said that the languages of the Bengali-speaking people and people of the hills should also be given their rightful place.

It appealed to the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, to take the initiative in calling a Round Table Conference of the representatives of all major communities in Assam to discuss and resolve the language issue.

Q. Reserve Bank's Credit Control Measures: A review of the credit control measures taken by the Reserve Bank to check the inflationary pressures generated by the large developmental expenditure shows that these have been of two kinds, namely, directives of selective credit control and directives imposing additional reserve requirement on all scheduled banks.

The following selective credit control measures are in operation:

(1) Certain credit limits and minimum margin requirements are prescribed in respect of scheduled banks' advances against foodgrains, sugar and groundnuts and other oilseeds (except cottonseed).

(2) The proportion of clean advances to total advances to be maintained by the scheduled banks in every month should not exceed the same proportion of such advances in the corresponding month of 1959. This was enforced with effect from April, 1960.

(3) A minimum margin of 50 per cent is to be maintained by the scheduled banks on advances above Rs. 5,000 against shares other than preference shares.

In regard to advances, every scheduled bank has been directed to deposit with the Reserve Bank 25 per cent of its addition to demand and time liabilities subsequent to March 11, 1960. The percentage was increased to 50 per cent with effect from May 6, 1960. These balances are in addition to the minimum statutory balances of 5 per cent of demand liabilities and 2 per cent of time liabilities prescribed under Section 42(I) of the Reserve Bank of India Act.

The Reserve Bank keeps a continuous watch over the level of advances made by the scheduled banks in respect of different commodities. Statistics show that advances against groundnuts and other seeds are lower than the level of advances in the previous year. In the case of paddy, rice, wheat and sugar and gur, the level of advances in recent months is higher than the corresponding figures of the previous year; one reason may be that the requirements of finance even within the limits imposed by the Reserve Bank have increased.

The advances against stocks and shares which rose continuously from Rs. 72.64 crores in August, 1959 to Rs. 83.29 crores in March, 1960 declined by Rs. 5 crores to Rs. 78 crores in the succeeding two months. Since then, there has been again an increase to Rs. 81.09 crores as on July 15, 1960. The increase presumably reflects the rise in share prices and the new issues of share which have recently come into the market.

The trend of the unsecured loans given by the scheduled banks has generally been downward in recent months. The outstanding amount of these has fallen from Rs. 194.93 crores on January 15, 1960 to Rs. 172.43 crores on July 15, 1960.

The credit restraint policy which has operated for a few years through selective credit controls has been re-inforced recently by the instrument of additional reserves. With the imposition of additional margins the balances of scheduled banks with the Reserve Bank have been continuously rising. Of the balance of Rs. 105 crores with the Reserve Bank as on July 8, Rs. 102 crores represented the statutory minimum, comprising the basic requirements of Rs. 64 crores under Section 42(1) and Rs. 38 crores of additional reserves under Section 42(I)A of the Act.

Aggregate deposit liabilities of scheduled banks have increased from Rs. 1,884 crores on March 11, 1960 to Rs. 1,962 crores on July 8, 1960 or an increase of Rs. 78 crores. Of this accrual, Rs. 38 crores in additional reserves and Rs. 3 crores in statutory minimum reserves are impounded with the Reserve Bank. In other words, 58 per cent of the accrual will not be available in practice for expansion of credit.

Bank credit during the slack season (since the end of April) has registered only a small decline of Rs. 7 crores. The Governor of the Reserve Bank had asked the scheduled banks to bring down the level of advances by 10 per cent (about Rs. 110 crores) during this slack season.

R. Co-operative Movement During 1958-59: According to a report on the co-operative movement in India during 1958-59 published by the Reserve Bank of India, the total number of co-operative farming societies in India at the end of June, 1959 was 4,193.

Of these, it said, 1,158 were joint farming societies. The total area of cultivation of all the farming societies was 4,55,000 acres.

The all-round progress made by the co-operative movement since Partition was maintained. The number of co-operative societies of all types functioning in the country rose from 2,58,000 at the beginning of the year to 2,84,000 at the end of June, 1959. While the societies-owned funds increased during the year by 17.7 per cent from Rs. 187.03 crores to Rs. 220.16 crores, their working capital rose from Rs. 96.17 crores to Rs. 827.59 crores. The membership of all primary societies increased by 15 per cent from 2,14,00,000 to 2,48,00,000 during the year.

Agricultural credit societies constituted the most important sector of the co-operative movement. At the end of 1958-59, there were 8,82,905 societies with a membership of 119,01,000 and a total working capital of Rs. 170.94 crores. Their deposits amounted to Rs. 9.88 crores.

S. NCAER Studies On Road Transport And Dieselization: Studies conducted by the National Council of Applied Economic Research (NCAER) at the request of the Central Ministry of Transport and Communication, published in New Delhi on August 28, revealed that the financial contribution and employment potential of road transport to the public exchequer was significant.

Indeed, it said, the net contribution to Government revenues was greater than that of the Railways.

A third related Study came to the conclusion that diesel transport being more efficient and more economic, the attempt to slow down the process of dieselization by stepping up taxation on the fuel was short-sighted and unsound.

Explaining these conclusions to newsmen, the Director-General of the Council, Dr. P. S. Lokanathan, emphasized that the issue between the development of roads and Railways could not be determined by considerations either of employment or contribution. Apportionment of the available resources between road and rail development would depend in the last analysis on these as well as on other technical and social factors and the requirements of different geographic regions.

The Study on the financial aspects of road operation showed that the gross contribution by it to the exchequer in 1957-58 was Rs. 133.55 crores, corresponding to a net contribution of Rs. 95.55 crores. The latter worked out to 16.58 per cent on the capital invested in the roads, and to 19.1 per cent consisting of all payments. It constituted 21.7 per cent of the capital invested in the industry in terms of operational payment only and 25 per cent of the net profits of the operator were ignored.

The employment provided by road transport was estimated at 2.4 million, provision and maintenance of track accounting for the largest proportion, namely, 970,000 or 41 per cent. Vehicular operations gave employment to 712,000 and the provision and maintenance of vehicles and supply of fuel to 516,000. Terminal services engaged 169,000 employees. Transport administration and control formed the smallest of all the categories with 14,000 employees. Taking employment in workshops and the vehicular operations together, direct employment in the industry amounted to 41 per cent of the total.

The employment potential of the industry may also be assessed in terms of the number employed per vehicle. The employment per commercial vehicle was found to be 12.62 persons inclusive of direct as well as indirect forms of employment. The comparative employment given by passenger buses and trucks, taking direct and indirect employment, amounted to 715,000 and 626,000 respectively.

From an examination of the financial aspect of the employment potential, the Study indicated that the wage rewards of this industry went mainly to the low-income groups.

The Study of repercussions of the enhancement of the excise duty on diesel oil in recent years said that rates and fares had remained ineffectual, at least part of the increase being taken up by the operating economies or profits.

On the other hand, the possibility of the operators changing over to kerosene was a very real one. It was believed that some of the increase already noticed in the consumption of kerosene would be ascribed to the enhanced duty on diesel in the last Budget.

T. Acting Army Chief Of Staff: It was announced on August 26 that Lt-Gen. P. N. Thapar, G.O.C.-in-C., Western Command, would act as Chief of Army Staff during the absence of General K. S. Thimayya, who had gone to UK to attend the Imperial General Staff Conference.

New Corps Commander:

It was also announced that Major-General K. Umrao Singh, Chief of Staff, Eastern Command, had been appointed a Corps Commander in the rank of Lt.-General.

This followed an earlier decision of the Government to establish a Corps Headquarters in the Eastern Command sector to facilitate the co-ordination of the work of all defence forces in the Assam-N-EFA area.

Soon after the Chinese intrusions last year (1959), the positioning of additional troops along the N-EFA border necessitated the creation of a Brigade Headquarters and subsequently, a Division Headquarters in Assam.

U. Twelve State Loans: Twelve State Governments announced the issue of their new loans bearing interest at 4 per cent per annum for amounts aggregating Rs. 75 crores on July 28. The loans would mature in 1969.

The following were the details in regard to the amounts of loans raised by the various States with the respective issue price per cent in brackets:

Andhra Pradesh Rs. 9 crores (Rs. 99.75), Gujerat Rs. 5 crores (Rs. 99.50), Bihar Rs. 3 crores (Rs. 100), Kerala Rs. 4 crores (Rs. 99.50), Madhya Pradesh Rs. 5 crores (Rs. 99.75), Madras Rs. 12 crores (Rs. 99.50), Mysore Rs. 4 crores (Rs. 100), Maharashtra Rs. 10 crores (Rs. 99.75), Orissa Rs. 4 crores (Rs. 99.75), Rajasthan Rs. 5 crores (Rs. 99.50),

All the loans would be re-paid at par on August 29, 1969.

All loans opened for subscription on August 29, and closed on September 3 (September 6 in the case of the Kerala loan).

All the loans would bear interest from August 29, 1960. Interest would be liable to tax under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922.

Loans Subscribed:

Long before the last date for the closing of the lists—September 3, 1960, and in the case of Kerala September 6—all the State Government loans were either over-subscribed or fully subscribed.

The first three to be subscribed were the Maharashtra, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal loans. This was followed by the closing of the lists for three more State loans, namely, Andhra Pradesh, Gujerat and Mysore. In the third and final group of the loans which were fully subscribed were Bihar, Kerala, Madhya Pradesh, Madras, Rajasthan and Orissa.

From the details made available, the maximum response was in respect of the Andhra Pradesh loan where, as against Rs. 9 crores of the amount issued, the subscriptions amounted to Rs. 13.23 crores, that is nearly 1½ times the loan floated.

Assam and Punjab, which borrowed Rs. 2.5 crores and Rs. 2 crores respectively in 1959, did not enter the market this year.

V. Gujerat Official Languages: The Gujerat Legislative Assembly unanimously adopted a Bill on August 24 declaring Gujerati and Hindi in Devnagari script as the languages to be used for all official purposes in the State except those to be notified by the State Government periodically.

The State Government decided on August 27 to set up a full fledged Directorate of Languages following the adoption of Gujerati and Hindi as official languages of the State by the State Assembly.

Gujerat is the third State to set up such a Directorate, the other two being Punjab and Maharashtra. It would work to find Gujerati equivalents for English terms for use in the legislature, executive and judicial offices in the State.

The first shock, of severe intensity, which was felt at 9-34 p.m. (IST) lasted five seconds. Its epicentre was believed to be about 30 miles near Delhi.

The next tremor—a mild one—came at 11 p.m. (IST). The third shock was felt at 0-25 a.m. (IST) on August 28.

The first tremor was preceded by a heavy rumbling noise.

There were also more minor tremors on the following days.

INDONESIA

SUMMARY: Diplomatic Relations With The Netherlands Severed—Netherlands Reaction — Chinese Support For Indonesian Stand; Dr. Djuanda's Tour Of East European Countries.

A. Diplomatic Relations With The Netherlands Severed: In a nation-wide broadcast on the occasion of the 15th anniversary of the proclamation of independence on August 17, President Sukarno announced that he had ordered the severance of diplomatic relations with the Netherlands because of the persistent refusal of the Dutch to restore West Irian to Indonesian sovereignty.

[For a long time now, there has been only a token representation between Indonesia and the Netherlands].

Dr. Sukarno said that Indonesia was pursuing a "revolutionary policy" in her struggle to regain the disputed territory.

He said that for years Indonesia had followed a policy of "sweet persuasion" in dealing with the Dutch over the West Irian problem but without avail. She then decided on more revolutionary and drastic measures by launching an economic drive against the Netherlands and confiscating Dutch commercial interests in Indonesia.

The Dutch had sent military reinforcements to West New Guinea, including the aircraft carrier Karel Doorman.

In his address Dr. Sukarno also announced that he had ordered the dissolution of the major opposition Muslim Masjumi and socialist parties for their policies, which ran counter to the principles and aims of the Indonesian State.

He accused them of being involved in rebellion, since their leaders had joined the Sumatra and Celebes revolts and had refused officially and publicly to condemn the defecting leaders.

He said that after consulting the Supreme Court, he had decided to dissolve the two parties and declare them outlawed if, after 30 days from the dissolution order, they failed to disband.

He emphasized that this drastic measure was not directed against Islam and that his Government upheld and respected all religions. The Government was acting only against parties which were endangering the State.

The ban was based on an edict giving President Sukarno powers to simplify the political party system in Indonesia.

He also announced a land reform programme which would abolish all foreign rights and colonial concessions.

Dutch Reaction:

At The Hague on August 17, the Foreign Ministry confirmed that Indonesia had severed diplomatic relations with the Netherlands. An official described the Indonesian action as "disappointing and devoid of sense."

The Chief of Protocol of the Foreign Ministry called Mr. Susanto Djojosugito, the Indonesian diplomatic representative at The Hague, and informed him of the consequences of the Indonesian action.

The Indonesian independence day reception due to be held on August 17 at Mr. Djojosugito's residence was cancelled.

It was believed at The Hague that the severing of diplomatic relations would have few important consequences. The position of some 10,000 Dutchmen who chose to become Indonesian citizens after the transfer of sovereignty and who afterwards regretted the decision might, however, become more difficult.

Chinese Support:

Speaking at an Indonesian National Day garden party in Peking the same day (August 17), the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, promised support to Indonesia in her struggle with the Netherlands over West Irian.

He said: "We are glad to hear that President Sukarno has declared Indonesia's determination to recover her rightful territory of West Irian."

B. President Sukarno's Message To New Parliament: In a message to the new nominated Parliament at its opening session on August 16, President Sukarno said that, as with the case of other State institutions, the Gotong Rojong (Mutual Help) Parliament would be an instrument of the Revolution and reminded the members about their task of promoting the cause of the Revolution.

Replying to criticism that democracy had failed in Indonesia, he declared that this was not true. He admitted that liberal democracy had failed in Indonesia, but that had been replaced by the principle of 'guided democracy.'

He said: "Political and economic liberalism were mother and child to growing capitalism which ultimately will resort to Fascism—capitalism's last effort to preserve itself. We do not want Fascism. That is why we brought liberalization to an end and replaced it by Gotong Rojong Democracy."

which was suspended in March, 1960 on the ground that it had failed to co-operate with the Government. The new House consisted of 130 politicians and 153 members of "functional groups" ranging from the Army to farmers.]

Dr. Sukarno said he had tried to include the country's "best sons and daughters" in a new People's Consultative Congress which was to be the supreme State body. This body was made up of all members of Parliament and 94 representatives from the provinces and 232 representatives of "functional groups." He would install Congress in September, 1960 and submit his political manifesto and theories to it for approval.

He said: "I have been accused of appointing only 'yes men' and 'yes women' to Parliament. That is not true. In making the nominations I held intensive talks with the leaders of major political parties and functional groups."

C. Press Publishers Support President Sukarno's Decree On Return To 1945 Constitution: The Association of Indonesian Newspaper Publishers, at a conference held in Solo (Central Java) on July 15, declared its full support to the Presidential decree of July 5, 1959 on the return to the 1945 Constitution.

The conference endorsed the application of measures against members of the national Press violating the 1945 Constitution.

It however, opposed the Government's intention to publish its own newspaper and further proposed that the Government should not permit the publication of foreign newspapers in Indonesia.

D. Dr. Djuanda's Visit To East European Countries: The First Minister, Dr. Djuanda Kartiwidjaja, who left the Soviet Union on July 11 (see page 3478) to continue his tour of Eastern Europe, paid a visit to Poland from July 11 to 15.

During his four-day stay in Poland he went through a packed programme of visits to educational and industrial centres and had talks with Polish officials on matters of common interest, particularly trade and economic co-operation.

A joint communique issued in Djakarta and Warsaw on July 15 by the Indonesian and Polish Governments said that at their talks both parties were of the opinion that the present economic relations between the two countries were developing satisfactorily.

To further promote their economic relations, both parties decided that talks be held soon to agree on the supplies of Polish plants and equipment for cement, ship-yards, chemical, pharmaceutical and electrical industries as well as on the extent of possible co-operation in the exploration of mineral resources.

It was also decided to conclude an agreement aimed at promoting technical co-operation between the two countries.

In Hungary:

Dr. Djuanda visited Hungary from July 20 to 23 when he met several distinguished representatives of Hungarian political, economic and cultural life.

He had talks with the Hungarian Government leaders on the international situation and on further strengthening friendly relations between the two countries.

A joint communique issued later said that the two sides noted their identity of views on settling international problems through peaceful negotiations and on pursuing the policy of peaceful co-existence.

Hungary expressed her willingness to contribute to the economic development of Indonesia through technical and scientific co-operation. A Hungarian Government delegation would visit Indonesia shortly to work out an Agreement in this regard.

In Rumania:

Dr. Djuanda then visited Rumania from July 23 to 26.

In a joint communique made public in Bucharest on 27, he and the Rumanian Premier, Mr. Chivu Stoica, expressed adherence to the principles of peaceful co-existence and support to proposals which could contribute to the achievement of general and complete disarmament and to the strengthening of world peace.

They expressed the hope that all nations would do everything possible to avoid any action which would result in endangering peace.

In this connexion, the joint communique said that Rumania appreciated the position of Indonesia and her free and active foreign policy as well as her contribution to the easing of world tensions.

They firmly condemned colonialism since "it constitutes a subjugation of people and a source of world tension, as it has been confirmed once again by the recent events in the Congo and other parts of the world."

They expressed the conviction that the elimination of colonialism would contribute to the speedy consolidation of peace throughout the world.

Both sides noted that there were "possibilities for the development of economic exchanges, for the conclusion of a long-term Trade Agreement as well as the development of technical and scientific co-operation in the interest of the people of the two countries."

In Bulgaria:

Dr. Djuanda arrived in Sofia from Bucharest on July 26 on an official visit to Bulgaria at the invitation of the Prime Minister, Mr. Anton Yugov.

A joint communique on the talks between Dr. Djuanda and the Bulgarian leaders issued in Sofia on July 29 appealed to all countries to refrain from any acts which might aggravate the international situation.

The communique condemned military intervention by Belgium in the internal affairs of the Republic of Congo and warmly supported Indonesian efforts towards securing West Irian.

It said that in any future 'Summit' Conference on disarmament, Asian and African problems should be represented.

Both countries decided to support the struggle against colonialism and imperialism.

It was announced that a Protocol regarding trade and scientific and technical co-operation had been signed between the two countries.

They also agreed to sign a Trade Agreement, a Technical and Scientific Co-operation Agreement and an Agreement providing for a Bulgarian long-term loan to Indonesia.

In Yugoslavia:

From Bulgaria, Dr. Djuanda arrived in Belgrade (Yugoslavia) on July 29.

An announcement issued by the official Yugoslav News Agency Tanjug on July 31 said that full agreement had been reached in the talks between Dr. Djuanda and Yugoslav Government leaders on the necessity to take even more energetic measures for the solution of the disarmament problem and the ban on nuclear tests.

The announcement added that the role and the importance of United Nations in effectively solving world problems had been emphasized, as well as support for the struggle for independence of the still unliberated peoples and the extension of economic and technical assistance to under-developed countries.

Earlier, on July 31, Dr. Djuanda exchanged views on international problems with Marshal Tito.

Dr. Djuanda signed an Agreement on Brioni Island on August 1 under which Yugoslavia and Indonesia would co-operate in nuclear research and peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Yugoslavia would help to train Indonesian scientists and to explore for nuclear raw material in Indonesia.

Under another Agreement signed by Indonesia and Yugoslavia on August 2 in Belgrade, the two countries would increase and place their mutual trade on a long-term basis.

No details of the Agreement were disclosed except that the two countries had agreed to expand co-operation in future, particularly in industry and mining.

In a joint communique issued on August 3, both Yugoslavia and Indonesia called upon the countries outside the two Power blocs and those not involved directly in the 'cold war' to strengthen their efforts to bring about a lessening of world tensions and the elimination of the policy of force.

The communique said that Marshal Tito and Dr. Djuanda agreed on the need for stronger action to bring about general and controlled disarmament.

city at an estimated cost of £20,000,000.

The refinery would be fed from the oil-fields of the British-owned Basra Petroleum Company and would supply the needs of Iraq's southern provinces.

The Basra Petroleum Company was recently in dispute with the Iraq Government over the payment of increased port dues on exported oil.

The Company announced a decrease of 300,000 tons in its July, 1960 production.

According to The Times, London, a settlement had apparently been reached on the issue.

A. Dr. John M. Chang Becomes Prime Minister: Dr. Chiang Myun, better known as Dr. John M. Chang, a former Vice-President and leader of a new faction of the Democratic Party, was elected Prime Minister by the House of Representatives meeting in Seoul on August 19.

His election came two days after President Yoon Bo Sun's original nominee, Mr. Kim Do Yun, failed by three votes to win the House's approval. Mr. Kim Do Tun led what was known as the "Old Guard" faction in the Democratic Party.

As Prime Minister, Dr. Chang will enjoy most of the powers that formerly rested with the President during the Syngman Rhee regime.

The most important task before the new Government, he said immediately after his election, was to make a fresh start with the country's economic development. All evil aspects of the former regime would be eliminated. As part of his programme, he was expected to introduce various austerity measures and reduce the South Korean Army's strength.

[Dr. Chang's political career began in 1948 when, in the first General Elections to the National Assembly, he was returned from Seoul. At that time he was 49. The Republic of Korea came into being on August 15, 1948 and he led the Korean Mission to the United Nations General Assembly held in Paris. He also went to The Vatican as President Rhee's Personal Representative and in the next year (1949) to USA as Ambassador. In 1950 when the Korean war broke out, he again went to UN. Later, he returned to Seoul to become Prime Minister, but differences with Dr. Rhee and ill-health forced him to retire in 1952. Three years later he, along with some Opposition leaders, founded the Democratic Party on whose ticket he successfully contested for the Vice-Presidency in 1956. He survived an assassination attempt by hired gunmen. He never again compromised with Dr. Rhee and was a key figure in the campaign that forced the latter out of power in March, 1960.]

LAOS

A. New Cabinet Formed: The new Prime Minister, Prince Souvanna Phouma, announced the following Cabinet appointments in Vientiane on August 16:

Prince Souvanna Phouma—Prime Minister, Defence and Foreign Affairs;

Prince Chao Boun Om Na Champassak—Secretary of State for Defence and Veterans;

Mr. Touby Lyfoung—Minister of Justice, Information and Religious Affairs;

Mr. Kham Sing—Minister of Public Works, Posts and Telegraphs;

Mr. Quinim Pholsena—Minister of the Interior, Sports and Youth;

Mr. Tiao Sisoumang—Secretary of State for Health and Rural Affairs;

Mr. Khaming Souvanlasy—Minister of Finance and Economy; and Mr. Khamsouk Keola—Minister of Health, Education and Public Security.

Mr. Quinim Pholsena, leader of the Neutralist Party, was the only 'Leftist' included in the Cabinet.

The only member of the Cabinet who was in the last Government led by Mr. Tiao Somasanith was Mr. Touby Lyfoung.

The same day (August 16), the National Assembly elected a new Speaker after receiving a message from the coup leader, Captain Kong Lae, that the people did not like the choice of Mr. Oun Sananikone made the previous day.

To replace him, the House elected the Secretary of State for Religious Affairs and Justice in the previous Cabinet, Mr. Ounheuan Norasing.

However, contrary to earlier expectations, the formation of the Cabinet did not end the crisis as the 'Right-wing' Army leader and former Defence Minister, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, entered into a conflict with the new regime.

A messenger of the National Assembly was arrested in Luang Prabang on August 19 on his way to see the King carrying with him the names of the new Ministers.

Counter-revolutionary Leaflets:

Earlier, on August 16, an unidentified aircraft scattered leaflets over Vientiane announcing that General Nosavan was organizing the "re-capture" of the capital.

The leaflets said: "We are assured of the support of all the troops of the military regions. General Bonleuth will assume the title of Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the counter-attack. This counter-attack has as its objective the re-establishment of discipline in the Army and the maintenance of legality to allow a democratic regime to function normally."

The leaflets originated in Savannakhet in southern Laos where General Nosavan had flown a week earlier from Luang Prabang to rally the southern army against the coup leader, Capt. Kong Lae.

Tension mounted in Vientiane after the leaflets were dropped. Guards were placed at the UN office and the American Military Assistance Office on the outskirts of the town.

Capt. Kong Lae said that the leaflets were a "psychological warfare" and should not be believed.

The leaflets fluttered down over the city as the Prime Minister was obtaining unanimous approval for his Government from the National Assembly.

Prince Souvanna Phouma's Efforts To Avert Civil War:

Subsequent reports suggested the marching of troops, loyal to the Prime Minister, Prince Souvanna Phouma, and the counter-coup leader in opposite directions.

Vientiane sources also suggested that Prince Souvanna Phouma was in communication with Gen. Phoumi Nosavan.

In a broadcast appeal for unity on August 19, Prince Souvanna Phouma said: "To assist my Government at this critical time, all Army commanders must be loyal to the King."

It was officially stated on August 23 that Prince Souvanna Phouma had met Gen. Nosavan at Savaninakhet in a bid to avert a civil war. Later, Prince Souvanna was quoted as saying that everything was back to normal.

Meanwhile, one report said that King Savanna Vattana, still in Luang Prabang, was withholding consent to the new Government formed by Prince Souvanna Phouma.

MONGOLIA (Outer)

A. New Constitution And National Emblem Adopted: The first session of the Great People's Hural of the Mongolian People's Republic meeting in the capital, Ulan Bator, on July 6 adopted a new Constitution and a new national emblem.

The new Constitution was the third adopted since the Revolution of 1921. The first Constitution was adopted in 1924 after the "overthrow of the regime of alien colonizers and feudal landlords." The second Constitution was adopted in 1940 when the "pre-requisites for advance toward socialism were secured."

The new Constitution comprises 10 chapters and 94 articles.

The first chapter of the Constitution, dealing with the nature and principles of the organization of State administration defines the Mongolian People's Republic as a people's democratic socialist State of workers and co-operative arats (herdsmen and peasants) based on the alliance between the workers and all stratas of toilers.

The main principles of the organization and activity of the organs of State authority are: election of the Hurals (assemblies) at all levels by the citizens on the basis of universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage; strict implementation of the principles of democratic centralism and reliance on the masses of toilers in administering; responsibility of all Hurals and Deputies before their constituents; strict observance of the Constitution and the law by all organs of administration, etc.

"The economic foundation of the People's Republic is," the Constitution declares, "the socialist national economy and public ownership in the means of production." The main forms of ownership in the means of production in the People's Republic are: State ownership, i.e., the property of the whole people and co-operative ownership, i.e., collective ownership by the working masses in the agricultural and other co-operative ventures.

The People's Republic admits and protects the right of citizens to possess property earned by their labour, income, saving, houses, private subsidiary farms and other private means of life as well as the right to inherit personal property.

The Constitution assigns an important part to labour and defines it as "the basis and pre-condition for ensuring the socialist reproduction on an enlarged scale and as the source of material and spiritual wealth which is meant to meet the ever-increasing requirements of the population."

The chapter dealing with the organs of State authority declares that the sole legislative body in the country is the Great People's Hural (Assembly), a one-chamber Parliament.

The Great People's Hural is elected by the people for a three-year term of office on the principle of one Deputy for each 4,000 electorate. It meets once a year. The Great People's Hural elects its Chairman and four of his Deputies to preside over the sessions.

In between the sessions of the Great People's Hural, practically all the powers assigned to it by the Constitution are exercised by its permanent organ, the nine-member Presidium consisting of the Presidium's Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary and six other members. The Presidium is responsible to the Great People's Hural and reports to it.

The Council of Ministers is the executive organ of the highest State authority. The Council of Ministers is at present composed of its Chairman, four Vice-Chairmen, 12 Ministers and Chairmen of eight important central bodies.

Local organs of State authority, i.e., the Hurals of 18 provinces and their regions as well as Hurals of towns, form independent administrative units, and their Deputies are elected for a term of two years by the population of the corresponding administrative divisions.

Fundamental rights and duties of citizens occupy a prominent place in the new Constitution. It is important to emphasize that every declaration of the Constitution pertaining to freedom and rights of citizens is backed by all possible material conditions necessary for real enjoyment of them by citizens.

The Constitution imposes certain obligations upon every citizen in the interest of the security and prosperity of the society. Every citizen of the People's Republic is expected to contribute his labour to socialist construction, abide by the Constitution and the law, uphold discipline at work, keep public order and protect public property as a sacred and inviolable basis of the socialist society.

Under the Constitution, the foreign policy is "directed towards the safeguarding of world peace and development of friendship and co-operation among nations based on the principles of peaceful co-existence."

One of the main concerns of the foreign policy is to render every possible support to the struggle of the colonial people against imperialism for their national independence and to develop friendly relations with Asian-African nations who, basing their policy on the principle of co-existence, are fighting for world peace and goodwill and friendship among nations.

National Emblem:

The new national emblem is round in shape, framed with golden ears of wheat. A five-pointed red star embracing a gold Soyembo is placed on top of the device. The star and the Soyembo, which is the emblem of national independence and prosperity, symbolize the proletarian internationalist concepts and national interests.

A cog-wheel is mounted on the wisp of the wheat stalks at the base of the Emblem. And they, in their integrity, denote that the People's Republic is an agrarian-industrial country and symbolize as well the alliance between the working class and co-operative arats (herdsmen and peasants).

The cog-wheel and the stalks are sashed with a red-blue-red ribbon with the words "The Mongolian People's Republic" in the centre against the wheel.

In the centre of the device is depicted a horseman galloping towards the rising Sun, betokening the advancement of the country towards communism. Around the rider is a splash of yellow intermingling with light green and dark green conifers in the distance against the snow-capped mountain bluish in the mirage denote the characteristic landscape of Mongolia—the Gobi, steppe and the Hangai (forest, and forest steppe zone).

The 12 golden rays of the rising Sun against the serene blue sky, covering three-fourths of the inner space of the circle, symbolize the eternal prosperity of the nation.

NEPAL

A. National Democratic Front On Gandak Project And Mustang Incident: The resignation of the Government, headed by Mr. B. P. Koirala, was demanded by the National Democratic Front (a combination of three political parties comprising the followers of two former Prime Ministers, Dr. K. I. Singh and Mr. Tanka Prasad Acharya, and the Praja Tantrik Mahasabha of Mr. Ranganath Sharma) in Khatmandu on August 26.

The demand, which climaxed a strong attack on the Government's foreign and home policies, was contained in a resolution passed by the Front.

The resolution accused the Government of compromising the territorial integrity of the country and said that on the one hand, despite "strong opposition from the people" the Government had signed an Agreement with India on the Gandak Project, thereby "handing over one of our major rivers in the west and adjoining areas to India" and on the other, because of its utter incompetence, the Government had surrendered a large slice of Mustang to China.

In making the point that though the Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, had said that the Mustang incident took place within Nepalese territory he had not named the place of the incident, the resolution alleged that Mr. Koirala had not "properly scrutinized" the old records and had ignored traditional practices as well as the fact that the Dhute river had for long demarcated the border between Nepal and Tibet in this region.

It said that on the basis of the map given to them by Nepal, the Chinese had claimed that their territory included Kore Pass and that the place of the incident lay one kilometre north of it. "The Prime Minister has made as his basis the map of 1909 which was not considered acceptable even during the rule of Chandra Shamshere (Rana Prime Minister) with the result that an important and large area up to Kore Pass had been shown to be Chinese."

It added that by accepting compensation of Rs. 50,000 without securing a clear decision regarding the site of the incident, the Government had created great uneasiness in the minds of the people.

Mr. B. P. Koirala On Mustang Incident:

The Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told the House of Representatives in Khatmandu on August 27 that the Mustang incident was "now closed".

He added: "The position now, therefore, is that China has apologized for the incident and paid cash compensation but maintained that the event took place within Tibet—one furlong north of which she claimed to be Chinese territory—and denied the Nepalese charge that the Chinese troops violated Nepalese territory."

About the rights over the Kore Pass, he said that possibly the Nepalese Koirlah on the Mustang border was being confused with the Kore Pass which some maps had shown in Tibet.

B. Radio And Air Links With Districts: The Communications Minister, Mr. Ganeshman Singh, said in Khatmandu on August 28 that the Government was providing on high priority basis in the next two months radio and air links to all the 32 districts, more than half of which were in the mountains.

He said that "pocket-size" air-strips—300 yards by 50 yards—could be built on the Himalayas. Elsewhere, aerodromes of the size of 1,200 yards by 150 yards could be built.

He spoke of the dearth of suitable aircraft in Nepal—there are not more than six planes in Nepal, including the two belonging to King Mahendra—and said that air services to all the districts would, therefore, be started on a modest scale.

It was understood that Nepal was going to acquire some helicopters from the United States and a few single-engined Swiss-made Pilatus Porter aircraft, a prototype of which was used by the successful Swiss Dhaulagiri Expedition last Spring.

A. US Help For Building Nuclear Research Reactor: It was announced in Washington on August 19 that USA was making a grant of $350,000 under President Eisenhower's "Atoms-for-Peace" programme to Pakistan towards the cost of her nuclear research reactor project.

The reactor will be part of the Pakistan Institute of Nuclear Science and Technology near Rawalpindi. It will operate under the supervision of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission.

It will include laboratories, a library, a museum, an auditorium and storage area for radio-active materials. The technical staff will include a number of Pakistani scientists who had studied in the United States.

The Government has estimated the cost of the entire project at $3,500,000.

The nine-man Expedition, led by Major William Hackett of the US Army, set out from Skardu in the first week of June, 1960.

The Expedition set up five camps in 15 days. But bad weather defeated its attempts to reach the summit.

[K-2, the world's second highest mountain, was climbed only once—by an expedition in 1954—although six attempts have so far been made on the peak.]

A. First Egyptian Car Under Production—Other New Industries: Information was available on August 12 that the Egyptian Automotive Company, a private firm founded in 1959, had started producing at a rate of five units daily a 66cc Ramses car, an open four-seater utility model and a saloon at its new factory at Giza on the outskirts of Cairo.

This is the first small car factory, as distinct from an assembly plant, in West Asia.

It was stated that by 1961, ten cars would be produced daily. Retail prices would be around £E500 for the utility model, £E600 for the saloon and £E700 for a sports model to be produced on order.

About 55 per cent of the finished vehicle would be made out of local materials. Imported parts for each car would come to about £E205.

Negotiations were said to be afoot for the erection of Egypt's first diesel engine and goods vehicle factory in association with a firm in Cologne. A week previously, the assembly of a stationary diesel engine had started at the Shubra Diesel Factory, with an initial production of 1,500, rising to 3,000 units annually.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

A. Soviet Satellite "Arknik" Launched—Animals Aboard Recovered Intact: The Soviet Union put into orbit its second space-ship satellite Arknik on August 19.

It weighed about five tons without the final stage of the carrier-rocket.

It circled the Earth once every 90.6 minutes, at an average altitude of 200 miles.

The cabin of the space-ship was equipped with everything necessary for a future manned flight into space.

Several animals were on board, including two dogs, named Strelka (Little Arrow) and Belka (Squirrel).

Moscow Radio announced that the chief task of this Soviet experiment was to continue the study of conditions for life in a rocket, flight safety and re-entry into Earth's atmosphere.

A 19.995 megacycle transmitter sent information back to the Earth, while a special television system showed the behaviour of the animals on board.

First reports by radio and television indicated that all instruments were working normally.

'Arknik' And Animals Brought Back To Earth:

Moscow Radio announced on the night of August 20 that the Arknik had been brought safely back to Earth.

The Arknik and the capsule, with experimental animals, landed separately.

Announcing the event, Tass said that the Arknik landed in the pre-planned recovery area. The deviation from the selected point of landing was about six miles.

This was the first time that living beings had been safely returned to Earth after travelling 437,500 miles in orbit round the Earth.

The two dogs and other animals were brought back to Earth when the Arknik was making its 18th revolution round the Earth.

All the animals, including the two dogs, were feeling well after the flight and landing.

Tass reported on August 21 that the two space dogs, Strelka and Belka, began fawning on their handlers as soon as they were released from the capsule.

The dogs, the mice, flies, plants, fungi, microscopic water plants and some seeds in the capsule were all in good condition after descent from space.

Strelka and Belka were soon eating food eagerly. They were later flown to Moscow for a thorough examination.

The mice were eagerly eating chips, biscuits and other food, and the flies were flying about in the plastic vessels in which they made their space journey.

One of the plants carried on the Arknik continued to blossom.

Dogs' Behaviour:

Further details of the behaviour of the dogs in space were given on August 22 by the Moscow paper, Pravda.

It said that the dogs gradually calmed down after recurring stages of nervousness during their flight in the capsule.

When the rocket took off, the dogs, separated by a transparent partition, pricked their ears and looked perplexed at the cabin floor. "Then they grew anxious and rushed about. With the space-ship gathering speed, the force of gravity pushed them down. Strelka tried to struggle, anxiously looking sideways.

"For some time, the dogs kept still. Then the space-ship went into orbit and in a state of weightlessness, the dogs floated inside the cabin with their limbs and heads hanging limply. It seemed that both of them were lifeless."

The dogs remained weightless for 24 hours.

But, Pravda said, they got used to the state of weightlessness and started eating when the feeding apparatus opened, offering them their first breakfast in space.

The animals were fed on jelly-like food which contained nutritive substances and water. They were fed automatically twice a day and were once observed on television eating. They had been trained for a year for their flight into space.

The dogs which were introduced to Moscow journalists and news photographers on August 22 appeared frisky, friendly and without a scratch or bruise.

The journalists were also shown white and black mice and a white rat which had been taken on the flight into space.

Tass said that rodents were useful in the study of genetic changes which could result from space conditions and, particularly, cosmic radiation.

Fruit flies also travelled in the space-ship in small transparent plastic retorts—about 50 in each. Two retorts were shown to journalists. These flies and their descendents would be used to study hereditary changes.

It was revealed in Moscow that a catapult system had detached the cabin—in which the animals and insects were put—from the Arknik at a low altitude on its way to the Earth. While the Arknik was coming down, special instruments inside transmitted details about the operation of the steering and braking installations aboard.

Prof. A. C. B. Lovell's Tribute:

The Director of Britain's Jordell Bank Observatory, Prof. A. C. B. Lovell, described the Soviet achievement in bringing back a space-ship safely to Earth as "truly magnificent."

He said that this success showed what had been suspected for some time—that the Russians were on the verge of sending man into space.

B. International Congress Of Orientologists: The 25th International Congress of Orientologists began in Moscow on August 9.

It was attended by 2,000 delegates, including 1,000 foreign scientists, representing more than 60 countries.

On behalf of the Soviet Government, the delegates and guests were welcomed by the First Vice-Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, Mr. Anastas Mikoyan.

In his speech, Mr. Mikoyan said: "The victorious national liberation movement of the oriental peoples has brought about the political liberation of nearly all peoples of Asia and of two-thirds of the African continent, which had been in colonial and semi-colonial dependence. The disgraceful system of colonialism is on the brink of complete collapse.

"The prophecy by Lenin more than 40 years ago has come true—the prophecy that 'the period of awakening of the East in the contemporary revolution is followed by the period of the participation of all oriental peoples in deciding the destinies of the world, so that they should no longer be the object of enrichment alone.'

"The experience of the Soviet State in the cardinal solution of national and social problems is of tremendous international significance, and it is not accidental that it attracts close attention of the Afro-Asian peoples.

"The Soviet Union is co-operating with India, Indonesia, Burma, Afghanistan, United Arab Republic, Iraq and many other countries in the development of their national economy and, above all, in the establishment of a modern industrial basis as the foundation of their economic independence.

"The duty of orientologists is to reflect objectively in their works the key processes which took place in Asian and African countries in the past and especially those taking place in them today to contribute to the creative study of the key problems of the struggle of the people of the East for national and social liberation and for overcoming economic backwardness. It can be said with full justification that orientology can count on widespread recognition and success only when it serves the interests of the peoples of the East."

Mr. B. Gafurov's Presidential Address:

According to tradition, the first plenary meeting was opened by the President of the 24th International Congress of Orientologists (Munich, 1957), Mr. Ernst Waldschmidt, who then handed over charge to Mr. Bobodzhan Gafurov, Corresponding Member of the USSR Academy of Sciences.

In his address, Mr. Gafurov emphasized that this international scientific meeting was taking place at an exciting time when the people of Asia and Africa were achieving fresh successes in the struggle for freedom and independence.

He said: "We are proud that orientologists from more than 20 independent countries of Asia and Africa will take part in the work of the Congress. This young detachment of scientists heralds the coming of a new epoch in the development of oriental studies."

He called the attention of the Congress to certain specific features in the development of Soviet orientology.

He pointed out that a new stage in the development of this science in USSR began after the October Revolution. The Soviet scientists began exploring fields which were never studied before, primarily the latest history, economy and culture of the Eastern peoples.

He said that in the history of the Asian and African peoples, one saw regular stages of historical development, uniform in its endless variability.

Prof. Y. Chelyshev On Indian Literature:

In a report presented to the Congress on August 15, the distinguished Soviet expert on Indian literature, Prof. Y. Chelyshev, discussed India's contemporary literature.

Analysing a great number of works of literature beginning with mid-19th century down to the present day, he demonstrated the close connexion between the creative endeavour of Indian poets and the social and political events in their country, above all, the national liberation struggle of the people of India.

He said that Indian poets were increasingly connecting their personal experiences and feelings with the life of their people, seeking to make them aware of their own strength, indicating to them their rights and the ideal of a better life.

He drew the conclusion that peace and friendship, universal brotherhood between the peoples of the world, the horrors of war, violence and exploitation, liberation of the Indian people from the aftermath of colonialism, obscurantism and ignorance—all this formed part of the creative endeavour of the great majority of Indian poets.

Prof. Chelyshev's researches were highly appreciated by the Indian writer, Dr. Kalidas Nag, an expert on contemporary Indian literature, particularly the great theoretical value of the researches.

Dr. Nag presented a report on the importance of Rabindranath Tagore's works for the advance of the literatures of the people of South-East Asia.

On August 16, the Congress was addressed by Mr. Shivdan Singh Chauhan (India), who spoke on classical Indian poetry, its origin, development and place in modern times.

Another Indian scholar, Dr. Gopal Haldar, drew an interesting analogy in the development of Indian and West European literatures.

He proved specifically that romanticism in Bengali literature of the 19th century was of a progressive revolutionary nature, as distinct from the romanticism of English writers, such as Sir Walter Scott, for instance.

He stressed that historical romanticism did not originate in Bengal under the influence of English literature, as claimed by many European men of letters. Bengali romanticism was an expression of national character.

The Congress ended its session on August 17.

The President of the Congress, Mr. B. Gafurov, in his closing speech, said that the Congress had been a success and a great deal of useful work had been done.

He said that the proceedings confirmed the fact that the people of the East were no longer just objects for science but had become its creators.

The Congress resolved that its next session — the 26th session of the International Congress of Orientologists — would be held in India.

It passed a resolution calling for the establishment of international commissions for joint investigation of certain major problems of the history of Asia and Africa.

A. World Athletic Records Ratified: The International Amateur Athletic Federation announced in Rome on August 27 the ratification of 61 world records, including the controversial 10.0 sec. for the 100 metres by Armin Hary (Germany) in Zurich in June, 1960.

They also ratified the 10.0 sec. clocked by the Canadian H. W. Jerome, in Canada in July, 1960.

One of the performances ratified dated back to 19 years—the high jump of the South African girl, E. Van Heerden, set in 1941 but not before put forward for ratification.

Miss Van Heerden's jump was 5 ft. 3.2 in. Also ratified as the latest world record was the 6 ft. 3|4 in. of Iolanda Balas (Rumania) jumped in Bucharest in June, 1960.

The following records were ratified.

Men:

100 yards: 9.3 sec.—W. Woodhouse (USA); R. Cook (USA); R. Norton (USA).

100 metres: 10 sec.—A. Hary (Germany); H. W. Jerome (Canada).

A. Independence Day: Afghanistan celebrated her Independence Day on August 23 amidst country-wide rejoicing.

Afghan women appeared without veils in Kabul on the day.

[In September, 1959, the Prime Minister, Sardar Mohammed Daud Khan, had urged Afghan women to cast aside their veils. The first time they did so was at a dinner for the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, in Kabul.]

In an Independence Day message, King Zahir Shah re-affirmed Afghanistan's policy of neutrality and non-alignment and her desire to work for the preservation of world peace.

He offered felicitations to the countries of Asia and Africa which had newly won their freedom.

On the domestic front, he spoke of his country's determination to tackle her economic and social problems.

In an Independence Day broadcast to the people on August 24, the Prime Minister, Sardar Mohammed Daud Khan, said: "The progress of Afghanistan and her present policy demands sacrifice and sincerity from the entire Afghan people."

Referring to relations with Pakistan, he said: "Our relations with Pakistan are still strained. These relations are passing through a critical stage. Our only difference with Pakistan is over the Pakhtoonistan issue and the destiny of millions of our Pakhtoonistan brothers. No change whatsoever has taken place in the policy of Afghanistan on this issue."

B. Non-Aggression Pact With China: Afghanistan and China signed a Treaty of Friendship and Non-aggression in Kabul on August 26.

The Treaty was signed by the visiting Chinese Vice-Premier, Mr. Chen Yi and Afghanistan's Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister, Sardar Mohammed Naim Khan.

At the same time, a new Trade Agreement between the two countries was signed by the Chinese Ambassador in Kabul, Mr. Hao Ting and the Afghan Minister of Commerce, Mr. Ghulam Mohammed Sherzad.

BURMA

A. Budget For 1960-61: The Finance Minister, Thakin Tin Maung, presented to Parliament on August 19 the Budget estimates for 1960-61.

The estimates, which he described as a "budget for democracy," showed a surplus of K261,47,000 in the revenue account and a deficit of K448,57,000 in the capital account.

He made no drastic departure from previous estimates. There would be no increase in taxes nor would new taxes be introduced in the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1960.

The following was the abstract of the estimates (the figures are in K (kyats) 1,00,00):

Revenue Budget (Part I)

Budget 1959-60	Revised 1959-60		Budget 1960-61
9,645.56	10,545.62	Revenue receipts	10,730.84
9,433.17	10,390.77	Current expenditure	10,469.37
212.39	154.85	Revenue surplus	261.47

Capital Budget (Part II)

3,481.75	3,669.93	Capital surplus	3,318.71
3,694.14	3,824.78		3,580.18
3,761.34	3,697.56	Capital expenditure	4,028.75
(—) 67.20	(plus) 127.22	Capital budget (Deficit —) (Surplus —plus)	(—) 448.57

He referred to the improvement in the economic situation during 1959-60 and estimated that the gross domestic production, at constant prices, would increase by five per cent over that of the previous year.

He stated that the most important component of domestic production, namely, agriculture, had come to the pre-War average for the first time now. The production of timber and mining and industrial products had also increased.

An expansion of power supply and further development of internal transportation was also expected.

He stated that the Government followed the trade policy adopted by the previous 'caretaker' Government with a few modifications. Private trade would be encouraged to take part in industry and export, and foreign investment would be welcomed.

He added: "The Ministry of National Planning has entered into discussion over the question of receiving economic aid from certain countries well disposed towards us. Endeavours are being made to attract investment in accordance with the provisions of the Union Investment Act passed during the tenure of office of Gen. Ne Win's Government."

A. Restrictions On Import Of Luxury Goods: The Government announced drastic restrictions on the import of luxury goods on August 13 with a view to conserving the country's declining foreign exchange reserves.

The announcement envisaged an increase of import duties on the one hand and an increase in the bank rate covering transactions pertaining to these commodities on the other.

With immediate effect, petrol was to cost 40 cents a gallon more, the duty per gallon having been increased from Rs. 1.57 to Rs. 1.97.

Other commodities affected were air-conditioning equipment, alcoholic beverages excluding beer, ale, stout, porter and other fermented cereal beverages, floor coverings and tapestries, fountain pens and their parts excluding nibs, furniture and fixtures, motor cars and station wagons, paper and paper board, perfumery, cosmetics, soaps and cleansing and polishing preparations, photographic and cinematographic apparatus and appliances, photographic and cinematographic supplies, exposed cinematographic films, 35 m.m., watches and horses.

The rate of interest payable by commercial banks to the Central Bank on advances secured by pledging Government securities to cover importation or hire purchase of these specified non-essential goods was raised from 2½ to 4 per cent. The original rate of 2½ per cent would continue to obtain for transactions covering essential foodstuffs and financing of agricultural and industrial equipment and domestically produced goods.

The Finance Minister, Mr. Felix Dias Bandaranaike, in an explanatory statement said: "Our external assets have fallen progressively in recent years and, at the time this Government took office, they had reached a level below which they could not be allowed to drop without serious effects on the economy of the country. The fall of the assets is due to the value of imports, particularly during the period of 'care-taker' Governments.

"During the past year, the import of luxury goods has been a more severe drain on our assets than in earlier years. The Government, in keeping with its democratic socialistic policy, has, therefore, decided to take various measures which will have the effect of reducing the import of such goods."

A. Two Englishmen Jailed: According to the Shanghai newspaper Wen Hui Ho (dated August 14), two Englishmen had been sentenced to prison terms by a Shanghai court for espionage and counter-revolutionary activities.

Ernest Stanley Jones (43) was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment and Harold George King (44) to five years on August 9.

Both belonged to "Jehovah's Witnesses". They went to China in 1949 and were arrested in 1958.

The newspaper said that both pleaded guilty and as they appeared to be repentant the court gave them "lenient sentences."

In London, a leader of the "Jehovah's Witnesses" movement described the charges against the two men as "absolute piffle" and "part of an anti-religious round-up by the communists."

INDIA

SUMMARY: Parliament Debate On Assam Disturbances; Steps for Increasing Agricultural Production; Second Plan's Progress In Pondicherry; Cloth And Yarn Prices Reduced.

A. Assam Disturbances—Parliament Debate: The Lok Sabha (House of the People) began a three-day debate on September 1 on the recent disturbances in Assam (page 3485.)

Intervening in the debate on September 2, the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, indicated that the Government of India was thinking of holding two types of inquiries into the disturbances.

In the first instance, he said, there should be immediate investigations at several places to find out the wrong-doers and punish them. These should be in the nature of judicial enquiries or any other type, but should be independent.

The other inquiry should be a long-term one, intended to probe the root causes of the disturbances and to suggest remedies. This should be held somewhat later to allow passions to cool down so that a proper atmosphere was created.

As regards the demand by certain members of the Lok Sabha that the role of political parties in the disturbances should also be investigated, he said he did not mind such an inquiry but it was not clear to him how this matter should be dealt with.

Earlier, Mr. A. P. Jain, leader of the parliamentary Delegation which visited Assam following the disturbances, said that an immediate comprehensive inquiry into the Assam events would not be in the interests of the Bengali-speaking people in Assam or of Bengal or of the whole of India. If such an inquiry was held, the progress now being made in restoring peaceful conditions in the State would be retarded.

The Central Law Minister, Mr. A. K. Sen, who had visited Assam shortly after the disturbances to study the situation, said in the Lok Sabha on September 2 that they had seen the worst facet of chauvinism on the soil of Assam. The most unfortunate part of it was that the students were in the vanguard of the movement. It was obvious that the pattern of the disturbances was uniform everywhere. Violence was directed not so much against the lives of people as against property. "The ultimate solution lies in making the bonds of unity between the different communities in Assam permanent and indestructible. Whatever measures we take must be geared to that primary purpose."

On September 3, the Lok Sabha concluded its three-day debate on the Assam disturbances with an overwhelming endorsement of the Government's decision in favour of holding a comprehensive, independent inquiry into the causes of the happenings at a later stage.

It rejected by 168 votes to 48 a demand by Acharya J. B. Kripalani and other Opposition leaders for an immediate probe and later approved by a voice vote a substitute motion by Mr. Atulya Ghosh (West Bengal) and six other Congressmen recommending a judicial inquiry at the "appropriate time".

The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, who wound up the debate on September 3, and earlier the Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, posed the question "Whither India?" and proceeded to warn the nation that the disturbances raised issues of terrifying magnitude and of fundamental importance to the country's future.

Everyone talked bravely of nationalism, Mr. Nehru said, but each had his own brand of nationalism—"Bengali, Assamese, Gujerati, Punjabi and so on." There was also brave talk of unity and tolerance. But there was none in reality. "Do we only have a superficial covering of nationalism and is it bursting open?" he asked.

The Assam happenings, he said, had done one good thing. These had brought the skeleton of "narrow nationalism" out of "our mental cupboard." The evil was there for everybody to see and could not be solved by debates or inquiries. But it would be good "if it makes us think....."

He conceded that the principle of linguistic States had possibly encouraged "narrow nationalism." But the malady was "much deeper." At any rate, the Government was not in favour of reversing the principle. "We are not going to cut up India again and again."

Pandit G. B. Pant deplored the "growing narrow-mindedness" in the country and urged that the malady must be cured.

Various linguistic, religious and communal affinities, he said, were natural and could not be ignored. But these must not be allowed "to swallow the very basis of our nationalism."

He assured the House that every attempt would be made to rehabilitate the Bengali-speaking refugees totalling about 45,000, "properly and safely" in their original homes in Assam.

He also informed the House that a Central Minister would be entrusted with the task of going to Assam and West Bengal to assist in the immediate task of rehabilitation. The Central Government, for its part, would offer all possible assistance—financial and otherwise.

Both Mr. Nehru and Pandit Pant defended the Government's approach to the Assam disturbances and said that it was their view even now that it would have been wrong to have invoked President's rule in Assam. It would have only hindered the process of healing in view of the strong opposition to it by all in the State.

They urged that the Central Government had done all that it could do except remove the Assam Ministry. It had alerted the Army even before the situation became serious and later placed five battalions at the disposal of the State Government for assisting in the maintenance of law and order.

Of interest was Pandit Pant's view that the immediate cause of the disturbances was the "linguistic agitation." However, Mr. Nehru said that it was difficult for him to say definitely as to "who is the guilty party" despite all the memoranda he had received.

Pandit Pant indicated that the recommendations made by the Parliamentary Delegation to Assam would be accepted by the Government to a large extent.

The Rajya Sabha (Council of States) discussed the Assam disturbances on September 7 and passed a similar motion as in the Lok Sabha on September 9.

Parliamentary Delegation's Report:

The nine-man all-Parties' parliamentary Delegation which went to Assam to study the situation in the third week of August, in its report, rejected the demand for a judicial inquiry into the genesis of the riots as this would prolong the period of unsettled conditions in the State and hamper the progress of rehabilitation.

It also held that the promulgation of President's rule in Assam would not be in the best interests of Assam or of India. The Ministry of Mr. B. P. Chaliha, it said, was liberal and could not be accused of being unsympathetic to the minorities.

The law and order situation, in its view, was progressively improving. Whatever might have been the lapses in the past, the State Government was now taking firm measures to restore peace. Unless something unforeseen happened, there was no danger of a recurrence of large-scale disturbances.

It recommended that Parliament should enact a law authorizing the President to notify a State of Emergency for any specified area if he was satisfied that "a grave emergency exists, whereby the security of India or any part thereof is threatened by internal disturbances." On such notifications, all newspapers published or circulated in the notified areas "shall become responsible for the accuracy of news published and the publication of any false or exaggerated news per se shall become an offence."

The State Government, it said, had already deputed its Additional Chief Secretary to make an all-State survey of the recent disturbances and fix responsibility upon officers and men. A special inquiry had been instituted for Nowgong, one of the worst affected areas. The police firing at Gauhati was also under inquiry. And an inquiry into the recent "premeditated and organized" attack on the Bengalis in a village in Goreshwar area would meet the requirements of the situation.

It conceded that almost all representatives of the Bengali-speaking people suggested to the Delegation that a high-powered Inquiry Commission, with a Supreme Court Judge as Chairman, should be set up immediately to inquire into the riots, failures of the administration and losses suffered thereby and the role played by political parties and their leaders in the disturbances.

The Delegation gave serious consideration to this suggestion and came to the conclusion that such an inquiry would take a considerably long time during which the attention of the administration as also of the people would be taken up by the collection of evidence and by charges and counter-charges instead of in rehabilitating the sufferers and improving mutual relations.

Besides, the administration would remain almost in a state of suspense and psychological attitudes would become more rigid, making the task of rehabilitation more difficult.

It, however, made several recommendations for strengthening and overhauling the administration. These included replacement of inefficient and partisan officers and suitable action against those found guilty of derelection of duty or of encouraging or inciting the mobs, re-organization of the Intelligence Department and apprehension of the ring-leaders.

It suggested that all police stations should be equipped with wireless and transport vehicles and the bigger among them should have an adequate quantity of arms.

The Delegation, according to the report, tried its best to find a formula to settle the language issue but failed. It, therefore, supported the proposal to convene a Round Table Conference of the linguistic groups in a bid to find a solution of this "knotty problem."

The majority view was, however, not shared by Mr. Mukut Behari Lal (P-SP) and Dr. Raj Bahadur Gour (Communist) who appended separate Notes recommending a comprehensive inquiry into the "unfortunate happenings."

In his Note, Dr. Gour declared that the majority report "suffers from certain serious shortcomings in respect of approach, assessment and recommendations. It does not do full justice to the issues involved." It did not take any note of the "virtual abdication of authority and even capitulation to the forces of arson and plunder by the State Government."

The report of the Delegation led by Mr. Ajit Prasad Jain was laid on the table of both Houses of Parliament on August 30.

The other members of the Delegation were: Mrs. Mafida Ahmad, Mr. Upendranath Barman, Mr. R. K. Khadilkar, Dr. Sushila Nayar, Mr. Jagannath Kaushal, Mr. Mukut Behari Lal, Mr. K. Santanam and Dr. Raj Bahadur Gour.

Assam Government's Policy Statement:

In a "policy statement" on the issues raised by the disturbances in the State, published on August 30, the Assam Government promised firm action against law-breakers, including the imposition of punitive tax, and invited the West Bengal Government to co-operate in the task of rehabilitation of the refugees.

[The statement was said to reflect the conclusions arrived at during the Assam leaders' talks with Mr. Nehru and others in New Delhi a few days earlier.]

Contrary to earlier expectations, the statement made no reference to the question of a high-level inquiry into the Assam happenings. Nor did it give any indication of the Government's views on the language problem.

Admitting the need to tone up the State's administration, it said: "While it is difficult for the Government to control the feelings and private sympathies of officers during an upheaval of this kind, it can and must ensure that no officer shows partisanship in the discharge of his duties or fails in his duty because of his private feelings."

In it, the Assam Government listed the steps it proposed to take to deal with the law and order situation in the State. They were: (1) The rehabilitation of the victims of the riots who had left their homes and the creation of an atmosphere of confidence and security among them; (2) The toning up of the administrative apparatus of the State and firm action against officers of the Government who showed partisanship; (3) Prompt and firm action against those who committed crimes, including imposition of collective fines; and (4) The formulation of a code of academic discipline for students, a section of whom had played an "aggressive role and indulged in lawlessness."

It contained an appeal to the West Bengal Government for co-operation in the task of persuading the refugees to return to Assam and rehabilitating them.

It also appealed to the Press to help in removing the existing tensions and apprehensions.

It said that huts or houses of 7,000 families were destroyed during the riots and those of 1,200 others were damaged. Of these, the houses of 4,000 had been re-built already or were nearing completion.

It said: "The recent disturbances have been a matter of deep concern and sorrow to the Government of Assam. The Government condemns the action of those who participated in the riots and indulged in violence of any kind. While these riots were apparently the result of the language agitations, they are manifestations of a deep-seated social and economic malady and of a sense of frustration which unfortunately have afflicted the people of Assam. As a consequence of this background, various complications have resulted both in Assam and in the neighbouring States, which deserve earnest consideration for the future peace, security and progress of the State and its friendly relations with its neighbouring States.

"Indeed, some of the questions that arise have had all-India repercussions and have to be considered also in that context. The future progress of Assam depends not only on the efforts of the people of Assam but also on the progress of India as a whole. The freedoms guaranteed in the Constitution of India must necessarily be adhered to in every State of India and every State must consider itself as an integral part of the larger whole."

West Bengal Assembly's Resolution:

On September 2, the West Bengal Legislative Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution suggesting, among other things, a judicial inquiry into the Assam disturbances, the deputation of a Central Minister to supervise the measures to restore normalcy in Assam and the postponement of a decision on Assam's language problem until an agreement was reached at a conference of representatives of different linguistic groups.

The resolution, drafted jointly by the leaders of various parties, was moved by the West Bengal Chief Minister, Dr. B. C. Roy, who said that though there had lately been no major incidents in Assam, the fact remained that a sense of insecurity still prevailed there. That was why the Assembly had to make these recommendations.

He said that a judicial inquiry was essential. The guilty must be punished. But what was more important was to ascertain the causes of the disturbances and, if possible, to correct them.

Leaders of all Opposition parties and the two Independent members in the Assembly associated themselves with the sentiments expressed in the resolution and in Dr. B. C. Roy's speech.

B. Increased Agricultural Production—Agriculture Ministers' Conference Decisions: A four-point plan for stepping up agricultural production in the country, it was stated, found favour at the States' Agriculture Ministers' Conference which was held in New Delhi on August 26 and 27.

Its salient features were said to be a complete co-ordination of different departments connected with agricultural production from the highest to the village level, increased imports of fertilizers and provision of adequate quantities of iron and steel for the manufacture of improved agricultural implements, announcement of a price policy for different crops sufficiently in advance of procurement and the immediate implementation of land reforms.

It was also agreed that there should be close co-ordination between Agriculture, Community Development, Irrigation and Co-operation departments not merely at the Centre and State levels but also in the districts and villages.

It was felt that the use of fertilizers was the surest and quickest way of raising agricultural production. At present, not merely were the funds provided for purchasing fertilizers inadequate but these were not often fully utilized. Since it would take time for the new fertilizer factories to go into production, there should be larger imports.

One of the defects of the present price policy, it was said, was that prices were not announced in advance of procurement and farmers did not derive any benefit if these were made known after the produce had reached the market.

An interesting point made was that mechanized farming should be introduced in areas which could not be cultivated through traditional methods.

Though some progress had been achieved in the establishment of seed multiplication farms, it would take a year or two before they yielded results. It was suggested that these should be managed more systematically.

It was also suggested that service co-operative societies or better farming co-operative societies should be started in larger numbers as these were of great help to farmers.

On the issue of land reforms, it was pointdid not invest in land for he was not sure whepering agricultural production. The landlord did not invest in land for he was not sure whether he would retain it and the farmer was unwilling to spend money as he did not know if he would get proprietory rights.

It was urged that minor irrigation schemes should be given the highest priority. Though steps had been taken by the State Governments towards that end, the programme deserved acceleration.

C. Progress Of Second Plan In Pondicherry: Inaugurating the Pondicherry Representative Assembly on August 31, the Chief Commissioner of Pondicherry, Mr. L. R. S. Singh said that the State's achievements during the fourth year of the Second Five-Year Plan "were unquestionably very satisfactory,"

"Every effort" he said, "will be made to achieve the optimum results by the end of the Second Plan period." The production of foodgrains in Pondicherry had registered a 23 per cent increase since 1955-56.

He said that the Central Government had agreed to the setting up of an industrial estate in Pondicherry on an area of 22 acres. The Fisheries Department was starting an estuarine fish farm on the outskirts of Pondicherry to demonstrate, in protected backwaters, the possibilities of fish culture.

While the Government had been doing its utmost to encourage municipalities to launch development works, he added, their performance could not be considered satisfactory.

He also announced that high school education for girls studying in Government schools in Pondicherry had been made free.

D. Cloth And Yarn Prices—New Schedule: The Indian Cotton Mills'

Federation announced a new schedule of cloth and yarn prices on September 3.

According to a spokesman of the Federation, the revised prices represented a further cut ranging from 6 to 12-1|2 per cent, depending upon the varieties of cloth and the sources of supply.

To ensure that the price reductions made by the industry were passed on to the consumer, he said, the Federation had decided to stamp the new prices on the pieces of cloth and bundles of yarn.

In respect of cloth, retail prices would also be stamped, which would be 15 per cent over the ex-mill prices.

The maximum prices that could be charged by mills had been reduced from the levels announced earlier by the Federation (page 3497). The new ceilings were based on the August, 1959 prices which were lower by 3 to 10 per cent, depending upon the qualities of cloth than those prevailing in October, 1959.

[According to the announcement made by the Federation on August 11, ceilings were fixed on the basis of the October, 1959 prices.]

The spokesman explained that the total cut in prices would amount to about 20 per cent in the case of certain varieties of cloth.

The Federation called upon the mills not to charge in respect of cloth more than the following additional percentage over the August, 1959 contract prices as the base provided that where the existing contract prices were lower, the cloth would continue to be sold at the lower prices: coarse—25; lower medium—22; higher medium—18; fine—11½; and superfine—9. The revised prices would apply to all cloth to be delivered henceforward regardless of the contract prices.

The prices of yarn were also revised and fixed as under 6S (manufactured from cotton waste)—Rs. 13.57; 6S (manufactured from cotton mixing containing not more than 25 per cent cotton waste)—Rs. 15.75; 10S—Rs. 17.75; 20S—Rs. 21.60; 26S—Rs. 24.18; 30S—Rs. 25.32; and 40S—28.75. These were the net ex-mill prices for a bundle of 10 lbs single bank yarn made from Indian cotton only. Prices for other counts and varieties of yarn would be announced later.

A Press Note issued by the Indian Cotton Mills Federation on September 3 said that the Government of India had approved the issue of the following announcement on the revised prices :

"It was only three weeks ago that the Federation had announced a schedule of prices for cotton textiles, taking October, 1959 as the basis and allowing additional percentage thereon, to account for the rise in costs that had occurred. "Representatives of the Federation at their meeting with Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri and Mr. Nityanand Kanungo held in New Delhi on August 21 explained why they had taken October, 1959 and not August, 1959 as the basis. The industry and in particular those units which had become financially weak due to the continuing crisis from 1957 were still making distress sale in August, 1959, and if the industry was required to take that month as the basis and charge only the increase in costs that had occurred since then, the mills would again have to incur losses, which they could ill afford to do."

E. Andhra Pradesh Land Ceilings Bill Passed: The Andhra Pradesh Legislative Assembly passed on July 9 the Andhra Pradesh Ceiling On Agricultural Holdings Bill by 62 votes to 8 after an eight-day discussion.

The members of the Communist Democratic Legislature Front walked out of the House just before the Deputy Chief Minister, Mr. K. V. Ranga Reddi, moved that the Bill be passed as a protest against what they called the "autocratic attitude" of the Government in not accommodating the vital suggestions made by the Opposition.

The members of the Swatantra Party voted against the Bill. Its leader, Mr. G. Latchanna, urged the Government to withdraw the Bill and prevent what he termed "the destruction of farms and the entire agrarian set-up."

The Bill, as it emerged from the Joint Select Committee, was adopted by the Assembly with a few amendments moved by the Government.

It fixed a ceiling at 4½ times the family holding.

The extent of family holding ranges from six acres of land in class A to 72 acres in class H.

The exemptions included efficiently managed farms, consisting of compact blocks, lands held by religious, charitable and educational institutions, co-operative farming societies approved by the Government and other co-operative societies including land mortgage banks, orchards, tea, coffee or rubber plantations and sugarcane farms maintained and operated by sugar factories.

Compensation was provided for lands taken over by the Government at five times the gross income for the first 4½ family holdings in excess of the ceiling, four times the gross income for the next 4½ family holdings and three times the gross income for the balance of the holdings.

The Andhra Legislative Council later also passed the Bill as passed by the Assembly.

A. Bank Rate Cut: The Bank of Japan announced on August 23 that it had reduced its official re-discount rate to 0.0190 yen per 100 yen per diem (6.935 per cent a year) effective from August 23. The previous rate was 0.0200 yen for 100 per diem (7.30 per cent a year).

This reversed an increase in the Bank rate made in December, 1959 as a precaution against "possible economic overheating."

The Governor of the Bank of Japan, Mr. Masamichi Yamagiwa, told newsmen in Tokyo that the Bank rate had been lowered because the Bank believed that the economic situation in Japan had stabilized and the money rates could be operated in a flexible way.

He called upon financial institutions to continue their careful policy in supplying new loan issues.

B. Steel Expansion Plans: A spokesman for the Japan Iron and Steel Federation said in Tokyo on August 23 that the Japanese steel industry was considering a plan to increase production of steel ingots to 49 million tons a year by 1970. This would be more than treble the present output and would make Japan the third largest steel producer after the United States and the Soviet Union.

In the plan, an upward revision had been made of a previous project, announced in 1959, to expand steel ingot production to 30 million tons by 1970.

During 1959, the Japanese steel industry produced 16,623,000 tons of steel ingots, which showed an increase of 37 per cent over 1958. By this increase, Japan became the fifth among the world's steel producing nations.

A. New Cabinet Personnel: The Prime Minister, Dr. John M. Chang completed the formation of his Cabinet and presented its members to the President, Yoon Bo Sun, on August 23.

Most of the members belong to Dr. Chang's "new faction" within the Democratic Party, as the Prime Minister's efforts to bring in representatives of the "old guard" in the party were not successful. The "old guard" refused co-operation and even threatened to break away from the party and form a new Conservative opposition.

The composition of the new Cabinet was as follows:

Dr. John M. Chang—Prime Minister;
Mr. Il Hyung Chung—Foreign Affairs;
Mr. Ik Pyon Hong—Home Affairs;
Mr. Suk Ho Hyun—Defence;
Mr. Yung Sun Kim—Finance;

LEBANON

A. Arab Foreign Ministers' And Arab League Council Meetings: The Foreign Ministers of the Arab League countries began their meeting at Shtaura (near Beirut) on August 23.

As occasion demanded, they also met as the Arab League Council.

[Jordan had been insisting that her differences with the United Arab Republic be discussed first, but the Foreign Ministers feared that there might be a crisis over this issue, particularly after a broadcast on August 21 by UAR Radio. The broadcast had urged the people of Jordan to get rid of their "treacherous rulers as the people and Army of Iraq did".]

The agenda of the Conference included: (1) Re-organization of the Palestine refugees and creating a Palestine entity as a unified people; (2) Creation of a Palestine Army in Arab countries which are at present hosts for Palestine refugees; and (3) Iran's recognition of Israel.

On August 23, the Algerian "Provisional Government" called upon the Arab League member-countries to break off diplomatic relations with France in support of the five-year-old war of the Algerian nationalists against that country.

The Algerian Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Karim Belkacem, who attended the Arab League Foreign Ministers' Conference at Shtaura, in a memorandum submitted to the Conference, requested the convening of an Arab "summit" meeting in the near future to discuss aid to Algerian nationalists, withdrawal of all French troops from the Arab countries of Tunisia and Morocco, despatch of volunteers to fight the French in Algeria and total "diplomatic and social boycott of France at United Nations".

He also called for action to secure a referendum in Algeria under United Nations supervision.

Resolution On Algeria:

The Arab League Council unanimously approved a resolution on Algeria on August 24.

The resolution planned to help volunteers to join the nationalist "Algerian Liberation Army" from all the Arab countries.

It resolved to exert efforts with United Nations at its next session so that it should itself supervise self-determination in Algeria.

The Arab League countries would increase diplomatic efforts with friendly Powers—especially in Asia and Africa—to speed the recognition of the Algerian "Provisional Government."

The Arab League countries would explain to NATO Powers "the serious results arising from France's utilization of NATO arms and equipment in her aggressive, imperialist operations in Algeria."

The Arab League Foreign Ministers were to contact their Governments with regard to other demands made by the Algerian insurgents—including the question of the severance of relations with France.

The Arab League Council decided not to put into immediate operation the request of the Algerian "Provisional Government" (GPRA) for a diplomatic rupture with France and a trade boycott of that country.

The Council referred the matter to the next meeting of Arab League Foreign Ministers scheduled to take place after the United Nations General Assembly, due to open on September 20.

Arab Co-operation:

In a communique on August 26, the Arab Foreign Ministers announced that they had agreed on steps to smooth out strained relations and promote co-operation among the Arab countries.

Among the steps was the necessity to increase efforts to create an atmosphere of understanding among the Arab countries and to avoid any actions which would spoil brotherly relations among them. If this could be implemented, it would bring about an important change in Arab relations, particularly between UAR and Jordan.

The communique stressed the need to abide by international law and Arab traditions regarding the granting of political asylum. It pin-pointed the provision that political refugees must refrain from acts which would spoil relations among the Arab countries and said that it would deprive violators of asylum.

It also announced agreement to continue with the present Charter of the Arab League but to study its modifications.

Palestine Problem:

Two Palestine leaders, each claiming to represent Palestinian refugees, went before the Arab League Foreign Ministers' Conference on August 25 with conflicting claims to leadership.

Alhaj Amin al Husseini, a former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and head of the Arab-Higher Committee on Palestine, urged the Foreign Ministers to let the 1,000,000 Palestinians guide their efforts to regain the former territory now claimed by Israel.

He said that these refugees, many of whom now lived in Jordan, should be allowed to chart their own future, "exactly as the Algerians are handling their own business."

But a separate plea came from Mr. Munir Rayes on behalf of the Palestinians now living in the UAR-administered Gaza strip. Mr. Rayes claimed representation for all refugees.

The Conference's thorniest problem—the future of Palestine—came up for discussion against a backdrop of Jordanian threats to walk out. Jordan opposed any action to reform Palestinian refugees into a separate State.

Moroccan sources said that the Conference passed the resolution specifying that political refugees should not be allowed to take part in political moves detrimental to other Arab States in hopes that it would bring Tunisia back into the League.

The Arab League Foreign Ministers ended their Conference on August 28 without reaching any agreement on the issue of a "Palestinian entity" and the formation of a Palestine Army.

According to reports from Shtaura the views of UAR and Iraq on the one hand and of Jordan on the other were so wide apart that even a discussion of the question was not possible.

The Foreign Ministers could only re-affirm their earlier resolutions re-iterating the Palestine people's right to recover the Israeli-controlled part of Palestine with the help of other Arab countries.

The Conference achieved one tangible result—it ended the violent radio and Press attacks carried on by UAR and Jordan against each other.

During the discussions on the last day of the Conference, Jordan contended that there was no question of discussing a "Palestine entity" until a land link was established between Gaza and the west bank of the Jordan river.

This, Jordan said, was possible only by a war with Israel and reclaiming the areas between Gaza and Jordan, occupied by Israel.

Jordan suggested that military measures should be undertaken under her supervision. Both UAR and Iraq did not agree to put the Arab Palestine Army under the control of Jordan.

PAKISTAN

A. Border Agreement With Iran: An Agreement on the administration of the Pakistan-Iran border was signed in Tehran on August 21.

The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. Akhtar Hussein, who signed the Agreement for his country said at the signing ceremony: "I am confident that this Agreement will eventually prove of great benefit for the welfare of the inhabitants of border areas on both sides.

"Indeed, I might say that the signing of this Agreement has forged yet another link in the ever-lengthening chain of amity and friendly collaboration that binds our two nations."

B. Loan Over-subscribed: The Government floated a new loan of Rs. 10 crores on August 23 carrying interest at 3¼ per cent and redeemable in 1965. The loan was over-subscribed and closed on the same day.

It was stated that the success of the loan would produce a healthy anti-inflationary effect on the economy of the country.

Investment in the loan was shared by the Central and Provincial Governments.

C. Former Ministers Disqualified Under Elective Bodies Disqualification Order: Between January and the end of August, 1960, a number of former Cabinet Ministers and others were disqualified under the Elective Bodies Disqualification Order (EBDO).

All of them were debarred by Tribunals from entering public life for six years on charges of corruption and misuse of public funds.

[Under EBDO, they could not be candidates for membership of any elective body either in West Pakistan or East Pakistan, as the case may be, for six years.]

Among those disqualified were: Khan Iftikhar Hussain Khan of Mamdot and Mr. Mumtaz Hassan Qizilbash, two former West Pakistan Ministers; Mr. Abdus Sattar Pirzada, former Pakistan Cabinet Minister; Mr. Ataur Rahman Khan, former head of the East Pakistan Awami League-Congress Coalition Cabinet; Mian Mumtaz Daultana, leader of the now defunct Muslim League; Mr. Abdul Hakim, Speaker of the dissolved East Pakistan Legislative Assembly; Mr. Feroz Khan Noon, former Prime Minister of Pakistan; Mr. Pravas Chandra Lahiri, former Minister of East Pakistan; Mr. Basanta Kumar Das, a leader of the dissolved Pakistan National Congress; Mr. Trailokyanath Chakravarty, President of the dissolved Pakistan Socialist Party; Mr. Abu Hussain Sarkar, former Chief Minis-

TURKEY

A. Ten Cabinet Ministers Dismissed: It was officially announced in Ankara on August 25 that ten members of General Cemal Gursel's Provisional Military Cabinet had been dismissed by the Committee of National Unity.

[The Cabinet was formed after the military coup d'etat on May 27, which ousted the regime of Mr. Adnan Menderes.]

A member of the Committee of National Union told newsmen that the Ministers were discharged because their programme was "not satisfactory in the eyes of the Committee."

The Ministers were: Mr. Sefik Inam, Minister of State; Mr. Abdullah Gojubuyuk, Minister of Justice; Mr. Danis Keper, Minister of Public Works; Mr. Cihat Iren, Minister of Trade; Professor Nusret Karasu, Minister of Health; Mr. Feridun Ustun, Minister of Agriculture; Professor Cahit Talas, Minister of Labour; Mr. Muhtar Uluer, Minister of Industries; Mr. Zuhtu Tarhan, Minister of Press and Tourism; and Mr. Orhan Kubat, Minister of Construction.

The spokesman added that the Ministers were "excused" from their duties but the translation from the Turkish phrase, vanifenden affedilidi, also means "dismissed".

The non-party Cabinet set up after the coup was appointed to remain in office until a new Government could be formed.

Only seven Ministers, besides General Cemal Gursel, who is Prime Minister and also Head of State, remained in the Cabinet.

The Ministers remaining in the Cabinet were: Mr. Amil Artus, Minister of State; General Muharrem Imsan Kijilogu, Minister of the Interior; Mr. Selim Sarper, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Mr. Ekrem Alican, Minister of Finance; Mr. Fehmi Yavuz, Minister of Education; Mr. Fathi Askin, Minister of Customs; and General Sitki Ulay, Minister of Communications.

General Gursel told newsmen in Ankara that most of the key posts in the Ministry remained in the same hands as before, and these Ministers now had new responsibilities.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Trial And Sentence Of U-2 Pilot; Geneva Conference On Nuclear Test Ban; UN Budget For 1961; IAEA And UNESCO Annual Reports; UN Congress On Crime Detection; World Congress On Energy; Disarmament Commission Meeting.

A. Trial And Sentence Of Francis Gary Powers: The trial of Francis Gary Powers, pilot of the U-2 American spy-plane, which was shot down over the Soviet Union on May 1, began in Moscow on August 17.

The trial by Court Martial was before three Judges. The President of the Court was Maj.-Gen. Victor Borisoglebsky, Head of the Justice Division and President of the Military College of the USSR Supreme Court.

The other two members of the Court Martial were Artillery Brigadier-General D. Vorobiev and Air Force Brigadier-General Alexander Zakharov.

The trial was attended by Powers' parents, Mr. Oliver Powers and Mrs. Ida Powers, and by his wife, Mrs. Barbara Powers.

In the Press gallery, there were 150 foreign and Soviet correspondents representing 30 wire services and over 90 newspapers in 30 countries.

A show-case in the Court hall contained exhibits, including aerial photographic equipment and radio devices said to have been installed in the U-2 spy-plane, a tape-recorder, a parachute, a pressurized flying suit, a pistol and a poison pin.

The prosecutor, Mr. Romain Rudenko, took an hour and ten minutes to read the indictment.

At the end of the indictment, Powers pleaded "guilty" to the charge of espionage under Russia's "law of criminal responsibility for State crimes".

He told the Court that he knew the 1960 flight had resulted in the wrecking of the Paris 'Summit' meeting and said that he sincerely regretted his part in it.

He described how he was signed on with the United States Central Intelligence Agency, how he flew the plane with a special device to confuse detection and how he was shot down at an altitude his Commander believed was beyond the reach of anti-aircraft fire.

He said he was given a poison pin to kill himself if tortured after being caught. But he had not been tortured, but treated well—"much better than I expected."

Powers' defence counsel, Mr. Mikhail Grinev, asked him whether he was consulted about the US programme of spy flights over the Soviet Union.

He replied: "No, I knew of no such programme".

He said he had felt nervous and scared when he made his flight 1,200 to 1,300 miles deep into Soviet territory on May 1. He had taken off from Adana in Turkey on his way to Peshawar in Pakistan and had made one stop on the way. He did not know where it was, but there were British personnel there. He believed it to be Bahrein in the Persian Gulf. On his flight across the Soviet Union he had flown at an altitude of about 68,000 feet. He was told that it was absolutely safe and at such an altitude he would not be shot down.

Asked why he was scared during the flight, he replied: "Well, just the idea of flying over the Soviet Union. It was not something I would like to do every day."

He said that the end of his flight came when he had just finished making a turn. "I heard and perhaps felt a sort of hollow-sounding explosion. It seemed to be behind me and I could also see an orange coloured light."

Questioned about identification marks on his plane, he said he could not be positive that there were no marks.

When he was reminded that at the preliminary interrogation he had stated that he did not see identification marks, he replied: "I did not see."

Mr. Rudenko asked: "In your statement you said that not having seen any identification marks, you were not aware of its national identity. The absence of identity marks on the plane was to the advantage of the person who sent this plane on this mission?"

Powers replied: "I don't remember. I just don't understand this question."

Mr. Rudenko observed that the question whether the plane bore any identification marks could be left to experts to determine.

He was asked what objectives he was given in making his flight over the Soviet Union.

He replied: "My objective was to follow the route of the map and turning on the designated equipment at the places designated."

He said that during his flight, he carried out the instructions given him and also took notes on the weather.

Powers answered a number of questions about the effect of his flight on the Paris "Summit" meeting.

When asked by the presiding judge whether it had occurred to him that the flight might torpedo the "Summit" meeting and provoke a conflict, he replied that his job was to carry out orders. He added: "People who sent me should think of these things."

Asked about the flight and the purpose of the equipment he was carrying, he said that when he arrived at Peshawar airport, the Pakistan authorities appeared to know about the flight in advance.

In reply to another question, he said he had learned that he would have to fly over Soviet territory some six or seven months after he had signed the contract with the Central Intelligence Agency.

His counsel then asked him whether he was given the poison pin on his previous flight.

Powers replied that this happened for the first time during the preparation for the flight over the Soviet Union.

During the morning session of the Court on August 18, Powers answered the questions put by his own lawyer, the prosecutor, and the assessors.

He also heard the evidence of farmers who found him when he baled out and expressed his thanks to them.

However, he clashed twice with Soviet experts over their testimony.

First, he challenged the evidence that there was no identity marking on the plane. The second exchange concerned the silent pistol which Powers carried. He said this was strictly for hunting. He claimed: "I could not kill a person even to save my own life."

Powers told the Court that he thought his mission had done the United States an ill-service.

Experts told the Court that the photographic equipment of the plane could photograph a strip of Soviet territory 125 miles wide for a distance of 2,170 miles. This equipment, in fact took photographs of industrial and military objectives from a point west of Tashkent up to a region near Sverdlovsk, where the flight was suddenly cut short. The photographing was done through seven trap doors.

Powers admitted in the Court that the main purpose of his flight over the Soviet Union apparently was to detect Soviet rocket-launching sites.

He said that the Pakistan air authorities were aware of American U-2 plane flights in 1959, and this year they had presumably authorized them.

He also thought that he had violated Afghanistan's air-space on the U-2 flight.

Powers' Plea For Leniency:

Powers made a last plea to the Court for leniency.

He said: "You have heard all the evidence of the case and you must decide what my punishment is to be.

"I realise that I have committed a most grave crime and deserve punishment. I ask the Court to weigh all the circumstances and take into account not only the fact that I had committed the crime but also the circumstances which induced me to do that.

"I ask the Court to take into account that no secret data and information went through the channels they were supposed to go. All of them landed in the hands of the Soviet authorities.

"I realise that the Russians regard me as an enemy. But I should like to stress that personally I do not have and never had any enmity for the Russian people.

"I ask the Court to judge me not as an enemy of the Russian people, a man who never before had faced a court on any charge whatsoever and who deeply realizes his guilt. Thank you."

Powers Sentenced To Ten Years:

On August 19, Powers was sentenced to 10 years loss of liberty for espionage. He was to spend the first three years in prison.

[It is normal in the Soviet Union for a prisoner to spend part of his sentence in jail and the rest in a work camp.]

A few minutes after the verdict, Powers was re-united with his wife and parents in a room behind the Court hall.

Earlier, the State prosecutor, Mr. R. Rudenko, had demanded a 15-year prison sentence for Powers.

He said that Powers was liable to the death penalty, but added: "I have every reason to ask for the supreme punishment for the accused. But, taking into consideration his sincere repentance, I do not insist on the death sentence and I ask that he be sentenced to 15 years in prison".

He said that the real intention of the U-2 flight was a pretext for wrecking the East-West 'Summit' meeting scheduled for two weeks after the U-2 flight on May 1.

He said that the trial revealed not only the crime of Powers "but also completely reveals the criminal, aggressive action of the ruling circles of the United States, the true inspirers and organizers of the monstrous crimes directed against the peace and security of the people".

He added that the events that followed showed that the US Government intended to use the provocatory intrusion of the U-2 plane to break up the 'Summit' meeting, push the world back into a state of 'cold war', exacerbate international tensions and freeze the Great Powers' talks on disarmament. The sentence on Powers would once again convincingly reveal before the world the criminal aggressive policy of the United States. It would play a part in the struggle of the forces of peace against the forces of aggression.

He said that the evidence tendered by Powers proved that the organization and execution of spy flights over the Soviet Union was done under the direction of the United States Intelligence Office. It had been ordered and sanctioned by the US Government and the US President.

He recalled that Powers had said in his evidence that he had flown a U-2 plane from a US Air Force base near Wiesbaden (West Germany) to a US Air Force base at Plattsburg in New York State. "This shows once more that American U-2 planes were based on the territory of West Germany and made flights from that territory. However, the Adenauer Government did not even find it necessary to lodge a protest in this connexion with the US Government, as other NATO States did".

It was hypocrisy on the part of President Eisenhower, the Vice-President of the United State, Mr. Richard Nixon and the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, to claim that the U-2 flight and the flights preceding it were not for aggressive purposes but merely defence measures.

The Defence Counsel, Mr. M. Grinev, in his address said that he intended to present arguments which gave him grounds to ask for leniency.

He observed that the people really responsible for the crime committed by Powers were not in the dock.

Since Powers had fully pleaded guilty, he would challenge neither the facts of the charges against Powers nor the appraisal of the crime given by the State Prosecutor.

By revealing State secrets of the United States, punishable in that country with 10 years' imprisonment or a fine of $10,000, Powers had come into sharp conflict with his employers.

He told the Court that Powers had said to him: "If I return to the United States, I would probably be put on trial again, but it is not very likely that I will return there."

Summary Of Judgment:

The following is a summary of the judgment.

"The materials of the case examined during the Court hearings showed the ill-designed nature of Powers' flight into the territory of the Soviet Union. This flight was fraught with disastrous consequences for universal peace in this age of thermo-nuclear weapons.

"The examination of the debris of the downed U-2 plane established the fact that the aircraft was made in the United States and specially designed for high altitude espionage flights. The defendant, Powers, testified in detail about his espionage activities and the circumstances connected with his intrusion into the Soviet Union.

"The Court established that in April, 1958 Powers was recruited by the US Central Intelligence Agency for special intelligence missions in high altitude aircraft. The American Detachment 10-10, where Powers served, was a special combination of United States military and civilian intelligence and was intended for espionage against the Soviet Union with the help of intelligence planes sent into Soviet air-space.

"Starting from 1958, Powers carried on, as assigned by the Commander of the 10-10 Detachment, systematic spy flights along the Soviet Union's frontiers with Turkey, Iran and Afghanistan.

"Flying over Soviet territory, he was to switch on his special equipment for aerophotography and registration of the operation of Soviet anti-aircraft defence radar stations at certain points in USSR.

"He was to pay special attention to two spots. In one of them, the American intelligence supposed the presence of missile launching sites and in the other a particularly important defence objective.

"Development of the rescued films established that he photographed industrial and military objectives in the Soviet Union. He tape-recorded the impulses of certain radar stations of the Soviet Union with a view to detecting the anti-aircraft defence system of USSR.

"Considering the modern level of military techniques, when certain States possessing atomic and hydrogen weapons are able to deliver them quickly to the target, the flight of an intelligence plane over Soviet territory could directly precede a military attack. This menace is even more concrete now that the United States of America, as stated by American Generals, constantly keeps H-bomber patrols in the air, ready to strike at marked out targets in the Soviet Union.

"Under these circumstances, the aggressive acts of the United States, perpetrated by the defendant, Powers, on May 1, created a menace to universal peace.

"Subsequent developments confirmed that the aggressive intrusion of the U-2 plane in the air-space of the Soviet Union had been deliberately prepared by the reactionary forces of the United States of America with a view to torpedoing the Paris 'Summit' Conference, preventing relaxation of international tensions and reviving the senile 'cold war' policy hated by all peoples.

"Assessing all the circumstances of this case with profound conviction of their interrelation, taking into account Powers' open-hearted confession of his guilt and his sincere repentance, proceeding from the principles of Socialist humaneness, the Military Collegium of the USSR Supreme Court sentences Powers to 10 years of confinement, with the first three years to be served in prison."

her husband was delivered at the Kremlin on August 22 by her lawyer, Mr. Frank Rogers.

In Washington, President D. D. Eisenhower said that if the Soviet Union was trying to use the trial of Powers to condemn the United States before world opinion, then she had no case whatsoever.

He said that the number of Soviet spies the United States had caught proved to the world that Russia was in no position to point an accusing finger at anybody.

He deplored the severity of the sentence on Powers and extended sympathy to the members of Powers' family.

He protested against Soviet refusal to allow American officials to see Powers before his trial. He said that this was against international law.

He added that he did not think there was any evidence that Powers had been brainwashed.

The US State Department announced in Washington that Powers would continue to be paid by the US Government during his 10-year sentence and would not be prosecuted on his return to the United States after completing his sentence.

It said that provision had been made "for continuing compensation" for Powers while he was held in the Soviet Union. Arrangements had also been made "to provide for his wife."

[Powers was reported to be receiving $2,900 a month when he was shot down over the Soviet Union on May 1.]

Soviet Union Brings U-2 And RB-47 Plane Incidents Before United Nations:

In a document published on August 22, the Soviet Union formally brought the U-2 and RB-47 plane incidents before the UN General Assembly.

The Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, proposed that the UN Assembly debate an item entitled: "The menace to world peace created by aggressive actions of USA against the Soviet Union."

In an explanatory memorandum, he set out the relevant facts about the U-2 spy-plane incident of May 1 and the RB-47 reconnaisance plane shot down over the Barents Sea on July 1.

B. Geneva Conference On Nuclear Test Ban: The talks in Geneva between USA, Great Britain and the Soviet Union on the cessation of nuclear weapons tests adjourned for a term of five weeks on August 22.

As the talks recessed, USA alleged that the main impediment to a Treaty, after 22 months of negotiations, was failure to agree on an adequate and effective system of controls and inspection.

On the other hand, the Soviet Union put the blame for failure on "militaristic circles."

Below is a chronology of events related to the Geneva talks on the cessation of nuclear weapons tests:

August 22, 1958: President D. D. Eisenhower (USA) proposed that the United States, the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union negotiate for an Agreement to ban nuclear weapons tests under international control. He said that USA would suspend such tests for one year from the beginning of the negotiations if USSR would do likewise. Mr. Eisenhower's offer came one day after the successful conclusion of a meeting in Geneva of scientific experts, also proposed by the United States, which agreed that a nuclear weapons test ban was technically feasible.

August 30, 1958: USA proposed the convocation of a Conference between USA, UK and the Soviet Union on an international nuclear test ban. This was accepted by the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, in Notes delivered to USA and UK.

October 31, 1958: Talks began in Geneva with a clear division indicating Western and Soviet view-points. The Soviet delegate pressed for an immediate and universal cessation of nuclear tests for all time, while the United States, announcing cessation of US tests on a year-to-year basis, underlined the need for arms control measures.

November 5-11, 1958: The deadlock at Geneva continued, but the Soviet delegate agreed to discuss test control and monitoring system, provided the West gave tentative approval to Soviet proposals for test prohibition.

November 18, 1958: USA and the United Kingdom dropped their demand for a single Treaty embodying a test cessation agreement and creation of an effective control system. Discussions for a Treaty thus began on the basis of two drafts, one submitted by USSR and the other by the United States, the latter again under-scoring the necessity for a phased establishment of a control system.

January 13, 1959: The then US Secretary of State, Mr. John Foster Dulles, reported that the test detection system recommended by the Experts Conference in Geneva in 1958 might not be able to detect smaller nuclear tests carried out in violation of a test ban Treaty. This report was based on the tests carried out by the US Atomic Energy Commission in underground detonations made in Nevada in 1958 prior to the cessation of US tests.

January 19, 1959: The United States and Britain, in a concession to Soviet Russia, dropped their earlier demand that the duration of the test ban Treaty be conditioned on progress in other fields of disarmament.

January 20, 1959: The three nuclear Powers began discussion on detailed plans for an international control and inspection system to detect Treaty violations.

January 22, 1959: USA rejected the Soviet charge that the West was looking for an excuse to torpedo the test ban talks and challenged USSR to make clear if she would agree to a system whereby: (1) there was no veto of inspection; (2) observation teams were truly international; (3) teams have complete access to suspected test sites on both sides.

April 13, 1959: USA, supported by the United Kingdom, offered to enter into an Agreement to ban all nuclear test explosions in the lower atmosphere and underwater—a ban which would end explosions in the greatest radio-active fall-out which could be enforced without employing the control arrangements unacceptable to USSR. The Soviet delegate denounced the plan but agreed to study it.

April 20, 1959: USA made public a personal appeal by President D. D. Eisenhower to Mr. N. Khruschev on April 13 calling for a nuclear agreement to ban nuclear weapons tests on the Earth's surface and in the atmosphere to an altitude of 50 kilometres (31 miles). Mr. Khruschev rejected the proposal and offered instead to negotiate a ban based on a fixed annual quota of inspections of US, British and Soviet territory.

May 8-9, 1959: President D. D. Eisenhower and the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, in personal letters to Mr. N. Khruschev, requested additional information on the fixed quota proposal. Mr. Eisenhower urged an agreement to end atmosphere tests pending wider agreement.

June 30, 1959: The Soviet delegate informed the American and British delegates that he could not begin a detailed discussion of Mr. N. Khruschev's proposals of a fixed annual quota of nuclear test detection inspection, because it was a political question unrelated to scientific considerations.

August 26, 1959: The United States announced that she would not resume nuclear weapons tests for the rest of 1959 following a six-week recess of the Geneva talks. The recess was arranged as Mr. D. D. Eisenhower and Mr. N. Khruschev were to meet.

November 25, 1959: A working group consisting of USA-UK-USSR technical experts met to consider ways of improving detection of attempted secret underground nuclear tests in the case of evasion of a test ban Treaty.

December 18, 1959: The meeting of experts on underground test detection broke up in disagreement.

December 20, 1959: The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, returned to America while the Conference was in recess between December 19 to January 12, 1960. He blamed the Soviet attitude for failure of the talks to conclude an agreement. The Russians in turn blamed the West.

December 29, 1959: Noting that the talks had dragged on for 14 months without agreement, Mr. Eisenhower said that USA felt free to resume nuclear tests, but would not do so without announcing her intention in advance. He called Soviet experts "politically guided" and characterized their statements in the Technical Conference as "intemperate and technically unsupportable."

February 11, 1960: The United States offered to join in an East-West Treaty banning all controllable and detectable nuclear tests and to enter in a programme of research for systematically extending the ban to underground testing which may not now be detectable. The Soviet delegate rejected the US plan, but offered instead a plan whereby the Soviet Union would open her territory to a relatively small number of inspections where a seismic event was deemed suspicious by Western standards. This would be coupled with a total ban agreement.

March 10, 1960: The Soviet Union accepted Mr. Eisenhower's plan banning undetectable nuclear weapons explosions, conditioned on a joint pledge (without controlling inspection) to suspend the detonation of nuclear devices for four or five years. The West promised to study the Russian counter-offer.

March 29, 1960: In a joint statement after their talks at Camp David in the United States, Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Macmillan accepted the Soviet counter-offer on the condition that USSR accepted in advance strict inspection and control Treaty provisions and entered into a joint research programme on the improvement of underground test detection. Both the leaders promised unilateral voluntary cessation of underground tests below 4.75 seismic reading, once a Treaty was signed.

April 14, 1960: Russia accepted the Eisenhower-Macmillan offer and called it an encouraging step. Both sides agreed to set up joint research programmes for improving detection of underground tests.

May 3, 1960: USSR accepted a Western proposal for joint underground detonations as part of an East-West scientific programme to improve detection methods. But the Russian delegate repeated the Soviet demand for a four to five-year moratorium on other nuclear tests while research continued. He repeated his country's stand that only a small number of "politically determined" annual quota of on-site inspections would be accepted under a test ban Treaty.

May 9, 1960: The Soviet delegation objected to the American plan to detonate nuclear devices (not weapons) in their VELA programme. He said that the US underground tests were improper as long as American and Soviet delegates were negotiating on a formula for similar tests under joint control.

May 18, 1960: Following the abortive 'Summit' Conference in Paris, Mr. Khruschev told a news conference in Moscow that the test ban talks in Geneva would continue, "but if Mr. Eisenhower threatens that he will continue testing, then we, too, will follow suit."

May 27, 1960: The UN Security Council called on the nuclear Powers to resume negotiations on disarmament and a nuclear tests ban.

The Geneva talks were resumed on May 27, 1960 after a two-week recess prior to which the United States presented a three-stage plan for establishing a nuclear control and inspection system which, in six years, would extend throughout the world.

June 2, 1960: The American offer to ensure that USA was not using her 12 projected tests for weapons purposes was rejected by the Soviet Union. The Russians insisted that their Observers should be given full right to examine the devices used in this test series.

June 27, 1960: An American invitation to Soviet scientific experts to attend an underground non-nuclear explosion, designed to explore peaceful uses of nuclear detonations was rejected by Russia.

July 12, 1960: USA proposed a pooling of obsolete nuclear devices to be contributed by the parties to the proposed Treaty to form the basis for a co-ordinated research programme to improve research methods for low-yield underground nuclear blasts.

July 25, 1960: The Chairman of the US Atomic Energy Commission, Mr. John McCone, said that the United States might have to resume underground nuclear tests on her own.

July 26, 1960: The Soviet Union agreed to permit three on-site inspections on Soviet territory under the proposed test ban, provided she was allowed three in Britain and three in the United States annually.

The West rejected the offer as totally unrealistic. Earlier, USA had proposed about 20 annual inspections of larger, suspicious events occurring in the Soviet Union; and a further number of inspections required for small yield shocks below a seismic measurement level of 4.75.

August 2, 1960: The Soviet Union rejected the US plan of July 12. The Russian delegate said that his country would not furnish nuclear devices for a research pool, since she did not intend to take part in the proposed research programme.

August 4, 1960: USA and Russia agreed on the language of the Membership clause, America contending that the Soviet proposal would require the Control Commission to make decisions as to whether the applicant is a "State". USA would extend membership to an applicant whether it be a "State" or "authority", opening membership to all de facto regimes.

August 9, 1960: The US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, told a news conference in Washington that America was free to conduct underground nuclear tests in the face of continued Soviet "stalling" at Geneva. He said that the Conference had dragged on so long that it amounted to a moratorium to the profit of the Soviet Union.

August 17, 1960: Mr. Eisenhower told a news conference in Washington that nothing would satisfy him more than an accord on the cessation of nuclear weapons tests. He added that after more than 240 meetings, the Russians seemed to be resisting major proposals governing on-site inspection and staffing of control posts.

The Conference was to meet again on September 27.

C. Disarmament Commission Meeting: In a communication to the Chairman of the UN Disarmament Commission, Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo (Mexico) on August 5, the US delegate to United Nations, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, proposed a UN appeal for the resumption of East-West negotiations on disarmament.

Mr. Lodge said that USA was fully in accord with the proposal that the 82-nation Disarmament Commission should meet on or about August 15.

He said that the US disarmament proposals put forward at the Geneva talks would be repeated in the Commission in the belief that these provided a basis for further negotiations with the communists.

It was not the intention of USA, he said, to request decisions regarding specific measures of disarmament. "We believe that the most constructive outcome of the Disarmament Commission meeting would be a resolution which registers the Commission's desire for prompt resumption of negotiations."

India's Opposition:

India was reported on August 6 not to be in favour of the immediate convening of the 82-nation Disarmament Commission proposed by USA.

In a letter to Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo, India was understood to have expressed the view that in the absence of any new factor lending urgency to the question, she would prefer a discussion in the UN General Assembly as the question had already been included in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly. This was particularly so because that would give time "for further study and reflection and because all countries will be represented at that time by high-level delegations."

At the same time, India would not object to the Commission being convened if the general consensus favoured such a session. The date for such a session, in her opinion, however, should be close to that of the General Assembly session, and not about August 15, as proposed by the United States, to suit the convenience of countries situated like her.

Soviet Opposition:

The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, said on August 9 that he was willing to go to New York to attend the UN General Assembly's disarmament discussions.

In answer to a question put by the Editorial Board of the Soviet Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, he said that he would deem it a great honour to represent Russia at the General Assembly's disarmament debate.

He added that the Soviet Government had not yet discussed the composition of its delegation to the General Assembly, but from the Soviet proposals it emerged that the delegation would be led by Heads of States or Heads of Governments.

The Soviet Government had proposed discussion of the disarmament question at the General Assembly because of the "disquieting situation created through the fault of USA and other Western Powers." The Western Powers had so far shown that they did not wish to reach an agreement on disarmament. The Soviet Union did not want to contribute to a continuance of "sterile discussions" which would maintain the armaments race and the danger of a nuclear war.

Asked about the US proposal to convene the 82-nation Disarmament Commission, he said that the Soviet Union would be "ready to participate in the meetings of the Commission" if it had not already seen through the "sad experience" of how the three Western Powers had acted during the Geneva 10-nation Disarmament Committee meetings.

"It seems apparent," he added, "that the United States is seeking to exert pressure on other nations to drag them again into sterile discussions and to avoid, by the same token, bringing the problem up for broader discussion before the UN General Assembly."

The US proposal for a meeting of the UN Disarmament Commission was only "a manoeuvre" which some aggressive American circles needed in order to fool the voters in the forthcoming Presidential elections. It was only aimed at indefinitely postponing the solution of the disarmament problem. If USA managed to obtain the agreement of other States for the convening of the Commission, it would only be regrettable, for it would not bring any nearer the solution to the problem.

Commission Meeting:

The 82-nation Disarmament Commission met at UN Headquarters on August 16.

In his speech, the Chairman of the Commission, Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo (Mexico) said that Russian participation in the meeting represented a recognition of the paramount importance of disarmament.

[Despite earlier opposition to the convocation of the Disarmament Commission, Russia attended the session.]

Dr. Nervo said that the UN General Assembly's resolution on disarmament, the suspension of nuclear weapons tests and prevention of wider dissemination of nuclear weapons had created "a truce in the 'cold war' and set up an atmosphere propitious for urgent negotiations on an agreement on disarmament which would be satisfactory to all the States concerned."

He spoke of the role of the smaller and "middle-size" nations in the disarmament picture and said that these States wanted the Great Powers to turn their attention to competition in granting prosperity to the greatest number and to the quest for victory over ignorance and disease.

The US delegate, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, asked the Soviet Union to agree to a complete cut-off in the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes.

When this had been done, he said, USA and the Soviet Union might each set aside 30,000 kilograms of uranium-235 for peaceful purposes. If the Soviet Union was not prepared to join in a plan of this kind, then USA would be prepared to join Russia in a step-by-step close-down of plants producing enriched uranium and plutonium. The United States was prepared to end the production of fissionable material on a reciprocal basis with the Soviet Union.

He said that the transfer of 30,000 kilograms of uranium-235 by USA and a similar amount by the Soviet Union for peaceful uses would mean an immediate and sizeable reduction in the nuclear threat. Such an amount, if used in modern nuclear weapons, would generate an explosive force well over 1,000 times greater than that of all the highly explosive bombs dropped in World War II.

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Vasily Kuznetsov, said that this meeting of the Commission was a 'farce'. The United States had taken the initiative in convening the meeting as part of her campaign to place responsibility on the Soviet Union and other socialist countries for the break-up of the Geneva negotiations.

General and complete disarmament, he said, was the most important and most urgent problem facing the world and on a solution of this problem depended the issue whether mankind would go towards peace or war.

He said that USA and her allies in military blocs and military agreements had been unwilling to adhere to a course which would lead to general and complete disarmament. They had begun an arms race and were applying all their efforts to prevent the implementation of any concrete measures for disarmament. Disarmament could be moved from its "dead centre" if USA and her partners rejected their "theatrical manoeuvres designed to conceal their arms race, which can only lead to catastrophic consequences and the death of millions and millions of human beings and the destruction of culture built up over the centuries."

He urged the Commission to re-affirm the concept of general and complete disarmament adopted by the General Assembly in 1959 and to recognize the importance of an all-round examination of the problem at the next General Assembly meeting, with the participation of Heads of States or Heads of Governments.

He thought that without the prohibition of all atomic and nuclear weapons, there was no point in ceasing the production of fissionable material.

The Canadian delegate, Mr. Howard Green, suggested that there should be a neutral Chairman for the 10-nation Disarmament Committee.

M. Armand Berard (France) said that the Commission must recommend prompt resumption of conversations which were interrupted at Geneva in June, 1960.

Six-Nation Resolution:

On August 17, a six-nation resolution sponsored by India, United Arab Republic, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Mexico and Ecuador was introduced by Mr. C. S. Jha (India).

The resolution called for continued efforts to achieve complete and general disarmament and recommended that the next UN General Assembly give earnest consideration to the question of disarmament.

It expressed regret that the Geneva negotiations had not yielded positive results and re-affirmed the continuing and ultimate responsibility of United Nations in the field of disarmament.

It proposed that the Commission continue meeting and be convened whenever necessary.

Mr. Jha told the Commission on August 18 that the problem of disarmament was "the greatest challenge of our time."

He said: "To say that the survival of the human race is at stake is not an academic statement but a grim prospect which we must bear in mind and which the collective wisdom of the nations of the world must earnestly endeavour to remove.

"Disarmament is the very root of the principles and purposes of United Nations."

He appealed to both sides not to apportion blame for past failures and underlined the responsibility of all countries, big and small, in finding a solution to the problem.

He said that the subject matter of disarmament should be thoroughly discussed at the forthcoming session of the UN General Assembly. Since the Assembly session was so near, he did not consider any substantive discussion of proposals made by USA or the Soviet Union would be appropriate or even useful at this stage.

The Disarmament Commission adopted the six-nation resolution on August 18.

The resolution was, however, revised on the suggestion of Canada to call for the earliest possible continuation of international negotiations to end the arms race.

The original draft would have asked only for "continued efforts" for an agreement on disarmament.

The Soviet Union endorsed the resolution which took account of Soviet objections to the revival of the Geneva 10-nation Disarmament Committee.

D. USA Recovers Another Space Capsule: The US Air Force successfully launched another Earth satellite, Discoverer XIV, on August 18 in an attempt to repeat the previous week's recovery of a space capsule.

Its successful launching came minutes after part of the US space research programme received a set-back when a communication satellite—Courier—blew up only 2½ minutes after leaving the launching pad at Cape Canaveral.

Discoverer XIV was circling the Earth once every 94½ minutes at a high point of 502 miles and a low point of 116 miles from the Earth. It carried a detachable capsule packed with instruments.

Two days after the launching, the satellite ejected the capsule which was caught in mid-air by a specially equipped plane about 300 miles north-west of Hawaii.

E. UN Budget For 1961: According to details of the Budget of United Nations for 1961 available on August 26, the expenses of the world Organization would amount to $67,453,750. This would be $4,300,000 more than the figure for 1960.

Net expenditures, after deducting income from various sources (staff assessment, sale of UN stamps and UN publications, gift shop, etc.), were placed at $55,401,970 compared with a net expenditure level of $51,463,200 for 1960.

In his foreword to the report on the Budget the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, warned that the resources of the Organization "appear to be reaching the limit of their absorptive capacity."

The margin, he said, had been reached. "If more is to be done within the existing level of these resources, then decisions will have to be faced regarding the continuance or discontinuance of some current activities."

He called attention to the cash position of the Organization, which, he said, could not be considered as "satisfactory." As of April 30, unpaid assessments for the regular budgets, the Working Capital Fund and the UN Emergency Force totalled $2,700,000, which was $1,000,000 more than in 1960.

Unless assessments now in arrears were paid, it was "quite probable" that borrowing from sources outside the regular Budget would again become necessary, as in 1959, when he had borrowed from the technical assistance and Special Fund accounts.

He noted that on May 9 he sent a special communication on this matter to all member-States. A report on the replies received, as well as a further report on the cash position, would be submitted to the General Assembly's forthcoming session.

The margin of difference in the 1961 estimates, as compared with those of earlier years, was not "truly significant" if the depreciation in the real value of money which had occurred in the intervening period was taken into account. "The margin of difference also lacks significance when viewed in the light of the developing activities of United Nations over ever-wider fields in response to the need faced by the Organization to expand the range of international co-operation."

The estimates for 1961, he added, reflected no more than the "inescapable responsibilities of the Organization which are inherent in the decisions of its principal organs and which must be matched in budgetary terms."

The principal need was for a strengthening of the staff "to meet in a positive and effective manner the rapidly developing work programmes in the economic and social fields where the need is evident and imperative."

He noted that so far, four special Conferences were scheduled for 1961—on diplomatic intercourse and immunities; on the adoption of a single convention on narcotic drugs; on the elimination or reduction of future state-lessness; and on solar energy, wind power and geothermic energy. Although no arrangements had yet been made to convene a Conference on outer space, he expressed the hope that such a conference would take place in 1961.

These special Conferences, along with the work load stemming from the normal pattern of conferences—which was "in no way diminished" as compared with earlier years, were likely to tax severely the resources of the Secretariat in 1961.

Concerning economic and social programmes and technical assistance, he noted the "first modest departure" from the policy of stabilization applied in earlier years, a policy which "could not be indefinitely maintained."

The increases in staff requirements were to be found in areas where further postponement of staff strengthening would have injured the quality of work requested by the governing organs. They were concentrated in the field of natural resources, development and industry, general economic analysis and in the work of the regional economic commissions.

Reference was also made to the changing character of the Secretariat's work in the economic and social fields as a result of recent developments, such as the prospects of handling some 45 projects of the Special Fund and the increasing use of Secretariat services "in the formulation of sound economic aid projects, especially in the newly-independent countries."

According to Budget estimates, the number of established staff posts in 1961 would be set at 3,934, an increase of 120 over the current year. Of the total, 1,807 would be professional posts and 2,177 would fall in the general service category (57 more posts). The estimates also provided for larger allocations to recruit local staff in UN offices other than New York and Geneva.

It was estimated that to provide in 1961 for the same level of staff approved for 1960, an additional amount of $8,53,000 would be needed. The proposal for strengthening the staff would account for the balance of $1,553,000 in a total budget increase of $2,406,000 for staff costs.

Mr. Hammarskjoeld called attention to the difficulty of obtaining qualified staff.

The increase in the estimates for 1961, he stated, reflected not so much the actual needs as the limitations which were encountered in the recruitment of qualified personnel under present conditions of employment. These were "in no sense adequate" to meet new requirements.

He suggested that he should have the necessary flexibility to recruit competent people for service at UN Headquarters or in the field, for determined periods.

Among the special expenses listed in the 1961 Budget was a sum of $100,000 for establishment of a Cancer Research Fund.

The General Assembly adopted a resolution in November, 1959 calling for the awarding of "suitable prizes" for the "most outstanding scientific research work to the causes and control of cancerous diseases." The United Nations prizes would have a total value of $100,000 and would be awarded, on the recommendation of the World Health Organization, during the next four years.

F. IAEA Annual Report: The annual Report of the International Atomic Energy Agency, released at UN Headquarters in the middle of August noted a steady growth in the provision of technical assistance to member-States and in the training of scientific and technical personnel.

The Report, which covered the period July 1, 1959 to June 30, 1960, also mentioned the steady expansion in the exchange of technical information, in the establishment of standards and measures for radiation protection and in technology for the use of radio-isotopes.

It predicted that the Agency's operations in the coming year would "continue in the main along the lines now established with some expansion, particularly in the domain of technical assistance and scientific information and support."

Missions of experts sent during the year to help member-States in planning or developing their atomic energy programmes brought the number of countries assisted in this way to 36. Smaller missions were sent to eight countries in connexion with specific technical assistance requests.

Requests for equipment and supplies from member-States under the Agency's 1960 programme far exceeded the $125,000 value approved in 1959. Equipment was procured for technical assistance projects in 13 countries.

The programme to lessen the shortage of technical and scientific personnel in the member-States, particularly in the less developed areas, was growing steadily. The award of 378 fellowships in the first half of 1960 brought the total granted since the beginning of this programme to 973. In addition, a number of special training courses were arranged and 15 professors were sent to member-States for visiting lectureships.

The practical applications of radio-isotopes and protection against radiation hazards provided the two main subjects for which the Agency allotted research grants to member-States. During the year ended June 30, 1960, 57 research contracts in various fields were placed with institutions in 24 member-States.

A research experiment was carried out in Vinca (Yugoslavia) in April, 1960 to measure the radiation exposure received by persons involved in a brief uncontrolled run of the zero-power reactor there in October, 1958.

In addition to financing outside research, the Agency conducted investigations for member-States in its own laboratory. The foundations of IAEA's functional laboratory near Vienna were laid in October, 1959. It is scheduled to be in operation early in 1961.

Panels of experts met during the year to consider the legal problems presented by radiation hazards on land and in the sea. Proposals for international standards regarding civil liability for nuclear damage on land were circulated to member-States for comment.

The Agency's work in reactor technology included a safety evaluation of a reactor in Switzerland. Steps were taken to meet similar requests regarding other reactors.

The Agency also looked into the economic aspects of the development of nuclear power. In particular, it was collaborating with the Finnish Government on a study regarding the possibilities of nuclear power in that country and was preparing a similar study requested by the Philippines Government.

It noted that the slow growth of demand for uranium for peaceful purposes had retarded the emergence of the Agency as a major supplier of nuclear fuel. A beginning in this direction was made, however, with the supply of three tons of natural uranium to Japan and a request from Finland for the supply of fuel for two small reactors was approved.

The Agency gave provisional approval to a set of principles and procedures to prevent the diversion of nuclear materials to military use. These safeguards would be submitted to the General Conference for its consideration.

The Agency continued to play a prominent role in facilitating the collection and exchange of technical information by convening scientific conferences and panels, issuing various publications and by extending library and documentation services. The volume of the Agency's technical publications was expected to double in 1960.

G. UNESCO Annual Report: The annual Report of UNESCO, released in New Delhi on August 26 indicated that the initiative taken by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in 1959-60 had placed the Organization on the eve of important changes expected to broaden its future tasks.

The Report cited UNESCO inquiries into the educational needs of Asia, tropical Africa and the Arab States, a campaign to save historical monuments in the Nile Valley threatened by construction of the Aswan High Dam and a survey of current trends of inquiry in the natural sciences, designed to assess past progress and open up new avenues of possible action.

It also drew attention to the far-reaching effects that the UN Special Fund was expected to have on UNESCO activities. In some projects, the Special Fund's resources would make possible "total change of scale, a crossing, at long last, of the borderline between....pilot projects and full-blown, lasting achievements."

[The UN Special Fund is helping to finance a number of economic development projects in which operations are being carried out by UNESCO as executing agency. Among such projects are a mechanical engineering research institute in India, technical training centres in Iran, Iraq, Laos and Lebanon and the Middle East Technical University in Turkey.]

The effect of the various new factors, none of which had emerged before 1959, "is already sufficiently marked" to make it likely that the UNESCO General Conference, opening on November 14 in Paris, would "have to consider new ways of enabling UNESCO to face the broader tasks which await it."

Besides outlining new developments, the Report reviewed progress in UNESCO's current programme, with stress on three "major projects," extension of primary education in Latin America, scientific research on problems of arid lands and promotion of mutual understanding of Oriental and Occidental cultural values.

UNESCO's inquiries into the educational needs of Asia, tropical African and the Arab countries led, among others to several findings.

In the Arab States, enrolment in primary schools and in universities was doubled since 1960, and secondary enrolments were three times as high in 1959 as in 1950. However, the rapid expansion led to a "certain lack of balance": for every 100 children enrolled in primary schools there were 16 in secondary schools and only 2 in vocational or technical schools.

The Report described a UNESCO project, undertaken at the request of the United Arab Republic and Sudan, of safeguarding the sites and monuments of Nubia, threatened by the construction of the Aswan High Dam.

After visiting the area in 1959, a Committee of 13 experts from eight countries drew up a series of recommendations on the technical measures that would make it possible to preserve the monuments on their own sites or to transfer them to other places. An appeal for international co-operation was launched and an International Action Committee was set up to obtain contributions and UNESCO's Executive Board expressed the hope that national committees would be formed to co-operate with the international body. The international campaign was placed under the auspices of a Committee of Patrons, with King Gustav VI of Sweden acting as Chairman.

UNESCO co-operated with the United Arab Republic in the establishment of an expert committee to advise the Government on work on the preservation of the monuments. At Sudan's request, UNESCO contributed towards the costs of a photogrammetric reconstruction of aerial photographs taken of the part of the threatened region lying in Sudanese territory and provided the Sudanese Department of Antiquities with three experts.

The international campaign "falls squarely within the constitutional responsibility of UNESCO and represents an extension of earlier activities aimed at the preservation of the cultural heritage of mankind," but "the magnitude of the new undertaking is in itself a new departure."

The Report reviewed the results of the UNESCO-sponsored International Conference on Information Processing, held in Paris in June, 1959 to examine the scientific and sociological importance of high-speed electronic computers.

An out-growth of the Conference was the formation of an International Federation of Information Processing Societies, which would seek to advance international co-operation in the field.

UNESCO's three "major projects," adopted in 1956, were still "the dominant features of the Organization's activity." The projects deal with the extension of primary education in Latin America, scientific research on arid lands and mutual appreciation of Oriental and Occidental cultural values.

In Asia, all Governments accepted the responsibility of providing free and compulsory education. There was a "tremendous awakening of popular desire for education and, in some countries, the progress in primary education was "almost phenomenal." Nevertheless, only 57.8 per cent of the children of primary school age were enrolled in school when the inquiry was made. It was anticipated that a 20-year plan to extend seven years of primary schooling to all children of the region would cost $65 billion.

In tropical Africa, considerable "and in some cases remarkable" educational progress was made in nearly all areas covered. However, "in spite of the tremendous effort" made, the task ahead for the majority of the countries "is no less tremendous." In 14 countries or territories, less than 37 per cent of the primary school-age children were enrolled; in some areas, less than six per cent of children of that age group were in school. A lack of teachers in technical, vocational and scientific subjects was considered one of the most urgent problems.

Under the first project, UNESCO encouraged and aided Latin American Governments in their efforts towards systematic educational planning, revision of primary school curricula, teacher-training and preparation of highly specialized education leaders. As a result "the impact of the project on Latin American countries has been remarkable."

In almost all these countries, there was a large increase in enrolment in primary and normal schools, with a corresponding increase in the national budget for primary education. A meeting in March, 1960, in Mexico City, noted that since 1956 an additional 4,000,000 children had been enrolled in Latin American schools and 90,000 extra teaching posts had been created.

In the major project on scientific research on arid lands, the most important result achieved was the expansion in research activity carried out in countries which never systematically examined the problem before, such as Iraq, Iran and Tunisia.

Creation of a number of specialized subcommittees led to development of technical activities "on the soundest base" on topics such as environmental physiology and psychology in arid zones, cartographic problems and plant-water relationships.

The scope of the major project on Mutual Appreciation of Oriental and Occidental Cultural Values was considerably widened in the past year. Forty-one Special Committees were formed in UNESCO's member-States to carry out the project, and the Agency extended its own efforts to promote knowledge of Oriental cultures in the West through seminars and exchanges of experts and studies. Some 15 works of Arabian, Persian, Indian, Chinese and Japanese literature were issued in English and French translations.

H. UN Congress On Crime Detection: The Second UN Congress on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders began in London on August 19.

It was attended by about 1,000 delegates from over 80 countries, and was presided over by Sir Charles Cunningham (Britain).

The following is the text of the resolution submitted by the delegations of Australia, Ghana, Israel, Japan, Switzerland, United Arab Republic, USA and Yugoslavia, which was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas the second United Nations Congress on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders has once again demonstrated the immense importance of the problems of crime and juvenile delinquency to the participating countries and territories;

"Whereas the continued grave concern with these problems on the part of the countries and territories represented and their ever-broadening earnest participation once again has been made apparent:

"Whereas the importance of communication, the sharing of experiences and discussion and study in an effort to alleviate these problems have again been convincingly brought forth, the Congress resolves to urge United Nations:

"(1) That there is no lessening of support, leadership and programme in the area of social defence but that, on the contrary, there should be distinct strengthening of the facilities available to all countries and territories;

"(2) That in accordance with the Economic and Social Council resolution No. 731-F (XXVIII), the re-organization of the section of social defence and the division of responsibilities between UN Headquarters and the European office should be such as to ensure that there is no reduction in the effectiveness of the overall programme and leadership and that the direction and co-ordination of the social defence programme continue at Headquarters; further, it is suggested that the situation be reviewed in 12 months with the co-operation of those international organizations directly interested in the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders."

I. World Congress On Energy: A World Congress on Energy began its five-day Conference in Madrid on June 5 to discuss the needs of the world for more energy.

Nearly 1,200 technicians from 59 countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union, took part.

The purpose of the Conference was to discuss methods of research into energy sources, efficiency in the production and use of energy, installation of industrial nuclear reactors and the linking of traditional energy production with that of nuclear sources.

The Conference was attended by more than 2,000 delegates from 48 countries of both East and West.

The Conference had before it a mass of technical papers on all aspects of power production from atomic energy down to the burning of straw and chaff and windmills.

British and American scientists said on June 9 that the long-term outlook for man's peaceful use of nuclear energy was bright, but progress was proving costly and problems were arising.

Coal, oil and gas would for a long time yet supply most of the world with energy, though the cost of power production by nuclear and conventional plants would probably be comparable between 1965 and 1970.

The dominating theme at the Conference was the struggle between nuclear and conventional energy.

The Chairman of Britain's Central Electricity Generating Board, Sir Christopher Hinton, the Deputy Chairman, Mr. R. F. H. S. Brown, and a research worker, Mr. L. Rotherman, pinpointed this in a paper which said: "The existing designs of nuclear power stations will produce power at prices appreciably above those of conventional coal-fired plants. This difference is greater than was expected when the nuclear power programme was begun in the United Kingdom and the change is mainly due to the rapid technical advance in conventional plants."

J. FAO's "Freedom From Hunger" Campaign Launched: A five-year campaign to rid the world's expanding population of the "misery and degradation of hunger" was launched by the member-nations of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) on July 1.

The Director-General of FAO, Mr. B. R. Sen, in a message on the occasion, called on all members of the international community to renew their pledge "to lift millions of people in different parts of the world from the misery and degradation of hunger."

More than half the world's population, he said, suffered from varying degrees of undernourishment and malnutrition and to make matters worse, the population was increasing at a faster rate than ever before, particularly in the regions which were deficient in food supply.

He added: "The central problem, however, is not over-population but under-production. The primary objective of the Freedom-From-Hunger Campaign is to accelerate all those economic, technical and social processes which can bring about a substantial rise of agricultural production in the less developed countries."

FAO decided on the campaign seven months ago. The campaign would fall into four broad categories: informational and educational activities, research, national action programmes and FAO guidance.

National action programmes would form the heart of the campaign, because it is from them that increased production and improved distribution of agricultural products are expected to flow.

K. Emergency In South Africa Lifted: The Minister of Justice, Mr. Francois Erasmus, announced in Pretoria on August 25 that the South African Government had decided to repeal the State of Emergency, imposed after the March, 1960 riots at Sharpeville, as from August 31.

The Emergency was proclaimed on March 20 in 123 districts but had already been lifted in many of these. It now remained in only 46 districts. These, however, included all major cities and towns.

L. World Tin Exports—Restrictions Removed: The International Tin Council which met in London on August 26 lifted all restrictions on world tin exports for the next quarter.

Mr. Georges Peter, Council Chairman, said after the meeting: "The market will be absolutely free after October 1.

"For the present quarter, prices in the middle range were already free. After October 1, there will be no more export control."

He added that the Council might, if necessary, re-impose export control at its next meeting in Rome on December 5, 1960.

A Press statement said that the Council had decided not to fix a permissible export amount for the new quarter "in view of the statistical position."

M. Soviet Plan To Link Rivers: The Soviet news agency Tass reported on August 25 that Soviet engineering specialists had formulated a proposal to link the rivers Volga, Don, Dnieper and Danube.

It said: "They have completed economic and technical surveys which show that it would be possible and worthwhile to create such a river system which could be widely used for international transportation.

"The Danube flows past eight States, and it would be possible to transport millions of tons without re-loading over distances of thousands of miles by the cheapest possible means.

"The main point of the Soviet engineers' proposal is to join the Don with the Dnieper via the Azov Sea and canals to ensure safe navigation for river vessels to the Danube along the north and west coasts of the Black Sea.

"It is also proposed to dig an exit channel for ships out of the Azov Sea to the North Crimean Canal, which is now being built and connects with the Dnieper."

[The UN European Economic Commission is at present examining a Soviet proposal for an internal waterways net-work linking the whole of Europe].

AFGHANISTAN

A. Pakistan Aircraft Forced Down At Kandahar: The Defence Ministry announced on August 14 that two Pakistani aircraft had violated Afghan air-space on August 13 and were forced to land at Kandahar.

It added that the pilots were under interrogation.

The Foreign Ministry delivered a protest to the Pakistan Charge d'Affaires in Kabul.

Earlier, according to a Karachi report, two Fury aircraft, which took off from Miranshah towards Quetta on a training flight on August 13, had not returned.

Each aircraft was presumed to have a crew of two.

In an official Press release on August 16, the Pakistan Government said that it was demanding the release and return of the two pilots of its aircraft.

At the same time, it requested the Afghan Foreign Ministry to permit Pakistan's Air Attache in Kabul and her Consul at Kandahar to interview the pilots.

F-M Ayub Khan's Statement:

The Pakistan President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, told newsmen in Quetta on August 18: "It was just an error that the two Pakistani Air Force fighters landed at Kandahar. You don't fly to land over another's territory."

In fact, he said, the pilots had asked for bearings from Quetta but missed the airfield in haze and landed in Kandahar.

[This was the first time that an authoritative statement in Pakistan had sought to make out that the planes had made a mistake of their position and landed at Kandahar.]

F-M Ayub Khan's statement did not mention anything about Afghan fighters forcing the planes to land. It said that the planes had landed themselves.

Pakistan's Reply To Protest Note:

In a reply to the Afghan Note of protest, the Pakistan Government said on August 20 that the landing of the two Fury aircraft in Kandahar was "entirely the result of a navigational error" and that it sincerely regretted the incident.

The Pakistan Note said: "Two piston-engined Fury aircraft of the Pakistan Air Force flew on August 13, 1960 from Miranshah at 11-37 hours (West Pakistan Time) on a routine training cross-country flight to Quetta. About 13:00 hours, they contacted Quetta to ascertain their bearings. Thereafter, all contact was lost. As they failed to reach Quetta, a search was commenced to ascertain their whereabouts, but without success, on the Pakistan side of the border.

"The next day (August 14), the Ministry of Foreign Affairs contacted the Royal Afghan Embassy at Karachi and through them, requested the help of the Royal Afghan Government in searching for the missing planes on the Afghan side of the border.

"That evening, Kabul Radio announced that the two aircraft had landed at Kandahar and that the pilots had been taken into custody for interrogation.

"The following morning (August 15), HE the Royal Afghan Ambassador at Karachi was informed of the circumstances in which the two aircraft had failed to reach Quetta and was requested to arrange for a speedy return of the pilots and their aircraft. His Excellency agreed to convey our request to his Government.

"On learning of the incident, the Consul of Pakistan at Kandahar immediately made a request to see the pilots, but it seems his request was not granted.

"The Government of Pakistan has instituted a full inquiry about the exact nature of the navigational error which resulted in these aircraft landing at Kandahar. This much is clear that the pilots lost their way after contacting the Quetta control tower.

"From the scant information at present available as to what happened afterwards, it appears that while groping for their way, the pilots succeeded in establishing contact with the control tower in Kandahar. Fearing that their petrol might run out, they asked for permission and facilities to land, which were granted after about 15 minutes communication between the control tower and the pilots. Accordingly, the two aircraft landed at Kandahar airport about 12-45 hours local time.

"The Royal Afghan Government has, in its Note, described the aircraft as 'armed'. Although guns are mounted on these aircraft as a part of their standard equipment, they were not carrying any ammunition.

"Nor were they equipped for aerial reconnaissance. It is, therefore, obvious that neither aerial reconnaissance nor violation of Afghan territory was intended. It was a simple case of navigational error which is not uncommon in training flights.

"The Government of Pakistan regrets that such a thing should have happened and assures the Royal Afghan Government that the arrival of the two aircraft at Kandahar was entirely the result of some navigational error and was purely accidental.

"The Government of Pakistan again requests the Royal Afghan Government to release the two aircraft and pilots as early as possible."

BURMA

A. 'Burmanizing' Import Business —Supreme Court Ruling: A Full Bench of the Supreme Court delivered judgment on September 2 in what is known as the Nu-Attlee Transfer of Power Agreement reference case.

[The Agreement signed by Earl (then Mr.) Attlee and U Nu in 1947 related to the transfer of power.]

The Full Bench held that "so long as the Agreement subsists, any action by the Burmese Government that would prejudicially affect British interests will have to be preceded by consultations between the Governments of Burma and UK with a view to reaching a mutually satisfactory settlement."

Following the Government's decision on June 1, 1960 to "Burmanize" the import agency business, the British Ambassador in Rangoon protested that such action on the part of the Burmese Government would contravene the provisions of the Nu-Attlee Agreement which inter alia said: "The Provisional Government of Burma will not during this interim period take action which would prejudicially affect the existing UK interests in Burma in the legitimate conduct of business or professions in which they are now engaged, and that if the Provisional Government of Burma, in formulation of national policy, is convinced that such action must be taken in any particular case, it will consult the UK Government in advance with a view to reaching a mutually satisfactory settlement."

Burmanization of agencies was introduced with effect from June 1, 1960, but the import of British goods was exempted for the time being, and the Union President referred to the Supreme Court the question whether the Government's Burmanization policy would adversely affect the existing UK interests and, if so, whether the implementation of the policy would amount to a contravention of the Nu-Attlee Agreement.

The Full Bench of the Supreme Court, after hearing arguments, held that the Court was precluded from considering the first part of the reference as to whether Burmese policy would adversely affect British interests, because it was purely a question of fact.

As regards the question whether the implementation of the policy would contravene the Nu-Attlee Agreement, it held that the Agreement existed and that the Burmese Government would, under the provisions of that Agreement, have to consult with the UK Government to reach a mutually satisfactory settlement before the policy was implemented.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk's Resignation Offer: Speaking at a function held to mark the inauguration of a school at Kompongspeu province on August 30, the Head of State, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, offered to resign from office and urged the Government and the National Assembly to follow suit and put themselves "into the hands of political parties who believed themselves better patriots."

He said: "If the Popular Socialist Community and I inconvenience our intellectuals, we are ready to put an end to our mandate without delay."

He added that he had already offered his resignation, but the President of the National Assembly had asked him to wait until the end of the Royal burial ceremonies (of his father).

He said: "Now I ask to lay down my functions and suggest to my colleagues in the Government and National Assembly to envisage their early retirement from State responsibilities, so that they can be put into the hands of political parties and those who believe themselves better patriots, more hon-

Prince Norodom then became Prime Minister, but resigned on April 13, 1960—ten days after his father's death. He became Head of State again on June 17 following the resignation of the Regency Council which had been exercising the ruling functions following King Suramarit's death. CHINA

A. Re-affirmation Of Solidarity With Soviet Union: At a mass rally held in Shenyang in north-east China to mark the 15th anniversary of the defeat of Japan on September 5, speakers declared that friendship between China and the Soviet Union was "sealed in blood" and would live for ever.

Peking Radio broadcast a detailed report of the rally and Western observers interpreted it as a denial of rumours of a serious rift between China and the Soviet Union.

At the rally, leading members of the local Communist Party and Government officials laid wreaths on the monument erected to the memory of the Soviet soldiers who died in the war against "Japanese Fascism."

The Vice-Mayor of Shenyang, Mr. Sung Kwang, was quoted by the Radio as saying that the despatch of troops by the Soviet Union accelerated the final collapse of Japan.

He said: "The lofty internationalism of the Soviet Union has now found its expression in the Soviet Union's enormous aid to China."

A representative of the Soviet Consulate-General in Harbin was quoted by the Radio as saying: "The great, everlasting and unbreakable friendship between the Chinese and Soviet peoples, which is sealed in blood, will live for ever. We will exert all our efforts for the consolidation of this friendship."

It added that a meeting was held in Moscow by the Soviet-China Friendship Association to mark the 15th anniversary of Japan's defeat.

Western Reports:

For some time, there have been reports that American, British and other Western intelligence agents were searching for the text of a letter in which the Soviet Communist Party was said to have explained to world communist parties its side of the reported ideological quarrel with China.

US State Department sources in Washington said on August 25 that no copy of the letter had yet fallen into Western hands but that it was known to contain an "especially bitter attack on Peking's efforts to reverse Moscow's peaceful co-existence policies."

The sources said that there was reason to believe that two documents were being circulated—one to Communist Party groups in the Soviet Union itself and the other to foreign communist parties which in the past had looked to Moscow for inspiration and leadership.

One of the documents, it was believed, contained a censored version and explanation of Mr. Nikita Khruschev's speech to a secret meeting of the ruling communist parties in Bucharest in June, 1960.

The second, according to the sources, was thought to contain a fuller version of Mr. Khruschev's speech and other documents showing that he acknowledged the seriousness of the Sino-Soviet dispute and warned Peking about the consequences of its "hard line" Stalinist policies.

Sino-Soviet difficulties appeared to Western officials to have gone beyond the framework of the dispute over whether communist nations should attempt to gain their objectives with a policy of peaceful co-existence or a policy of military threats.

The real issue, they said, involved the struggle for leadership of the communist world and Peking's apparent determination to emerge as the sole authentic voice of international communism.

Recent American Press reports concluded that the intensity of the struggle might lead to an open break between the Soviet Union and China.

B. Diplomatic Relations With Cuba: The Cuban Prime Minister, Dr. Fidel Castro, severed diplomatic relations with the Kuomintang Administration in Formosa on September 2 and announced that he would establish diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China.

He added that he would welcome aid from the Chinese "in the event of imperialist aggression."

In Peking the following day (September 3), President Liu Shao-chi expressed "full appreciation" of the Cuban decision.

Speaking to a group of Teachers' Trade Union delegates from five Latin American countries, Mr. Liu Shao-chi re-affirmed China's friendship with Cuba, whose struggle against what he termed as US imperialism "will certainly be victorious."

In Taipeh, the Kuomintang Chinese Government said that Cuba's decision to recognise communist China was due to the "insidious influence of international communism."

The Kuomintang Government expressed the hope that normal relations between the two countries would be restored when the Cuban people were free of "communist domination."

It said that the Kuomintang Ambassador to Havana, Mr. Liu Yu-wan, and other members of the Embassy staff had been instructed to leave the country as soon as arrangements for their departure could be made.

INDIA

SUMMARY: Direct Taxes Administration Committee's Recommendations; Law Commission's Report On Income-Tax Act; Reserve Bank's Report For 1959-60; Banking Companies Bill Passed; Government's Decision On Baby Car.

A. Direct Taxes Administration Committee's Recommendations Accepted By Government: According to a statement laid before Parliament on September 9 by the Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, more than 200 recommendations—out of a total of 367—of the Tyagi Committee on Direct Taxes had been accepted by the Government of India.

As a result of this decision, tax collection would henceforth concentrate on the cases of "large income group assessees", while the procedure for taxing small or middle incomes would be simplified.

Charitable Trusts, which had so far been free from income-tax, would have to pay tax if they carried on "a business which is not in the course of carrying out the primary object of the Trust."

Tax evasion and wilful concealment of incomes would be punished much more harshly than hitherto and income-tax officers would be protected from anonymous and vexatious complaints.

A few major recommendations that had, however, been rejected included the suggestion for transferring the control of the appellate officers in the tax department to the Law Ministry.

The Government also rejected the proposal that income-tax officers retiring from service prematurely should be prohibited from taking up private employment.

While many of the Committee's recommendations would be implemented departmentally, a large number would form part of a comprehensive Bill for the codification of the tax laws.

This Bill would be sponsored shortly by the Finance Ministry in pursuance of the Law Commission's report on the Income-tax Act (published elsewhere in this issue).

The Government accepted the Committee's recommendation for the retention of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, thus rejecting the Law Commission's proposal for the abolition of this body.

The Government did not, however, accept the Committee's recommendations that the Tribunal should not be granted enhancement powers under the Income-tax Act and that enhancement powers now vested in it under other direct taxes Acts should be withdrawn.

The Government accepted the Committee's recommendation to make abetment of tax evasion punishable under the tax laws. It, however, felt that for the present it was not necessary to provide for prosecution for this offence.

Mr. Desai said that of the 367 recommendations of the Committee, 59 were mere observations of a general nature or refutations of suggestions by witnesses.

The remaining 308 when re-arranged, grouping together recommendations having similar effect, worked out to 289. Of these, the Government had accepted 205 and rejected eight. The remaining were still under consideration.

The Government, he added, had accepted in principle the recommendation for the enactment of a self-contained Central Revenue Recovery Code complete in all respects. The Code would be incorporated in a Schedule to the Income-tax Act, as suggested by the Law Commission.

Of the important recommendations which were not accepted by the Government were:

(1) Incorporation of basic rates of income-tax in the Income-tax Act and variations through annual Finance Acts in the rates of surcharges to meet budgetary requirements;

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

(2) Merger to the basic income-tax rates of such of the existing surcharges as go to the divisible pool.

The Government accepted most of the recommendations relating to the simplification of the tax laws and procedures arising therefrom and toning up of the tax collection machinery.

It also agreed to empower the Department to grant immunity from penal proceedings or prosecution to those who, having abetted an offence, came forward to give evidence against an assessee and to prescribe maximum and minimum penalties for various types of offences.

The Government accepted the following recommendations in principle:

(1) Steps should be taken to convince tax-payers that the taxes collected from them were not being spent wastefully;

(2) No official patronage or recognition or awards should be given to those penalized for concealment or against whom prosecution proceedings had been taken.

[Prev. ref. 3304:INI:D]

B. Income-tax Act—Law Commission's Report: The Law Commission, in its twelfth report on the Income-tax Act (placed on the table of the Lok Sabha on September 5) observed that there could be no real simplification of the income-tax law without the simplification of the tax structure.

The Commission, which was asked by the Government of India to revise the Income-tax Act so as to make its provisions more intelligible without affecting the basic structure, pointed out that there was hardly any Act on the Statute Book which was "so complicated, so illogical and in some respects so obscure" as the Income-tax Act, 1922.

Courts and commentators, according to the Commission, had repeatedly pointed out that the amendments made from time to time to the Act were too often framed without sufficient regard to the basic scheme upon which the Act originally rested. Provisions dealing with the same topic or subject matter were scattered through the various chapters.

Added to the illogicality of the arrangement were two other defects, namely, inaccuracy in the use of language and a degree of obscurity, which made it difficult to understand the real intention of the legislature. "The hopeless confusion into which the income-tax law has fallen is mainly due to precipitate and continuous tinkering with the Act by the legislature. The amendments to the law have been so short-sighted and so short-lived as to rob the law of that modicum of stability which is essential to its healthy growth."

Before the provisions of the Act could be sufficiently clarified by the judicial process, new provisions were substituted in their place. "Since stability is very important to the proper administration of a taxing statute, it is essential that a halt is called to the making of ill-digested amendments in a frenzy of hurry. We wish the Indian legislature to simplify the tax structure of this country on the lines adopted by some other progressive countries."

Meanwhile, it suggested nearly 200 changes in the Income-tax Act. It recommended the abolition of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal and suggested that appeals against the orders of the Appellate Commissioners should go directly to the High Courts, both on questions of law and of fact.

The Appellate Assistant Commissioners should continue to function under the control of the Board of Revenue though there was force in the principle that appeals should be disposed of by an independent agency, not subordinate to the Board.

It recommended the deletion of Sections 4(1) (B) (III) and Section 4(1) explanation 4 of the Act concerning the tax on remittances by an assessee into India out of the income of past years and the tax on past profits of assessees moved from the former Part 'B' State to other parts of the country.

The first provision could not be justified apart from the fact that it resulted in capital being kept out of India. The other provision had outlived its utility after the reorganization of States.

It also proposed the revision of provisions relating to the development rebate in respect of plant and machinery expressly providing for the rebate for the year in which they were first put to use by the assessees if they were not used in the year of acquisition.

It recommended the removal of exemption now being given to the citizens of other countries holding offices of Consul-General, Consul or Trade Commissioners in India.

It also advocated the abolition of the exemption to Indian officers employed in foreign enterprises.

C. Reserve Bank's Report For 1959-60: The Central Board of Directors of the Reserve Bank of India, in its report for the year ended June 30, 1960, published on September 9, 1960 emphasized the need for a substantially higher rate of savings to match the higher rate of investment.

It said: "The Third Five-Year Plan necessitates a substantial increase in the rate of savings to national income, from eight to 11 per cent to match the increased rate of investment to national income, from 11 to 14 per cent. Though the Third Plan would, no doubt, depend vitally on significantly larger foreign assistance than in the Second Plan, it is necessary to emphasize the critical importance of much larger internal resources, especially if deficit-finance is to be restricted to the estimated figure of Rs. 550 crores as compared to the likely actual figure of Rs. 1,175 crores in the Second Plan.

"A bold investment plan requires an equally bold and determined savings effort which, in concrete terms, means sacrifice by the community through postponement and curtailment of consumption.

"The precise manner in which this sacrifice is brought forth is a matter for careful consideration, but clearly it will involve a much larger tax effort, as also larger investment in securities and savings instruments issued by the Government as well as the private sector.

"The necessary corollary of this is economy and austerity in both public and private spending. The stabilization of the cost of living is also imperative both for domestic reasons as well as for ensuring a cost price structure which will enable exports to be maintained at a level necessary for the Plan. All this has wide implications for general economic policies which will require to be assiduously worked out.

"The Reserve Bank is aware of the immensity and urgency of the problem of continually strengthening the institutional machinery for maximum mobilization and canalizing of savings into productive channels. The Bank has initiated action in this sphere in the past, but further steps will be necessary to adapt the machinery to the larger task ahead."

Main Features Of Economy:

According to the report, the main features of the Indian economy during the year were: (1) a substantial increase in the rate of growth of industrial production; (2) some decline in agricultural output; (3) a modest increase in aggregate investment; (4) a further and marked rise in the general price level; (5) a rise in the rate of expansion of money supply and bank credit; (6) an intensification of the stock market boom; and (7) a further, though small fall in the foreign exchange reserves, which was accounted for by special payments to the International Monetary Fund.

Against this background, the Reserve Bank adopted further measures of credit restraint while ensuring adequate credit for productive purposes.

The existing selective controls in respect of foodgrains, sugar and groundnuts were continued with suitable modifications, and all other oilseeds except cottonseed were brought within their purview. Resort was also taken for the first time to the instrument of variable reserve ratios alongside other measures, including a ban on direct financing by banks of budla transactions, minimum margins in respect of bank advances against ordinary shares and a ceiling on clean advances. Action was also taken to further restrict banks' borrowings under the Bill Market Scheme. The Bank's open market operations continued to be employed to siphon off the excess liquidity in the economy.

Though the credit curbs seemed to have worked in the desired direction in particular sectors, the impact of the variation in reserves on total bank credit had so far been limited inasmuch as the reduction in excess liquidity of scheduled banks had been largely neutralized by a smaller than usual reduction in borrowings from the Reserve Bank and by smaller investment in Government securities.

It added: "The rather slow contraction of credit in the 1960 slack season is a matter for concern, and banks should bring about a satisfactory contraction so as to meet the next busy season without undue strain. They must also reduce their access to the Reserve Bank if the recent credit restraints are not to be nullified."

During the year, the Reserve Bank's income, after making statutory and other provisions, amounted to Rs. 47.57 crores, and expenditure to Rs. 7.57 crores. The net profit available for payment to the Central Government was Rs. 40 crores, the same as in the previous year.

D. Banking Companies Bill—Simplification Of Moratorium: The Government of India introduced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on September 3 a Bill seeking to simplify the grant of moratorium in respect of banking companies "in difficulties" and to facilitate, wherever necessary, their reconstruction or amalgamation by the Reserve Bank.

It also sought to raise the ceiling of protected deposits from Rs. 100 to Rs. 250 and expedite the payment of certain minimum amounts to depositors of banks under liquidation within three months.

The Reserve Bank was proposed to be armed with powers to plan the reconstruction or amalgamation of a banking company in the interests of the nation or the depositors of the banking system or "in order to secure the proper management of the company."

Any such scheme of reconstruction or amalgamation formulated by the Reserve Bank would be subject to the modification and approval of the Central Government. Its copies would be laid before both Houses of Parliament.

The scheme, it was proposed, might provide for the appointment of a new Board of Directors, apart from specifying, among other things, the constitution, capital, assets, powers, rights, interests, authorities and privileges regarding the company proposed to be reconstructed or amalgamated.

The ceiling of the protected deposits was proposed to be raised in view of the rising prices, and every depositor in the savings bank account would, in the first place, be paid Rs. 250 "or the balance at his credit, whichever is less."

All the depositors of the banking company would thereafter be paid 50 per cent of the balance at their credit but subject to a maximum of Rs. 250 in priority to all other debts but after preferential payments.

The Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill said that the procedure now prescribed under the Banking Companies Act, 1949 read with the Companies Act, 1956 for the liquidation of banking companies was somewhat elaborate and causes "a great deal of hardship" to the depositors.

The Lok Sabha passed the Banking Companies (Second Amendment) Bill on September 6.

The House accepted an amendment moved by Mr. R. R. Morarka (Cong.) which laid down that after the preferential claims had been met, every other depositor would also be paid Rs. 250 or the balance to his credit, whichever is less.

[The original clause in the amending Bill had provided that the depositors other than those with savings accounts should be paid an amount equal to 50 per cent of their deposits, subject to a maximum of Rs. 250 as a further preferential payment.]

The House turned down, after a lively debate, a Communist member's amendment seeking to raise the minimum preferential payment to Rs. 500, and another providing for the payment of the entire balance to the credit of co-operative societies registered under any statute.

The Rajya Sabha (Council of States) passed the Bill on September 9.

The Bill was brought forward with the intention of helping the depositors of the Palai Central Bank, against which the Kerala High Court had passed a provisional liquidation order.

E. Baby-Car—Government's Decision: A statement laid on the table of the Lok Sabha (House of the People) by the Central Minister for Industry, Mr. Manubhai Shah, on September 6 said that the Government of India had accepted the principal recommendations of the ad hoc Committee which was asked to review the report of the Jha Committee on the pricing and manufacture of commercial and passenger cars, including a baby car, and that, according to this decision, a Technical Committee would be set up shortly to report within four months on the feasibility of manufacture in the public sector of an economy car within a price-range of Rs. 6,500.

The ad hoc Committee had expressed the view that the demand for a small car would be sufficient to ensure that the existing production programmes were unaffected.

In view of the fact that the economy car would have to be produced at around Rs. 5,000, the latest machinery would have to be employed to ensure a low cost.

As the cars inspected by the Jha Committee would have sold for roughly Rs. 9,000, the Committee would have to look for a different model. The two in view at present were the Renault and the DAF. Suitable arrangements for the necessary foreign exchange investment as well as any engineering facilities in the private or public sector for the manufacture of the new car would be recommended by the Committee.

The Government's decisions on other recommendations of the ad hoc Committee were as follows:

Manufacture of Components: Quicker progress was necessary and programmes undertaken by the manufacturers should be completed by the end of 1961. Necessary import licences would be given. The intention was to ban the import of components by the beginning of 1962. Arrangements were being made to foster the fabrication of some of these components and parts in ancillary industries.

Third Plan Targets: The Jha Committee's recommendations of a target of 10,000 jeeps and 60,000 commercial vehicles as well as 30,000 cars (40,000 if an economy model was introduced) had been accepted.

Production Costs: All manufacturers would be asked to introduce by the end of the year a proper training scheme and a satisfactory cost account system.

Price and Controls: The Government did not accept the ad hoc Committee's suggestion that price control in respect of commercial vehicles be abolished. The Committee had simultaneously suggested cuts ranging between Rs. 200 and Rs. 500 in the prices of jeeps and cars four months after the issue of import licences to enable the units to expand production to the highest possible level. Two of the manufacturers had already agreed to reduce their prices by Rs. 200.

F. Naga Hostiles' Attack On IAF Plane: The Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, informed the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on September 5 that Indian Air Force transport planes, with the help of fighter cover, had been able to drop supplies of food and ammunition to an Assam Rifles post besieged by Naga hostiles recently on the Indo-Burma border.

An army reinforcement column, he added, reached the post on the afternoon of August 31 despite considerable opposition. The hostiles had withdrawn nearly 900 yards from their original position.

[He was making a statement on a call-attention notice by three members on the reported shooting down of a plane by Naga hostiles and their raid on the outpost in the last week of August, 1960.]

He said that two transport planes were hit more than once by small-arms fire while dropping supplies. One of them returned to base, but the second lost height and made a forced landing on the other side of the river near another Assam Rifles post. A search party found on reaching the plane that the aircraft did not bear much signs of damage. The crew, however, was missing. Intensive search for them was continuing and it was too early at that time to say with certainty whether they were alive or not. The uncertainty was causing considerable anxiety to the Government.

He added that a small minority of Naga hostiles were making last-minute attempts to create terror in order to sabotage the proposed constitutional developments in the area. The Government was fully posted on the situation and would take such firm action as was found necessary to protect the overwhelming majority of the Nagas. The Government was also determined to take firm action against those who sought to overthrow constitutional authority by violence and crime. The Assam Rifles post recently besieged, would be maintained as long as it was required for the restoration of law and order.

Naga Interim Advisory Body—Changes Proposed:

The Working Committee of the Naga People's Convention made some significant changes in the resolution it had passed on the setting up of an interim body to advise the Governor on the administration of the Naga Hills and Tuensang area until the new State came into being.

According to these changes, the Interim Advisory Council would consist of 40 members, five from the Angami tribe, four from each of the major Naga tribes and two from each of the minor tribes.

The Interim Council would in turn choose three or four paid Advisers. They would be stationed in Kohima and would advise the authorities in day-to-day administration of the area. It would meet once in three months to review the work of the Advisers.

The Committee divided itself into Zonal Committees which were entrusted with the task of persuading underground leaders to give up hostile activity and co-operate in the formation of the new State.

The Zonal Committees were given a month to contact underground leaders. The underground men would be allowed to join the Council as representatives of their respective tribes.

Mr. Chunilal Kotwal, who held this portfolio, took over Health and Tourism from Mr. G. M. Rajpuri, who was put in charge of Education, Transport, Information and Publicity and Forests.

These four were surrendered by Bakshi Ghulam Mohammed who retained Home and Finance and took over Community Development and National Extension Services.

I. Sentence On Commander K. M. Nanavati For Murder—Supreme Court's Judgment On Bombay Governor's Order: The Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court held by a majority of four to one on September 5 that the Governor of Bombay (now Maharashtra) had no power under Article 161 of the Constitution to suspend the life sentence passed on Commander K. M. Nanavati when the matter was sub judice in the Supreme Court.

The Court also dismissed the application of Commander Nanavati praying that his special leave petition be listed for hearing without requiring him to surrender to his sentence in view of the order of the Governor.

The majority judgment, delivered by the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice B. P. Sinha, said: "The order of the Governor granting suspension of the life sentence could only operate until the matter became sub judice in this Court on the filing of the petition for special leave. After the filing of such a petition, this Court was seized of the case which would be dealt with by it in accordance with the law.

"It would be for this Court to pass such orders as it thought fit as to whether the petitioner should be granted bail or should surrender to his sentence or to pass such other or further orders as this Court might deem fit in all the circumstances of the case."

The majority judgment, running into 32 pages, was delivered by the Chief Justice on behalf of Mr. Justice P. B. Gajendragadkar, Mr. Justice K. Subba Rao and Mr. Justice K. N. Wanchoo. Mr. Justice J. L. Kapoor gave the only dissenting judgment.

History Of The Case:

The petitioner, Commander K. M. Nanavati, who was Second-in-Command of INS Mysore, was charged before the Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate of Bombay with the murder of a Bombay businessman, Prem Bhagwandas Ahuja, on April 27, 1959. The magistrate remanded the accused to police custody on April 28, 1959.

The next day (April 29), the magistrate received a letter from the Flag Officer in Bombay to the effect that he was ready and willing to take the accused in naval custody. Thereupon, the magistrate made the order directing that the accused be detained in the naval jail and detention quarters in Bombay.

Later, the Sessions Judge of Bombay disagreed with the verdict of "not guilty" by the jury and referred the matter to the High Court. The High Court convicted the petitioner under Section 302 IPC and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

On the same day—March 11, 1960—the Governor of Bombay passed the following order: "In exercise of the powers conferred on me by Article 161 of the Constitution of India, I, Sri Prakasa, Governor of Bombay, am pleased hereby to suspend the sentence passed by the High Court of Bombay on Commander Nanavati until the appeal intended to be filed by him in the Supreme Court against his conviction and sentence is disposed of and subject meanwhile to the condition that he shall be detained in the naval jail custody of INS Kunjali."

In pursuance of the judgment of the High Court, a writ was issued to the Sessions Judge communicating the order of the Hign Court. The Sessions Judge issued a warrant for the arrest of the accused and sent it to the police officer in charge of the City Sessions Court for execution.

The warrant was returned unserved with the report that it could not be served in view of the order of the Governor of Bombay suspending the sentence upon the petitioner. The Sessions Judge returned the writ together with the unexecuted warrant to the High Court.

Meanwhile, an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court was made to the Bombay High Court. The Division Bench, which had before it the unexecuted warrant of arrest, referred the situation to a larger Bench.

The Special Bench of the High Court held that the Governor had the power to suspend the sentence. The Court also held that "as the sentence passed upon the accused has been suspended, it is not necessary for the the accused to surrender to his sentence" before applying to the Supreme Court for special leave.

The Division Bench of the Supreme Court, before which the special leave petition filed by Commander Nanavati came, directed that the constitutional question arising out of the application be heard by the Constitution Bench.

It involved the question "as to what is the content of the power conferred on the Governor of a State under Article 161 of the Constitution and whether the order of the Governor of Bombay (suspending the life sentence) impinges on the judicial powers of this Court, with particular reference to its powers under Article 142 of the Constitution".

Article 161 of the Constitution says that the Governor of a State shall have the power to grant pardons, reprieves, respites or remission of punishment or to suspend, remit or commute the sentence of any person convicted of any offence against any law relating to a matter to which the executive power of the State extends.

Article 142(1) says: "The Supreme Court, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, may pass such decree or make such order as is necessary for doing complete justice in any case or matter pending before it and any decree so passed or order so made shall be enforceable throughout the territory of India in such manner as may be prescribed by or under any law made by Parliament...."

The relevant rule of the Supreme Court framed under Article 145 says: "Where the petitioner has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment, the petition shall state whether the petitioner has surrendered. Unless the Court otherwise orders, the petition shall not be posted for hearing until the petitioner has surrendered to his sentence."

The Chief Justice said that the rules framed under Article 145 of the Constitution were in aid of the powers of the Supreme Court under Article 142 and that the main question that fell for consideration was "whether the order of suspension passed by the Governor under Article 161 could operate when this Court had been moved for granting special leave to appeal from the judgment and order of the High Court."

"As soon as the petitioner put in a petition for special leave to appeal," he said, "the matter became sub judice in the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court, under its rules, could insist upon the petitioner surrendering to his sentence as a condition precedent to his being heard by it, though it could dispense with and in a proper case could exempt him from the operation of that rule. It is not disputed that this Court has the power to stay execution of the sentence and to grant bail pending the disposal of the application for special leave to appeal."

J. Stone Age Relics Discovered In Kashmir: A rich variety of stone and bone implements and coarse pottery with a mat pattern which are expected to throw light on Stone Age culture in North India have been discovered during excavations at Burzahama, 15 miles from Srinagar.

The excavations were begun on July 7 by Mr. T. N. Khazanchi, Superintendent of the Central Archaeological Department, in Kashmir.

Situated on a plateau at the foot of Mount Mahadev (13,000 ft), near the Shalimar Gardens, Burzahama is one of two megalithic sites in the extreme north-west of the Indo-Pakistan subcontinent. Five massive stones are standing there more or less in their original position while four others lie partly buried. In the 'thirties, two antiquarians—Mr. T. T. Patterson of Cambridge and Mr. Deterra of Washington—conducted minor excavations in the area.

Besides human bones, there were at the site a community kitchen, a grinding stone, a bone dagger, hand-made pieces of pottery, stone and bone ornaments, polished bone arrow-heads, stone axes, bone tools and "cult objects" which had been unearthed from two to 12 ft. below the surface.

Though the site is generally neolithic in character, it may take time to "date" the finds and investigate whether Burzahama can be equated with the megalithic sites of South India.

IRAN

A. General Elections: Polling began in the General Elections on August 2.

The Shah gave the warning that those who illegally interfered in the Elections would be severely punished.

The Ministry of the Interior reported on August 2 that polling had opened in 21 provincial constituencies—out of 153 constituencies in the country—and that three Deputies belonging to the Mellyoun (Nationalist) Party of the Prime Minister, Dr. Manouchehr Eghbal had already been elected.

Both the Mellyoun Party, which had 65 seats in the previous Majlis (Parliament), and the Opposition Mardom (People's) Party, which had 40 seats, had been campaigning vigorously, attacking and counter-attacking each other's policies.

The leader of the Mardom Party, Mr. Assadullah Alam, threatened to boycott the elections in the Azerbaijan Province, near the Soviet border, if the Government failed to maintain free elections.

Elections were suspended in several constituencies where Election Inspectors upheld public complaints of irregularities in preliminary arrangements.

At the Shah's monthly news conference on August 27, some newspaper editors alleged that the General Elections were "rigged" and demanded their annulment.

The Shah pointed out that the existing laws did not permit him to do so, but added: "But if the people really want it, I am prepared to exceed the limits of the law."

Mr. M. Eghbal Resigns:

On August 28, the Prime Minister, Mr. M. Eghbal submitted his resignation to the Shah.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Eghbal told the Cabinet that he was leaving office because the Shah had expressed dissatisfaction over the conduct of the General Elections.

New Cabinet:

On August 29, the Shah appointed the Mining and Industry Minister, Dr. Sharif Emami, as Prime Minister.

One of the first acts of Dr. Emami was the suspension of elections in all constituencies where balloting was still going on.

On August 31, Dr. Sharif Emami presented to the Shah a list of his Cabinet Ministers.

The following was the composition of the Cabinet:

Interior—Gen. Mehdigholi Alavi Moghabam; Acting Commerce and Deputy Premier—Dr. Mohammad Saidi;

Monopolies—Mr. Razi Vishkail; and Agriculture—Mr. Ibrahim Mahdavi.

It was announced on September 3 that Mr. Yadullah Aodi had been appointed as the new Foreign Minister.

Mr. Aodi was formerly Ambassador to Iraq.

Iranian Students' Demonstrations At UN HQ:

Iranian students demonstrated outside United Nations Headquarters in New York on August 23, protesting against "rigged elections" in Iran.

A student spokesman told newsmen: "There is no freedom of Press in Iran."

The student, who would not give his name because he said that his parents in Iran might suffer, said that his group supported a former Prime Minister, Mr. A. Mossadeq.

He said that 5,000 Iranian students throughout the United States would hold "token demonstrations" in support of their "brothers of Tehran University".

The demonstrators, who carried banners, said that several Iranian students had been killed and tortured in Iran, but the news had never reached the West.

Background:

This was the first time in Iran's history that the General Elections were based on a two-Party system, recently introduced by the Shah.

The two Parties which contested the Elections were the Mellyoun (Nationalists), the majority party led by the former Prime Minister, Dr. Manouchehr Eghbal; and the Mardom (People's) Opposition party led by Mr. Assadullah Alam, a former Minister of the Interior and a wealthy landowner.

[The outlawed Communists (Tudeh Masses) Party, which had monopolized Iran's political life during World War II, is now extinct, with its leaders hanged, imprisoned or living abroad.]

For this Election, Iranians gave up their customary individualism and campaigned on a Party programme. In the past, owing to the absence of a Party system in the accepted Western sense, they had voted for individuals rather than for policies.

The Iranian Parliament consists of two Houses—the Majlis (Lower House), which is the dominant political force since it can defeat the Government at any time by a no-confidence vote, and the Senate (Upper House) which has no power to veto legislation proposed by the Majlis and acts as a guidance council of elder statesmen.

Cabinet legislation must have the approval of the Majlis. The Majlis also initiates legislation and introduces its own Bills.

The Cabinet works outside the Majlis, and Cabinet Ministers are not Members of Parliament. If a Minister stands for election to the Majlis, he must resign his Cabinet post.

The Senate has 60 members, half of them elected by the people and half nominated by the Shah for six-year terms. Every three years, half the Senators—15 elected and 15 nominated—retire and are replaced, re-elected or re-nominated as the case may be. Those who have to vacate their seats and face re-election are chosen by lot.

The Constitution, drafted in 1906, was amended in 1957 to increase the number of Deputies in the Majlis from 136 to 200 and to extend its term of office from two to four years.

Each Deputy represents 100,000 people in Iran's population of 20,000,000. In the Elections, therefore, there were 64 extra seats to be filled.

The Election arrangements also included the representation of a fourth minority—the Assyrians. Hitherto, only three minorities—Jews, Armenians and Zoroastrians—had been represented in the Majlis. The Jews had one, Zoroastrians one and Armenians two Deputies. In the new House of 200, the Assyrians have one Deputy.

Another feature of the new arrangement of constituencies is that two seats have been allowed to the Islands belonging to Iran in the Persian Gulf. The contested Bahrein Island is to have one Deputy in the Majlis. The provision for a Deputy from Bahrein to sit in the Iranian Parliament is regarded by observers in Tehran as a re-affirmation of Iran's claim of sovereignty over that Island.

IRAQ

A. Law On Insurance Companies: A new law on insurance companies and agents, approved in April, 1960 came into force on August 23.

It laid down the conditions with which insurance companies, their branches and agents operating in Iraq must comply. It stipulated inter alia that foreign insurance companies can only carry on business in Iraq through a branch, or through an agent who is an Iraqi national, or an Iraqi company with 60 per cent Iraqi capital.

No person, real estate or property in Iraq may be directly insured outside Iraq. The companies can be required by the Minister of Trade to retain in Iraq 25 per cent (in the case of marine business) and 40 per cent (in the case of non-marine business) of the total premium received by them in the country during the preceding year and to invest a proportion of the income so retained in Iraqi companies, real estate mortgage, or Iraqi Government bonds.

JORDAN

A. Mr. Hazza Majali Killed In Foreign Office Explosion: The Prime Minister, Mr. Hazza Majali was killed on August 29 in a bomb explosion in his office in the Foreign Ministry.

Amman Radio announced Mr. Majali's death on behalf of King Hussein.

According to first reports, nine other persons had also died and 50 were injured. Among the dead was the Secretary-General of the Foreign Ministry. It was later officially stated that six others had been killed in the explosion.

Troops were ordered to patrol the streets of Amman and a curfew was imposed. All traffic was banned.

King Hussein took personal command of security operations.

Communications were broken off between Amman and Damascus (capital of the Syrian Region of the United Arab Republic).

Cairo Radio, quoting unofficial reports, said that a second bomb had exploded in the office of the Director-General of Publications.

[Mr. Majali, who became Prime Minister in May, 1959, also led the Cabinet for a week in 1956.]

King Hussein's Statement:

King Hussein told a news conference in Amman on August 30 that the United Arab Republic was directly involved in the assassination.

He made the further charge that the assassins were linked with responsible people in UAR.

He added that two persons were mainly responsible for placing the time-bombs causing the deaths; one at least was known to have escaped to Syria.

Jordan, he said, was demanding their return.

He requested the United Arab Republic to return the two men—Shaker Abbas and Kamal Shammout—who are suspected of placing the bomb in the Foreign Ministry.

He said that if the two men were not returned, Jordan would appeal for action from the Arab League. If this did not produce results, he would ask for United Nations intervention.

He said that the two men involved had been coming to and from Syria. "It is one incident in a chain. We ask UAR to return them."

Investigations Started:

The Military Board of Inquiry started investigations into the bomb explosion on August 29.

Board sources said that a messenger boy at the Press Bureau, which occupies part of the Prime Minister's Office, had been detained for interrogation in connexion with the explosion.

His two colleagues, who disappeared several hours before the blast were believed to have crossed into Syria which they had visited frequently during the past month.

The two missing messengers—Kamal Shammout and Shaker Abbas—used to sleep at the Press Bureau and, according to the official source, Shammout was seen leaving the building at 04-00 local time on August 29, eight hours before the time-bomb exploded.

Shammout (22) had previously been employed by the Egyptian Middle East News Agency before its offices in Amman were closed early in 1957.

The two messengers were believed to have placed one time-bomb in Mr. H. Majali's office and another in the Director of the Press Bureau's office.

New Cabinet Formed:

A Royal Decree on August 30 approved the formation of a new Cabinet headed by Mr. Bahjat Talhouni.

Mr. Talhouni was previously Chief of the Royal Cabinet.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

All but one of the Ministers were reappointed and some of their portfolios reallocated. Three new Ministers were named.

Mr. Mouib el Mady Arrested:

The Middle East News Agency said from Amman on September 6 that the Jordan Director of Information, Mr. Mouib el Mady, had been arrested in connexion with the bomb explosion.

It added that the Royal Security Services had stated that Mr. Mouib el Mady was not in his office at the Foreign Ministry when the building was destroyed in the explosion, and that before the incident, he had enquired whether the two employees of the Ministry charged with placing the bomb had crossed the frontier into Syria.

Mr. A. K. Hassouna In Amman:

The Secretary-General of the Arab League, Mr. Abdul Khalek Hassouna, flew to Amman on September 2 and had a meeting with King Hussein. He returned to Beirut on September 4.

Mr. Hassouna had gone to Amman at the invitation of King Hussein to discuss Jordan's allegation of UAR complicity in the assassination of Mr. Majali.

The Government of Jordan had asked his help in securing the return of the two messenger boys, allegedly involved in the bomb explosion, from Damascus where they were reported to have taken refuge. The UAR Government denied that the boys were in their territory.

On September 3, a gun-powder factory in a village in North Jerusalem was destroyed in an explosion. There were no casualties.

Earlier in the day (September 3), a bomb exploded in open ground in a suburb of Amman. Here also no one was injured. A youth, said to be a relative of one of the two messengers suspected of complicity in the explosion in which Mr. H. Majali was killed, was arrested.

Background:

The West Asia correspondent of The Statesman, Calcutta gave the following background to the assassination of Mr. Majali:

"The assassination of the Jordan Premier, Mr. Hazza Majali, is the direct outcome of the struggle between the Hashemite monarchy of Jordan and forces of what is loosely called Arab nationalism.

"Mr. Majali was a Bedouin from southern Jordan, vigorous, loud-voiced and simple-minded. He strongly supported King Hussein's policy of outright opposition to both UAR and Iraq and even added personal embellishment. He was particularly violent against the idea of a Palestine entity, which, though proposed by UAR and Iraq, was given silent support by two-thirds of the Jordanian people who are Palestinian. He believed in dealing blow for blow in the inter-Arab propaganda war. He seemed to thrive on opposition, but it has caught up with him.

"Three weeks ago, there was the first of a new series of bomb explosions after a two-year lull, which occurred in the Agriculture Ministry, a hundred yards from the Premier's office. A few days ago, Mr. Majali had referred to these contemptuously as 'crackers.'

"The incident makes nonsense of the pious platitudes passed by the recent Arab Foreign Ministers' Conference. It is regrettable that such a violent tragedy is required to bring home to King Hussein that an anachronistic tribal monarchy should not stand too strongly and openly against the tide of history.

"The appointment by King Hussein of Mr. Bahjat Talhouni as successor to Mr. Majali is a clear indication that he is determined to continue the existing policy of isolationism and hostility towards UAR and Iraq and opposition to the suggestion of a Palestine entity.

"Mr. Talhouni is even more devoted to the Hashemite ruling family than Mr. Majali and has a reputation for toughness and cleverness. Political tensions within Jordan are bound to increase.

"UAR is already being accused of the assassination in Jordan and outside. While it is true that the Voice of Arabs Radio made a particularly impassioned plea a week ago to the Jordan people to get rid of their 'treacherous rulers' and is now saying that Mr. Majali got what he deserved, it must be remembered that Palestinians, who in a big majority within Jordan were against Mr. Majali because of his opposition to a Palestine entity and his approval of Jordan joining the Baghdad Pact (CENTO) in December, 1956, after rioting forced his resignation after three days in office, King Abdullah was killed by Palestinians one year before Colonel Nasser appeared in Egypt."

LEBANON

A. Government's Vote Of Confidence: Mr. Saeb Salam's Government sought the confidence of the Chamber of Deputies on August 18 on the basis of a firm assurance that the Lebanon's present status would be maintained.

The Government faced a crisis four days after its formation on August 1, when the Right-wing Christian Falanges Party threatened to withdraw its two Ministers after publication by a Cairo newspaper of an alleged interview with Mr. Salam in which he was reported to have said that his Government was a continuation of the 1958 Revolution (against President Chamoun's regime). Mr. Salam, however, assured the Party that he had been misquoted.

He re-affirmed his policy by announcing the adherence of his Government to the 1943 National Charter, dealing with the existing relations between the Muslim and Christian communities in the Lebanon.

The Government's foremost pre-occupation, he said, was to maintain the country's independence and sovereignty and to defend these against whomsoever might assail them.

In its foreign relations, he said, the Government sought friendship with all countries but without commitments derogating from sovereignty.

He promised several internal reforms, including free and compulsory education and gradual social security. Foreign investment would be encouraged on the basis of free trade.

NEPAL

A. Tibetan Refugees From India To Be Screened: The Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told a news conference at Khatmandu on August 30 that the 2,700 Tibetan refugees who had come to Nepal recently from India would be screened and individual cases permitted to stay in the country.

The Government would not stand in the way of those who wanted to go back to Tibet, but, he added, they would not permit refugees to make Nepal a base for hostile activities in Tibet.

He said that just because the Tibetans came from India, it did not mean that they were not 'genuine'. Including the 2,700 Tibetan refugees who had come from India, there were in all 6,700 Tibetan refugees in Nepal.

The Government had plans to give immediate relief to the refugees and district authorities had been instructed to provide relief and settle those who wished to remain in Nepal at higher altitudes where they would be engaged in sheep-breeding and dairy farming.

The Home Minister, Mr. S. P. Upadhyaya, who was present at the news conference, said that stray cases of refugees being found with arms and ammunition and 'walkie talkie' sets had been reported, but they were very few.

Co-operation With Israel:

Mr. Koirala devoted a major part of his news conference to his impressions of Israel from where he had returned recently.

He disclosed that two Israeli teams, one composed of agricultural engineers and the other of construction engineers, would come to Nepal by the third week of September to survey the possibilities of technical co-operation between the two countries.

There were many avenues of co-operation between Israel and Nepal. Some Nepalese Army experts might go to Israel to study techniques and to see defence establishments and factories. Also, Nepalese families might go to live in Israeli agricultural settlements. There was no other country as exciting as Israel and he described his experiences there as "exhilarating."

He said: "For a small country like ours, Israel's military system is not a bad thing. While there is no standing army in Israel, 1,000,000 Israeli soldiers could be mobilized in seven hours."

Asked if this system did not have its inherent drawbacks in Nepal where the terrain and lack of communications were difficult, he replied: "I don't think there will ever be any need for us to mobilize for war — we have friendly neighbours on either side — but Israel is living in an atmosphere of conflict and hostility".

Replying to another question, he said that he did not think Nepal's relations with Israel would affect Nepal's ties with Arab countries.

B. Three Opposition Parties Combine: Three Nepalese political parties decided on September 7 to combine in an effort to provide effective democratic opposition to the Government.

The parties were the Right-wing Gorkha Parishad—the chief opposing group in Parliament led by Mr. Bharat Shamsher—Mr. Bhadrakali Misra's faction of the Praja Parishad and Mr. D. R. Regmi's Nepali National Congress.

In a joint statement, the three leaders said: "We have resolved to take action towards enlisting the co-operation of other democratic elements as well and building together a single strong political party."

The total strength of these three parties in the House of Representatives is 20 out of 109.

Both Mr. Misra and Mr. Regmi are former Ministers.

Though the three leaders did not say so categorically, reliable reports said that they were keen to enlist the support of the former Prime Minister, Dr. K. I. Singh, to bring about an effective polarization of democratic parties in the Opposition.

Dr. Singh's United Democratic Party is a constituent of the National Democratic Front, a three-party alliance.

PAKISTAN

A. Success Of Canal Waters Talks —F-M Ayub Khan's Statement: In a broadcast to the people of Pakistan on September 4, the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, said that with the settlement of the Canal Waters dispute between India and Pakistan, the solution of the Kashmir issue had acquired a new sense of urgency.

He said: "The very fact that we will have to be content with the waters of the three western rivers will underline the importance of having physical control of the upper reaches of these rivers to secure the maximum utilization for the ever-growing needs of West Pakistan."

He expressed the hope that the settlement of the Canal Waters dispute "will lead to a sympathetic and realistic appreciation of our stand on Kashmir."

He thanked the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, for his contribution to the success of the Canal Waters negotiations and said: "I would like to tell you that in the conclusive stages of negotiations on this Treaty, it was the personal intervention of Mr. Nehru which helped to remove certain obstacles that had arisen over arrangements relating to the transition period. I take this opportunity of thanking him for his contribution."

He said that the implementation of the Canal Waters Treaty would be entrusted to a Commission consisting of a nominee of each country (India and Pakistan). Disputes, if any, would be referred to a neutral expert or a court of arbitration.

The Treaty, he said, embodied a compromise, reflecting the spirit of give and take on both sides, so indispensable to a final settlement in the interests of peace and amity between the two countries and the welfare of their people.

The settlement was based on a division of rivers, according to which, after the transition period of ten years, extendable at Pakistan's request to 13 years, the three eastern rivers would exclusively fall to India's share, and the waters of the three western rivers would be available to Pakistan, except for certain limited uses in upstream areas in the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

F-M Ayub Khan said that the solution of the Canal Waters dispute "is not an ideal one, but it is the best that we can get under the circumstances, many of which, irrespective of the merits and legality of the case, are against us. So, while there is no cause for rejoicing at this juncture, there is certainly cause for satisfaction, and the very ugly situation, which may have arisen in the absence of such an agreement, has been averted, and we have been able to get the best that was possible."

Paying a tribute to the World Bank team for its work in bringing about the settlement, he said that the realization of imminent danger to the peace of the sub-continent, posed by the quarrel over the Indus Basin waters had made the World Bank step in as mediator in 1951. The World Bank had worked with magnificent perseverance and tact over long and painful years with the delegations of the two countries to evolve a solution, which had now been shaped into a full-fledged Treaty to be signed between the two countries. "I have nothing but admiration for President Eugene Black and the Vice-President, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, of the World Bank, and for the Bank team, which brought the negotiations to its fruitful conclusion."

He thanked the World Bank and friendly nations who had come forward to help finance the scheme, which would cost more than Rs. 5,000,000,000. Their action was not only due to their sympathy, but proof of their interest in the stability of this "sensitive part of the world."

It also ordered the confiscation of the Party's property and archives.

The Court gave two reasons for its order. First, it said that the Democratic Party had failed to live up to its own statutes by not holding a general meeting of its members for more than a year. Secondly, the Party had violated the Constitution and therefore, the Court considered the Party an illegal organization.

SPORT

A. Pakistan Wins Olympic Hockey Championship: Pakistan won the 1960 Olympic Hockey Gold Medal, beating India, holders since 1928, by 1-0 in the final in Rome on September 9.

India received the Silver Medal as runner-up.

The Bronze Medal was won by Spain earlier on the same day (September 9) when she beat Britain by 2-1 in the match between the losing semi-finalists to decide third and fourth places.

The final between India and Pakistan, in which the only goal was scored by the Pakistan inside-left, Nasser, in the eleventh minute from the start of play, was watched by probably the biggest crowd ever for a hockey match. It was also televised through Western Europe.

Pakistan had already given warning of her prowess in annexing the 1958 Asian Games title at Tokyo on goal average after drawing with India in the final.

Pakistan had the best of a rather scrappy match. The Indians never produced the brilliant stick-work and positional play that was associated with their great pre-War men and those of 1948 and 1952.

Outstanding among the winners were the two backs and the forward inside trio, of whom Nasser was the pick.

The Indians' best were their two full-backs, Prithipal Singh and Jamanlal, skipper Claudius and forwards John Peter and Jaswant Singh.

The teams were:

Pakistan: Abdul Rashid; Bashir Ahmad and M. Latif; Ghulam Rasul, Anwar and Habib Ali; Noor Alam, Abdul Hamid, Abdul Waheed, Nasser Ahmad and Moti Ullah.

India: Laxman; Prithipal Singh and Jaman Lal; L. Claudius, J. Antic and Mohindar Lal; Joginder Singh, John Peter, Jaswant Singh, Udham Singh and Bhola.

The final placings in the tournament were:

1—Pakistan; 2—India; 3—Spain; 4—Britain.

CEYLON

A. Budget For 1960-61: Ceylon's Budget estimates for the financial year beginning October 1, presented to the House of Representatives on September 13, showed a deficit of nearly Rs. 470 million.

The estimated revenue was Rs. 1,503.66 million and expenditure Rs. 1,973.40 million. The former included foreign aid to the tune of Rs. 27.45 million, anticipated on the basis of existing Agreements.

Of the total expenditure, Rs. 442.186 million was earmarked for expenditure on economic development.

The figures for the Ministries of Industries, Agriculture, Education, Health and Housing showed an appreciable increase over the previous year's estimates.

The allocations for the Ministries are as follows (all figures in millions of rupees):

Defence and External Affairs—148.538 (the previous year's estimate 111.733); Industries and Home Affairs—146.207 (the previous year's 84.959); Agriculture, Irrigation, Land and Power—327.361 (the previous year's 139.188); Health—157.336 (the previous year's 136.463); Education—313.719 (the previous year's 278.09); Transport 269.515 (the previous year's 212.957); and Local Government and Housing—60.574 (the previous year's 40.460).

Revenue Proposals:

The Finance Minister, Mr. Felix Dias Bandaranaike announced in Colombo on September 15 his revenue proposals intended to raise funds towards bridging Ceylon's Budget deficit of nearly Rs. 470 million.

They included an annual levy of Rs. 400 on foreigners resident in Ceylon on visas for longer than three months.

The proposals, which in the aggregate were expected to yield over Rs. 130 million, also included a 15 per cent surcharge on income-tax and the introduction of land tax at the rate of Rs. 15 per acre, payable by individuals owning 100 acres or more.

Mr. Bandaranaike proposed an annual levy of Rs. 50 for every Rs. 10,000 nominal share capital of companies registered under the Companies Ordinance with the exception of industrial or manufacturing corporations approved by the Government.

He announced that the registration of all business would be compulsory and that a levy of Rs. 1,000 a year would be imposed on business which was wholly foreign or in which there was foreign partnership or interest, and a levy of Rs. 250 on other categories of business.

A professional tax on accountants, architects, consulting engineers, contractors, foreign medical practitioners and lawyers was also proposed to raise over Rs. 3 million.

He estimated that nearly Rs. 240 million could be borrowed locally, and expected to meet the foreign exchange component of Rs. 150 million provided in the Budget from sources such as the World Bank and it was hoped to secure another Rs. 60 million by way of aid and loans.

A highlight of his proposals was the series of concessions and assurances he held out in a bid to attract foreign investments in the country.

They were: (1) Foreign capital would generally be for productive purposes, particularly in new fields of industrial activity or in fields where the private sector had not already established itself in the country; (2) It would be permitted in collaboration with local enterprises, such collaboration being dispensed with only if local enterprise was not forthcoming or if the enterprise undertook to manufacture products for export under trade names of wide usage.

CHINA

A. Government's Statement On Exchange Of Correspondents With USA: A spokesman of the Foreign Ministry Information Department in Peking issued a statement on September 13 setting out China's views on the exchange of news correspondents between China and USA.

The statement said that the US Government had "unreasonably opposed and obstructed" Chinese efforts to bring about an exchange of correspondents.

It quoted Chinese draft proposals on the matter, submitted at the Ambassadorial talks in Warsaw on September 7.

Commenting on the proposals, a US State Department spokesman had said on September 9 that these proposals required USA to guarantee that American newsmen would not write reports contrary to Chinese objectives, including the withdrawal of American armed forces from Taiwan.

The Chinese statement said: "The Chinese Government assumed in the past that although a radical improvement in Sino-American relations depended on the settlement of the fundamental issues between China and the United States and first of all on US agreement to withdraw all her armed forces from China's territory, Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits area, the two sides might as well discuss first some comparatively minor questions and reach fair and reasonable agreement so as to create favourable conditions for the settlement of the fundamental issues."

It said that following five years of talks, "the Chinese Government cannot but draw the conclusion that there is no need for any future talks to waste time on minor questions. Efforts should first be devoted to settling the fundamental issues between China and USA, namely, the consent of the US Government to settle disputes between China and USA by peaceful means without resort to the use or threat of force, and her consent to withdraw all her armed forces from China's territory, Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits area."

INDIA

SUMMARY: National Development Council Approves Third Plan Draft; US Loan To A-II; Aid From France For Petroleum Research Institute; Diplomatic Appointments; Cultural Agreement With USSR; Uranium Research.

A. National Development Council Approves Draft Third Plan: The National Development Council (NDC) met in New Delhi on September 12 and 13 and recorded its general approval of the draft outline of the Third Plan. It laid down broad criteria for determining the outlays for the plans of the States.

Inaugurating the Council session, which was attended by the Chief Ministers of all the States, the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, said that the country should strive its utmost to build up its defence and economy.

He emphasized the need for earning money by maximizing exports of not only those goods which the country could spare but also of those which she herself needed. That sort of austerity, he pointed out, would reduce dependence on foreign aid.

Apart from his emphasis on export promotion, his opening speech referred to "internal conflicts" as well as to the general international situation which, he said, was "essentially worse than it has been for several years".

He regretted that the recent disturbances in Assam had deflected not only the country's attention and energy but also her meagre resources from economic development.

Another important point made by him was that the richer sections of the population obviously had a lot of money—as was shown by the heavily over-subscribed market flotations—and the cry that the country was being overtaxed was "ridiculous".

In response to some queries, he declared that the State Governments would be free to undertake industrial and mineral projects on their own, provided they could find the necessary resources and technical personnel.

The Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission, Mr. G. L. Nanda, on September 13 told the Council that any substantial increase in the size of the Third Plan beyond the levels indicated in the draft outline was not feasible.

He said that the outlays suggested by the State Governments came to nearly three times the total outlay provided for the States in the draft outline. He added that while large reductions in the suggested outlays of the States could not be avoided, the Planning Commission would undertake this task in consultation with the States in as objective a manner as possible.

Broad Objectives:

The Council laid down the broad objectives for determining the outlays on plans of the States.

These objectives were: (1) to make the maximum contribution to the increase in agricultural production; (2) to secure the largest possible measure of increase in employment; (3) to develop social services, in particular, elementary education, water supply and sanitation and health services in the rural areas; and (4) to raise the standard of living in the less-developed areas.

On the question of financial resources, the Council agreed that the levy of excise duties by the Central Government on some more commodities with a view to distributing the revenue among the States, should be considered afresh. (Excise duties are already being levied on cloth, sugar and tobacco). The Council decided to review recent experience in this connexion and to obtain data regarding the consumption of cloth, sugar and tobacco. Accordingly, the Central Statistical Organization was directed to collect necessary information on this subject within six months. The data would be submitted to the next Finance Commission.

Co-operative Farming:

The Council accepted the recommendations made by the working group under the chairmanship of Mr. S. Nijalingappa on co-operative farming to undertake 3,200 pilot projects in addition to programmes for development of co-operative farming, which will be formulated by the States during the next three months.

It did not consider it necessary to lay down specific targets for the number of co-operative farming societies to be set up during the Third Plan, but suggested that the objective should be to build up the foundations for the development of co-operative farming, so that over the next ten years a substantial portion of the agricultural lands would be cultivated on co-operative lines.

The principle that there should be no compulsion in the organization of co-operative societies was also re-affirmed. The Council approved of the special assistance being given to co-operative farming societies.

On the question of co-operative credit, it decided to make the village the primary unit for organizing service co-operatives and to allow State participation in the share capital of primary societies.

Meanwhile, the Price Sub-Committee of the NDC endorsed the policy of keeping prices of essential goods under check through selective controls, buffer stocks, "nucleus State trading" and procurement.

B. US Loan To A-II: It was announced in Washington on September 14 that the US Export-Import Bank had approved a transaction for the purchase by Air-India International of one Boeing 707 commercial jet airliner. The Bank would assist in the sale by extending a credit of $4.1 million to India.

The President of the Bank, Mr. Samuel C. Waugh, said that the total cost of the airliner would be $6 million. Air-India International would pay 20 per cent of the dollar cost before delivery and the Boeing Airplane Company of Seattle would finance 12 per cent of the dollar cost. The Bank would finance the remaining 68 per cent of the total dollar cost.

The latest Boeing addition to Air-India's jet fleet is a 600-m.p.h. plane which can accommodate 131 passengers and has limited cargo facilities. Aircraft delivery is expected in April, 1961.

D. Petroleum Research Institute—Aid From France: Details of the Agreement signed between India and France for the establishment of a Petroleum Research Institute at Dehra Dun were available in New Delhi on September 14. The Institute is estimated to cost Rs. 2,69,00,000.

Two experts of the French Institute of Petroleum, who will head the gas and oil refining and petro-chemistry division and the petroleum products application division of the Indian Institute, were expected to arrive in India within a week.

Under the Agreement, 13 French experts will be deputed to the Institute, which will have a total complement of 145 scientific and technical personnel. The expenditure on the experts will be shared by the two countries.

The French Government will also train Indian officers at the French Institute of Petroleum and will bear the bulk of the expenditure.

The Indian Institute will undertake research training and documentation in the field of petroleum and natural gas from distillation and refining to utilization.

The French experts, including the Director-General of the French Institute of Petroleum have recommended that the Indian Institute should function as a training centre in petroleum technology.

G. Supreme Court Decision On Punjab Forward Contracts Tax Act: The Supreme Court on September 13 declared the Punjab Forward Contracts Tax Act of 1951 void and unconstitutional.

The Court held that the Act, which provided for a levy of a tax on the business in forward contracts, was beyond the legislative competence of the State Legislature.

The ruling was given by a Constitution Bench of the Court while allowing an appeal by the Bullion and Grain Exchange Ltd., and other businessmen of Ludhiana, challenging the validity of the Act.

It was contended on behalf of the State Government that the Act fell within Item 62 of the State List and was, therefore, within the competence of the State Legislature (Item 62 mentions "taxes on luxuries, including taxes on entertainment, amusements, betting and gambling.")

A writ petition by the appellants for restraining the State Government from levying any tax under the Act had earlier been dismissed by the High Court.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

H. Jury System: Largely by the experience of several court cases, and by the recent trial of Commander K. M. Nanavati (Indian Navy) for the murder of Mr. P. B. Ahuja, the system of trial by jury, introduced in parts of India by British lawyers and jurists over a hundred years ago, has come to be critically discussed. The jury had pronounced Nanavati "not guilty" by an 8-1 majority. The jury verdict was described as "perverted" by the Sessions Judge, and it was referred to the Bombay High Court. The High Court found the murder proved and sentenced Com. Nanavati to life imprisonment.

The system has not been adopted over a large part of the country. Its application even in areas where it has been adopted is limited to certain classes of offences.

The Law Commission, in its last report, had recommended that trial by jury should be abolished because it "has had such a long trial" and had proved "a failure."

At one time, Bombay and Madras States brought into effect the system of trial by jury in parts of their States, but the working of the system was found unsatisfactory and was discontinued outside the "Presidency towns." In Uttar Pradesh, the system was abolished in 1953.

It was learnt that the Bombay High Court had recommended to the State Government the abolition of the system in Greater Bombay.

At present, the system of trial by jury does not prevail in Andhra Pradesh, Assam, Orissa, Kerala, Punjab, Rajasthan and UP.

The statutory right to a trial by jury conferred by the Criminal Procedure Code was confined to the Presidency towns of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras where the High Courts exercised original criminal jurisdiction.

The position has now been altered by special provisions. All criminal trials in the City of Madras now take place either before the Presidency Magistrates or the City Sessions Court. The trial of certain offences in the City Sessions Court is by jury. They are, broadly speaking, some offences against property.

In Bombay, however, Greater Bombay has been declared a Sessions Division and all Sessions cases in the area are tried in the City Sessions Court by jury.

In Calcutta, a City Sessions Court has been established, but its jurisdiction is limited. All trials before this Court are by jury.

Outside these three cities, the matter is regulated by two sections of the Criminal Procedure Code, one of which says that all trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury or by the judge himself. The second section empowers the State Governments to extend or revoke trial by jury in any Court of Session in any district.

In West Bengal, however, the system obtains in 12 of the State's 15 districts and the State Government is understood to be contemplating its extension to another district.

Among the other States, the system has been adopted in 10 of Bihar's 17 districts in regard to some offences against property.

In Madhya Pradesh, where the system prevails in three of the 43 districts, the Government is understood to be considering its abolition.

In Mysore, the system applies—in nine out of 19 districts—only to some offences against property.

In Britain, where the accused has a right to trial by jury only in respect of indictable offences, he can, and often does, ask to be tried summarily by magistrates in a large number of cases. In civil litigation also there has been a marked decline in its popularity.

In USA, where the right of trial by jury is embodied in the Constitution, it is frequently waived by the accused to avoid publicity.

In France, the system proved a failure and has now been discontinued in its English form.

It is maintained by critics of the system—who form a considerable body of legal opinion—that trial by jury is time-consuming, limits the rights of appeal of the accused, is open to the evils of unscrupulous professional jurors and is unsuited to the Indian temperament.

On the other hand, supporters of the jury system, who also constitute a large body of opinion, maintain that the system is "always the best tribunal for the trial of every question of fact." The jury has been referred to as "a palladium" of justice and liberty by Blackstone and other English writers.

The system has the advantage of associating the public with the administration of criminal justice and, it serves to inculcate in the citizen a sense of duty and responsibility and a respect for law.

Among the eminent Indian supporters of the jury system is Mr. Justice K. Subba Rao, a former Judge of the Supreme Court, who has appealed for a revival of the system which he has called "one of the cherished institutions."

I. Uranium Reserves: Recent drilling and survey operations undertaken by the Government's Atomic Minerals Division show that the country's reserves of uranium ore are larger than had been indicated in earlier estimates.

According to the previous estimates, India's reserves were adequate to replenish the first atomic power station for more than ten years.

Latest surveys suggest that the earlier calculation of the country's reserves of uranium ore as being capable of producing 400 tons of uranium metal was an underestimate.

Some idea of the cost of importing uranium can be had from the fact that recently the Government decided to spend Rs. 13 lakhs on the purchase of 26,500 kgs. of uranium precipitants required for the Atomic Reactor at Trombay.

The survey operations were carried out in Umra in Rajasthan, Chavara in Kerala, Jaduguda in Bihar and Ratnagiri in Maharashtra.

IRAN

A. Trade Agreement With USA Terminated: At the request of the Iranian Government, the US-Iran Reciprocal Trade Agreement of April 8, 1943, was terminated as from August 26.

Future trade relations between the two countries will be governed by the 1955 Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights, which became effective in 1957 and which contains a "most favoured nation" clause.

The effect of the termination of the 1943 Agreement was that the minimum tariff rates on a wide range of goods, both American and Iranian, were abolished. The minimum rates also automatically applied to another 17 countries, but not all of them would now be entitled to "most favoured nation" treatment.

As a result, the Iranian Government expects to receive an additional revenue of about 350,000,000 rials a year from the higher tariff rates on special goods which hitherto enjoyed the minimum rates applicable under the 1943 Agreement with USA.

Special concessions under GATT (General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs) would not be affected.

In 1959, the value of US exports to Iran was $114,000,000, and US imports from Iran amounted to $47,000,000.

Under the Agreement, Iraq received an additional loan of 180,000,000 roubles (approximately £16,000,000). The earlier Agreement provided for a loan of 550,000,000 roubles.

The new loan is intended for the building of the broad-guage Baghdad-Basra railway line. Within four years, Russia will carry out the survey and design, deliver equipment, rails, materials and rolling stock and will co-operate in establishing projects for wagon-assembling and locomotives repair shops and for producing re-inforced concrete sleepers.

JAPAN

A. Relations With USA: The Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Zentaro Kosaka, had talks with the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, on problems of common interest in Washington on September 13.

A joint communique issued at the conclusion of the talks said that they had agreed on the importance of maintaining close co-operation between Japan and USA within the frame-work of the new Mutual Security Treaty.

The communique re-affirmed the need for an early resumption of negotiations on general disarmament as also the necessity of an early nuclear weapons test ban Agreement, incorporating provisions for effective international control.

Both statesmen expressed their hopes for a speedy improvement of Japanese-Korean relations. They also agreed to promote further contacts and exchanges in the economic, cultural and scientific fields.

After exchanging views on various problems in Asia, they agreed to maintain close contact and consultation on matters of mutual interest in the area.

They also agreed that trade between the two countries should expand in the future "on a liberal and orderly basis."

Mr. Herter welcomed Mr. Kosaka's statement that the Japanese Government intended to promote its liberalization programmes "as rapidly as circumstances permit."

At a news conference later in the day (September 13) Mr. Kosaka said that if President Eisenhower were to go to Japan now, he did not think there would be any hostile demonstrations against him.

He said: "We feel that the situation has calmed down now and that the nightmare has passed."

He added that a situation such as that which compelled President Eisenhower to give up his visit to Japan would not arise again and added: "If and when he comes we are sure he will be given a proper welcome."

Asked whether there was a possibility of President Eisenhower being invited before the expiration of his term of office, he stressed that the original invitation still stood.

B. Agreement With Benelux Countries: The Dutch Ministry of Economic Affairs said in The Hague on September 5 that a new Trade Agreement had been concluded between the Benelux countries (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg) and Japan, providing for the "most favoured nation" treatment for both sides.

The Agreement provided for consultations if serious market disturbances occurred in any sector of the economy of an importing country following exports from an exporting country.

It said that Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands would retain several import restrictions when the Agreement came into force.

These covered 28 products including synthetic yarn and fabrics, cotton fabrics, gloves from synthetic fibres, clothing, rubber, footwear, earthenware and porcelain, iron and steel forks, knives and spoons, domestic sewing machines and pencils.

The list of restrictions would be reviewed every year.

Imports into Japan from the Benelux countries would receive equal treatment with those from other countries.

LAOS

A. Prince Souvanna Phouma Reconstitutes Cabinet: Constitutional problems caused by Captain Kong Lae's coup (see page 3523) were solved on August 29 when King Savang Vatthana accepted the resignation of the previous Government of Mr. Tiao Somsanith and appointed Prince Souvanna Phouma as the new Prime Minister.

The Prince and members of the National Assembly had gone to Luang Prabang where the King had been staying since August 9 when the coup took place in Vientiane.

Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, formerly Defence Minister in the Somsanith Government, who had refused to recognize the coup, also went to Luang Prabang, where after protracted negotiations, Gen. Nosavan and Prince Souvanna Phouma issued a joint statement calling for peace and harmony in the Kingdom.

On August 30 Prince Souvanna Phouma announced a new Cabinet, which, contrary to earlier reports, included both Left-wing and Right-wing members.

The key post of Minister of the Interior was given to the Right-wing leader, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan. Mr. Quinin Pholsena, who served as Minister of the Interior in the revolutionary regime and was a Leftist, became Minister of Information.

All the eight members of Prince Souvanna Phouma's neutralist Government were included in his new Cabinet, but not in the same posts. The new Government included five members of the Somsanith Government.

In Vientiane, on August 31 however, Captain Kong Lae said: "We do not want Ministers from the old Government in the new Cabinet. I have sent a message to Prince Souvanna Phouma and am still awaiting a reply."

In a radio broadcast later, he appealed to the Prime Minister, Prince Souvanna Phouma to remove two "traitors" in the new Government.

He said that the 800 paratroopers under him would rather be executed than let the "traitors"—Gen. Phoumi Nosavan and Mr. Inpeng, Finance Minister—take office.

However, in Luang Prabang, the National Assembly gave a vote of confidence to the new Government.

Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, later left for Savannakhet, his former counter-revolutionary headquarters, where he dissolved his movement which had opposed the assumption of power by Prince Souvanna Phouma after the coup.

New "Coup" Attempted:

It soon became evident that the compromise between Prince Souvanna Phouma and Gen. Phoumi Nosavan would not end the crisis. By September 10 an attempt at a new coup, engineered by Rightists and headed by the Inspector-General of the Government, Prince Boun Oum Na Champassak, was reported over Radio Savannakhet.

The Prince said in a broadcast that he had decided to assume power in Laos. He also said in his broadcast that martial law had been declared throughout the country.

Explaining the reasons for his decision to take power, he said that since Prince Souvanna Phouma had become Premier, "the country, instead of moving towards peace and tranquillity, as had been promised," was experiencing increased tensions day by day.

[Prince Boun Oum Na Champassak is a descendant of the Royal Family of Champassak, a territory which became part of Laos only 70 years ago.]

The Premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma, immediately instructed General Ouane Rathikoune, Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces, to restore law and order throughout the Kingdom.

He also declared a State of Emergency in the Kingdom.

MALAYA

A. Death of Paramount Ruler: The Yang di Pertuan Agong (Paramount Ruler), Sir Hisamuddin Alam Shah, died in Kuala Lumpur on September 1. He was 62.

Official mourning was ordered for 44 days.

He was Sultan of Selangor and elected Yang di Pertuan Agong by his fellow State rulers on April 14.

The death of Sir Hisamuddin meant that for the third time in the three years that the Malayan Federation had been independent, the nine State rulers would meet to elect a Paramount Ruler from among themselves. The first Paramount Ruler died in April, 1960 and the Raja of Perlis, who was the Timbalan Yang di Pertuan Agong (Deputy Paramount Ruler), acted as Paramount Ruler. He had again been acting as Paramount Ruler since August 8 when Sir Hisamuddin Alam Shah fell ill.

The late Sir Hisamuddin was chosen Deputy Paramount Ruler in 1957 and had acted three times as Paramount Ruler before the first holder of the office died on April 1.

NEPAL

A. Trade Agreement With India: Representatives of Nepal and India signed in Khatmandu on September 11 a new Treaty of Trade and Transit between the two countries.

The Commerce Minister, Mr. R. N. Mishra, signed for Nepal and the Indian Ambassador, Mr. Hareshwar Dayal, signed for his country.

The Treaty contained 14 Articles dealing with trade and transit facilities. According to the preamble, the Treaty aimed at expanding trade between the two countries, encouraging collaboration in economic development and facilitating trade with other countries.

Under the Treaty, Nepal will continue to levy import and export duties on goods imported from or exported to India. India, however, agreed that excise duties levied on goods exported to Nepal would be refunded to the Nepalese Government.

Both the countries agreed to take measures to prevent smuggling of their currencies from a third country and to prevent entry of goods passed in transit.

The Treaty laid down that Nepal would permit imports from a third country only against her own foreign exchange resources.

It stipulated that "neither party will issue any import licence on the basis that foreign exchange for it will be arranged by nationals of the other party."

If the Nepalese Government wanted to pursue a trade policy divergent from that of India there would be mutual consultations so as to ensure that there was no flow of goods imported from a third country into India.

Official sources in New Delhi explained that the Treaty, if operated in the spirit in which it was conceived, might lead to the development of a common market between India and Nepal within a limited field and encourage similar arrangements with other Asian and African countries. But if any provision of the Treaty was misused by unscrupulous businessmen, it might lead to serious complications.

engineers had designed a hydraulic power station and a 25-kilometre transmission line for Nepal.

The station, with a 1,200 kw capacity, is to be built at Panauti on the Kosi river.

The design was drawn up in accordance with the Soviet-Nepal Economic Agreement of April, 1959.

The necessary equipment for survey work has been delivered to Nepal.

Under the Agreement of 1959, the Soviet Union will also provide technical assistance in building a sugar refinery and tobacco factory in Nepal.

PAKISTAN

A. State Bank's Annual Report: The annual Report of the State Bank of Pakistan, released in Karachi on September 12, said that the price-level and the cost of living showed a marked upward trend during the year 1959-60.

The Report attributed this increase to the progressive lifting of price controls on a number of consumer goods and partly to the Government's policy of promoting exports.

Prices of foodstuffs, edible oils and tea showed a sharp rise during the year.

The cost of living index in Karachi in June, 1960 was 126 as against 110 in December, 1958.

Food production increased during the year and industrial production was accelerated. The industrial production index stood at 185 towards the middle of 1960 compared with 100 in 1954.

The Report said that money supply in the country increased by Rs. 29.60 crores to Rs. 585.58 crores during 1959-60. The main reason for the increase was said to be the sizable surplus in the country's international accounts.

The Bank credit registered a sharp increase of Rs. 31.54 crores during the year—entirely accounted for by the private sector. The credit touched an all-time peak of Rs. 162.29 crores in February, 1960.

The balance of payments recorded a surplus of Rs. 12.72 crores during 1959-60 as against Rs. 1.36 crores in 1958-59.

Pakistan's gold, dollar and sterling reserves stood at Rs. 116.96 crores at the end of June, 1960.

The Report added that the State Bank had earned a profit of Rs. 6.47 crores during the year.

TURKEY

A. Turco-Soviet Relations — Exchange Of Letters Between Mr. N. Khruschev And Gen. C. Gursel: Letters exchanged between the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev and the Turkish President, Gen. Cemal Gursel, released in Moscow on September 1, called for close co-operation between the Soviet Union and Turkey.

In a letter addressed to Gen. Gursel on June 28, Mr. Khruschev said: "I and my colleagues in the Soviet Government have familiarized ourselves with great satisfaction with your latest pronouncements on Turkey's relations with the Soviet Union, made during talks with our Ambassador in Ankara on June 14.

"I should like to note, above all, our agreement with you that both Turkey and the Soviet Union have a common desire to improve our relations. We also note and, for our part, ardently welcome the fact that you do not have any objections of principle to the subsequent turning of Soviet-Turkish relations into close co-operation. Since our goals coincide in this respect, this shall then be what we must work for in the interests of the peoples of our two countries.

"You are well aware of our attitude to military pacts as well as our views on the participation in them by our neighbours, and I would not be frank if I did not state this now too.

"Of course, I shall say this frankly, it is our deep conviction that the most sincere relations between our two neighbouring countries would develop if Turkey embarked upon the road of neutrality.

"Turkey would receive an opportunity to use her resources, not for war preparations on which huge funds have been squandered so far, but for raising the country's national economy and the welfare of her people. Military spendings are a fathomless pit and not every country can endure their burden and develop her economy at the same time.

"I have expressed to you my frank opinion. This, of course, is not a condition for the improvement of our relations. We believe that this should be started and any step in this direction, let alone the achievement of this goal, will be greeted by us as sincere and true friends of the Turkish people and the independent Turkish State. We are not striving to deteriorate Turkey's relations with USA or the other Western Powers. Such a desire is alien to us. Moreover, we ourselves are striving to have good relations with the Western Powers, including the United States. If we are unable to establish such relations with some of them, or moreover, to make them good and lasting, it is no fault of ours.

"Your desire that Turkey, despite the binding nature of the existing commitments and alliances, should pursue an independent policy, meets with the understanding of the Soviet Government. We in the Soviet Union want most of all to see our neighbour-countries prosper and pursue an independent foreign policy.

"Irrespective of the past, the time has now come to rid our relations of the load of various prejudices and to start restoring step by step the confidence which formerly existed between our two countries.

"It is absolutely clear that the main thing now is not to search for questions on which we disagree. On the contrary, we must search for points on which our views coincide so as to advance along the road of rapprochement."

Gen. C. Gursel's Reply:

Gen. C. Gursel replied to Mr. Khruschev's communication on July 8.

He said: "I note with satisfaction the desire expressed in your message to arrive at better relations between our two countries and I can sincerely assure you that I fully share this wish.

"However, guided by the desire to leave no doubts concerning the position of the Turkish Government on certain points of your message, I should like in this connexion to give Your Excellency the following explanations. I wish to add that this clarification in no way reduces the prospects for improving relations between our two countries, but is proof that Turkey's commitments under the defensive alliances to which she belongs leave her enough leeway for arriving at the desired improvement.

"The Government which I head was set up as a result of the movement for national reforms, started on May 27. This movement, in conformity with its very first statements, did not fail to state with ample clarity that Turkey would remain loyal to her international commitments and specifically, to those of them which arise from the existence of her alliances such as NATO and CENTO.

"These alliances were concluded in conformity with the principles of the United Nations Charter. They pursue purely defensive purposes and are a consequence of the lawful and imperative need, which Turkey cannot overlook, lest she should prejudice her independence and security.

"Our policy of alliances has nothing incompatible with good-neighbourly relations between our two countries. As I have already noted, the alliances to which Turkey belongs are of an exclusively defensive nature and are not directed against any country, only against a potential aggressor.

"Allow me, Mr. Chairman, to dwell on the thought which occurred to me when I was reading your message. I do not think that the pursuance of a neutral policy can free the Government from military expenditures. If it were so, then countries such as Sweden, Switzerland or India, for that matter, would have had no military budgets. However, these countries, as you certainly know, maintain considerable means of defence, pressing a heavy burden on their budgets. They do so because they feel it necessary despite their neutralist policies.

"In reality, liquidation or at least reduction of military expenditures can be made possible not by neutrality, but by the establishment of a system of universal disarmament with an effective control mechanism, which would ensure the security of all the countries of the world, big or small, against any aggression on the part of any State.

"Until the creation of such a system of international disarmament towards which Turkey is striving just as passionately as any other country sincerely desiring peace, no State can renounce the means of ensuring her security. Turkey, prompted by this lawful concern, remains loyal to her policy of membership in collective security systems.

"Let me emphasize in this connexion that far from contradicting the pursuance by Turkey of a policy of multilateral co-operation with a view to securing peace and the independence of nations, these principles, on the contrary, are a logical foundation of this policy. Proof of this is the fact that already in 1934 and 1937 Turkey was successfully working in accordance with these principles to create the Balkan and Saadbad Pacts, whose purpose was to preserve the independence of their members and the peace of the area in question.

"I note with great satisfaction, Mr. Chairman, that the Soviet Government desires to confirm its statement of May 30, 1953. I, just as you, really believe that genuine improvement of relations between our countries is possible within the frame-work of the principles advanced in this statement, principles which Turkey, for her part, has never rejected.

"In conclusion, I would like again to express the hope that the considerations I have set forth above will convince Your Excellency that nothing in Turkish policy obstructs the improvement of relations between our two countries."

B. First Five-Year Industrialization Plan Completed: The UAR Embassy in New Delhi, in a Press release issued early in September said that the First Five-Year Industrialization Plan had been completed and work had begun on the Second Plan.

The Press release quoted the Managing Director of the Five-Year Industrialization Authority as saying: "Only two projects now remain to be carried out from the first industrialization programme, one of which envisages the establishment of a dye-stuffs-producing plant, and the other the construction of a laboratory to produce films for cinematographic purposes and X-ray examinations."

He revealed that work had started a few weeks earlier on the implementation of the Second Industrialization Plan and that tenders had been invited from foreign firms for the establishment of four weaving plants, two spinning units and one dye-stuffs factory.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Mr. N. Khruschev Calls For UN 'Summit'; Employees Of US National Security Agency Granted Asylum In Russia; Russian Plans To Send Man Into Space; Britain Becomes Member Of IDA; UNESCO Conference On Adult Education.

A. Mr. N. Khruschev Calls For UN 'Summit' To Discuss Disarmament: The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, said in Helsinki on September 4 that disarmament was one of the most important problems facing the world today.

"I have, therefore, proposed that the Government chiefs personally shall lead their delegations to the UN General Assembly."

Mr. Khruschev, who was speaking at the National Theatre gala performance held in honour of the Finnish President, Mr. Urho Kekkonen, said: "In recent times there has been an increase of tensions. But that is not Russia's fault. We have not been spying and we are not leading the armaments race."

He referred to the dangers of West German military arrangements for obtaining atomic weapons.

Mr. N. Khruschev To Lead Soviet Delegation To UN:

The Soviet news agency, Tass announced earlier that the Soviet delegation to the 15th session of the UN General Assembly would be led by Mr. N. Khruschev.

US Reaction:

The US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, said in Washington on September 8 that he regarded Mr. Khruschev's proposal for a 'summit' meeting of more than 80 nations at United Nations as "ludicrous in the extreme".

He said that the Soviet Union had "persistently conducted a campaign of agitation against United Nations in the Congo and this campaign has found its echo in the harassment suffered by UN elements on duty in the Congo."

He told newsmen that he expected to lead the US delegation for the first week of the General Assembly.

It was, however, announced in Washington on September 14 that President D. D. Eisenhower, would address the UN General Assembly on September 22.

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's Comment:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, welcomed the announcement that Mr. Khrushchev would lead the Soviet delegation to the forthcoming session of the UN General Assembly.

In a statement on September 1, he said that he welcomed the Soviet announcement for the possibilities it offered for the presentation of views at the most responsible level on some crucial questions facing the General Assembly.

He added that he saw in it also a recognition of the key role of United Nations at the present juncture of world affairs.

Other Reactions:

British sources said in London that the Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, did not intend to go to United Nations.

Later, Mr. Macmillan said that he might go, if circumstances warranted his presence.

A French Government spokesman said in Paris that there were no plans for President Charles de Gaulle to go to New York.

According to announcements in other capitals, the First Secretary of the Polish Communist Party, Mr. Wladislav Gomulka, President Sukarno of Indonesia, President Josip Broz Tito of Yugoslavia, and other Heads of Governments and States would lead delegations to the UN General Assembly.

The Prime Minister of India, Mr. J. Nehru, told the National Development Council in New Delhi on September 13 that he was likely to attend the UN General Assembly session and would take a final decision before he left for Pakistan on September 19.

Restrictions On Mr. Khruschev's Movements In New York:

The Soviet Ambassador to USA, Mr. Mikhail Menshikov, on September 13 officially protested in the name of the Soviet Government to the US State Department against restrictions imposed on the movements of the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev outside Manhattan Island during his stay in New York to attend the UN General Assembly meeting.

Mr. Menshikov handed the protest Note to the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter and said that the restrictions would impede Mr. Khruschev's activities during his visit to the United States.

The same day (September 13), the US State Department rejected the Soviet protest and refused to ease the restrictions it had placed on the movements of Mr. Khruschev during his visit to New York.

The US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, told a news conference in Washington on September 14 that the Cuban Prime Minister, Dr. Fidel Castro, would be subject to the same restrictions as Mr. Khruschev when he arrived in New York to attend the UN General Assembly.

Asked whether restrictions would also be placed on President Nasser of UAR and President Tito of Yugoslavia, he said that those cases had not yet been considered or any policy adopted.

In a Note delivered to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, the Department said that the restrictions had been drawn up to assure Mr. Khruschev's security and could in no way be considered as interference with the normal work of the Soviet delegation to the General Assembly.

"While Mr. Khruschev is within the territorial limits of USA, but outside UN Headquarters itself, the ultimate responsibility for assuring the security of Mr. Khruschev and his unimpeded movement to and from UN Headquarters rests with the US Government. These measures... are designed specifically to assure to Mr. Khruschev the unhindered fulfilment of his mission to UN.

"They can in no way be considered to interfere with what is called in the Soviet Note the normal work of the Soviet delegation to the General Assembly.

"Travel beyond the limits of Manhattan Island is clearly not essential to the normal functioning of a delegation to the UN General Assembly."

Mr. N. Khruschev Arrives In New York For UN General Assembly Session:

The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, arrived in New York on September 19 to lead the Soviet delegation to the 15th session of the UN General Assembly.

On arrival he issued the following statement:

"This is the second time that I have come to USA. Last year I was the guest of the Government of your country. Today I come to New York in a new capacity — as head of the delegation of the Soviet Union to the General Assembly of United Nations.

"The thoughts and aspirations of most people in all countries are today focussed on one goal, that is, how to bring about a situation conducive to ensuring a stable peace throughout the world.

"It is natural that, first and foremost, the people look towards two countries — USA and the Soviet Union. This is not because our countries are in any way specially chosen or marked by the heavens, but because they are economically the mightiest and are armed with the most powerful of modern weapons.

"If differences between us increase and the statesmen of both countries do not strive to check such a trend in the development of relations between our countries, the impending menace not only to USA and the Soviet Union, but to the whole world as well, is plain to all.

"We realize this and seek to do the utmost in order to channel the development of our relations towards a peaceful settlement of outstanding problems and towards universal peace.

"Feelings and emotions must not be given preference in politics. In this field one must be guided, above all, by common sense, and must soberly weigh all the circumstances. Such is the lot of statesmen that they have to travel not only to visit close friends, but also wherever they are called to go by the interests of their people and the common cause of all the nations, the cause of consolidating world peace.

"The Soviet Union attaches paramount significance to the problem of ensuring stable peace. To win such a peace it is required that all countries, and above all USA and her allies, be inspired with the understanding of the necessity to reach an agreement on disarmament under strict international control.

"Stable peace on Earth can be established only when all weapons are scrapped. So long as these weapons are loaded and kept in a holster strapped around one's waist, neither one nor the other side will ever rest assured that somewhere a chance conflict will not flare up.

"It is for this reason that the Soviet Union turned to UN in order to put up for consideration by the General Assembly the cardinal question of present-day international relations—the problem of general and complete disarmament and the appropriate strict international control.

"The Soviet Government notes with gratification that a number of countries approach this problem with utmost gravity and that leading statesmen are heading the delegations of their countries to the UN General Assembly.

"Unfortunately, certain statesmen pay lip service to UN and advocate strengthening its prestige, while in actual fact they oppose any useful discussion of the disarmament problem by the UN General Assembly.

"What is this but disparagement of the role of the International Organization that is, above all, called upon to ensure peace among nations?

"I must say that it was, therefore, very strange to read the recent statement by the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter to the effect that I am coming to America for propaganda purposes, that the Soviet proposal regarding the participation of leading statesmen in the discussions of the disarmament problem at the General Assembly is—(and I quote)—'completely ridiculous'. A strange sort of logic.

"Disarmament is, indeed, the most prominent international issue which the representatives of various States have for many years now been trying to chew, discussing it without success in all sorts of commissions at various level. And when the Soviet Government submits the proposal that leading statesmen should participate in the discussion of this question at the General Assembly so as to break the deadlock and find a solution of the problem, this proposal is called propaganda. Strange logic indeed.

"Those who are in favour of the solution of the problem of general and complete disarmament cannot understand such logic.

"If certain individuals declare that I have come to the UN General Assembly to indulge in propaganda, it only remains for me to take pride in such a propaganda mission for the good of peace.

"And I shall spare no effort in making such propaganda until even the thick-skulled convince themselves of the necessity to reach agreement on general disarmament and thereby ensure world peace.

"I am not sure whether I understood correctly the latest decision of the US Government with regard to Mr. Eisenhower taking part in the work of the General Assembly.

"USA has perhaps re-appraised her attitude towards the Assembly meetings and has also come to the conclusion that serious negotiations can be undertaken in UN to reach a Disarmament Agreement. Well, if this does not mean a fancy speech but really constructive participation in the work of the Assembly, we would welcome such a decision.

"In conclusion I would like to voice the profound respect I feel towards the entire American people and wish them success.

"I retain the very best feelings from my visit to USA last year and from my meetings with the American people. I have not forgotten the good impressions that I gained from talking with public and State leaders, with representatives of US business circles, with ordinary Americans—workers, farmers, intellectuals.

"I am convinced that relations between our great countries will improve. It is, after all, known that however dark the night, dawn invariably breaks.

"I am, therefore, sure that despite all their efforts the evil forces who want to poison the atmosphere in the relations between our countries will invariably sustain a defeat. Good times of warm, friendly relations between our people and between our Governments, will come about.

"In the name of this goal, which will further the improvement of relations among all the countries of the world, the Soviet Union is ready to go on working persistently, honestly and purposefully.

"In the name of consolidating peace and solving complicated international issues the Soviet delegation has come to New York to the fifteenth session of the UN General Assembly."

B. Two Employees Of US National Security Agency Granted Asylum In Russia: Two intelligence officials of the US National Security Agency, Mr. Vernon Mitchell (31) and Mr. William Martin (29), were granted asylum in the Soviet Union.

They disappeared from the United States several weeks before their public appearance in Moscow.

At a news conference in Moscow on September 6, they read out a statement which they had left in Laurel (Maryland) on June 22, 1960 before their secret flight from the United States. Photostat copies of the statement were handed to the news correspondents.

The statement said: "We hope to explain to our relatives, friends and others who may be interested, why we have sought asylum in the Soviet Union.

"Since starting work for the US National Security Agency in the Summer of 1957, we have learned that the United States Government knowingly makes false and deceptive statements both in defending its own actions and in condemning the actions of other nations.

"We also learned that the US Government sometimes secretly manipulates money and military supplies in an effort to bring about the overthrow of Governments which it regards as unfriendly to it.

"An instance came to our attention where the US Government gave money to a code clerk working in the Washington Embassy of a United States ally for supplying information, which assisted in the decryption (decoding) of that ally's coded messages.

"These activities indicated to us that the US Government is as unscrupulous as it has accused the Soviet Government of being.

"Many people working in the Department of Defence and in the intelligence agencies of the US Government know the truth of what we have asserted. However, if anyone was to verify any portion of it without official permission, he would be subject to heavy penalties.

"The recent American U-2 spy-plane incident had nothing to do with our decision to defect, for it was made more than a year ago. The U-2 incident was merely an instance where the truth was too obvious to be permanently suppressed or altered.

"In making these revelations we are not seeking excuses for our action. Neither do we wish to discourage the American people. There are individuals of great integrity and resourcefulness in America who, if given a chance, can rectify some of the tragic mistakes of the US Government in recent years.

"Some people in the United States who are opposed to communism have advocated a preventive war against the Soviet Union. They seek a kind of security which involves the annihilation of people with views opposed to their own. Such a war would at best leave them emperors over the graveyard of civilization.

"This statement has been made without consulting with the Government of the Soviet Union. The reason for this is that we feel we owe the American people an explanation of our action in our own words, and we wish to make this explanation in such a way that it cannot be later construed as a propaganda statement inspired by the Government of the nation in which we have asked to be allowed to make our homes."

Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Martin later answered questions put to them at the news conference.

The most sensational disclosure was their claim that by her knowledge USA read the secret communications of more than 40 nations, including her own allies.

Asked to name some countries they cited Italy, Turkey, France, Yugoslavia, Indonesia, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay "and others."

The American success, at least in one case, according to Mr. Martin, was because USA supplied other nations with cipher machines of which she knew the construction and wiring of the rotors.

Mr. Martin described NSA headquarters as second only to the Pentagon and that half a billion dollars were spent every year on its worldwide activities.

Among its major sub-divisions was ALLO, which studies the codes and cipher systems of US allies and neutral nations.

C. Russian Plans To Send Man Into Space: The Vice-President of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Academician Alexander Topchiev, told a news conference in Moscow on August 24 that the experiment in sending a satellite (Arknik) into space and bringing it back safely to Earth with all the animals and plants on board was very successful.

He added that the Soviet Union was planning another series of experimental space rockets to solve the great number of tasks connected with man's safety in outer space and his return to Earth.

He said that the steady increase in the size of Soviet space-ships had the single aim of permitting the manufacture of a ship which would provide all the conditions for a manned space flight.

Russia would make available to the scientists of the world the results of the scientific investigations obtained from the Arknik's flight.

Asked if a man would have returned safely to Earth if he had travelled in the latest Soviet space-ship instead of the dogs and other animals, he replied with an emphatic "yes."

He declined to discuss the question further.

He brushed aside questions as to where the space capsule and the ship actually landed by saying: "That is not a scientific question."

Academician V. Parin was asked whether a monkey would be the next Soviet space flyer and he said that Soviet scientists were adamant that most of the research into space problems could be done by dogs.

He added: "However, to be able to present a fuller picture, we agree that such an experiment would serve a useful purpose."

Asked if Soviet scientists had so far noted any bad effects of radiation on the animals, he said that the cabin had only just been recovered and it "would take some time" to find out.

D. Nuclear Molecule Created In Canada: The creation of a nuclear molecule, which did not previously exist in nature, was disclosed by physicists at Canada's Atomic Energy Establishment at Chalk River, Ontario, on August 31.

Dr. D. A. Bromley, Associate Professor of Physics at Yale University, told an international conference on nuclear structure on August 30 that the nuclear molecule was created in Chalk River's "atom smasher", known as the Tandem Accelerator.

Dr. Bromley, who left Canada recently to join Yale University, directed the research project in association with two other nuclear physicists at the Chalk River Establishment.

He told a news conference that the discovery of the nuclear molecule "will open up a new field of research into forces contained in the nuclear cores of atoms."

He said that the Tandem Accelerator had pushed the two nuclear molecules of carbon 12 together, forming the nuclear molecule which existed for less than one billionth of a second. But, he said: "This is a long time on the nuclear scale."

E. Britain Becomes Member Of IDA: Great Britain signed on September 14 the Articles of Agreement of the International Development Association (IDA), which is to be an affiliate of the World Bank for providing aid to the under-developed countries.

Great Britain also deposited with the World Bank her formal instrument of acceptance of the Articles.

The Association will come into being when corresponding action has been taken by countries accounting for 65 per cent of its proposed initial resources of $1,000,000,000.

Britain's contribution to the total will be approximately $131,000,000, payable over a period of four to five years.

The Association's aim is to promote economic development and raise standards of living in the less-developed areas within its membership by providing finance on terms which are more flexible and bear less heavily on the balance of payments than conventional loans.

F. UNESCO Conference On Adult Education: The Second World Conference on Adult Education sponsored by UNESCO concluded its 10-day session in Montreal on August 31, with a call to member-Governments to make adult education an integral part of their national systems of education and of economic development programmes, especially in the newly-developing countries.

Representatives from 49 countries and 46 international non-Governmental organizations attended the Conference.

The Conference was unanimous in expressing the urgency of extending adult education to all men and women. It noted that, because of the rapidity of technological change and the consequent weakening of traditional cultures, people were "likely to become bewildered, resentful and hostile" when confronted with changes they did not understand. Adult education, including vocational and professional education, would also help close the gap between the expert and the layman.

Declaration:

The following is the text of a formal Declaration on adult education adopted unanimously at the final session of the Conference:

"The destruction of mankind and the conquest of space have both become technological possibilities for our present generation. These are the most dramatic forms of technological development, but they are not the only ones. New industrial methods and new means of communication are affecting all parts of the world, and industrialization and urbanization are over-taking areas that 20 years ago were rural and agricultural.

"Nor are the changes which are going to fashion the pattern of our lives during the remainder of this century only in the field of technology. In large areas of the world the population is increasing. Vast, new national States are emerging and much of the world has become divided within the last few years into rival camps. Every generation has its own problems; in sober fact, no previous generation has been faced with the extent and rapidity of change which faces and challenges us today.

"Our first problem is to survive. It is not a question of survival of the fittest. Either we survive together, or we perish together. Survival requires that the countries of the world must learn to live together in peace. 'Learn' is the operative word. Mutual respect, understanding, and sympathy are qualities that are destroyed by ignorance and fostered by knowledge. In the field of international understanding, adult education in today's divided world takes on a new importance; provided that man learns to survive, he has in front of him opportunities for social development and personal well-being such as have never been offered to him before.

"The rapidly developing countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America have their own special problems. For them, adult education, including education for literacy, is an immediate need, a need so overpowering that here and now we must help adult men and women to acquire the knowledge and the skills that they need for the new patterns of community living into which they are moving. These developing countries have few immediately available resources and great demands are being made on them.

"The countries which are better off have an opportunity of helping those which are poorer; they have the opportunity of such an act of wisdom, justice and generosity as could seize the imagination of the whole world. With their help, illiteracy could be eradicated within a few years, if, preferably through United Nations and its agencies, a resolute, comprehensive and soundly planned campaign was undertaken. We believe profoundly that this is an opportunity which ought to be seized.

"But it is not only in the developing countries that adult education is needed. In the developed countries the need for vocational and technical training is increasingly accepted, but this is not enough. Healthy societies are composed of men and women, not of animated robots and there is a danger, particularly in the developed countries, that the education of adults may get out of balance by emphasizing too much on vocational needs and technical skills. Man is a many-sided being with many needs. They must not be met piece-meal, and in adult education programmes they must all be reflected.

"Those powers of mind and spirit which have given to mankind an [illegible] of values and judgment must continue to find in our changing patterns of day-to-day living full scope for mature flowering in an enriched culture. This is nothing less than the goal of adult education.

"We believe that adult education has become of such importance for man's survival and happiness that a new attitude towards it is needed. Nothing less will suffice than that people everywhere should come to accept adult education as a norm and that Governments should treat it as a necessary part of the educational provision of every country."

SPORT

A. Yugoslavia Wins World Football Championship: Yugoslavia won the Olympic football gold medal, beating Denmark by 3-1 in the final in Rome on September 10. Denmark got the silver medal.

Yugoslavia took an early lead when Galic slammed in a shot in the second minute.

This unexpected goal demoralized the Danes and, even though warmly supported by the crowd, they could not click into a well-knit combination. Their attacks were poor and their passing wild. The Yugoslavs played well and in the 13th minute, their inside-left, Knez, beat the Danish goal-keeper with a high shot.

Yugoslavia increased her lead in the 70th minute when, after a smart move by the inner trio, outside-left Kostic got a pass in front of goal and placed the ball well out of the Danish goal-keeper's reach.

A consolation goal came Denmark's way 30 seconds from close. In one of their few good attacks, the Danes swept down the field and when left-half Nielsen received the ball 30 metres out, he netted with a drive that left the goal-keeper, Vidinic, helpless.

BOOK ON ASIA

A. Russian Central Asia 1867-1917: A Study of Colonial Rule—By Richard A. Pierce; Publishers—University of California Press, Berkeley 4, California (USA)—Price $7.00.

This book describes events under Imperial Russian rule, which Soviet writers once depicted as oppressive but now describe as having been beneficial and progressive. It treats the period in the light of the conflict between 19th century concepts of "the white man's burden" and the awakening aspirations of colonial peoples, and as part of the contest between Western imperialism and the Islamic world. It shows the enduring geographic, political and cultural factors that must be faced by any regime in Central Asia, provides a basis for comparison between the methods and motives of the Imperial Russian colonizers and those of the Soviet regime and refutes misconceptions regarding Russian colonizing techniques.

The author gives a concise account of the Russian conquest and administration of the several native rebellions and the revolutionary outbreak of 1905 and describes Russian economic and cultural innovations. He shows the paradox of colonial rule—the process by which a subject people, dependent on their conquerors for advancement, learn from the colonial regime how to bring about its eventual liquidation.

A. Land Reclamation Programme: About 80,000 acres of land have been reclaimed and put into production under the land restoration programme of the Agricultural and Rural Development Corporation started under the Four-Year Plan in 1956 with American aid.

The programme, estimated to cost about K1,41,300,000 is aimed at restoring to active production 1.2 million acres of the Irrawaddy and Sittang deltas and improvement of flood control measures which will benefit another one million acres.

Besides, the programme aims at promoting diversified double and triple cropping and shifts in land use and the introduction of mechanization in order to offset the shortage of migratory labour traditionally supplied by Indians.

In each district where land has been restored to active cultivation, a Land Tenancy Disposal Committee is to decide how the restored land should be distributed among eligible cultivators.

To meet part of the total cost of the programme, the US Government has furnished a loan of $400,000.

The loan was made under the Burmese-American Economic Co-operation Agreement signed in March, 1957.

It covers the cost of heavy earth-moving, grading, excavating and dredging equipment for work on embankments and drainage canals, crawler tractors, agricultural machinery for initial ploughing of cleared land and for the crop diversification programme.

A. Take-Over Of Schools — Government's Decision: The Minister of Education, Mr. Badiruddin Mahmud, told a news conference in Colombo on September 11 that aided schools in Grade I and Grade II, which the Government was pledged to take over, would be permitted to run privately if they did not charge fees and complied with the Education Code.

A school in either of these grades, he said, would be allowed to charge fees only if more than 75 per cent of the teachers and parents of pupils attending it agreed under secret ballot to the levying of fees.

Schools in Grade III would be taken over by the Government shortly.

The All-Ceylon Buddhist Congress welcomed the Government's decision to take over all grades of assisted schools and discussed handing over two of its institutions to the Government "as a gesture of appreciation even before the actual take-over." But the Roman Catholic Church, which owns and manages a large number of schools in all grades, was said to be troubled by the Government's decision and protest meetings of the Roman Catholics were being held in various parts of the country.

CHINA

A. Mr. Sekou Toure's Visit: President Sekou Toure of the Republic of Guinea paid a goodwill visit to China from September 10 to 15 at the invitation of the Chairman of the People's Republic of China, Mr. Liu Shao-chi.

During the brief visit, Mr. Toure and his party went through a packed programme of public receptions, sight-seeing and held economic, trade and political talks with Chinese leaders.

The Chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, also had talks with Mr. Toure.

Cordial and friendly talks were held between Mr. Liu Shao-chi and the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai on the one hand, and Mr. Toure and the President of the Guinea National Assembly, Mr. Diallo Saifoulaye on the other.

Before Mr. Toure left Peking on September 15, China and Guinea signed a Friendship Treaty and Agreements on economic aid and trade relations.

Communique:

In a joint communique, Mr. Toure and Mr. Liu Shao-chi stated:

"At present all threats and obstacles to world peace come from the side of imperialism. Therefore, in order that a genuine and just peace may be realised, imperialist aggression and the rule of colonialism must be terminated and the oppressed nations in the colonies and semi-colonies must be masters of their own country and exercise their State sovereignty. So long as colonialism continues to exist and the colonial and semi-colonial peoples continue to be oppressed, it will be impossible for the world to have a genuine peace. The winning of world peace mainly depends on the resolute struggles of the peoples of various countries against imperialism and colonialism. The present-day national liberation movement in Asia, Africa and Latin America is an indispensable and extremely important force for safeguarding world peace.

"The two parties consider that the current development of the international situation is increasingly favourable to the struggle of the peoples of the world for peace, and are firmly convinced that so long as all the peace-loving countries and peoples unite and persist in their struggles, they will certainly be able to defeat the imperialist policies of aggression and war and safeguard world peace. The two parties express their support without reservation for all actions in favour of general disarmament and prohibition of nuclear weapons, which are inseparable from the liberation struggle of the peoples of the colonies and the dependent countries. The two parties re-iterate that the Governments and peoples of China and Guinea will continue to make persistent and unremitting efforts to safeguard peace in Asia, Africa and the world.

"The two parties note with satisfaction that the colonialist system is already collapsing, and that the national and democratic movements in Asia, Africa and Latin America are developing more intensively on an ever broader scale. The two parties warmly greet the fact that a series of African countries have won independence and are continuing to struggle to free themselves completely from imperialist political and economic control and that friendship among the African peoples and the solidarity of the African countries are being strengthened, and express the wish that the peoples who are still under colonialist rule will realize their desire for national independence at an early date. The Chinese side considers that the Guinean Government and people have made outstanding contributions in supporting the other African peoples in their cause of opposing colonialism and its agents, winning and safeguarding national independence and promoting Asian-African solidarity. The two parties solemnly declare their resolute support for the just struggle for national liberation of the peoples of Algeria, the Congo, South Africa and other countries. They condemn the schemes of imperialists to interfere in the Congo's internal affairs and encroach on her territorial integrity. They hold that the Central Government of the Congo is the sole legal Government which has full right to manage Congolese affairs in which no interference by imperialism is allowed in whatever name and by whatever method. They express the firm belief that victory will surely belong to the peoples of various countries who oppose poverty, exploitation and oppression and strive to win and safeguard national independence for economic, social and cultural development.

"In the talks, the Guinean side states that the Government of the Republic of Guinea will continue to pursue its foreign policy of peace and positive neutralism and expresses full support for the Chinese people's struggle for their proper and legitimate rights and interests. The Chinese side expresses full respect for the policy of peace and neutrality pursued by the Republic of Guinea and fully supports the just struggle of the Republic of Guinea in defence of national independence and for economic development.

"The two parties point out with extreme pleasure that relations of friendship and co-operation between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Guinea have developed smoothly on the basis of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence. During President Toure's visit to China, China and Guinea concluded a Treaty of Friendship, an Agreement on Economic and Technical Co-operation and an Agreement on Trade and Payments. The signing of these Agreements signifies that friendly relations between China and Guinea have advanced to a new stage. The two parties unanimously express that they will do their utmost to further consolidate and develop the relations of friendship and co-operation between China and Guinea.

They consider that the consolidation and development of the friendly and co-operative relations between China and Guinea is not only in the vital interests of the peoples of the two countries, but also conducive to the strengthening of the solidarity and co-operation of Asian and African countries and the safeguarding of world peace."

Treaty Of Friendship:

The following is the text of the Treaty of Friendship, signed in Peking on September 13 by Mr. Chou En-lai and Mr. Sekou Toure:

"The Chairman of the People's Republic of China and the President of the Republic of Guinea,

"Desiring to consolidate and further develop profound friendship between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Guinea,

"Convinced that the strengthening of friendly co-operation between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Guinea conforms to the fundamental interests of the peoples of the two countries, conduces to strengthening the friendship and solidarity between the peoples of China and Guinea as well as among Asian and African peoples and in the interests of world peace,

"Have decided for this purpose to conclude the present Treaty.

"Article I: The contracting parties will maintain and develop peaceful and friendly relations between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Guinea;

"Article II: The contracting parties decide to make the Five Principles of mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit and peaceful co-existence as the principles guiding the relations between the two countries;

"The contracting parties will settle all disputes between them by means of peaceful negotiation;

"Article III: The contracting parties agree to develop economic and cultural relations between the two countries in a spirit of equality, mutual benefit and friendly co-operation;

"Article IV: The present Treaty is subject to ratification and the Instruments of Ratification shall be exchanged in Conakry (Guinea) as soon as possible.

"The present Treaty will remain in force for a period of ten years, unless either of the contracting parties gives to the other notice in writing to terminate it one year before the expiration of this period.

"Done in duplicate in Peking on the thirteenth day of September, 1960 in Chinese and French languages, both texts being equally authentic."

Economic Aid Agreement:

The following is the text of the Agreement on Economic and Technical Co-operation between China and Guinea:

"The Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Guinea, for the purpose of promoting the friendly relations and of developing economic and technical co-operation between the two countries and in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty of Friendship between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Guinea, have concluded the present Agreement, the Articles of which are as follows,

"Article I: With a view to helping the Government of the Republic of Guinea to develop its economy, the Government of the People's Republic of China is willing to grant to the Government of the Republic of Guinea within the period from September 13, 1960 to June 30, 1963, a non-interest-bearing loan without any conditions or privilege attached. The amount of the loan is 100 million (one hundred million only) roubles.

"This loan shall be utilized in instalments during the period of validity of the present Agreement by the Government of the Republic of Guinea in accordance with the items of economic construction to be agreed upon by both sides. The loan shall be repaid within a period of ten years from 1970 to 1979 by the Government of the Republic of Guinea in instalments either with export goods of Guinea or with currency of a third country agreed by China. The repayment of the loan shall be completed in ten years with one-tenth of the above loan each year.

"Article II: According to the capabilities of the Government of the People's Republic of China and the requirements of the Government of the Republic of Guinea, the Government of the People's Republic of China will supply the Government of the Republic of Guinea techniques and materials within the amount of the above loan and within the following scope:

"(1) The supply of technical assistance by despatching of experts, technicians and skilled workers;

"(2) The supply of a complete set of equipment, machinery and materials, techniques and other goods; and

"(3) Assistance in the training of technicians and skilled workers of the Republic of Guinea.

"Article III: The return travelling expenses of the Chinese experts, technicians and skilled workers to be despatched in accordance with points (1) and (3) of Article II of this Agreement to the Republic of Guinea and their salaries during the period of work in the Republic of Guinea shall be borne by the Government of the People's Republic of China; the living expenses of the Chinese experts, technicians and skilled workers during the period of work in the Republic of Guinea shall be paid out of the loan, on the condition that their standard of living shall not exceed that of personnel of the same rank in the Republic of Guinea. The living expenses of the trainees to be sent to China by the Government of the Republic of Guinea to learn techniques shall be paid from the amount of the loan.

"Article IV: For the entries of drawing the loan and its repayment, the People's Bank of China and the Bank of the Republic of Guinea shall discuss and make separately the technical arrangements.

"Article V: In accordance with point (2) of Article II, the Governments of both countries shall appoint their representatives to discuss and fix the specific items of economic construction and techniques to be supplied by the Government of the People's Republic of China to the Government of the Republic of Guinea and the methods of their implementation and to sign thereafter protocols.

"Article VI: The executing organizations for this Agreement shall be the Ministry of Foreign Trade of the People's Republic of China on the side of the People's Republic of China, and the Ministry of Planning of the Republic of Guinea on the side of the Republic of Guinea.

"Article VII: This Agreement shall come into force on the date of its signing and shall remain in force for a period of 20 years.

"Done in duplicate in Peking on the thirteenth day of September, 1960, in Chinese and French languages, the texts of both languages being equally authentic."

Trade And Payments Agreement:

The following is the text of the Trade and Payments Agreement signed between China and Guinea:

"The Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Guinea, for the purpose of enhancing the friendship between the Governments and peoples of the two countries and of developing trade relations between the two countries have, in accordance with the principles of equality and mutual benefit, reached agreement as follows:

"Article I: Both contracting parties shall do their utmost and shall take all necessary measures to promote and enlarge trade between the two countries.

"Article II: Equilibrium between the total value of imports and that of exports shall be taken as a principle of trade between the two countries. The annual volume of exportation on each side shall be approximately 1,200 million (one thousand two hundred million only) Guinean francs.

"Article III: Both contracting parties agree to grant each other the most-favoured-nation treatment in respect of customs duties and all other duties and taxes applicable to the importation, exportation or transit of commodities, customs prescriptions and formalities as well as all dues and charges in relation to importation, exportation, transit, storage and transhipment of commodities and in respect of the issuance of import and export licences.

The above provisions shall not, however, apply to the following: (1) All special favour which the Government of the People's Republic of China has granted, or may grant in the future to the neighbouring countries; and (2) All special favours which the Government of the Republic of Guinea has granted or may grant in the future to the neighbouring countries.

"Article IV: Both contracting parties agree that the goods to be exchanged between the two countries shall be listed respectively in the two annexed schedules A and B, which form an integral part of this Agreement. Both Governments shall issue, subject to the laws and regulations of the two countries being in force, necessary import and export licences to the commodities listed in the annexed schedules A and B. This Agreement shall not preclude the trade in commodities not mentioned in the annexed schedules A and B.

"Article V: The import and export trade provided for in this Agreement shall be carried out through specific contracts to be concluded by the State trading organs or other importers and exporters of the two countries.

"Article VI: For the purpose of effecting commercial and non-commercial payments between the two countries, the People's Bank of China and the Bank of the Republic of Guinea shall open in each other's name a non-interest bearing, free of charge account to be kept in Guinean francs. The gold content of each Guinean franc is 0.0036 grammes of fine gold. If the said gold content of each Guinean franc is altered by more than two per cent upward or downward, the balance of the above-mentioned accounts shall be adjusted proportionately to the alteration made.

"Article VII: Payments for goods exchanged under the present Agreement and incidental expenses thereof, expenses in connexion with diplomatic, commercial and cultural affairs, social organizations and delegations of both countries and other payments agreed upon by the State banks of the two countries shall be effected through the above-mentioned accounts.

"Article VIII: Settlement of the accounts shall be made by both Banks at the end of each Agreement year. The balance, if any, shall be settled by the debtor party within six months after the end of each Agreement year in goods or in any currency of a third country to be agreed upon by both parties.

"The technical arrangements for effecting the payments under this Agreement shall be made by consultation between the two Banks.

"Article IX: In order to ensure the smooth implementation of this Agreement, both parties shall appoint representatives to set up a Joint Committee. The Joint Committee will meet once a year alternately in Peking or Conakry to examine the implementation of this Agreement, to solve by consultation the question arising from the implementation and to adjust, whenever necessary, the commodity lists attached to this Agreement.

"Article X: The Agreement shall come into force on the date of its signing and shall remain valid for a period of five years.

"Done in Peking on the thirteenth day of September, 1960 in duplicate, each written in the Chinese and French languages, being equally authentic.

"Schedule A: Commodities to be exported to Guinea by China: rice, textiles, building materials, agricultural machinery and implements, chemicals, silk piece-goods, tea, educational and cultural supplies; daily necessi-

B. Denial Of Flights Over India: The official Hsinhua News agency reported on September 17 that China had rejected an Indian protest Note of August 22, 1960, claiming that Indian air-space had been violated by aircraft "coming from the Tibet Region of China."

The agency quoted a spokesman of the Information Department of the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Peking as saying that "investigations by the Chinese Government showed that no entry of Chinese aircraft into Indian air-space had occurred at all".

The Chinese reply Note, which was handed to the Indian Embassy in Peking on September 16 described the Indian protest as a "very unfriendly act against the People's Republic of China."

The following is the text of the Note:

"On August 22, 1960, the Chinese Embassy in India received a Note from the Indian Ministry of External Affairs protesting against alleged violations of Indian air-space by aircraft coming from the Tibet Region of China. On August 24, the Indian Minister of National Defence, Mr. Krishna Menon, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) that the Indian Government had protested to the Chinese Government on the so-called violations of Indian air-space. Fifty-two cases of violation of air-space were listed in a statement attached to the Note of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs. On September 16, the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent a reply Note to the Indian Embassy in China stating that investigations by the Chinese Government showed that no entry of Chinese aircraft into Indian air-space had occurred at all. The protest of the Indian Government was, therefore, rejected by the Chinese Government. The spokesman of the Information Department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs is hereby instructed to set forth the real facts so as to ensure a correct understanding.

"In the early days of April, 1960, the Indian Government informed the Chinese Government that aircraft had been discovered flying over the Sino-Indian border area. During his visit in India in April, Premier Chou En-lai told Prime Minister Nehru in their talks on April 25, that it had been found through investigations by the Chinese Government that these were US aircraft. They took off from Bangkok, passed over Burma or China, and crossed the Sino-Indian border to penetrate deep into China's interior to parachute Chinese secret agents, weapons, supplies and wireless sets, and then flew back to Bangkok, again passing over the Sino-Indian border. Premier Chou En-lai assured Prime Minister Nehru at the time that the Chinese Government would never allow its aircraft to fly over the border and said that the Chinese Government had sent a Note to the Burmese Government stating that should Burma discover any unidentified aircraft in her air-space, she was fully entitled to take any counter-measure, either forcing them to land or shooting them down. China would do likewise should she discover such aircraft in her own air-space. Premier Chou En-lai also expressed his belief at the time that India would do likewise. Thereafter, in its Note of April 26 to the Indian Embassy in Peking, the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs again emphatically pointed out that the Chinese Government was clearly aware that there existed at present certain forces who are bent on splitting by various means the relationship between China and her south-western neighbours.

"Particularly at a time when the Prime Ministers of China and India are trying to seek a peaceful solution to the Sino-Indian boundary question, it is most likely that these forces would try to attain their aims of disrupting Sino-Indian relations by means of air intrusions into India or China. It is hoped that the Indian Government as well as the Chinese Government would maintain common vigilance against this.

"It is worth nothing that, of the 52 cases of alleged violation of Indian air-space by Chinese aircraft listed in the August 22 Note of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs, with the exception of the three dates of May 31, June 6 and June 15, which were after Premier Chou En-lai's visit to India, the other dates mentioned were all before Premier Chou En-lai's visit to India in April, 1960. The Chinese Government is extremely surprised that, after such clear explanations from Premier Chou En-lai and the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Prime Minister Nehru and the Indian Government, the Indian Ministry of External Affairs should continue to disregard the reality and once again make groundless charges and protest against the Chinese Government in its Note of August 22. This cannot but be considered as a very unfriendly act towards the People's Republic of China. The Chinese Government expresses deep regret at it.

"The Chinese Government, proceeding from the desire to uphold friendly relations between China and India, proposes once again that in order to be on guard against deliberate attempts by outside forces to wreck Sino-Indian relations, the two sides should maintain vigilance with regard to the flights by unidentified aircraft over the border between the two countries and notify each other in time so that each side may take whatever measures it deemed necessary."

C. Solidarity With The Soviet Union: Speaking at a Bulgarian National Day reception in Peking on September 9, the Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, quoted the Chairman of the Communist Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, as saying that China's fundamental policy was to strengthen solidarity with the Soviet Union and all socialist countries.

Marshal Chen Yi said: "The Chinese people have always followed the instructions of Comrade Mao Tse-tung in striving for the tireless, ceaseless strengthening of fraternal friendship between the Chinese and Soviet peoples and the consolidation, development and great unity of the socialist camp.

"Imperialist modern revisionists are now trying by all means to undermine our friendship and unity, but their shameful design is doomed to failure."

According to diplomats who attended the celebrations, the speech appeared to be a reply to Western reports of an ideological rift between Moscow and Peking.

INDIA

SUMMARY: Aid For Technical Education; British Credit For Third Plan; DLF Loan; Air Agreement With Czechoslovakia; Restrictions On Bank Borrowing; Indian Chamber Of Commerce On Third Plan; Steel Production; Tourist Development Council Meeting.

A. Aid For Technical Education During Third Plan: According to information available in New Delhi on September 19, Switzerland, France, the United Kingdom and West Germany had assured India of liberal assistance for technical education during the Third Five-Year Plan period.

The aid would be in the form of fellowships, services of experts and equipment for technical and scientific institutions in the country.

Switzerland had offered to assist the Central Scientific Instruments Organization in India. The services of eight experts for a period of five to six years and equipment required for manufacturing precision instruments and machines would be provided to India at a cost of 4 million Swiss francs. This would be the first major project of this nature undertaken by the Swiss Government.

West Germany had promised to raise the number of scholarships and fellowships. There was also a proposal to provide employment to those working in Indian industries in German undertakings in order to enable them to gain practical experience.

UK had decided to raise the amount of technical assistance to the College of Engineering in New Delhi, from £250,000 to £300,000. She had also agreed to provide an expert to plan the construction programme of the National Aeronautical Laboratory in Bangalore.

Besides deputing 13 experts for the proposed Petroleum Research Institute, France had offered scholarships in cultural and technological fields.

B. British Credit For Third Plan: It was announced in London on September 21 that the United Kingdom had offered India £20 million for the expansion of the Durgapur Steel Plant and another £30 million for the purchase of other capital goods from the UK during the first two years of the Third Five-Year Plan.

The question of further British credit for the remaining three years of the Third Plan has been left open, and will be discussed at the appropriate time in the light of the prevailing economic conditions in the two countries.

In addition to the £10 million loan already offered for the completion of the Second Five-Year Plan, the United Kingdom has agreed to give a further £5 million to relieve the pressure on India's current balance of payments.

These credit offers were made and accepted during talks which India's Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, recently had with the British Government on India's foreign aid requirements for the remainder of the Second and Third Plans.

Four months earlier, India had requested Britain for £35 million to meet her outstanding commitments in the United Kingdom in the remaining period of the Second Plan, but the British Government gave only £15 million in all for this purpose.

India will now get about £10 million (including the £15 million promised by the United Kingdom) during the next six months to meet her Second Plan commitments.

D. Air Agreement With Czechoslovakia: It was announced in New Delhi on September 20 that an Agreement between India and Czechoslovakia for the operation of air services between the two countries had been signed on September 19 at Prague.

Mr. Bejoy Krishna Acharya, Ambassador of India signed on behalf of the Government of India, and Mr. Karel Stekl, Deputy Minister for Transport and Communications in Czechoslovakia signed on behalf of the Government of the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic.

Air-India International has been operating air services through Czechoslovakia since 1956 and the Czechoslovak Airlines began operating a service to India in August, 1959. The air services by the two airlines, which were being operated under temporary authorizations, would now be placed on a formal basis with the signing of the Agreement.

E. Restrictions On Bank Borrowings: The Reserve Bank announced in Bombay on September 21 restrictions on borrowings by scheduled banks from it. Effective from October 1, 1960, these measures have been taken to ease the pressure of monetary demand which has been a contributory factor in the rise of commodity prices.

The three monetary measures are penal rates of interest for borrowings from the Reserve Bank by banks in excess of the quota fixed for each, an increase in the average lending rate by banks to their customers by ½ per cent and a limit on the interest rate paid by banks on short-term deposits.

Thus, an unexpectedly novel pattern of three bank rates in place of the one standard rate has been set up.

The Reserve Bank announcement said:

"The borrowings of banks from the Reserve Bank at the Bank rate will be limited to certain quotas above which further borrowing will be permitted only on payment of certain penal rates of interest. Each scheduled bank will be allotted a quota for borrowing from the Reserve Bank equal to 50 per cent of the reserves required to be maintained by it with the Reserve Bank in terms of Section 42, Sub-section 10, of the Reserve Bank of India Act (i.e. 5 per cent of liabilities and 2 per cent of time liabilities). The schedule of charges for borrowing from the Reserve Bank will be as follows:

"(1) Scheduled bank borrowings (against Government securities as well as bills) up to 100 per cent of the quota—the Bank rate.

"(2) Scheduled bank borrowings over 100 per cent but not more than 200 per cent of the quota—1 per cent above the Bank rate.

"(3) Scheduled bank borrowings over 200 per cent of the quota—2 per cent above the Bank rate.

"In view of the new system of penalty rates, the ceiling limits of borrowing from the Reserve Bank fixed for individual banks under the Bill market scheme, will, for the time being, not be operative.

"With a view to ensuring a levering up of the lending rate of banks and avoiding undue distortion in the present pattern of lending rates, the Reserve Bank has also issued a directive to the scheduled banks, requiring them to adhere, effective from October 1, 1960, to a minimum lending rate of 5 per cent on all advances, whether existing or new, whether clean or secured, with the exception of advances to other banks, including co-operative banks.

"Where the minimum lending rates of banks are 5 per cent or more, the banks should, effective from the same date, raise the structure of their interest rates further so as to ensure an increase in their average lending rate by at least ½ per cent.

"In respect of some very short-term rates on deposits, the Bank has also directed that no scheduled bank shall, effective from October 1, 1960, pay interest at more than 2 per cent below the Bank rate on any deposit (other than inter-bank deposit) repayable on notice or on the expiry of a period not exceeding 21 days from the date of deposit."

F. Indian Chamber Of Commerce Committee On Third Plan: The Committee of the Indian Chamber of Commerce made known in Calcutta on September 19 its views on the Draft Outline of the Third Five-Year Plan, which had been forwarded to the Planning Commission.

The Committee welcomed the size of the Third Plan, which, it said, was not ambitious, considering the enormous back-log of poverty in the country and the growing needs of the people.

It observed that it should be possible to achieve the targets under the Plan and even to augment them further, provided a sustained effort was made to canalize the investments proposed under the Plan in such a manner as to get the maximum returns.

It pointed out that in spite of the investments in the first two Plans and the progress made in several directions, no real impact of planning had been felt by the large majority of the people. The per capita availability of food had not improved; cloth shortage continued to be felt; housing accommodation was still a problem and the number of unemployed persons had increased.

It said that if the fruits of the Plans were to become available to the people, strenuous efforts should be made to check the growth of population.

It stressed the need to maintain the price-line by maximizing production, linking wages with productivity and keeping in view the possible effects on price levels while considering questions of additional taxation.

It suggested the encouragement of foreign collaboration in industries to relieve the strain on foreign exchange requirements.

To step up exports, it recommended improvement on a permanent basis of the raw material position of some of the major export industries of the country, reconsideration of the policy of channelling certain exports through the State Trading Corporation and re-examination of export duties, particularly with regard to tea.

Describing the target of coal production in the Third Plan as unrealistic, it said that any short-fall in coal production would have a chain reaction in other spheres of industry.

It pleaded for an increase in the target of cloth production in the Third Plan.

In regard to agriculture, it emphasized the need for a stable agricultural policy and felt that any ideological approach in the matter should be avoided.

Referring to the resources for the Third Plan, it stated that the assessment of resources appeared to be an over-cautious under-estimate. It should even be possible to increase deficit financing in the Third Plan from Rs. 550 crores with the rising trend of production. Further taxation to the tune of Rs. 1,650 crores envisaged in the Draft Outline would have repercussions on development as also on the price-line.

Referring to the problem of unemployment, it observed that the solution lay in the expansion of organized industry and the establishment of organized consumer goods industries.

It urged the need for an overall housing policy to relieve the acute shortage of accommodation in the country.

Housing, it said, was essentially labour-intensive and a systematic housing policy would, therefore, be a powerful instrument in absorbing the unemployed labour force.

G. Steel Production—Expansion Envisaged: The Central Minister for Steel, Mines and Fuel, Sardar Swaran Singh, told newsmen in Raipur on September 21 that the steel expansion programme of the Government will help increase steel production by 3½ million tons by the end of the Third Five-Year Plan.

The programme will increase production in the Bhilai Steel Plant by little over one million tons of steel and 3,00,000 to 4,00,000 tons of pig-iron. The Rourkela and Durgapur Plants will be able to produce a little over 1½ million tons of additional steel.

The Bokaro Steel Plant, to be set up during the Third Plan period, will also have a production capacity of one million tons.

Sardar Swaran Singh said that the overall expansion of the Indian steel plants in the Third Plan will be organized and controlled by an Indian organization.

The Bokaro Steel Plant, he said, will also be mostly managed by Indians, though in some important sectors India would require "strengthening by bringing in foreign experts."

Replying to a question, he said that the Design Organization for the steel industry had already started working on the expansion programme of some of the existing steel plants. In course of time, this Organization would be strong enough to undertake major works of design and other services for India's steel industry.

He added: "It is a happy development that the Indian firms of consultants are coming up and some load of additional work can be taken up by appropriate firms of consultants.

"We are paying special attention to the development of raw materials to feed the three Steel Plants. A programme has consequently been prepared for the rapid movement of coal in the country."

H. Increase In Tea Production In 1959: According to official statistics released in Calcutta on September 19, production of tea in India rose by 2.7 million lbs. in 1959 from 717.0 million lbs. in 1958.

Compared to 1958, production in Northern India was higher by 9.7 million lbs., while in Southern India it was lower by 7.0 million lbs. The dooars was responsible for an increase of 6.5 million lbs. out of the total increase in the North Indian production.

Indian tea exports during 1959, however, declined by 33.5 million lbs. from the 1958 figure of 506.0 million lbs. The decline accounted for a loss in earnings to the extent of Rs. 10.1 crores. The total earnings in 1959 were Rs. 126.4 crores.

Among the countries where Indian tea exports received a setback were UK, USA, Canada, Iran and Australia. On the other hand, India got a good market in Sudan, USSR, Irish Republic, West Germany, Netherlands and Turkey. A new market, where a substantial quantity of tea was exported during 1959, was Iraq. Exports to that country rose to 3.7 million lbs., from only 115.000 lbs. in 1958.

I. Woollen Yarn Prices To Be Controlled: It was announced in New Delhi on September 21 that the Government of India had issued an Order controlling the production, distribution and selling prices of woollen yarn.

The Order, issued under Section 3 of the Essential Commodities Act, provides that, in order to co-ordinate the production of woollen yarn with public needs, the Textile Commissioner may fix the type and quantity of woollen yarn to be produced by the manufacturers.

The Textile Commissioner will also fix the ex-factory whole-sale and retail prices at which the different varieties of woollen yarn are to be sold.

The Order further provides that in order to secure proper distribution of yarn, the Textile Commissioner may direct any manufacturer or dealer not to sell any woollen yarn, except under a permit issued by him.

The Order took effect immediately.

Built at a cost of Rs. 25,00,000 the craft's design and machinery are British, but special steel produced in India has been used. The displacement is 146 tons and the craft has a maximum speed of 17 knots, high manoeuvrability and is built for defence.

It is equipped to detect, locate and destroy submarines at approaches to ports and is also provided with anti-aircraft guns. Before proceeding to Cochin it will undergo trials near Calcutta and Visakhapatnam.

Two other vessels of this type are being built by the Hooghly Docking Company, a Calcutta firm. They are expected to be ready for launching early in 1961.

L. Tourist Development Council Meeting: The Tourist Development Council, which ended its meeting in Shillong on September 16, unanimously recommended that the allocation of Rs. 5 crores under the Third Five-Year Plan should be raised substantially to meet the minimum requirements of tourism, which was the sixth largest earner of foreign exchange.

The present allocation was characterized as inadequate and the Council proposed that a deputation of six members should wait on the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, to urge upon him the need of increasing this amount.

Simultaneously, it was proposed that the State Governments should also discuss individually the question of increased allocation with the Planning Commission.

The Council made a number of recommendations with a view to making the visits of foreign tourists more pleasant. These related to the licensing of medium-sized cars as luxury taxis, provision of self-driven taxis for foreign tourists, a code of conduct for taxi operators, relaxation of mileage restrictions on railway travel and the prevention of the beggar nuisance at important tourist centres.

The procedure for obtaining liquor permits in various States was examined and the Council recommended that with a view to making it more convenient for foreign tourists, liquor permits valid for all States should be issued by Indian Missions abroad and Directors of Tourism in India.

The Council recognized the need of encouraging the establishment of more hotels in the country. It, therefore, recommended the provision of Government lands to the hotel industry at reasonable market rates.

It also felt that facilities should be provided to tourists travelling by road and for this purpose the oil companies and the Automobile Associations should be encouraged to set up "motels." It also urged that rest-houses should be properly maintained.

It approved of India's participation in the "Visit Orient Year" campaign in 1961, sponsored by ECAFE in co-operation with IUOTO.

[A Seminar will be held in New Delhi in April, 1961 on methods of promoting tourism in under-developed countries and ascertaining tourist preferences in regard to hotels, food and shopping.]

M. Punjab Minister Relinquishes Portfolio: It was announced in Chandigarh on September 20 that the Education and Labour Minister, Mr. Amarnath Vidyalankar, who had sought the permission of the Punjab Chief Minister, Sardar Pratap Singh Kairon, to resign from the Ministry had been relieved of the Labour portfolio.

The portfolio was transferred to the Minister for Industries, Food and Supplies, Mr. Mohanlal.

Some time ago, the Punjab branch of the Indian National Trade Union Congress (INTUC) passed a resolution expressing no-confidence in Mr. Vidyalankar and asking him to resign from the State Cabinet.

Mr. Vidyalankar, who was holding a responsible position in INTUC before he was taken in the Ministry, requested Sardar Pratap Singh Kairon that he be allowed to resign from the Cabinet. Sardar Kairon did not accept the position that Mr. Vidyalankar was taken into the Ministry as a representative of INTUC. He, however, acceded to the request of Mr. Vidyalankar to be relieved of the Labour portfolio.

N. Hindu Religious Endowment Commission: The Chairman of the Hindu Religious Endowment Commission, Mr. C. P. Ramaswamy Iyer, told newsmen in Ernakulam on September 20 that the Commission was empowered to make recommendations for legislation or other action for regulating the affairs of temples, mutts and other public Hindu religious institutions.

[The Commission was appointed by the Central Government to inquire into the management and conditions of working of temples and mutts and other public Hindu religious institutions.]

Mr. Iyer added that the Commission was also charged with the duty of investigating into the properties and incomes of the Hindu religious institutions.

It would also find out if certain temples and mutts were able to keep their services and their maintenance on an even keel. It would make recommendations on how these institutions could be helped out of their present difficulties and it would deal with the question of management and succession to the management of temples and mutts, especially the latter.

Mr. Iyer said that in the case of institutions having large surplus of funds, the Commission would have to find out if these funds were being utilized for the purpose desired by those responsible for founding the institutions.

He added: "It is our hope that we shall be able to have these surpluses utilized for such general religious usages and objects consistent with those that might be regarded or animated by the founders or originators of these institutions.

From the evidence of witnesses who testified before the Commission, he said, it was apparent that the archakas and pujaris in temples and other allied institutions were hardly well-educated. In some cases, they were wholly illiterate. The Commission felt that they should be given training in duly established centres for fulfilling the purpose for which these institutions were created.

A number of witnesses had pointed out to the Commission that there was neglect of spiritual and moral instructions and lack of discipline and coherent unity among the younger generation. The Commission, therefore, intended to go into the question of maintaining the services of religious institutions and to bring into existence centres of religious and secular instructions to train the people to discharge their duties as good citizens.

It was not the Commission's idea, he said, to put aside secular education or institutions, like orphanages, feeding of the poor, etc., which might be regarded as within the scope of the original endowments.

A. Ban On Political Activity: President Sukarno issued an Order on September 13 temporarily prohibiting political activity in Indonesia. The Order, in effect, meant that political meetings and gatherings or any activity that might embarrass the governing system were forbidden.

According to the Order, issued in Dr. Sukarno's capacity as Supreme War Administrator, all political activity would be suspended throughout the country until November 30, 1960.

A similar step had been taken earlier when the balance between Left and Right had become difficult to hold normally. The latest crisis was caused by the Army having banned communist activity in South Borneo, South Sumatra and the South Celebes and by signs that it wished to do the same in Java.

One report said that the ban was prompted by the mounting political unrest after the Presidential decree on the dissolution of the majority Muslim Masjumi and Socialist Parties in August, 1960. The dissolution Order caused deep resentment in the predominantly Muslim regions where the communists had been intensifying their activities.

A. New Administrative Measures: The Prime Minister, Dr. Sharif Emami announced on September 17 a new system of administration embodying a 15-point programme.

The first point on which emphasis was laid was the establishment of city and town councils as a step towards transferring civic responsibilities to the local citizens.

Other points included:

(1) Intensification of the campaign against corruption and malpractices in Government departments and the elimination of dishonest and incompetent officials;

(2) The strict enforcement of law concerning the conduct and discipline for Government employees and probes into their material and financial possessions, as well as the prevention of all Government employees and Ministers from taking part in business transactions with the Government;

(3) The strengthening of the judiciary with the object of ensuring complete individual and social justice, as well as elimination of defects and shortcomings in the executive branches of the administration;

(4) Creation of facilities for the welfare of the people through increasing industrial and agricultural output, the stabilizing of prices and new provisions for housing;

(5) Faithful implementation of labour laws and social insurance projects and all matters aimed at improving the welfare of the working classes;

(6) The recovery of taxes rightly due to the Government, implementation of all regulations and the enforcement of taxation laws with a view to increasing national revenue, and the introduction of concerted economy drives in all Government and public expenditures with the object of balancing the national Budget and placing the financial affairs of the country on a sound footing.

B. Arrest Of Opposition Leader: A prominent politician of the Opposition, Dr. Mozafar Baghai, was arrested on September 10 by Iranian security forces for harmful activities against State security and for distributing pamphlets threatening the security of police officers.

The Army Prosecutor, General Hosein Azmoudehn, announced on September 13 that Dr. Baghai had been interrogated and would be court-martialled.

Dr. Baghai, leader of the Labour Party, campaigned during the recent Iranian General Elections and vigorously attacked the former Premier, Dr. M. Eghbal, and his Party's policies.

Following Dr. Eghbal's election in August, 1960 Dr. Baghai challenged him by staging a sit-down strike with his supporters and organizing passive resistance to police attempts to disperse them.

After Dr. Eghbal's resignation, Dr. Baghai alleged at a public meeting that there was still a lack of "basic democratic freedom" in the country.

KOREA (South)

A. Cabinet Re-shuffle: The Prime Minister, Dr. John M. Chang, announced in Seoul on September 13 a re-shuffle of his Cabinet, including members of the rival "old guard" of the Democratic Party. (For background see pages 3534 and 3542).

The re-constituted Cabinet consisted of four members of the "old guard", which had hitherto refused co-operation outright, eight of the Prime Minister's own "new faction" and two Independents. Only six portfolios remained unchanged, including that of Foreign Affairs, which was retained by Dr. Il Hyung Chung.

The new Cabinet consisted of the following:

Dr. John Chang—Prime Minister;

Mr. Il Hyung Chung—Foreign Affairs;

Mr. Choong Ton Kwon—Defence;

Mr. Woo Pyong Kim—Reconstruction;

Mr. Yong Kyun Na—Health and Social Affairs;

Mr. Hal Jung Park—Transport;

Mr. Yung Sun Kim—Finance;

Mr. Jai Chun Cho—Justice;

Mr. Chung Suk Oh—Education;

Mr. Jai Ha Park—Agriculture and Forestry; and

Mr. Suntai Kim—Minister without portfolio.

The re-shuffle was the culmination of Dr. Chang's efforts to reconstruct his Cabinet with "old guard" participation. Though the Democratic Party has a more than two-thirds majority in the Lower House, the "old guard's" rebellion against Dr. Chang's leadership after the Elections and the decision to form a separate assembly group left him without a stable parliamentary majority.

One element of weakness in the new administration's condition for participation accepted by Dr. Chang was that the "old guard" would continue to be a separate group in the Assembly—potentially an opposition within the Government—while its members would attend joint Party meetings outside Parliament.

The "old guard", however, now held the key portfolios of Defence and Reconstruction, which meant that they could not properly dissociate themselves from overall Government policy.

B. Japanese Foreign Minister's Visit: The Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Zentaro Kosaka, paid a one-day goodwill visit to Seoul, the capital on September 6. Though the visit was brief, significance was attached to-date by both Governments to break the 15-years-old diplomatic deadlock between them.

In a statement on arrival in Seoul, Mr. Kosaka said: "We have been deeply moved to hear your new Government leaders say that they desire not to be trammelled by the past but look ahead to the future. In response, we on our part wish to take the road to common prosperity with your Republic while paying full regard for the Korean people's sentiments towards Japan. The Republic of Korea and Japan now stand on the threshold of an era full of hope."

There was no major display of hostility against Mr. Kosaka, but on his route from the airport to his hotel a small group of demonstrators shouted slogans denouncing Japan for "aggressive acts during 30 years' rule."

Soon after arrival, he paid a courtesy call on President Yoon Bo Sun and later had talks with the Foreign Minister, Mr. Il Hyung Chung.

Later Mr. Chung said that he and Mr. Kosaka had agreed to begin preliminary talks in Tokyo in October, 1960. He said Mr. Kosaka had stated that Japan was willing to extend economic aid to South Korea, but the form of aid was not to be defined till further discussions.

The South Korean Government in a gesture to mark the occasion, released the 40 Japanese fishermen who had been detained for violation of the Rhee fishing line.

NEPAL

A. Influx Of Tibetan Refugees: According to reports published in newspapers in Khatmandu on September 19, the influx of more than 3,000 Tibetans into the Namche Bazar area in Nepal, at the foot of Mount Everest, had alarmed Nepalese officials.

The English daily, Motherland, said that the presence of a large number of Tibetans south of the Everest region within Nepal, had greatly taxed the limited resources of the area, resulting in a steep rise in the prices of food commodities. The rise was as much as 150 per cent in the case of many items.

The Tibetans had not only caused food scarcity in this area already deficit in food, but had also contributed to a deterioration of the law and order situation there.

Another daily said: "Petty crime is on the increase and violent quarrels between the local population and Tibetans are becoming more evident."

The Nepal Sawwad Samiti, a Nepalese news agency, reported that more than 4,000 Tibetans had entered Okhuldhunga District on the north-eastern border, and hundreds of Tibetans continued to pour in from the north.

The large-scale infiltration of Tibetans, despite the strong Chinese patrol on the Tibet-Nepal border, had become an alarming problem for the people of Nepal. According to official information, the Tibetans were mostly well-equipped with modern weapons.

The agency said that the real threat from the Tibetans was feared during the coming Winter when all the villages on Nepal's northern border would be vacated and people would move southward to warmer places. During that period the armed Tibetans might loot entire unguarded villages or might occupy the area finding it uninhabited.

Such infiltration, it added, might also overwhelmingly increase the number of Chinese agents who, during the next Elections, might vote for the amalgamation of these areas with Tibet.

The Nepal Government had banned the entry of Tibetans coming to Nepal from India, and nearly 3,000 refugees were said to be stranded at the Indo-Nepal border towns of Raxaul, Nautunwa and other places.

Chinese Agents Arrested:

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Indo-Pakistan Canal Waters Treaty; Treaty Of Extradition With Iran Ratified; Burmese Trade Mission; Visa Facilities For Indians; Exporters' Convention; Land Acquisition Act Amended.

A. Canal Waters Treaty Signed With India: The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, arrived in Karachi on September 19 to sign the Indo-Pakistan Canal Waters Treaty with the Pakistan President, F-M Mohammad Ayub Khan.

He was received at the airport by F-M Ayub Khan, who introduced him to a select gathering of Ministers and diplomats.

Accompanying Mr. Nehru were the Indian Minister for Irrigation, Hafiz Mohammed Ibrahim; the Deputy Minister for Irrigation, Mr. Jaisukhlal Hathi; the Commonwealth Relations Secretary, Mr. M. J. Desai; the Additional Secretary to the Ministry of Irrigation and Power, Mr. N. D. Gulati and Mr. Nehru's Principal Private Secretary, Mr. K. Ram.

All along the 10-mile route from the airport to the President's House, an estimated crowd of 500,000 cheered the Indian Prime Minister and shouted "Welcome Nehru", "Nehru Zindabad", "Ayub Zindabad" and "Prime Minister Zindabad".

Mr. J. Nehru's Speech:

Speaking at the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty on the lawns of President's House, Mr. Nehru said: "This is certainly a memorable occasion because of the fact that a very difficult and complex problem, which had troubled both India and Pakistan for many years has been satisfactorily solved."

The signing of the Canal Waters Treaty, he said, was an outstanding example of a co-operative endeavour between not only the two countries principally concerned but by other countries and the World Bank. He made appreciative references to the efforts made by the President, Mr. Eugene Black, and the Vice-President, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, of the World Bank, during these years.

The signing of the Treaty, he added, would bring prosperity to a large number of farmers and agriculturists and others in both countries. "All of us, despite many scientific improvements, still depend on these rivers and the good earth, because the combination of this knowledge brings prosperity to the good of the countries concerned."

Under these circumstances, he said, their two countries were trying to utilize to their mutual advantage the waters of the vast rivers, which at present were going waste to the sea.

He added: "We are going to reap many benefits out of this Agreement, but greater than the material advantages are the psychological and emotional benefits. It is a symbol of unity and co-operation between the two neighbouring countries."

He expressed gratitude to the World Bank and those persons who had helped in finding a settlement of the canal waters problem. He also thanked the countries which had offered generous contributions to help implementation of the Treaty.

F-M Ayub Khan's Speech:

F-M Ayub Khan in his speech said that the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty was an event of great historic significance not only for the two countries concerned, but for the whole world.

He said that the problem was one of great magnitude and on it depended the livelihood of millions of people. But it had now been solved after very difficult negotiations which had gone on for a decade.

The two countries, he said, could now look forward to the development of the Indus basin for the welfare and good of the peoples of India and Pakistan.

The implementation of the Treaty, he said, would call for continued co-operation between the two countries for many years to come, and added: "I have no doubt that if we work in the same spirit and harmony, it will promote trust and understanding between the peoples of our two countries."

He thanked the World Bank and the countries which had come forward to make enormous financial contributions to make the conclusion of the Treaty possible. By doing this, he said, they had demonstrated their true friendship for India and Pakistan and had provided a distracted world with a great and outstanding example of how problems could be solved by generosity and abundant goodwill among nations.

Other Speeches:

The Vice-President of the World Bank, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, deputizing for the World Bank President, Mr. Eugene Black, said that the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty was a great occasion for the people of India and Pakistan, especially for the cultivators of the two countries.

He said: "Eight years of exacting work now lie behind us—eight years beset at times with frustrations and difficulties—but for all of us this final happy outcome of our task carries with it the satisfaction of mind and spirit which passes all understanding.

"But, above all, this day is a great day for the people of India and Pakistan—especially the cultivators toiling in the fields of these parched and arid lands—so that they may now look forward to the promise of the controlled and regulated use of the life-giving waters with which nature has endowed them, all too lavishly at certain seasons, yet with such niggardly parsimony at others."

Speaking on behalf of the six countries—USA, UK, Canada, West Germany, Australia and New Zealand—which have agreed to give financial aid to carry out the projects envisaged under the Canal Waters Treaty, the US Ambassador to Pakistan, Mr. William Rountree, said that the signing of the Treaty was a unique and significant event.

He said the outstanding fact was that six nations from three continents had joined with the two neighbours of a fourth continent in "the most grandiose project ever conceived by man."

He said that he was impressed by the spirit of accommodation demonstrated by Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan.

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations in Great Britain, Mr. R. H. M. Thompson, who arrived in Karachi on September 18 to sign on behalf of the British Government an Agreement providing for financial assistance to the extent of £360,000,000 for the utilization of the Indus waters, praised Pakistan, India and the World Bank for the part they had played in bringing about a settlement of the canal waters dispute.

He said: "Their efforts have been an example to the world. We believe strongly in the principles of international co-operation and inter-dependence between the developed and the developing countries of the world of which the present Treaty is so outstanding an example."

He said that Britain, in common with other friendly Governments, was glad to be able to contribute financially to the settlement. "But the real credit in this settlement goes to Pakistan, India and the World Bank for the spirit in which they have worked."

Details Of Treaty:

Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan signed the Canal Waters Treaty on the evening of September 19.

The Treaty seeks to effect satisfactory utilization of the waters of the Indus system of rivers and fix and delimit the rights and obligations between the two countries concerning the use of these waters.

It also makes provision for the settlement "in a co-operative spirit," of questions which might arise in future in regard to the interpretation or application of the provisions of the Treaty.

The Treaty is largely based on the proposals made by the World Bank in February, 1954 and accepted by India long ago.

Under the Treaty, out of a total flow of 168,000,000 acre-ft. of water of the Indus system, about 80 per cent—135,600,000 acre-ft. of water—have been allotted to Pakistan, and 20 per cent—32,800,000 acre-ft.—to India.

The following is the text of the Treaty:

"The Treaty allots the waters of the Indus, Jhelum and Chenab (western rivers) to Pakistan, except for essential uses in their own basins while they flow in India, and the waters of the Ravi, Beas and Sutlej (eastern rivers) to India, except for a transition period of 10 years which may be extended up to a maximum of 13 years during which Pakistan will build works to replace the waters received by her from these rivers.

"Article I of the Canal Waters Treaty relates to definitions of certain terms as used in the Treaty.

"Article II of the Treaty concerning the eastern rivers contains nine clauses:

"(1) All the waters of the eastern rivers shall be available for the unrestricted use of India, except as otherwise expressly provided in this Article;

"(2) Except for domestic use and non-consumptive use, Pakistan shall be under an obligation to let flow, and shall not permit any interference with, the waters of the Sutlej main and the Ravi main in the reaches where these rivers flow in Pakistan and have not yet finally crossed into Pakistan. The points of final crossing are: (a) near the new Hasta bund upstream of Suleimanki in the case of Sutlej main and (b) about one and a half miles upstream of the syphon for the B-R-B-D link in the case of the Ravi main;

"(3) Except for domestic, non-consumptive and agricultural uses, Pakistan shall be under an obligation to let flow, and shall not permit any interference with, the waters (while flowing in Pakistan) of any tributary which in its natural course joins the Sutlej main or the Ravi main before these rivers have finally crossed into Pakistan;

"(4) All the waters, while flowing in Pakistan, of any tributary which, in its natural course, joins the Sutlej main or the Ravi main after these rivers have finally crossed into Pakistan shall be available for the unrestricted use of Pakistan, provided however that this provision shall not be construed as giving Pakistan any claim or right to any releases by India in any such tributary. If Pakistan should deliver any of the waters of any such tributary, which on the effective date joins the Ravi main after this river has finally crossed into Pakistan into a reach of the Ravi main upstream of this crossing, India shall not make use of these waters. Each party agrees to establish such discharge observation stations and make such observations as may be necessary for the determination of the component of water available for the use of Pakistan on account of the aforesaid deliveries by Pakistan, and Pakistan agrees to meet the cost of establishing the aforesaid discharge observation stations and making the aforesaid observation;

"(5) There shall be a transition period during which, to the extent specified in Annexure H;

"(i) Limit its withdrawals for agricultural use, (ii) limit abstractions for storages, and (iii) make deliveries to Pakistan from the eastern rivers;

"(6) The transition period shall begin on April 1, 1960, and end on March 31, 1970, or, if extended under the provisions of Part 8 of Annexure H, on the date up to which it has been extended. In any event, whether or not the replacement referred to in Article IV (i) has been accomplished, the transition period shall end not later than March 31, 1973;

"(7) If the transition period is extended beyond March 31, 1970, the provisions of Article V(5) shall apply;

"(8) If the transition period is extended beyond March 31, 1970, the provisions of Paragraph 5 shall apply during the period of extension beyond March 31, 1970;

"(9) During the transition period, Pakistan shall receive for unrestricted use the waters of the eastern rivers which are to be released by India in accordance with the provisions of Annexure H. After the end of the transition period, Pakistan shall have no claim or right to releases by India of any of the waters of the eastern rivers. In case there are any releases, Pakistan shall enjoy the unrestricted use of the waters so released after they have finally crossed into Pakistan, provided that in the event that Pakistan makes any use of these waters, Pakistan shall not acquire any right whatsoever, by prescription or otherwise, to a continuance of such releases or such use.

"Article III relating to provisions regarding western rivers says:

"(1) Pakistan shall receive for unrestricted use all those waters of the western rivers which India is under obligation to let flow under the provisions of Paragraph 2;

"(2) India shall be under an obligation to let flow all the waters of the western rivers, and shall not permit any interference with these waters, except for the following uses, restricted (except as provided in item (c) (ii) of Paragraph 5 of Annexure C in the case of each of the rivers, the Indus, Jhelum and Chenab) to the drainage basin thereof: (a) Domestic use, (b) non-consumptive use, (c) agriculture use (as set out in Annexure C) and (d) generation of hydro-electric power as set out in Annexure D;

"(3) Pakistan shall have the unrestricted use of all waters originating from sources other than the eastern rivers which are delivered by Pakistan into the Ravi or the Sutlej and India shall not make use of these waters. Each party agrees to establish such discharge observation stations and make such observation as may be considered necessary by the Commission for the determination of the component of water available for the use of Pakistan on account of the aforesaid deliveries by Pakistan;

"(4) Except as provided in Annexures D and E, India shall not store any water of, or construct any storage works on the western rivers.

"Provisions regarding eastern rivers and western rivers as contained in Article IV state:

"(1) Pakistan shall use her best endeavours to construct and bring into operation, with due regard to expedition and economy, that part of a system of works which will accomplish the replacement, from the western rivers and other sources, of water supplies for irrigation canals in Pakistan which, on August 15, 1947, were dependent on water supplies from the eastern rivers;

"(2) Each party agrees that any non-consumptive use made by it shall be so made as not to materially change, on account of such use, the flow in any channel to the prejudice of the uses on that channel by the other party under the provisions of this Treaty. In executing any scheme of flood protection or flood control each party will avoid, as far as practicable, any material damage to the other party and any such scheme carried out by India on the western rivers shall not involve any use of water or any storage in addition to that provided under Article III;

"(3) Nothing in this Treaty shall be construed as having the effect of preventing either party from undertaking schemes of drainage, river training, conservation of soil against erosion and dredging, or from removal of stones, gravel or sand from the beds of the rivers; provided that (a) in executing any of the schemes mentioned above, each party will avoid, as far as practicable, any material damage to the other party; (b) any such scheme carried out by India on the western rivers shall not involve any use of water or any storage in addition to that provided under Article III; (c) except as provided in Paragraph 5 and Article VII (1) (b), India shall not take any action to increase the catchment areas beyond the area on the effective date, of any natural or artificial drainage or drain which crosses into Pakistan and shall not undertake such construction or remodelling of any drainage or drain which so crosses or falls into a drainage or drain which so crosses as might cause material damage in Pakistan or entail the construction of a new drain or enlargement of an existing drainage or drain in Pakistan; and (d) should Pakistan desire to increase the catchment area, beyond the area on the effective date, of any natural or artificial drainage or drain, which receives drainage waters from India, or except in an emergency, to pour any waters into it in excess of the quantities received by it as on the effective date Pakistan shall, before undertaking any work for these purposes, increase the capacity of that drainage or drain to the extent necessary so as not to impair its efficacy for dealing with drainage waters received from India as on the effective date;

"(4) Pakistan shall maintain in good order its portions of the drainage mentioned below with capacities not less than the capacities as on the effective date: (i) Hudiara drain; (ii) Kasur nala; (iii) Salimshah drain; and (iv) Fazilka drain;

"(5) If India finds it necessary that any of the drainages mentioned in Paragraph 4 should be deepened or widened in Pakistan, Pakistan agrees to undertake to do so as a work of public interest, provided India agrees to pay the cost of the deepening or widening;

"(6) Each party will use its best endeavours to maintain the natural channels of the rivers, as on the effective date, in such conditions as will avoid, as far as practicable, any obstruction to the flow in these channels likely to cause material damage to the other party;

"(7) Neither party will take any action which would have the effect of diverting the Ravi main between Madhopur and Lahore, or the Sutlej main between Harike and Suleimanki, from its natural channel between high banks;

"(8) The use of the natural channels of the rivers for the discharge of flood or other excess waters shall be free and not subject to limitation by either party, and neither party shall have any claim against the other in respect of any damage caused by such use. Each party agrees to communicate to the other party as far in advance as practicable any information it may have in regard to such extraordinary discharges of water from reservoirs and flood flows as may affect the other party;

"(9) Each party declares its intention to operate its storage dams, barrages and irrigation canals in such a manner, consistent with the normal operations of its hydraulic systems, as to avoid as far as feasible, material damage to the other party;

"(10) Each party declares its intention to prevent, as far as practicable, undue pollution of the waters of the rivers which might adversely affect uses similar in nature to those to which the waters were put on the effective date, and agrees to take all reasonable measures to ensure that, before any sewage or industrial waste is allowed to flow into the rivers, it will be treated, where necessary, in such a manner as not materially to affect those uses, provided that the criterion of reasonableness shall be the customary practice in similar situations on the rivers;

"(11) The parties agree to adopt, as far as feasible, appropriate measures for the recovery and restoration to owners of timber and other property floated or floating down the rivers, subject to appropriate charges being paid by the owners;

"(12) The use of water for industrial purposes under Articles II(3), II(5) and III(2) shall not exceed: (a) in the case of an industrial process known on the effective date, such quantum of use as was customary in that process on the effective date; (b) in the case of an industrial process not known on the effective date; such quantum of use as was customary on the effective date in similar or in any way comparable industrial process; or if there was no industrial process on the effective date similar or in any way comparable to the new process, such quantum of use as would not have a substantially adverse effect on the other party;

"(13) Such part of any water withdrawn for domestic use under the provisions of Article II (3) and III (2) as is subsequently applied to agricultural use shall be accounted for as part of the agricultural use specified in Annexure B and Annexure C, respectively; each party will use its best endeavours to return to the same river (directly or through one of its tributaries) all water withdrawn therefrom for industrial purposes and not consumed either in the industrial processes for which it was withdrawn or in some other domestic use;

"(14) In the event either party should develop a use of the waters of the rivers which is not in accordance with the provisions of this Treaty, that party shall not acquire by reason of such use any right, by prescription or otherwise, to a continuance of such use;

"(15) Except as otherwise required by the express provisions of this Treaty, nothing in this Treaty shall be construed as affecting existing territorial rights over the waters of any of the rivers or the beds or banks thereof, or as affecting existing property rights under municipal law over such waters or beds or banks.

"Article V of the Treaty concerning financial provisions contains seven clauses:

"(1) In consideration of the fact that the purpose of part of the system of works referred to in Article IV (1) is the replacement from the western rivers and other sources of water supplies for irrigation canals in Pakitan which on August 15, 1947, were dependent on water supplies from the eastern rivers, India agrees to make a fixed contribution of £62,060,000 towards the costs of these works. The amount in £ sterling of this contribution shall remain unchanged irrespective of any alteration in the par value of any currency;

"(2) The sum of £62,060,000 specified in Paragraph (1) shall be paid in 10 equal annual instalments on November 1 each year. The first of such annual instalments shall be paid on November 1, 1960, or if the Treaty has not entered into force by that date, then within one month after the Treaty enters into force;

"(3) Each of the instalments specified in Paragraph (2) shall be paid to the World Bank for the credit of the Indus Basin Development Fund to be established and administered by the Bank, and payment shall be made in £ sterling, or in such other currency or currencies as may from time to time be agreed between India and the Bank;

"(4) The payments provided for under the provisions of Paragraph (3) shall be made without deduction or set-off on account of any financial claims of India on Pakistan arising otherwise than under the provisions of this Treaty, provided that this provision shall in no way absolve Pakistan from the necessity of paying in other ways debts to India which may be outstanding against Pakistan;

"(5) If at the request of Pakistan the transition period is extended in accordance with the provisions of Article II (6) and of part 8 of Annexure H, the Bank shall thereupon pay to India out of the Indus Basin Development Fund the appropriate amount specified in the table below:—

"Period of aggregate extension of transition period. Payment to India.

"One year £3,125,000.

"Two years £6,406,250.

"Three years £9,850,000;

"(6) The provisions of Article IV (1) and Article V (1) shall not be construed as conferring upon India any right to participate in the decisions as to the system of works which Pakistan constructs pursuant to Article IV (1) or as constituting an assumption of any responsibility by India or as an agreement by India in regard to such works;

"(7) Except for such payments as are specifically provided for in this Treaty, neither party shall be entitled to claim any payment for observance of the provisions of this Treaty or to make any charge for water received from it by the other party.

"Article VI relates to exchange of data:

"(1) The following data with respect to the flow in, and utilization of the waters of the rivers shall be exchanged regularly between the parties: daily (or as observed or estimated less frequently) guage and discharge data relating to flow of the rivers at all observation sites, daily extractions for or releases from reservoirs, daily withdrawals at the heads of all canals operated by the Government or by a Government agency (hereinafter in this Article called canals), including link canals, daily escapages from all canals, including link canals and daily deliveries from link canals;

"These data shall be transmitted monthly by each party to the other as soon as the data for a calendar month have been collected and tabulated, but not later than three months after the end of the month to which they relate, provided that such of the data specified above as are considered by either party to be necessary for operational purposes shall be supplied daily or at less frequent intervals, as may be requested. Should one party request the supply of any of these data by telegram, telephone, or wireless, it shall reimburse the other party for the cost of transmission;

"(2) If, in addition to the data specified in Paragraph (1) of this Article, either party requests the supply of any data relating to the hydrology of the rivers, or to canal or reservoir operation connected with the rivers, or to any provision of this Treaty, such data shall be supplied by the other party to the extent that these are available.

"Article VII on future co-operation says:

"(1) The two parties recognize that they have a common interest in the optimum development of the rivers and, to that end, they declare their intention to co-operate, by mutual agreement, to the fullest possible extent. In particular: (a) each party, to the extent it considers practicable and on agreement by the other party to pay the costs to be incurred, will, at the request of the other party, set up or install such hydrologic observation stations within the drainage basins of the rivers, and set up or install such meteorological observation stations relating thereto and carry out such observations thereat, as may be requested, and will supply the data so obtained; (b) each party, to the extent it considers practicable and on agreement by the other party to pay the costs to be incurred, will, at the request of the other party, carry out such new drainage works as may be required in connexion with new drainage works of the other party; (c) at the request of either party, the two parties may, by mutual agreement, co-operate in undertaking engineering works on the rivers. The formal arrangements, in each case, shall be as agreed upon between the parties;

"(2) If either party plans to construct any engineering work which would cause interference with the waters of any of the rivers and which, in its opinion, would affect the other party materially, it shall notify the other party of its plans and shall supply such data relating to the work as may be available and as would enable the other party to inform itself of the nature, magnitude and effect of the work. If a work would cause interference with the waters of any of the rivers but would not, in the opinion of the party planning it, affect the other party materially, nevertheless the party planning the work shall, on request, supply the other party with such data regarding the nature, magnitude and effect, if any, of the work as may be available.

Article VIII on the permanent Indus Commission says:

"(1) India and Pakistan shall each create a permanent post of Commissioner for the Indus waters and shall appoint to this post, as often as a vacancy occurs, a person who should ordinarily be a high-ranking engineer competent in the field of hydrology and water-use. Unless either Government should decide to take up any particular question directly with the other Government, each Commissioner will be the representative of his Government for all matters arising out of this Treaty and will serve as the regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty, and in particular, with respect to the furnishing or exchange of information or data provided for in the Treaty and the giving of any notice or response to any notice provided for in the Treaty;

"(2) The status of each Commissioner and his duties and responsibilities towards his Government will be determined by the Government;

"(3) The two Commissioners shall together form the permanent Indus Commission;

"(4) The purpose and functions of the Commission shall be to establish and maintain co-operative arrangements for the implementation of the Treaty, to promote co-operation between the parties in the development of the waters of the rivers and, in particular: (a) to study and report to the two Governments on any problem relating to the development of the waters of the rivers which may be jointly referred to the Commission by the two Governments; in the event that a reference is made by one Government alone, the Commissioner of the other Government shall obtain the authorization of his Government before he proceeds to act on the reference; (b) to make every effort to settle promptly, in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (1) any question arising thereunder; (c) to undertake, once every five years, a general tour of inspection of the rivers for ascertaining the facts connected with various developments and works on the rivers; (d) to undertake promptly, at the request of either Commissioner, a tour of inspection of such works or sites on the rivers as may be considered necessary by him for ascertaining the facts connected with those works or sites; and (e) to take, during the transition period, such steps as may be necessary for the implementation of the provisions of Annexure H (which contains details of the transition period);

"(5) The Commission shall meet regularly at least once a year, alternately in India and Pakistan. This regular annual meeting shall be held in November or in such other month as may be agreed upon between the Commissioners. The Commission shall also meet when requested by either Commissioner;

"(6) To enable the Commissioners to perform their functions in the Commission, each Government agrees to accord to the Commissioner of the other Government the same privileges and immunities as are accorded to representatives of member-States to the principal and subsidiary organs of UN under Sections 11, 12 and 13 of Article IV of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of UN (dated February 13, 1946) during the periods specified in those Sections. It is understood and agreed that these privileges and immunities are accorded to the Commissioners not for the personal benefits of the individuals themselves but in order to safeguard the independence of their functions in connexion with the Commission; consequently, the Government appointing the Commissioner not only has the right but is under a duty to waive the immunity of its Commissioner in any case where, in the opinion of the appointing Government, the immunity would impede the course of justice and can be waived without prejudice to the purpose for which the immunity is accorded;

"(7) For the purposes of the inspections specified in Paragraph (4) (C) and (D), each Commissioner may be accompanied by two advisers or assistants to whom appropriate facilities will be accorded;

"(8) The Commission shall submit to the Government of India and to the Government of Pakistan, before the first of June of every year, a report on its work for the year ended on the preceding 31st of March and may submit to the two Governments other reports at such times as it may think desirable;

"(9) Each Government shall bear the expenses of its Commissioner and his ordinary staff. The cost of any special staff required in connexion with the work mentioned in Article VII (1) shall be borne as provided therein;

"(10) The Commission shall determine its own procedures.

"Article IX on settlement of differences and disputes says:

"(1) Any question which arises between the parties concerning the interpretation or application of this Treaty or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of this Treaty shall first be examined by the Commission, which will endeavour to resolve the question by agreement;

"(2) If the Commission does not reach agreement on any of the questions mentioned in Paragraph (1), then a difference will be deemed to have arisen, which shall be dealt with as follows: (a) any difference which, in the opinion of either Commissioner, falls within the provisions of part 1 of Annexure F shall, at the request of either Commissioner, be dealt with by a neutral expert in accordance with the provisions of part 2 of Annexure F; (b) if the difference does not come within the provisions of Paragraph (2) (a), or if a neutral expert, in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 7 of Annexure F, has informed the Commission that, in his opinion, the difference, or a part thereof, should be treated as a dispute, then a dispute will be deemed to have arisen which shall be settled in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs (3), (4) and (5), provided that, at the discretion of the Commission, any difference may either be dealt with by a neutral expert in accordance with the provisions of Part 2 of Annexure F or be deemed to be a dispute to be settled in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs (3), (4) and (5), or may be settled in any other way agreed upon by the Commission;

"(3) As soon as a dispute to be settled in accordance with this and the succeeding Paragraphs of this Article has arisen, the Commission shall, at the request of either Commissioner, report the fact to the two Governments as early as practicable, stating in its report the points on which the Commission is in agreement and the issues in dispute, the views of each Commissioner on these issues and his reasons therefor;

"(4) Either Government may, following receipt of the report referred to in Paragraph (3), or if it comes to the conclusion that this report is being unduly delayed in the Commission, invite the other Government to resolve the dispute by agreement. In doing so it shall state the names of its negotiators and their readiness to meet with the negotiators to be appointed by the other Government. To assist in these negotiations, the two Governments may agree to enlist the services of one or more mediators acceptable to them;

"(5) A Court of Arbitration shall be established to resolve the dispute in the manner provided by Annexure G.

Upon agreement between the parties to do so; or at the request of either party, if, after negotiations have begun pursuant to Paragraph (4), in its opinion the dispute is not likely to be resolved by negotiation or mediation; or at the request of either party, if, after the expiry of one month following receipt by the other Government of the invitation referred to in Paragraph (4), that party comes to the conclusion that the other Government is unduly delaying the negotiation;

"(6) The provisions of Paragraphs (3) (4) and (5) shall not apply to any difference while it is being dealt with by a neutral expert.

"Article X on emergency provisions says:

"If, at any time prior to March 31, 1965, Pakistan should represent to the World Bank that, because of the outbreak of large-scale international hostilities arising out of causes beyond the control of Pakistan, she is unable to obtain from abroad the materials and equipment necessary for the completion, by March 31, 1973, of that part of the system of works referred to in Article IV (1) which relates to the replacement referred to therein, (hereinafter referred to as the 'replacement element') and if, after consideration of this representation in consultation with India, the Bank is of the opinion that, (a) these hostilities are on a scale of which the consequence is that Pakistan is unable to obtain in time such materials and equipment as must be procured from abroad for the completion, by March 31, 1973, of the replacement element, and (b) since the effective date, Pakistan has taken all reasonable steps to obtain the said materials and equipment, and with such resources of materials and equipment as have been available to Pakistan both from within Pakistan and from abroad, has carried forward the construction of the replacement element with due diligence and all reasonable expedition, the Bank shall immediately notify each of the parties accordingly. The parties undertake, without prejudice to the provisions of Article XII (3) and (4), that, on being so notified, they will forthwith consult together and enlist the good offices of the Bank in their consultation, with a view to reaching mutual agreement as to whether or not, in the light of all the circumstances then prevailing, any modifications of the provisions of this Treaty are appropriate and advisable and, if so, the nature and the extent of the modifications.

"Article XI on general provisions says:

"(1) It is expressly understood that this Treaty governs the rights and obligations of each party in relation to the other with respect only to the use of the waters of the rivers and matters incidental thereto; and nothing contained in this Treaty, and nothing arising out of the execution thereof, shall be construed as constituting a recognition or waiver (whether tacit, by implication or otherwise) of any rights or claims whatsoever of either of the parties other than those rights or claims which are expressly recognized or waived in this Treaty.

"Each of the parties agrees that it will not invoke this Treaty, anything contained therein, or anything arising out of the execution thereof, in support of any of its own rights or claims whatsoever or in disputing any of the rights or claims whatsoever of the other party, other than those rights or claims which are expressly recognized or waived in this Treaty;

"(2) Nothing in this Treaty shall be construed by the parties as in any way establishing any general principle of law or any precedent;

"(3) The rights and obligations of each party under this Treaty shall remain unaffected by any provisions contained in, or by anything arising out of the execution of, any agreement establishing the Indus Basin Development Fund.

"Article XII on final provisions says:

"(1) This Treaty consists of the Preamble, the Articles hereof and Annexures A to H hereto, and may be cited as The Indus Waters Treaty 1960;

"(2) This Treaty shall be ratified and the Ratifications thereof shall be exchanged in New Delhi. It shall enter into force upon the exchange of Ratifications, and will then take effect retrospectively from April 1, 1960;

"(3) The provisions of this Treaty may from time to time be modified by a duly ratified Treaty concluded for that purpose between the two Governments;

"(4) The provisions of this Treaty, or the provisions of this Treaty as modified under the provisions of Paragraph (3), shall continue in force until terminated by a duly ratified Treaty concluded for that purpose between the two Governments."

Besides Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan who signed the Treaty on behalf of India and Pakistan respectively, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff also signed the Treaty on behalf of the World Bank.

Indus Basin Development Fund:

Apart from the Canal Waters Treaty, two other Agreements were signed in Karachi on September 19.

One was an International Financial Agreement creating an Indus Basin Development Fund of about $900,000,000 (about Rs. 4,500,000,000) to finance the construction of irrigation and other works in Pakistan.

The International Financial Agreement was executed by representatives of the Governments of Australia, Canada, West Germany, New Zealand, Pakistan, UK, USA and the World Bank.

Contributions to the Fund would come from the participating Governments to the tune of $640,000,000, from India $174,000,000 payable under the Indus Waters Treaty towards the cost of replacement works and from the World Bank $80,000,000 as a loan to Pakistan.

The other was an Agreement for a loan of $90,000,000 from the World Bank to Pakistan, which was signed by Mr. Mohammed Shoaib, Finance Minister, on behalf of Pakistan and by Mr. W. A. B. Iliff on behalf of the Bank.

The amount of the loan was $90,000,000 of which $80,000,000 would be paid into the Indus Basin Development Fund and the balance of $10,000,000 would be available to meet interest and other charges on the loan during the first eight years of the period of construction of the works.

The loan would be repaid over a period of 20 years beginning in 1970.

Each portion of the loan as it is made available for disbursement will carry interest at the rate then in effect for long-term loans being made by the Bank.

The US Development Loan Fund Agreement for a loan of $70,000,000 to Pakistan, the proceeds of which would accrue to the Indus Basin Development Fund, has already been signed. Repayment of this loan would be made in Pakistan rupees over a period of 30 years from the date of the first disbursement, the interest being 3½ per cent per annum.

The Indus Basin Development Fund would be administered by the World Bank. As administrator, the Bank would be responsible under the Fund Agreement for calling up half-yearly contributions to the Fund and for regulating disbursements from the Fund to meet approved expenditure incurred by the Water and Power Development Authority of West Pakistan on the works in Pakistan as the construction programme progresses.

The general scheme of works to be carried out in Pakistan was drawn up by the Indus Basin Advisory Board set up by the Government of Pakistan which, in addition to Pakistan irrigation engineers, included representatives of American and British engineering firms—and in consultation with the World Bank. The responsibility for carrying out the works rests with the Water and Power Development Authority of West Pakistan.

The participating Governments will make the following contribution grants to the Indus Basin Development Fund:

Australia—£A6,965,000, Canada—$(C)22,100,000, West Germany—DM126,000,000, New Zealand—£NZ1,000,000, UK—£20,680,000, USA—$177,000,000.

All the above grants as well as the US and World Bank loans will be freely usable or convertible for purchases in member-countries of the Bank and in New Zealand and Switzerland.

In addition, the Fund will be provided with the following resources of Pakistan rupees to finance expenditure in Pakistan currency:

(1) A contribution by USA in Pakistan rupees equivalent to $235,000,000, which will be in the form of grants or loans or both to Pakistan as may be agreed to between USA and Pakistan; (2) A contribution by Pakistan in Pakistan rupees equivalent to £9,850,000.

The Beas project to be carried out in India will not be financed out of the Indus Basin Development Fund. But two loans—one from USA and the other from the World Bank—will be given to India to meet the foreign exchange component of this project. The Beas dam will create a reservoir with a capacity of 5.6 million acre-ft. and hydro-electric potential for generating 20,000 kw of power. The Beas project and the Bhakra Dam will irrigate large areas in Punjab and the Rajasthan desert.

The works to be carried out in West Pakistan will consist of a system of eight link canals, nearly 400 miles in total length, transferring water from the western rivers to areas formerly irrigated by the eastern rivers. The total area to be thus irrigated will be above five million acres and the total volume of water to be transferred 14 million acre-ft.

Two storage dams will be constructed in West Pakistan, one on the river Jhelum with a capacity of 3.75 million acre-ft. and the other on the upper Indus with a capacity of 4.2 million acre-ft. The Jhelum dam will generate power of more than 30,000 kw.

Three barrages will be constructed to carry new canals across rivers. Five existing barrages and eight canals will be remodelled. Drainage works will also be undertaken to overcome waterlogging and salinity in about 2.5 million acres and about 2,500 tube-wells will be sunk.

World Bank's Statement:

The World Bank in a Press release on September 19 described the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty as marking the end of "a critical and long-standing dispute between India and Pakistan" and "opening the way to the peaceful use and development of water resources on which depends the livelihood of some 50,000,000 people in the two countries".

The Bank estimated the flow of water in the Indus Basin as twice that of the Nile and three times that of the Tigris and Euphrates combined, and described the existing irrigation system in the Indus Basin as the largest in the world.

Describing the Beas project in India and the replacement works in Pakistan as the largest of their kind ever to be undertaken anywhere, it said that the total cost of the programme would be Rs. 5,350,000, of which Rs. 4,350,000,000 would be spent in Pakistan and Rs. 1,000,000,000 in India.

Two million tons of cement, 250,000 tons of steel and 1,000,000,000 bricks and tiles would be required to execute these works.

F-M Ayub Khan's Tribute To Mr. D. Lilienthal:

President Ayub Khan in a message to Mr. David Lilienthal, originator of the proposal for an Indus Basin Treaty, expressed appreciation of Mr. Lilienthal's "contribution to the cause of peace and amity between nations".

He said: "You have cause for legitimate pride in the fulfilment of your cherished desire for harmony and understanding between two neighbours."

Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's Comment:

President D. D. Eisenhower said in Washington on September 19 that F-M Ayub Khan and Mr. Nehru had demonstrated qualities of the highest statesmanship in reaching agreement on the Indus waters problem.

He said: "This brings to a salutary close a dispute of major proportions which had existed between these two free world countries since their independence 13 years ago. The livelihood of some 50 million people will be enhanced by the solution of this problem.

"The peaceful settlement of this issue marks the inauguration of a new chapter in the conduct of international relations wherein the expert 'good offices' of an international Organization have served to assist two equally determined nations to reconcile their opposing view-points and to reach an amicable agreement over a highly contentious dispute."

He also praised the World Bank President, Mr. Eugene Black and the Vice-President, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff "for their years of patient effort in assisting India and Pakistan to negotiate their differences in this matter."

He added: "The World Bank must also be commended for subscribing its own financial support and in enlisting the support of six friendly Governments to participate in the financing of this enormous project of development in the Indus basin, without which agreement would not have been possible despite the large investments being made by Pakistan and India themselves.

"USA is proud to be able to participate in this co-operative endeavour in the interest of the economic growth and security of these newly developing nations. It was with great interest that I was able to discuss this matter with President Ayub Khan and Prime Minister Nehru when I was in their capitals last Autumn."

US Presidential Candidates' Views On Agreement:

The Democratic and Republican candidates for the American Presidency on September 19 took out a paid advertisement in The New York Times to salute the leaders of India and Pakistan for signing the Indus Basin Agreement.

The advertisement, signed by the Democratic candidate, Senator John Kennedy and his running mate, Senator Lyndon Johnson, and the Republican candidate, Vice-President Richard Nixon, and Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, as well as a number of leading Senators of both parties said:

"We salute President Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan and Prime Minister Nehru of India for their farsighted statesmanship in signing on this day in the common interests of their peoples an Agreement on the control and division of the waters of the Indus river basin and for thus demonstrating to the world the possibility of reaching agreement on international problems no matter how complex or difficult.

"We salute Mr. Eugene R. Black, President, and Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, Vice-President of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, for their foresight, skill and persistence in working out an agreement on the Indus river waters acceptable to India and Pakistan and for mobilizing the financial resources necessary to carry it out.

"We salute the numerous Indians, Pakistanis, Americans and nationals of other countries, both officials and private persons, friends of India and Pakistan and workers for the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means who have contributed by their individual and collective efforts to this signal achievement in international relations."

Hafiz Mohammed Ibrahim's Broadcast:

In a recorded broadcast from New Delhi in English and Urdu on the night of September 19, India's Central Minister for Irrigation, Hafiz Mohammed Ibrahim, expressed the hope that the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty would bring a new era of co-operation between India and Pakistan in harnessing the large natural resources of the Indus Basin in the interests of the people of both countries.

He said that during the protracted negotiations, the Government of India had always recognized the fact that the waters of the Indus rivers were important for both countries and must therefore be developed for the benefit of both.

He said that Rs. 83 crores which India had agreed to pay Pakistan to enable her to construct replacement works represented, in the view of Indian engineers, a fair estimate of what they would cost.

After referring to some of the features of the Treaty, he said that the Government of India hoped to open the Rajasthan canal for non-perennial irrigation from the kharif season of 1961. As new channels were constructed and new lands were broken for cultivation, increased supplies would be available for them under the terms of the Treaty.

Rabi supplies for this canal would not, however, be available from the Beas until the end of the transition period or until the Beas dam was built. Work on the dam would begin very soon.

He expressed his gratitude and that of the Government of India to the President of the World Bank, Mr. Eugene Black, and the Vice-President, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, for the "great interest" they had taken in securing the settlement.

Cost Of Negotiations:

A news agency message from Karachi on September 19 sad that the protracted and tortuous negotiations over the Canal Waters Treaty had cost India and Pakistan over Rs. 30,000,000, most of it in foreign exchange.

A considerable portion of this amount was spent on journeys which the representatives of the two countries had to make to London and Washington for the negotiations, which lasted eight years.

The amount would be more if the payments the two Governments had made to foreign engineering and legal experts were taken into account.

B. Pakistan-Iran Treaty Of Extradition Ratified: Instruments of Ratification of the Extradition Treaty between Iran and Pakistan were exchanged in Karachi on September 15 between the Pakistan Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir and the Iranian Ambassador, Mr. Ahmed Ghadimi Nawai.

Mr. Manzoor Qadir, speaking on the occasion, said: "This Treaty is a further link in the chain of Agreements that bind our two countries together in friendship and co-operation."

He referred to the statement of the Shah of Iran that there were no other two countries in the world which could be as close to each other ideologically, culturally, socially and geographically as Iran and Pakistan.

He added: "No better words could have been found to express those intimate ties that have made our two countries so close to each other. May this friendship continue to prosper."

The Iranian Ambassador, Mr. A. G. Nawai said that it was indeed a matter of great pleasure that "one more difficult problem confronting our two countries has been solved."

C. Burmese Trade Mission: A Burmese Trade Mission under the leadership of U Hla Gyaw arrived in Lahore from East Pakistan on September 14.

The leader of the Mission told newsmen at the airport that the Mission had purchased goods worth Rs. 6,100,000 in East Pakistan and would make further purchases in West Pakistan.

During its one-week stay in East Pakistan, the Mission had purchased gunny bags, cotton textiles, electric fans and lanterns.

U Hla Gyaw said that in West Pakistan, he intended to buy textiles, sports goods and dried fish.

In reply to a question, he said that East Pakistan had offered good quality articles at competitive prices and that was their sole criterion for buying from Pakistan. He said that the Mission wanted a still larger number of goods and hoped that the prices offered in West Pakistan would be more competitive.

In a statement on the normal trade relations existing between Burma and Pakistan, he said that Burma wanted to further strengthen her trade relations with Pakistan and hoped that the volume of trade would increase.

He added: "We intend to negotiate for sale of our rice for the coming year and at the same time we will buy whatever goods you offer us with a view to balancing our trade as far as possible."

He disclosed that Burma had shipped 1,500,000 tons of rice to Pakistan in 1960. According to a bilateral Agreement between Burma and Pakistan, Burma would export from 200,000 to 3,00,000 tons of rice to Pakistan.

Regarding foreign investment in Burma, he said that some Pakistani investors had successfully set up industries in Burma and the Burmese Government was prepared to extend facilities to more Pakistani industrialists and businessmen.

D. Visa Facilities For Indians: It was announced in Karachi on September 19 that the Pakistan Government had taken steps towards better facilities for travel between India and Pakistan.

According to a Press release issued by the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi, once a visa has been issued to an Indian national for visiting Pakistan, the greatest possible facilities would be granted to the visa-holder and he would be treated with respect and cordiality.

Persons visiting Pakistan on a 'C' category visa would be granted facilities provided for tourists in the Registration of Foreigners Rules. These facilities would exempt the visitor from reporting his movements within the country.

The system of two residential permits would be substituted by a single residential permit issued at the point where the person takes up his residence. No residential permits would be required for persons visiting Pakistan and staying for less than two weeks. Passports and visas would conform to the present scheme in regard to validity and availability for visiting places.

With regard to Pakistanis visiting India, any passport-holder, who has once travelled to India on a 'B' or 'C' category visa would not be allowed to undertake a second visit within the same calendar year unless he had obtained an endorsement on his passport duly signed and sealed by an authority permitting him to undertake the second journey. Such endorsements would be granted only when genuine and if pressing reasons for the second visit exist. This step has been taken to stop repeated and unnecessary journeys to India.

In the case of a property-holder or a pensioner who is entitled to a 'B' visa under the Indo-Pakistan Passport-cum-Visa Scheme, the passport-issuing authority would, on application make an endorsement on his passport, exempting him from the operation of this rule. This rule would also not apply to holders of 'A', 'D', 'E' and 'F' visas. They would be free to visit India as many times as may be permissible under the Visa Scheme.

E. Exporters' Convention — Decision To Expand Exports: A Convention of Exporters which met in Karachi on September 12 resolved that an all-out effort should be made to expand exports with a view to increasing foreign exchange earnings. The Convention represented about 100 trades and industries.

The Convention, the first of its kind to be held in Pakistan, was inaugurated by the Secretary to the Ministry of Commerce, Mr. S. Osman Ali.

It had been called by the Ministry of Commerce to enlist the participation of trade and industry in the implementation of the objectives of the Second Five-Year Plan.

It unanimously supported Mr. Osman Ali's observation that the implementation of the development programme envisaged in the Second Five-Year Plan depended largely on the country's capacity to earn and find foreign exchange.

In the general discussion, representatives of various trades and industries brought to the notice of the Government certain bottlenecks which were retarding the flow of trade. It was decided to divide the Convention into seven panels of allied groups of trade and industries. These panels were asked to examine and report on the specific problems of individual industries, measures for increasing production and fixing targets for exports during the fiscal year July, 1960—June, 1961.

Mr. S. Osman Ali's Address:

Mr. S. Osman Ali, in his address enumerated the steps the Government had taken to provide an incentive to exporters. These were:

(1) In order to enable manufacturers to work to capacity and reduce costs, a number of raw materials had been placed on automatic licensing; (2) Export Bonus Scheme; and (3) Import duty rebate system under which exporters of manufactures could get a refund of import duty paid on raw materials entering into products destined for export.

He said: "We can only put our foreign exchange on a steady and rapidly increasing upward curve by increasing production and exports.

"I would like to emphasize here that greater production does not mean only more goods for the export market. It also means more production of agricultural raw materials. I would like to give you an example of the sort of thing I have in mind. We grow castor seed in Pakistan, but on such a small scale that there is very little left over for export after meeting our internal requirements. This is nothing short of a tragedy when one considers that the castor plant grows so easily and on land which is not required for raising food crops. I suggest, therefore, that our exporters should make it their business to contact the farmer and get him interested in growing more and making arrangements to buy his produce on a regular basis at fair prices.

"What we need is solid performance. Therefore, the only concrete suggestion I am going to put before you at this stage is that you should suggest a target for exports in your particular lines for the current year as well as for the fiscal year 1961-62 and let us know from time to time how your performance is matching up to those targets."

F. Increase In Salary Of Government Employees: A statement issued by the Finance Minister, Mr. M. Shoaib, in Rawalpindi on September 17 said that the Pakistan Government had decided to grant a further increase of Rs. 2 per month in the salary of Central Government employees serving in West Pakistan, whose pay did not exceed Rs. 100 per month.

He said that the increase had been granted as an interim relief to enable the employees to meet the recent rise in the price of wheat, pending receipt of the final recommendations of the Pay and Services Commission.

G. Central Medical Service To Be Established: The Health and Social Welfare Minister, Lieutenant-General W. A. Burki, told newsmen in Rawalpindi on September 15 that a Central Medical Service on an all-Pakistan basis would be established.

Gen. Burki said that the establishment of the Central Medical Service was recommended by the Medical Reforms Commission and had been accepted by the Government. The Service would be more or less on the pattern of the Central Superior Services. The Provincial Health Services, however, would continue to be separate.

He added that according to another decision taken on the recommendations of the Medical Reforms Commission, medical colleges and hospitals attached to them would be autonomous, run by a separate governing body for each.

He said that according to a third recommendation of the Commission, accepted by the Government, the district and divisional hospitals would get more powers and would be further expanded and improved.

He stated that preventive measures would be intensified.

In reply to a question, he said that the Cabinet had accepted almost all the recommendations of the Commission, with minor changes.

H. Land Acquisition Act Amended: The "Azad Kashmir" Government announced on September 15 amendments to its Land Acquisition Act to give the benefit of the current rates to persons whose lands are to be acquired for construction of the Mangla Dam in Mirpur.

The Government also announced that the land placed at the disposal of the "Azad Kashmir" Government by the West Pakistan Government for the rehabilitation of the displaced persons from Mirpur, would not be accepted without checking the quality of these lands.

A large number of people from the affected areas demanded that they should be resettled on compact areas of land. They also asked that those persons who owned one acre of land or less should also be included in the re-settlement scheme.

The Chief Officer of the Mangla Dam Project called for suggestions from the public in preparing a practicable plan for rehabilitating the people likely to be affected by the construction of the Dam.

I. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman Sentenced: The former East Pakistan Minister and General Secretary of the defunct Awami League, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, was convicted in Dacca on September 12 on a charge of criminal misconduct and sentenced to two years' simple imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 5,000, or in default to undergo a further six-month term of simple imprisonment.

A similar sentence was awarded to Qazi Abu Nasser, managing agent of a local business firm, was charged with abetment of the offence by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

Mr. A. Maudud, District and Sessions Judge and ex-officio Senior Special Judge, who passed the sentence, however, granted ad interim bail to both the accused, pending appeal before the High Court.

Mr. Maudud, in his judgment, observed that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, who was also former Minister in Charge of Anti-Corruption and was responsible for the passage of the East Pakistan Anti-Corruption Act of 1957 "unfortunately succumbed to the same malady."

About the co-accused Qazi Abu Nasser, he observed that he was the main actor, wire-pulling from behind, instigating and abetting the offences committed by the accused, Sheikh Mujibur Rehman.

BURMA

A. Review Of International Situation: The Prime Minister, U Nu, reviewed the international situation in his address to the Chamber of Deputies in Rangoon on September 22.

The major theme of his speech was the need to resume East-West negotiations on general and complete disarmament. He said that he had no wish to exaggerate the part Burma could play regarding the "gigantic and complicated question."

Nevertheless, he said, Burma had a responsibility towards ridding the world of the chimera of nuclear holocaust. If there were indications that his presence in the United Nations General Assembly might be helpful, he said, he would attend it. He deplored the fact that the 'cold war' had been intensified and the 10-Nation Disarmament Conference in Geneva had broken down.

In a reference to the Sino-Indian border dispute, he said that it had placed Burma in a very difficult and unhappy position inasmuch as she cherished equally the friendship of both countries.

He also noted the improvement in the relations between India and Pakistan and said: "We congratulate both countries on the settlement of the long-standing canal waters problem and hope that it will open the door to the peaceful solution of their other differences."

Welcoming the emergence of several new independent African States, he paid a tribute to President Charles de Gaulle of France for his realistic and statesmanlike handling of the problem of former French colonies. He expressed the hope that Gen. de Gaulle would bring his great gifts to bear on the problem of Algeria.

On the Congo, he said that Burma was solidly behind the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld. He added: "The situation which United Nations faced, and still faces in the Congo, has been most delicate and difficult, and we believe that by its action in the Congo, UN has so far averted a disaster of great magnitude."

On foreign aid, he said that his Government realized that the principal effort for the development of the country must be its own, and there was no substitute for it. At the same time it also recognized the beneficial part foreign aid could play in development plans.

He re-iterated: "We therefore continue to be ready to receive such aid from any source, provided no political strings are attached. This has been the attitude of all Burmese Governments since we attained Independence."

B. Government Purchase Of Shares In Oil Company: It was officially announced in Rangoon on September 21 that the Government had acquired up to 51 per cent of the shares in the Burma Oil Company (1954) Limited in accordance with the Agreement of the Joint Oil Venture (JOV).

The announcement did not mention whether the Government intended to become a partner in the Burmah Oil Company (Burmah Trading) Limited.

The original Joint Oil Venture Agreement gave the option to the Government to propose a similar venture between itself and the Burmah Oil Company (BT) Limited after the Government had become the major shareholder in BOC (1954) Limited.

In addition, the Government had the right to acquire up to 100 per cent of the issued capital of the Joint Oil Venture and to transfer the shares if it chose to Burmese citizens.

Though the BOC has been generally identified with the entire Burma oil industry, two other British oil companies are also associated with the Government in the Joint Oil Venture (JOV): the Indo-Burma Petroleum Company and the British-Burma Petroleum Company. However, BOC is the largest oil company in Burma.

The fact that the Burmese Government was now the major partner in JOV meant that it would be entitled to appoint three directors to the Board of the BOC '1954' Ltd. Formerly, the British oil companies had three directors on the Board, one of whom was also Chairman and the Burmese Government had only two directors.

The '1954' Ltd. has an issued capital of £15 million. Its immediate objective has been to achieve self-sufficiency for Burma in main petroleum products such as petrol, kerosene and diesel oils, and as the ultimate objective the production and refining of 10,000 barrels of oil a day. Both those objectives have nearly been achieved.

JOV has returned satisfactory dividends to both the British and Burmese partners. However, during the last two years mutual suspicions had somewhat plagued the partnership. The Government felt that its British partners were lukewarm about energetically exploring for further possible sources of oil. The British oil companies, on their part, felt that they could not plan too far ahead in a socialist Burma.

There had been a considerable programme of exploration in the delta where seismic surveys and test-drilling had been carried out. The results, however, had not been encouraging. Exploratory drilling was also being undertaken in Central Burma.

The JOV Agreement provides for accelerated Burmanization throughout all branches of the oil industry including administrative and technical branches. The Company also has a programme of training Burmese nationals in Burma and abroad.

CEYLON

A. Changes In Newspaper Set-Up: The Times of Ceylon Limited, one of the two newspaper groups which the Government had earlier announced it intended to take over and turn into statutory public corporations, announced on September 15 its decision to form itself into a public company.

It stated that 72 per cent. or more of its issued capital could now be held by the public, leaving the present shareholders with 28 per cent. or less.

Preference was to be given to applications for 100 shares or less and the Board offered to make these allotments in the presence of a Government nominee.

The company's issued capital was to be increased by Rs. 3 million to make a total of Rs. 6,846,000. After the closing day of the offer of the new shares to the public, the present Board of Directors would resign, with liberty to offer themselves for re-election.

The Company's decision was taken on August 11, the day before the Government announcement in the Speech from the Throne, that The Times of Ceylon Ltd. and Associated Newspapers of Ceylon Ltd. were to be turned into public corporations so that their ownership would be broad-based.

Mr. F. R. D. Bandaranaike's Statements:

In a statement issued the same day (September 15) the Finance Minister, Mr. F. R. Dias Bandaranaike stated that the Cabinet had decided to entrust to the Ministries of Defence and External Affairs the task of drafting legislation to take over certain newspapers and to turn them into statutory public corporations.

He said that a Bill on the subject would shortly be presented to Parliament.

He added that it had been brought to the notice of the Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, that existing newspaper corporations were taking steps to frustrate the objective of the Government as stated in the Speech from the Throne. One newspaper company had informed Mrs. Bandaranaike that it proposed to become a public company. The other company proposed to dispose of its assets to four new companies, to be formed by the same body of directors.

As it was not in keeping with the dignity of her office, he said, Mrs. Bandaranaike had not entered into correspondence with the newspaper companies. Whatever action was taken by the newspaper companies, the Government did not propose to deviate from its declared policy on the subject.

Any alienation of property or any new investment of share capital by the public in the companies that might be made, he said, would be subject to the provisions of the proposed legislation which would give effect to the policy of the Government as declared on August 12 in the Speech from the Throne.

In a statement issued the following day (September 16) The Times of Ceylon pointed out that it had no intention of frustrating any move by the Government and that its circular to shareholders announcing the decision to make the firm a public company was dated August 11.

On September 20, Mr. F. R. D. Bandaranaike told a news conference in London (where he had gone to attend the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Conference) that the Ceylon Government's decision to take over the country's newspapers was in the public interest and not an intention to curb the freedom of the Press.

He said that the Ceylon newspapers would still be able to criticize the Government if they so desired. Full compensation would be paid for the assets taken over.

He added: "The Government has no interest whatever in the newspapers concerned except to prevent monopolies. Our Government has no intention of curbing the liberty of the Press if such liberty existed."

He said that overseas criticism of the Government's plans was "based on incorrect information that we are interfering with the freedom of speech and the Press."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

The Government, he said, had no intention of interfering with the fundamental freedoms essential to democratic government.

He said that the Press Trust of Ceylon news service, which formed part of the property of the two newspaper groups, would ultimately be taken over with them. It had had a virtual monopoly and there had been many cases in which news reports were rationed or withheld according to the political views of the persons in control. The Government considered that the situation was fraught with very grave danger.

He said that the statutory corporations —which would be answerable to Parliament— would be empowered to issue shares to the general public, but the Government did not propose to take up any of these shares.

Asked if the newspapers would be able to criticize the Government after the take-over, he replied: "Yes, there are safeguards to make certain that they can criticize if they so desire."

"The Times Of Ceylon" On Take-Over:

The Times of Ceylon said in a leading article on September 22 that the statements which Mr. F. R. D. Bandaranaike may try to raise a loan for give an act of brusque intolerance news conference were "necessary to a democratic veneer, especially considering the errand on which he has gone to Britain." (This is a reference to the possibility that Mr. Bandaranaike had made at his London Ceylon in Britain.)

The article, headed "Liberty of the Press," said: "All Mr. Dias Bandaranaike's assertions are manifestly untrue. If the intention of the Government is to break a monopoly (granting for the purpose of argument that there is in fact a monopoly) then the obvious way to do it would be to encourage the creation of new newspapers instead of expropriating the existing ones and vesting them in corporations of the Government's own creation with shareholders selected by the Government. It is idle to assert that this would not result in Government control. It most certainly would, even if the Government did not own a single share in the new corporations.

"As for freedom to criticize, this would evidently be dependent on the Government's whim. No doubt a small degree of innocuous criticism would be permitted, but even if they wished to be outspokenly critical, the proposed corporations would always have before them the warning example of the free newspapers which were about to be expropriated only because they were critical of those policies of the previous Sri Lanka Freedom Party Government which had caused disharmony in the country and brought about swift economic decline; because they had denounced the dangerous no-contest pact between the Sri Lanka Freedom Party and the communist groups before the last General Elections; and because they had wanted to perform the traditional functions of the free Press if they were allowed to continue free."

It repeated its request that a Press Commission be appointed "so that evidence might be carefully sifted and the defence fairly heard."

On September 29 Mr. Bandaranaike told the House of Representatives in Colombo that there would be no change in the Government's decision to take over the national newspapers and vest their ownership in statutory public corporations.

He denied Opposition charges that it was an undemocratic act and said that on the contrary, what was intended was to create the liberty of the Press by converting the newspaper organizations into public corporations. The system which was proposed had not been tried out elsewhere.

He said that approaches were being made to the Government and one company was already saying that it wanted to re-form itself by becoming a public company while another said that it wanted to find a way to accommodate itself to help the Government achieve its ends. The plea, he said, had come too late; the Government would not change its decision.

In an implied reference to the recent threat of libel action against him by the Associated Newspapers of Ceylon Ltd., for certain remarks he was alleged to have made in London, he said that the Government would not liquidate those who had brought charges and decided to take action against it. He was prepared to face any charge before the judiciary which, he was confident, was independent.

CHINA

A. Mr. Chou En-lai On Principles Of Sino-Japanese Trade: The Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, on September 10 received in Peking the Chairman of the Japanese Socialist Party Committee for the Protection of the Constitution, Mr. Sehichiro Hozumi; a member of the Standing Committee of the Japan-China Friendship Association, Mr. Hosei Yoshida and the Secretary-General of the Association, Mr. Toshizo Hasegawa.

The visitors spoke of the need of strengthening friendly relations between the two countries and thanked China for supporting the "Japanese people's struggle against US imperialism."

Mr. Chou En-lai said that the "day was not far off when an independent, democratic, peaceful and neutral Japan would emerge in the international arena."

He added: "The Chinese people always stand on the side of the Japanese people who love peace and are safeguarding their national independence."

He referred to the problem of trade relations and handed the minutes of his earlier statement on Sino-Japanese relations and Sino-Japanese trade to the Managing Director of Japan-China Trade Promotion Association, Mr. Kazuo Suzuki, on August 27.

According to the minutes, Mr. Chou En-lai had said that trade between the two countries could be based on three principles, namely, Government agreement, private contracts and special consideration in individual cases.

The minutes read:

"First of all, all Agreements from now on must be concluded between the Governments on both sides and only so are they guaranteed, because before, with the private agreements the Japanese Government did not want to guarantee them. As regards a Government Agreement, it can only be signed in conditions when the relations of the Governments of the two countries are developing in a friendly direction and, in fact, when normal relations are established; otherwise, it cannot be signed.....

"We also still maintain the three political principles we stated formerly. The three principles do not place a heavy demand on the Japanese Government and they are very fair. They are: first, the Japanese Government must not be hostile to China, for the Chinese Government is not hostile to Japan; it recognizes Japan's existence and is glad to see the advances of the Japanese people; and if the two sides were to conduct negotiations, the Japanese Government would naturally be taken as the other party to negotiations.

"But the Japanese Government's attitude to China has not been the same—it has not recognized the existence of new China. On the contrary, it has been hostile to new China and has recognized Taiwan (Formosa) saying it represents China. Also, it has not taken the Government of new China as the other party to negotiations.

"Secondly, Japan must not follow the United States in the 'two Chinas' plot. The United States will carry on the 'two Chinas' intrigue whether the Democratic Party or the Republican Party has the presidency. Taiwan-paid newspapers in Hongkong say that the Republican Party is passive about 'two Chinas' and taking its time, while if the Democratic Party takes office, it will pursue the 'two Chinas' business actively and display initiative. I believe there is some truth in this kind of remark. If the United States does this sort of thing and Japan follows, of course, we will oppose it.

"Thirdly, Japan must not obstruct the development of Sino-Japanese relations in the direction of normalization.

"These three principles of ours are very equitable. If we put them the other way round, you will understand. First, the Chinese Government is not hostile to Japan but wants to be friendly with Japan; secondly, the Chinese Government recognizes only one Japan and does not create two Japans and moreover, in any negotiations, would invariably take the Japanese Government as the other party; thirdly, it invariably encourages, supports and helps Sino-Japanese relations to develop towards normalization. Why should the Japanese Government not do the same?"

B. Ninghsia Hui Regional Congress: The People's Congress of the Ninghsia Hui Autonomous Region met in Ninghsia from September 13 to 15.

[The Ninghsia Hui Autonomous Region was set up in October, 1958 in the upper valley of the Yellow river on the southern borders of Inner Mongolia. About one-third of the population of nearly two million are Muslims and there are also small groups of Mongolians and Manchus.]

According to Press reports, the Congress decided "to carry out a mass education drive throughout the Region aimed at opposing local nationalism and strengthening solidarity among nationalities."

It passed a resolution unanimously removing Mr. Liu Ke-ping from the post of Chairman of the Autonomous Region, Mr. Wan Chih-chiang from the Vice-Chairmanship and Mr. Li Wei-tung and Mr. Ma Sze-yi from membership of the Regional People's Council. It gave no specific reasons for the dismissals.

Mr. Yang Ching-jen was elected as the new Chairman and Mr. Han Tao-jen and Mr. Chung-lei joined the People's Council.

A month earlier, a long article in the local Press had attacked "local chauvinists" who "confuse nationality with religion."

The theory, it said, was "contrary to historic realities and is anti-Marxist and anti-Leninist. The aims of this theory were to obscure the working people's comprehension, to attempt to keep the working people forever under the yoke of religion and superstition and to oppose the thorough emancipation of the working people."

Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, Marshal Chu Teh, the Panchen Lama said that Tibet had achieved great victories in 1959 in suppressing the counter-revolutionary armed rebellion and in carrying out democratic reforms.

The Panchen Lama, who is Acting Chairman of the Preparatory Committee for the Tibet Autonomous Region, had arrived in Peking on September 27 for China's celebrations of her National Day on October 1.

He declared that the democratic reform had eliminated the feudal serf system in Tibet and overthrown the rule of the serf-owner class and made the million oppressed serfs masters of the new society and of their land.

He said that 90 per cent of the peasant households had joined popular mutual aid teams and that Tibet had had its biggest ever harvest this year.

The reforms, he said, had been completed in an agricultural area with a population of 800,000. The campaign against rebellion, slavery and the unpaid service system and a policy of mutual benefit for herdsmen and herds-owners had been carried out in an area of 140,000 people.

INDIA

SUMMARY: Visits Of Mr. Jozef Cyrankiewicz And Mr. Sekou Toure; British Credit; US Loans; Trade Agreement With Morocco; Food Situation Reviewed; Central Advisory Council Of Industries Session; Indian Labour Conference; Metallurgical Coal Discoveries; NCAER Study On Replacement Costs In Industry.

A. Visits Of Mr. J. Cyrankiewicz And Mr. Sekou Toure: The Prime Minister of Poland, Mr. Jozef Cyrankiewicz, arrived in New Delhi on September 20, and after visiting Dehra Dun and Madras, left India for Ceylon on September 27.

During his stay in New Delhi, Mr. Cyrankiewicz had talks with the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru.

The President of Guinea, Mr. Sekou Toure, arrived in New Delhi on September 23 and left for Cairo the following day (September 24), after a meeting with Mr. Nehru on September 23.

State Banquet:

The Indian President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, held a banquet jointly in honour of President Sekou Toure and Mr. J. Cyrankiewicz on September 23.

The leaders of the three countries—Guinea, Poland and India—in their speeches emphasized the need for international amity and friendly co-operation among the peoples of the world.

Dr. Rajendra Prasad said: "I feel happy to welcome in our midst tonight His Excellency Mr. Sekou Toure, President of Guinea. We welcome him as our honoured guest and as Head of an African State which recently won its freedom.

"His Excellency's presence here, though his stay in our country is going to be regrettably too short, provides us a welcome opportunity of expressing our gratification on the attainment of the status of a sovereign Republic by Guinea, one of the several States of the African continent which have happily emerged of late as free nations.

"India has never made secret of her sympathies with peoples of all countries struggling for political freedom, and since our independence we have lost no opportunity of voicing this feeling in UN and other international forums.

"This occasion has become doubly auspicious for us, for we have in our midst another great world figure, His Excellency Mr. Jozef Cyrankiewicz, Prime Minister of Poland, to whom I extend a very hearty welcome. Mr. Jozef Cyrankiewicz is not a stranger to us, for three years ago he was pleased to spend a few days in our country.

"Poland and India share between them a good many ideals and economic objectives and have the friendliest of relations."

President Toure in his reply said that his country, like India, was trying to rehabilitate its civilization.

He said: "We are aiming at the same ideal so that the social miseries may disappear. We are also bound together as our activities are based on the same principle, the principle of human justice, which means that brutal force should yield to reason, justice and normal force.

"And human principle demands that strength should be gathered in friendship and fraternity so that the colour of the skin, religion or things like that may not be a barrier to human relations."

Mr. Cyrankiewicz referred to the strong ties of friendship between India and Poland despite historical and social differences. He said that this was so because both the people's loved peace and wherever it was endangered both aspired to preserve it.

Indo-Polish Joint Statement:

Mr. J. Cyrankiewicz and Mr. Nehru in a Joint Statement issued in New Delhi on September 27 expressed their happiness at the growth of friendly co-operation between the two countries in many fields.

The Statement said: "Taking advantage of the second visit of the Prime Minister of the Polish People's Republic to India, talks were held between him and the Prime Minister of India. These talks covered Indo-Polish relations and the increasing co-operation between the two countries in the economic and cultural fields, which both Prime Ministers welcomed, as well as important international questions. Among the questions discussed were the importance and urgency of achieving disarmament in this nuclear age and the latest developments in Africa.

"In the course of a discussion of European problems, the Polish Prime Minister explained the views of his Government with regard to the problems of Germany, Berlin and the inviolability of the frontiers of Poland. Reference was also made to the working of the International Commission for Supervision and Control in Indo-China of which both India and Poland are members.

"The two Prime Ministers were happy at the growth of friendly co-operation between the two countries in many fields and expressed the hope that these friendly relations would grow."

B. £35 Million Credit From Britain: The United Kingdom Treasury announced in London on September 23, details of £35 million (about Rs. 46.7 crores) worth of credit for India from Britain.

The credits included loans to the extent of £30 million (about Rs. 40 crores) for orders of capital goods from Britain during India's Third Five Year Plan. The announcement described the loans as "an initial act of assistance" for the Plan.

There was also a credit of £5 million (about Rs. 6.7 crores) to finance "a broad range of Indian imports from UK, during the current financial year."

This would bring the total of British loans to India in the current financial year to £15 million (about Rs. 20 crores).

The loans were finalized during the recent talks in London between the Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, and Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Desai agreed that "further discussions should take place" on the possibility of the British Government and private British sources meeting the foreign exchange costs amounting to £20 million (about Rs. 26.7 crores) for the proposed extension of the Durgapur Steel Works, now being built in India with the help of British capital.

Mr. Desai told newsmen in London that the climate in Britain for aid to India's Five Year Plans "is quite good."

C. US Loan: It was announced in Washington on September 23 that the US Export-Import Bank had granted rupee loans totalling $3.2 million and a dollar loan of 13.6 million to two industrial firms in India associated with the Kaiser Organization for the production of aluminium and cement in India.

The Hindustan Aluminium Corporation Ltd. (Hindalco) received $13.6 million and a 21 million dollar-rupee loan to build an aluminium plant, now under construction near the Rihand Dam in UP.

The total cost of the 20,000-metric-ton unit is estimated at more than $30 million. Hindalco was formed by the Kaiser Aluminium and Chemical Corporation of Oakland (California) and the Birla interests in India headed by Mr. G. D. Birla.

Mysore Cements Ltd. was granted a $1.1 million dollar-rupee loan under PL 480, the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954. The loan will be used to help finance the construction of a 100,000-metric-ton cement plant near Ammasandra in Mysore.

Two Kaiser companies, Willys Overland Export Corporation and Kaiser Engineers Overseas Corporation have invested in Mysore Cements Ltd.

D. Surplus Agricultural Commodities Agreement With USA: It was announced in Washington on September 23 that the United States had agreed to sell to India an additional $17,100,000 worth of surplus agricultural commodities for rupees, including ocean transportation costs.

The Agreement was signed at the US State Department by Mr. M. C. Chagla, the Indian Ambassador to USA and Mr. Charles Adair, the American Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

to-date amounts to $3,608.7 million (Rs. 1,717.7 crores).

Out of this, grants to the Indian Government for economic development total $1,079.4 million (Rs. 513.8 crores), besides $10.4 million (Rs. 4.9 crores) for famine relief. The grants include the rupee equivalent of $757.2 million or 32 per cent of the sale proceeds of agricultural commodities supplied to India under PL 480 and a sum of $322.2 million provided under the Indo-American Technical Co-operation Programme.

About 81 per cent of US loans to India are repayable in rupees. The Wheat Loan of 1951 and loans given by the Export-Import Bank, totalling in all $359.2 million, would be repaid in dollars.

The loans made by the DLF ($353.3 million), the Technical Co-operation Programme assistance of $156.1 million and the $1,087.3 million being the sale proceeds of agricultural commodities supplied under PL 480 are repayable either in dollars or in rupees at the option of the Indian Government.

The repayment in rupees amounting to $1,596.7 million does not involve the utilization of India's foreign exchange earnings or the export of goods from India.

A sum of $457.7 million under PL 480 has been reserved for US Government use, including funds for loans under the Cooley Amendment.

The value of agricultural commodities like dried milk, wheat, rice, corn and cottonseed oil distributed in India through voluntary agencies under PL 480 amounts to $105.3 million.

F. Trade Agreement With Morocco: It was announced in Rabat on September 27 that India and Morocco had signed a Trade Agreement worth $58 million. The Agreement is expected to treble the trade between the two countries.

The Agreement was the result of talks held between the Indian delegation, led by the Indian Ambassador, Mr. Ramchander Goburdhan and a Moroccan delegation, headed by Commerce Minister, M Driss Slaoui, from September 19 to 24.

Under the terms of the Agreement, Morocco would now export manufactured goods to India for the first time. Previously, Moroccan exports consisted only of phosphates, lead and cork.

G. Indo-Polish Shipping Service Inaugurated: It was announced in Bombay on September 25 that with the departure of the Indian Resource from Calcutta for Poland, an express cargo service between India and Poland had been inaugurated from India in pursuance of the recent Shipping Agreement between the two countries. (See page 3427).

Under the Agreement, signed in New Delhi in June 1960, there would be 12 sailings in each direction every year.

The two Governments have each nominated a Shipping Organization in connexion with the arrangements to operate the services. On the Indian side, the Western Shipping Corporation has been nominated for the purpose and, on the Polish side, the Polish Ocean Lines.

The Vishva Kirti, a new 9,300-ton freighter built by West Germany and delivered to the Western Shipping Corporation on September 23, will proceed to Gdynia (Poland), on her maiden voyage. She will inaugurate the Indo-Polish shipping service from Poland.

H. Influx Of Foreign Capital: Figures available in New Delhi on September 22 showed that the rate of influx of foreign capital into the country had registered an appreciable rise during the last three years.

During 1958, 109 applications involving foreign collaborations were approved by the Government of India as against 24 in 1957 and 17 in 1956.

In 1959, this number had gone up to 172, while in the first seven months of 1960, 211 cases had been approved.

The industries favoured during 1960 by the foreign investors were electrical engineering, chemicals, glass, engineering, textiles, food processing and paper.

I. A-II Reduces Tourist Class Fares: A spokesman of Air-India International said in Bombay on September 23 that A-II would introduce from October, 1960 lower fares for the tourist class on flights from India to Europe, the Middle East and Far East sectors in pursuance of the decisions of the International Air Transport Association's (IATA) Traffic Conference held in Paris in March, 1960.

The Conference had decided that in future only two classes of service—"first class" and "economy" or "tourist class"—would be offered to passengers.

First class fares between Europe and points east of India were proposed to be increased by a small percentage, while tourist fares were to be reduced by amounts ranging between 6 per cent and 10 per cent over the same sectors.

The low class service would be renamed "economy" class as from October 1. Fares on jet and propeller aircraft would be the same but there would be a comfortable differential between the two classes of aircraft.

As a special attraction for tourist traffic, excursion fares from Europe to India, Pakistan, Ceylon and Nepal were also agreed to at the Conference. These fares would provide parties of six or more travelling together on an inclusive tour basis with a reduction of 22 per cent on the normal fares. Special arrangements were also proposed for carrying groups of seamen between Europe and points in India and the Far East at appreciably reduced rates.

The introduction of lower fares on these routes was formally approved by the Government of India.

J. Food Situation Reviewed: The Central Minister for Food and Agriculture, Mr. S. K. Patil, gave in Bombay on September 28 a detailed analysis of the food situation in the country vis-a-vis the question of State trading in foodgrains.

He said that most of the States had given up State trading. Punjab and Madhya Pradesh had gone in now for State trading, but he was sure that they too "have realized that they will lose a lot of money because they have to sell their grains at competitive prices in the market."

He himself, he said, was neither for nor against State trading as a policy of food distribution, but the time for its introduction and the form it should assume would be governed by circumstances.

By the adoption of the policy of State trading, the two States might incur big losses, perhaps running into several lakhs of rupees. He said: "That is why I am advising them not to enter the market when there is positive proof that it has become a buyers' market."

He added: "I am hoping that both the States will soon fall in line with other States and regulate their policy so that unnecessary stocks do not pile up."

He said that he had advised the two States against their policy because he knew that the "market was going to be against this form of State trading." Many people in India attached too much importance to the theory of State trading and a great deal of time was spent in fruitless discussions and controversies which could be better devoted to measures for increasing food production.

He added: "The remedy, if I may use a hackneyed expression, for all our evils on the food front is more production. Any amount of innovations that we might bring in our distribution system can be only palliatives and not real remedies."

India's food problem, he went on, was not difficult of solution. "We have not touched even the fringe of this vast problem." But the country possessed so much agricultural potential that there was no danger within the foreseeable future of any harm from insufficient production. If things continued to be favourable, India would safely attain self-sufficiency in food within the next four or five years.

State trading, he said, was neither good nor bad. It was merely a means to an end and not an end in itself. It might assume various forms depending on the requirements of a given situation. When people discussed State trading in this country, they thought of only one of its aspects—the entry of the Government into the market to buy and sell grains.

This, of course, was one of the many forms of State trading and in given circumstances it might be of some value. In fact, its efficacy was proved two or three years ago when crops failed. But, he added: "one must remember, this form of State trading can be indulged in advantageously only in a sellers' market. When there is real scarcity and consumers have to be protected against a rise in prices, it may be of advantage. But what may be a good remedy in a sellers' market is positively a bad and harmful remedy in a buyers' market."

He said that fortunately the foodgrains market in the country this year was purely a buyers' one. Foodgrains were available in plenty everywhere. The Government itself had got adequate stocks—on a scale which it did not hold at any time during the last 10 years—of more than 2-1|2 million tons of wheat and rice. The rice stocks alone stood at nearly 1.2 million tons, besides the anticipated import of more than 125,000 tons of rice from Egypt and Thailand. Wheat production was excellent in 1959 and there was plenty of wheat, local and imported. This had resulted in a buyers' market in foodgrains.

He added: "If we adopt the same tactics of State trading in foodgrains as we did a couple of years ago, the consequences are bound to be harmful." In spite of judicious handling, State trading had added 10 to 15 per cent more to the actual cost of foodgrains. For instance, he pointed out, a producer had to sell wheat at Rs. 16 or Rs. 17 per maund even though he had acquired it at Rs. 14 per maund when the cost of State trading was added to it.

The State Governments, he said, had to borrow crores of rupees to pay the producers. The interest charges on this amount plus the cost of machinery that was put in the field, the storage charges and the losses arising out of defective storage, would result in an abnormal increase in the cost of foodgrains.

He said that during the last two or three years, the prices of foodgrains had not risen in the same proportion as those of other essential commodities like oil and fuel. The price of wheat had, in fact, fallen. There had been a slight rise in the price of rice, but State trading could also have contributed to it. "That is why I am advising Punjab and Madhya Pradesh not to enter the market."

He agreed that under certain circumstances, State trading might have to be resorted to by the Government. He expected that with the rise in production, a situation might arise when the producers would have to be protected against a fall in prices. The Governm nt would then have to step in to guarantee minimum prices. Otherwise, there would be no incentive for higher production.

Another circumstance in which the Government might have to resort to State trading, he said, was when it would have to secure plenty of foodgrains for the purpose of "turning out" the buffer stock of five million tons of foodgrains. The foodgrains in the buffer stock could not keep for more than one or two years. Hence, the stocks would have to be "turned out" year after year. In order to ensure that the price of foodgrains would not rise as a result of the Government's open entry into the trade ring, an indirect form of State trading might have to be pursued.

He added that this was what he meant when he said that State trading was a means to an end. "We have to judge the end and regulate the means so that it does not become a harmful instrument."

K. Central Advisory Council Of Industries Session: The 11th session of the Central Advisory Council of Industries began in New Delhi on September 22.

Inaugurating the Council, the Central Minister for Commerce and Industry, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, said that if the industries kept in view two things—fair price and satisfactory distribution of their products in time to the consumer—they would get the support of the people as a whole.

He added: "I wonder if the significance of this general support is fully realized."

He regretted that temporary shortages and other difficulties were taken advantage of and prices were raised. He preferred that the industries should do things voluntarily instead of the Government compelling them to do so by legislation.

He called for an all-out effort to implement the Third Five-Year Plan, which he described as a national Plan and to export more. He hoped that friendly countries would extend the scope of their assistance to cover the import of components and some processed items required by Indian industries.

He told the Council that the average index of industrial production during the first six months of 1960 was as high as 166, as compared with the average of 151 for 1959. The improvement in production had occurred in almost all directions.

Quite apart from the increase in the production of finished steel, aluminium, cement and other basic industries, he said that there had been a sharply rising trend in the output of industrial machinery, transport equipment, heavy chemicals, electrical and other engineering and miscellaneous chemical industries. Among the essential consumer goods industries, production of paper and sugar had recorded significant increases.

In several directions, he added, the country had expected the capacity set out in the Second Plan. The record of progress was impressive in respect of some major industries, more particularly heavy chemicals, dye-stuffs and industrial machinery. However, there was a shortfall in respect of cables, wires, newsprint and refractories.

He regretted that every industry as a whole had not taken any active steps towards export promotion and suggested that industries should set up an organization for taking these steps.

In the setting up of new industries, he said that some broad policies should be laid down. New industries requiring initial imports must pay for them by exports within a period of two or three years and these exports should be maintained. Collaboration must obtain a clause to the effect that the foreign collaborator would agree to the marketing of Indian manufactures in neighbouring countries. Preferential treatment should be shown to those units which either exported a certain percentage of their production or joined the export scheme to pool costs and marketing endeavours. The setting up of industries which required large imports should be carefully considered in the light of the foreign exchange problem.

The sterling balances had touched a new low in the first week of September—Rs. 143 crores. Exports in July, 1960 had also declined and the performance in August had been no better. He attributed the decline to the non-materialization of the assistance hoped for from some countries. In this connexion, he referred to the recent meeting in Paris of the "Aid India Club" of Western countries sponsored by the World Bank and said that these countries would have further discussions in Washington shortly to discuss India's requirements.

He added that as India developed further, her import requirements had gradually changed from complete items of machinery to components and some processed items. It was not possible for India to finance these increasing imports out of her exports. Therefore, she wanted friendly countries to extend the scope of their assistance to cover developmental import requirements and he was glad that there was some indication of this matter being considered favourably.

Discussion:

In the discussion that followed, the spokesmen for industry urged that the emphasis should be on the maximum utilization of the industrial capacity already created in the country rather than on the setting up of new industries.

They agreed that there had been significant industrial progress and diversification of production under the Second Five-Year Plan.

The President of the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Mr. A. M. Murugappa Chettiar said that in the allocation of foreign exchange, "in the first instance we must meet to the fullest possible extent the requirements of existing industries." He expressed the Federation's concern over reports of the possibility of imposing further curbs on new share issues and about "the progressive controls on credit." He said that the Government would do well to keep the sphere of controls to the minimum as controls were not a proper remedy to curb inflation.

The President of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, Mr. H. M. L. Williams, referring to the coal shortage, said that full coordination of wagon movements would facilitate the transport of greater quantities of coal. The price control and restrictions on the private sector came in the way of achieving the coal targets.

Mr. G. L. Mehta said that targets should be fixed only after carefully determining the resources available, as otherwise they became mere aspirations. He called for greater stress on short-term schemes which would yield results immediately.

Mr. Kasturbhai Lalbhai said that whatever efforts were made by the textile industry, it was "almost impossible" for the consumer to get cloth at prices that might have been fixed as reasonable by the industry because cloth passed through several agencies before reaching him. He doubted whether it would be feasible or possible to organize marketing in such a manner that prices remained reasonable at all levels. Controls only helped the black market and the best way of dealing with the problem was to fix the targets of production at a higher level in the Third Plan so that the country's requirements could be met.

Dr. A. Ramaswamy Mudaliar said that the price control voluntarily agreed to by the textile industry during the last War had worked satisfactorily. Therefore, it was possible to regulate prices by fixing ex-factory prices on a reasonable basis and by stating publicly what those prices were for various categories.

He suggested that overheads should not be included by industrialists in the cost of the commodities if they wanted to compete in the world market.

Dr. V. K. R. V. Rao regretted that spokesmen of organized industry had not touched the subject of ancillary industries which, he said, were important from the point of view of decentralization, promotion of more balanced regional development and greater spread of employment.

He added that village industries were also becoming less and less important in the eyes of the authorities.

Mr. N. D. Sahukar of the All-India Manufacturers' Association said that while attention should be given to consolidation and expansion of the existing units, licences should not be refused to new units that could run with indigenous raw material.

Mr. D. C. B. Pilkington said that the Third Plan should aim at self-sufficiency in jute during its term. With an adequate supply of raw material and a certain measure of modernization in the plants, the jute industry could plan expansion on a long-term basis.

The General Secretary of the Indian National Trade Union Congress, (INTUC) Mr. S. R. Vasavada, agreed that heavy industries could not by themselves solve the problem of unemployment. Priority should, therefore, be given in the Third Plan to the development of small-scale and village industries.

Recommendations:

The seven-hour meeting of the Council occasioned several recommendations on behalf of the Government.

After expressing disappointment at the reduction in cloth prices voluntarily effected so far by the industry, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri announced the Government's decision to refer the fixation of fair prices for cotton textiles to the Tariff Commission.

He said that it was the declared objective of the Government to ensure fair consumer prices for essential industrial goods. This would be achieved through the co-operation of the industry, when possible and by selective controls, if necessary.

He said there was hope that the "Aid India Club" would agree to widen the scope of its assistance to cover the import of "components and essential raw materials."

In response to criticism by many speakers of the low production targets of the Third Plan, particularly in respect of cotton textiles, he announced that the Planning Commission had decided to revise upwards targets for aluminium, sugar and textiles.

Finally, he disclosed that it had been decided to widen the scope of the Committee, which he had agreed to set up at the Import Advisory Council meeting recently (see page 3529). Apart from reviewing the country's import policy to serve better the needs of a changing pattern of economy, he indicated that it would include in its examination the industrial structure in the country.

gross income increased to Rs. 250,88,00,000 from Rs. 203,88,000 in the previous year.

The fourth series of the Corporation's bond issue during the year under review was over-subscribed on the opening day, the total subscriptions amounting to Rs. 6.53 crores as against Rs. 5 crores for which the issue was made.

The Corporation was promised a loan of $10 million by the US Development Loan Fund (DLF) for being sub-loaned to industrial concerns in the private sector.

Eight loans aggregating Rs. 4.20 crores were approved during the year for co-operative societies, all of which were engaged in the sugar industry. This brought the grand total of loans approved for co-operative societies up to the end of June 30, 1960 to Rs. 19.14 crores for 33 societies.

The Report showed that during the year, the largest loan of Rs. 5 crores was approved for the sugar industry, followed by paper (Rs. 4.02 crores) and rayon (Rs. 3 crores). Other industries for which loans were approved were the hotel industry (Rs. 1.50 crores), mechanical engineering (Rs. 95,00,000), ceramics and glass (Rs. 95,00,000), chemicals (Rs. 84,50,000), aluminium (Rs. 80,00,000), iron, steel and light engineering (Rs. 30,00,000), cotton textiles (Rs. 25,00,000), electrical engineering (Rs. 15,00,000), automobile and tractor industry (Rs. 9,00,000), and metallurgical industry (non-ferrous metals) (Rs. 6,00,000).

State-wise, Maharashtra led the list with the largest amount of loan (Rs. 15.96 crores), followed by Madras (Rs. 9.89 crores), West Bengal (Rs. 9.10 crores), Gujerat (Rs. 7.40 crores), Uttar Pradesh (Rs. 7.16 crores), Bihar (Rs. 6.28 crores), Andhra Pradesh (Rs. 6.11 crores), Mysore (Rs. 5.91 crores), Kerala (Rs. 4.28 crores), Orissa (Rs. 3.77 crores), Assam (Rs. 3.62 crores), Punjab (Rs. 3.27 crores), Delhi (Rs. 95,00,000), Rajasthan (Rs. 89.5,00,000), and Madhya Pradesh (Rs. 3.5,00,000).

The IFC Chairman, Mr. K. R. K. Menon, told a news conference in New Delhi the same day (September 24) that during the year under review, 29 applications from 13 industries for loans amounting to Rs. 17.92 crores were approved. This, he said, was the highest aggregate for any year and brought the total loans approved for 204 concerns since 1948 to Rs. 84.61 crores.

He added: "Impressive as has been our achievement in industrial financing in the past year, the picture that I should have been able to present to you today would certainly have been a very much brighter one, indeed, if only we had a certain amount of foreign currency at our disposal."

Thanking DLF for the recent $10-million loan, he expressed the hope that further credits would be forthcoming and said: "With the continued good offices of the Government of India we should succeed in persuading the World Bank, at whose doors we have been knocking persistently during the last few years to give us a substantial loan in convertible foreign currency, to meet the pressing needs of our constituents."

He repudiated suggestions that the Corporation concentrated its help on big business and said: "We have concentrated on the smaller and below-average groups of large-scale industry. Out of the 160 public limited companies that received loans from the Corporation, only 32 can be included in the term big business."

He explained that at the time of its formation, it was made clear that the Corporation was not intended to help small industries. There were the State Industrial Finance Corporations for the latter and the arrangement was that IFC should deal with applications for loans above Rs. 10,00,000 and State Corporations with those below.

Asked whether the recent credit restrictions imposed by the Reserve Bank would result in the Corporation's rate of interest going up, he said that no such proposal was contemplated and that if any rise did come about later, it might not necessarily be on account of the latest credit squeeze.

He said that in spite of the Corporation's vastly increased activities, its administrative expenses had not risen appreciably. In fact, as a percentage to gross income, they came down during the year under review to 4.66 from 5.11 in the previous year and 15.65 which was the percentage four years prior to that.

M. Indian Labour Conference: The 18th session of the tripartite Indian Labour Conference was held in New Delhi on September 24 and 25.

Inaugurating the Conference, the Central Minister for Labour and Employment, Mr. G. L. Nanda, said that the acceptance by the Government of the principle of arbitration in the settlement of disputes with its employees and the setting up of a joint negotiating machinery at various levels rendered superfluous a strike by Central Government employees.

Referring to the recent strike by the Central Government employees, (see page 3473) he said: "In any circumstances, in any country, such developments might have created a grave threat to economic and political stability. In the prevailing conditions in our country, the terrible hazards to which the Indian community was exposed must be obvious to every citizen."

On its side, he said, the Government was prepared to set right any deficiencies which might have come to light as a result of the recent experience.

Besides the strike, he made several important points. One of these was that the number of man-days lost by the industry on account of stoppages or lock-outs was on the decline since the Code of Discipline in Industry was adopted in May, 1958.

He reiterated that the fixation of wage scales through tripartite wage boards and workers' participation in the management of industry, through Joint Councils of Management, would continue to be the basic tenets of the Government's labour policy.

But, he regretted that attempts had been made by sections of the textile industry to thwart the unanimous report of the Textile Wage Board, and that neither the employers nor the workers had shown enough enthusiasm for the Joint Management Councils scheme.

In the discussion that followed, the spokesmen of trade unions and employers' organizations disagreed with the measures contemplated by the Government.

Both Mr. S. R. Vasavada, General Secretary of the Indian National Trade Union Congress (INTUC) and the chief spokesman of the employers, Mr. Naval H. Tata, condemned the Central Government employees' strike. They also said that such a general strike should not be allowed to recur, but argued that a statutory ban would be self-defeating.

To Mr. Vasavada's plea that the strike threat be eliminated by automatic arbitration in cases of dispute, Mr. Tata added a note of caution: a ban on strikes in public services would inevitably give rise to a demand for similar immunity in essential undertakings in the private sector.

The substance of the speeches by the spokesman of the communist-led All-India Trade Union Congress (AITUC), Mr. P. Ramamurthi, and that of the Praja-Socialist Party-sponsored Hind Mazdoor Sabha, Mr. Deven Sen, was the same, that despite a legislative ban on strikes, more strikes by public servants would take place and repression would only accentuate the discontent that had led to the earlier strike.

They also denounced the withdrawal of recognition from the trade unions which had participated in the recent strike. This point was re-iterated by one of the strike leaders, Mr. S. M. Banerjee.

In his reply to the debate on September 25 Mr. G. L. Nanda defended the Central Government's decision to ban strikes by its employees and to exclude "outsiders" from their trade unions.

He said that once the principle of compulsory arbitration in all cases of dispute was conceded and the machinery for joint consultation set up, the strike automatically became superfluous and all talk of the right to strike academic.

He added that the strike was not a question of the past but of the future. A lesson had to be derived from it, which should not be lost on the Government or the employers or employees.

He said that whatever action intended by the Government was not to protect the public sector, leaving the private sector alone to face strikes. It was not as if the Government was going to insulate the public sector. What the Government proposed to do was in the context of national security and the vital interests of national economy.

He added: "Personally, I would not be a party at all to undermining in any way the privileges of the working class or taking away their rights and liberties. On the other hand, I would give them all that they need in order to promote their well-being."

He disagreed with the view that no ban was needed because for the next five years, there would be no strike. He said it was a wrong approach because it was not possible to say now that the situation would remain stationary for five years. If there was a situation which called for some action, the Government had to arm itself properly for that and could not afford to leave it to chance or risk.

He said that the Government wanted to create conditions in which no strike would take place. The right to strike was not being taken away and the proposed move was no innovation but only an extension of the existing law.

The Conference did not reach any formal conclusion on the subject, but Mr. Nanda said that he would convey to his colleagues in the Government the views of the Conference on the question of excluding "outsiders" from the trade unions of Government employees.

N. A-INEC Opposes Proposal For Curbs On Press: The Standing Committee of the All-India Newspaper Editors' Conference (A-INEC), at its meeting in Bombay on September 23, adopted a resolution opposing the proposal of the Parliamentary Delegation to Assam to enact legislation enabling the authorities to put curbs on the Press in an emergency.

Such a law, the Committee said, would constitute a "grave threat" to the freedom of the Press.

[The Parliamentary Delegation, headed by a former Central Minister, Mr. A. P. Jain, visited Assam shortly after the language riots in that State in July, 1960 and submitted its report to Parliament in August.]

In another resolution the Committee welcomed the acceptance by the Central Government of the principle of uniform application of the Price-Page Schedule to all newspapers. It authorized the President of A-INEC to appoint a sub-committee to examine in detail the implications of the revised Price-Page Schedule.

The resolution said: "The A-INEC is of the opinion that the proposal of the Parliamentary Delegation to Assam that Parliament enact a law which gives the President of the Indian Union, when satisfied, the power to declare an emergency under which curbs on the Press would be imposed constitutes a grave threat to the freedom of the Press.

"If the tragic events in Assam prove anything, it is that the Government and the political parties failed in carrying out their duties and that the Press has failed to rise above its environments. To generalize on this and to enact laws which can be misused only aggravate the problem.

"The A-INEC is firmly of the view that in times of emergency, co-operation between the Press and the Government is an urgent and vital necessity. It, therefore, recommends that immediate steps be taken at the highest level to evolve efficient machinery which can offer adequate facilities to the Press during emergencies and guidance which does not restrict the freedom of the Press.

"The Press advisory committees of A-INEC will assist in this task by promoting observance of the code of ethics by the Press and due sense of responsibility by the Government."

O. Steel Target In Third Plan: It was announced in New Delhi on September 25 that a production target of 200,000 tons of alloy, tool and special steel each year had been provided in the Third Five-Year Plan.

Of the target, the public sector is expected to contribute 130,000 tons. The contribution of the private sector is expected to be 70,000 tons.

Part of the output in the public sector —about 30,000 tons of transformer-grade electrical steel sheets—is expected to be planned and produced under the expansion programmes of the Rourkela Steel Plant. The output of the ordnance factories is expected to amount to about 50,000 tons each year. The balance of 50,000 tons will be produced by a new unit which will be put up during the Third Plan period.

According to a Government Press release, the location of the new unit will be decided during the current year on the basis of a project report submitted to the Central Government.

The expenditure to be incurred on the new unit is tentatively estimated at Rs. 35 crores with a foreign exchange component of Rs. 20 crores.

P. Metallurgical Coal Discoveries: The Central Minister for Mines and Oil, Mr. K. D. Malaviya, said in New Delhi on September 25 that three big discoveries of metallurgical coal, expected to make India self-sufficient in Grade I coal for decades to come, had been made in the Bokaro and Raneeganj areas.

These deposits are expected to bring about a big change in the field of heavy industry, especially in the steel sector.

The discoveries, he stated, would enable the country to get over the problems created by the present limited resources of metallurgical coal. They will provide enough coal for "more and more steel plants."

He said in an interview that the new discoveries seemed to be very significant, especially for the steel plants. "This should solve our problem of coal for the steel plants for a long time."

The importance of the new deposits was highlighted by the fact that the third blast furnaces at the Rourkela and Bhilai Steel Plants could not be commissioned in time due to the short supply of metallurgical coal and the lack of transport facilities.

Asked about the quantitative and qualitative estimates of the new deposits, he said: "We have yet to prove the quantitative dimensions of the new deposits. Investigation of a detailed quantitative projection in this regard is being handed over to the Indian Bureau of Mines."

He added that the actual discoveries were made by the Geological Survey of India after detailed surface mapping and sample drilling.

He said that the fourth Steel Plant, to be set up in the public sector at Bokaro would get its metallurgical coal from "within a stone's throw."

The new deposits were said to be sufficient not only for the existing steel plants but for "more and more plants" that might be set up in the future.

The discoveries are expected to make a great change not only in the supply position but also in cost. At present, the production of metallurgical coal, through deep mining, has been causing price problems and the latest discoveries are expected to ease these problems.

Q. Sulphur Find In Bihar: It was announced in New Delhi on September 25 that vast sources of sulphur pyrites had been discovered in the Amjore area in Bihar, which is expected to meet the entire demand of sulphur in the country.

India at present imports sulphur worth several crores of rupees annually.

Sulphide from the sulphur pyrites, it is stated, can easily be used in place of "free sulphur" being imported earlier.

The discovery was made jointly by the Geological Survey of India and the Indian Bureau of Mines.

Exploration for free sulphur is in progress in the Andamans.

R. NCAER Study On Replacement Costs In Industry: The National Council of Applied Economic Research (NCAER) in a Study on "replacement costs in industry," released in New Delhi on September 27 underlined the importance of depreciation allowances to cover replacement costs and opposed "inroads" into the depreciation funds with a view to providing better wages to workers.

It, however, expressed the view that "the best way of ensuring a good minimum wage and in due course, a full living wage is not by making inroads into depreciation but by establishing a system of incentive bonus schemes which would equate higher wages with higher productivity."

The Study assumes significance as there has been considerable argument in recent years before industrial tribunals on the quantum of depreciation and rehabilitation reserves appropriate to a unit, since these reserves have an important bearing on the calculation of bonus to workers.

Depreciation allowance, it said, should not only be made "legally obligatory" but be regarded "strictly as cost." "Net profit must be calculated only after deducting the whole of depreciation from gross profit." The principle should apply to "both the managing agency remuneration and any extra demand that labour may make."

The Council found during its study of the jute, sugar, cement and chemical fertilizer industries that some companies had failed either to make allowances for depreciation while estimating net profit or to make adequate provision for replacement by ignoring the rising prices of machinery and other assets.

It also found that the replacement funds of companies were "often mixed up with the general reserve." Expenditures on expansion and modernization were also mixed up with those on replacement proper. A "crucial point" ignored was that while the replacement fund had to be drawn from gross profit, any reserve towards expansion or modernization was a charge on net profit.

The Council, therefore, suggested among other things that while estimating the replacement cost, the firm should be asked to take account of increases, if any, in the price of the relevant assets. The Government on its part should compile index numbers of prices of important types of machinery.

Where, however, price adjustments were found operationally difficult, as in the case of buildings, "legal obligation may be limited to depreciation at original cost, although even here, in case indirect evidence of a price rise is available, exemption should be granted on such additions to depreciation allowances as would be justified by the price rise."

The Council further recommended that there should be an obligation on the part of a firm to keep "a separate replacement account, apart from its general reserve and any such sum taken out of it for use as working capital should be shown as a loan transaction against which normal interest should be charged."

While suggesting that the current use of the replacement fund must be left to the discretion of the management, it urged that the "balance-sheet of a firm should indicate clearly what part of it is used within the business as working capital and what part is invested in securities, care being taken to see that resources drawn out of gross profit to cover replacement needs are in no way dissipated."

It favoured the "straight line method of determining depreciation." "This," it said, "is in consonance with the usual practice. If, however, an industry wishes, on accounting considerations, to follow the written-down-value method, it must, while making the deduction, adopt a percentage which is higher than would be the case if the straight line method had been followed." Further, at some stage, "it must switch on to some other method with a view to writing off the cost within the period set by the economic life loans and new issues.

It pointed out that because of the mixing-up of replacement funds with the general reserve it became difficult to discover from company balance-sheets the precise relation between the depreciation allowances annually made and the actual expenditure incurred on replacement proper; the relation was further obscured by the fact that the replacement funds were often used within the business as working capital, so that replacement, when due, had to be at least partly financed by loans and new issues.

It also stressed the need to distinguish modernization and expansion from replacement. "Whereas the former," it pointed out, "is to be financed by appropriation from net profit or by loans and new issues, replacement as such must be financed by depreciation allowances collected over the life of the assets for the purpose."

Where, however, modernization was inextricably associated with replacement—as is often the case in view of the obsolescence of old machinery—replacement activity would automatically involve some degree of modernization. In such border-line cases, the Council urged that the use of the replacement fund "for modernization is permissible."

It pointed out that the case for modernization proper, as distinct from replacement, "is weak in an under-developed economy like India." However, "it assumes importance in the case of an export industry which faces strong international competition and where technology is fast improving." A typical case in this context is the jute industry—one of the four industries studied.

But even here "it is not so much a case of modernization as of accumulated arrears of replacement involving a certain element of modernization." In none of the industries examined was there "any clear evidence that obsolescence is a major factor in the need for modernization." There was, therefore, no question "of any specified formula for dealing with modernization; the problem of the jute industry is historical and special and must be dealt with on an ad hoc basis."

It also commented on the divergent rates of depreciation charged by companies on the same kind of assets and expressed the view that this suggested that the "decisions of management concerning depreciation allowance are influenced by considerations which are not always purely economic." The rates varied from 2.5 per cent. to 10 per cent. in factory buildings and from three per cent. to 15 per cent. in plant and machinery.

S. Manufacture Of Machine Tools —New Units To Be Set Up: According to a Government Press release on September 28, the Government of India had decided to permit the setting up of new units for the manufacture of different types of machine tools.

The machine tools include lathes, like bench lathes, cone pulley lathes, all geared lathes, capstans and turrets, automatics, milling machines, drilling machines, including bench and pillar drills and radial drills, grinding machines like grinders, surface grinders, tool and cutter grinders and wood-working machines.

This step is being taken to step up the domestic output of machine tools and reduce the country's dependence on imports as much as possible. The demand for machine tools is expected to increase considerably in the Third Five-Year Plan period. The Machine Tools Development Council has estimated the domestic demand from Rs. 60 crores to Rs. 65 crores annually by the end of the Third Plan period.

The schemes to set up new units, which would be submitted before the end of November, 1960, would be for complete manufacture, including production of components and not for merely assembling the imported parts.

Proposals involving the investment of more than Rs. 10,00,000 in fixed assets or employment of more than 100 persons might be addressed to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry for licence under the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act.

In regard to schemes which involved less than Rs. 10,00,000 investment in fixed assets or employment of less than 100 persons, the schemes might be sent to the Senior Industrial Adviser (Engineering), Development Wing in the Ministry of Commerce and Industry.

T. IJMA Reviews Raw Jute Position: The Committee of the Indian Jute Mills Association (IJMA), at a special meeting in Calcutta on September 21, reviewed the raw jute position against the latest stock returns and estimates of the 1960-61 crop.

In a Press Note, IJMA announced that it had unanimously agreed that "if the supply of raw material is to be adequate for the industry's needs with a reasonable carry-over into the next season, it is essential to extend the voluntary sealing scheme for a further two months upto December 21, 1960."

It thought that an increase in the percentage of looms compulsorily sealed appeared inevitable from January 1, 1961.

The Press Note referred to the determination of IJMA, expressed in a statement on September 8, to adjust the mills' production to the raw material supplies likely to be available during the current season. The earlier statement also mentioned that the voluntary sealing schemes introduced in June, 1960 might have to be extended for a month.

U. Liberalization Of Travel Facilities To Goa Announced: The Government of India announced in New Delhi on September 26 the liberalization of travel facilities between Goa and India and the loan of an Indian Administrative Service officer to the local administration of Dadra and Nagar Haveli, the two liberated Portuguese enclaves.

Two new land routes to and from Goa have been opened and the customs rules relaxed.

It was explained that the restrictive measures taken in 1954 and 1955 were no longer valid.

At the same time, anti-smuggling measures along the Goa border are being tightened. The border check-posts, now under the joint control of the customs and the Maharashtra police, would be handed over to the State Reserve Police.

Explaining the Government's decision to remove the "administrative isolation" of the two enclaves, a Government spokesman said that the local administration had often urged their merger. As the status of the enclaves was being examined by the Hague Court, a decision was not taken. The Court had recently given its verdict that Portuguese sovereignty there had ceased. Even so, the Government did not propose to adopt measures for the merger of these enclaves in the immediate future.

The IAS officer, who will have the rank of a collector, will act as chief executive from the middle of October, 1960, under the panchayat to be elected in October. The panchayat for the two enclaves will have 22 members elected on the basis of adult franchise and an elected president. The chief executive is also expected to prepare development plans.

The Adivasis, who constitute 92 per cent of the population, will have eight reserved seats on the panchayat.

Portuguese Reaction:

It was made known on October 1 that the Portuguese authorities in Goa did not propose to grant facilities for travel by the two routes opened by the Government of India.

The two new routes are from Belgaum-Londa to Panjim via Anmode and from Sawantwadi to Port Vengurla via Lakkarkot near Banda.

It was learnt that the Portuguese authorities, had reacted adversely to the Indian decision and had decided not to grant facilities on their side of the border at Anmode and Lakkarkot.

Intending travellers by the new routes were advised by the Government of India to make sure about the facilities on the other side before actually setting out.

The Portuguese action showed that they had also closed the six or seven originally authorized nakas (routes) between Goa and the rest of India. India had closed these nakas some years ago but later had re-opened one of the routes via Majali.

V. Punjab Governor's Order On Official Language: The Punjab Governor, Mr. N. V. Gadgil, promulgated in Chandigarh on September 28 an Ordinance making Punjabi in Gurmukhi script and Hindi in Devanagri script in their respective regions the medium for all official communication in the State.

The Ordinance, issued under Article 213 of the Constitution, specified October 2, 1960 as the date on which Punjabi and Hindi would become the official languages.

The preamble to the Ordinance stated that the Governor was "satisfied that circumstances exist which render it necessary for him to take immediate action."

The Ordinance conformed to the State Government's avowed policy to make Gurmukhi in the Punjabi region and Hindi in the remaining areas the official languages of the State. The change would apply to all levels of the administration.

The Ordinance however, provided a two-year transitional period; officials using English or Urdu during the period immediately preceding the Ordinance might continue to do so until October 2, 1962.

Courts in the State were, however, exempted from the provisions of the Ordinance. Exemption was also granted to subjects covered by constitutional provisions.

The decision to make a beginning on October 2 and complete the change-over within a two-year period received frequent emphasis in combating the Akali agitation. As a fore-runner the Department for Local Self-Government recently asked all municipal bodies to switch over to the regional language and also to pay special attention to its increasing use as the medium of instruction in schools at the primary level.

The Governor's action followed hard on the heels of mounting reports of the willingness of a large proportion of Akali agitators to strike a compromise on a formula which would concede the major Sikh demands excepting the one for a division of the State. It had long been felt that the remaining gulf from the Government's view-point could be bridged by giving concrete proof of its intention vis-a-vis the language issue.

Moderates among Akali sympathizers gave vocal expression that the Government's decision on the language issue must be embodied in legal form to carry conviction with the mass of the movement's sympathizers.

The Ordinance in effect represented the Government's last move to redress the Sikh grievances. It conceded almost all the Akali demands short of the division of the State, to which it is fundamentally opposed.

W. Assam Taxation Act Declared Void By Supreme Court: The Supreme Court on September 27 declared the Assam Taxation Act of 1954 void and unconstitutional.

By a majority of four to one, the Constitution Bench of the Court held that the Act had put a direct restriction on the freedom of trade guaranteed under Article 301 of the Constitution.

The Court also held that the Assam Taxation Bill had not been properly moved in the State Assembly as it did not have the prior assent of the President as required under Article 304 (B) of the Constitution.

The decision was given by the Court allowing three appeals and two writ petitions by certain producers of tea in West Bengal and Assam.

The Act was passed by the Assam Legislature to provide for the levy of a tax on certain goods carried by road or inland water-ways in the State. It received the assent of the Governor on April 9, 1954.

Section 3 of the Act provides, inter alia, that "manufactured tea in chests carried by motor vehicles, cart, trolly, boat, animal and human agency or any other means except Railways and airways shall be liable to a tax of one anna per pound of such tea and this tax shall be realized from the producers."

The validity of the Act was challenged by the appellants—who carried tea to Calcutta by road or inland water-ways—in writ petitions before the Assam High Court. Their petitions were, however, rejected.

Mr. Justice Gajendragadkar, Mr. Justice Wanchoo and Mr. Justice Das Gupta said in the majority judgment that the words used in Article 301 were unambiguous, and it would be unreasonable to exclude from their ambit a law which restricts trade, commerce or intercourse either directly or indirectly. The provision contained in this Article guaranteeing the freedom of trade, commerce and intercourse embodied and enshrined a principle of paramount importance that the economic unity of the country would provide the main sustaining force for stability and progress and for the political and cultural unity of the country.

Their Lordships said that Article 304 (B) of the Constitution empowered the State Legislature to impose reasonable restrictions on the freedom of trade with other States or within its own territory. But such legislation must satisfy the conditions that it had received the previous sanction of the President and that it was in the public interest.

Mr. Justice Shah in a separate judgment allowed the appeals, while the Chief Justice, Mr. B. P. Sinha, gave a dissenting judgment.

X. Supreme Court Strictures Against Bihar State: The Supreme Court on September 20 held that a Court could take action against Bihar State under the Code of Civil Procedure when it disobeyed an order of temporary injunction passed against it by the Court.

The appeal arose out of a suit instituted by Rani Sonabati Kumari against the State of Bihar, in which the Rani claimed a declaration that the notification by the State seeking to take possession of her lands was illegal. She also filed an application in the Court of the subordinate judge that during the pendency of the suit the State should be restrained from issuing any notification with regard to her estate.

Dismissing the appeal by the State, the Supreme Court observed: "It is of the essence of the rule of law that every authority within the State including the executive Government, should consider itself bound by and obey the law. It is fundamental to the system of polity that India has adopted and which is embodied in the Constitution that the courts of the land are vested with the powers of interpreting the law and of applying it to the facts of the cases which are properly before them.

"Once an order has been passed, which the Court had jurisdiction to pass, it is the duty of all persons bound by it to obey the order so long as it stands, and it would tend to the subversion of orderly administration and civil Government, if parties could disobey orders with impunity. If such is the position as regards private parties, the duty to obey is all the more imperative in the case of Governmental authorities."

B. Land Reforms Bill Passed: The Gotong Rojong (Parliament) on September 12 passed an official Bill which would form the basis of land reforms in Indonesia.

The Agriculture Minister, Mr. R. Sadjorwo, told the House that the Bill would settle conflicts between the tenants and foreign landowners. He explained that the Government had deliberately not defined the maximum size of individual land holdings in response to suggestions from various quarters. The ceiling on holdings, he said, would be defined in separate laws and regulations to be promulgated in three months.

He pointed out that particular rights on lands, such as the waqf right, property right, integral right and the like were fully guaranteed by the Bill. Even if written evidence of the rights had been lost by the rightful owners, the Government would use other dependable proofs to guarantee the rights of the persons concerned.

As regards foreign and domestic capital, he said that foreign capital would be given a 20-year period to operate in accordance with the existing regulations. He added that domestic capital would be given the widest possible opportunity to operate.

A. Increased Duties On Non-Essential Imports: The Deputy Prime Minister, Dr. K. Sajadi, who is also in charge of the Ministry of Commerce, announced a decree levying a new scale of commercial profits tax (in effect a second import duty) on imports, approved by the Council of Ministers on September 5.

The decree came into effect the next day (September 6).

The object of the increased scale of duties on luxury imports is to relieve the pressure on foreign exchange. Some examples of the increases are as follows: 200 rials to 1,200 rials per kg. on perfumes; 100 to 600, 250 to 650 and 200 to 700 rials on various types of luxury leather goods and taxes of 50 per cent to 150 per cent on the value of automobiles. [210 rials = £1 sterling.]

Simultaneously other measures were taken to curb imports. There is now a limit of one second-hand car per annum instead of two which may be imported by Iranian nationals returning from visits abroad. The customs administration will no longer accept promissory notes in payment of import duties as it had done previously.

However, the vast range of imports completely duty-free and which may be imported by a number of ministries, plan organizations, international organizations and diplomatic missions remain untouched.

IRAQ

A. Oil Conference: A five-nation Conference on oil prices began in Baghdad from September 10 to 14, attended by representatives of Iraq, Iran, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. The meetings were held in secret and the decisions were made public on September 25.

After five days of consultation, the Conference decided to formulate a unified policy towards the major oil companies which recently unilaterally cut their prices of crude oil.

It stressed the necessity for the oil-producing countries to have "stable oil revenues" in order to maintain stability in their national economies.

It recommended that every effort should be made to raise crude oil prices to the level prevailing before the cuts were made and that the companies be asked to maintain stable prices without "unnecessary fluctuations which affect the economic development of both producing and consuming countries."

It called for the setting up of a permanent organization of oil-producing countries, called the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) for regular consultations among its members with the object of "co-ordinating policies and attitudes in eventualities concerning oil production." The five participating countries would be founder-members of OPEC.

The Organization would meet at least twice a year and would have a permanent secretariat. A sub-committee would meet in Baghdad not later than December, 1960 to prepare an agenda and set up an administrative machinery.

ISRAEL

A. Development Of Negev: The Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, on September 15 paid a visit to Eilat, the southern-most outpost of Israel and her outlet to the Red Sea, where he announced that almost all the Israeli defence forces would move to the Negev.

He interrupted a holiday to visit the seaport after complaints by leaders of the Eilat community about the slow rate of development and the high cost of living there.

He told the community that the Government would spend about £100 million during the next decade to develop Eilat and four other urban industrial centres in the Negev, and added that the transfer of the Army to the Negev would also help the city.

Officials said later that he was alluding to a plan to transfer training bases from the densely-populated northern part of the country to the barren spaces of the Negev. They noted that this would put the bulk of Israel's forces near the Egyptian border, but they said that the object of the move was not political.

It was thought that the establishment of military bases in the Negev would improve security in that desolate region through which armed Arabs had been crossing between Jordan and Egypt. It was also believed that it would stimulate the economic development of the region. Several villages would no doubt rise in the neighbourhood of the bases, and the presence of the Army would lead to the construction of roads and an extension of water supply.

B. World Bank Loan: The World Bank has approved a loan equivalent to $27.5 million to Israel to build and equip a sheltered deep-water port at Ashdod.

The loan is for a term of 25 years and bears interest at 5¾ per cent. Amortization will begin in August, 1965.

Ashdod will be developed as an off-shore port comprising a basin protected by breakwaters with finger-piers. It will be constructed in stages, the second stage to be undertaken when traffic growth justifies it.

The loan will cover all the foreign exchange requirements and part of the local currency requirements in the first stage, which is estimated to cost a total of $54.7 million. When this stage is completed, Ashdod will be able to handle 900,000 tons of general cargo a year, but the port should be ready to handle citrus fruit in 1963.

JAPAN

A. Mine Disaster: Sixty-seven miners were feared drowned on September 20 in Taswa city in the biggest post-War mine disaster in Japan. The mine was flooded by torrents of water when the river bed above was torn away.

The disaster occurred in Hoshu mine soon after midnight when a crew of 218 men were at work. Vibrations caused by a violent explosion in a disused pit nearby tore a 30 ft. gap in the Chugenji river bed. Survivors described the rush of water into the pit as resembling a tidal wave which swept everything before it. One hundred and fifty-one men escaped from the flooded pit, but 67 were trapped.

The Fukuoka Prefectural Government inspector blamed the disaster on indiscriminate working near the river bed.

The Hoshu Mining Company emphasized that safety inspectors had visited the pit half an hour before the accident and that it had asked the prefectural authorities to keep a watch on the Chugenji river because of many unlicensed pits in the area.

B. Poliomyelitis Epidemic: Japan's most northerly island, Hokkaido, was swept this Summer by one of the worst poliomyelitis epidemics in Japanese history.

Since the middle of March, 1960, when the epidemic broke out in the small mining town of Yubari, until the latter half of August, it had claimed 803 victims, of whom more than 90 per cent were children under the age of five.

It was stated that the public health authorities were unprepared to meet this unexpected challenge. There was an acute shortage of Salk vaccine—according to some reports, supplies were held up in Tokyo—and of iron lungs and chest respirators to treat cases of paralysis of the respiratory organs.

Yubari was the worst affected among a dozen areas, where the disease affected 82 persons and caused 13 deaths.

KOREA (North)

A. Charge Against USA: The Mixed Military Armistice Commission met in Pan Mun Jon on September 28 at the request of the North Korean delegate.

At the meeting, the North Korean delegate, Gen. Joo Changjoon, demanded that reported plans of USA to supply the South Korean Navy with a ship equipped with rocket launchers be called off.

He cited an American news agency as the source of his information and at the same time repeated the demand for a complete evacuation of South Korea by UN troops.

His demands were immediately rejected by the UN Command's delegate, Maj.-Gen. Marion Dawson, who said that the UN Command would reconsider its position on the introduction of new military equipment into South Korea only when North Korea had supplied evidence that all new equipment introduced by it had been shipped out of the country.

Mr. Chang, till now an Independent member of the House of Representatives, testified that he had not been able to register as an opponent of Dr. Syngman Rhee, because hooligans under orders from the national police had beaten up his workers and prevented them from submitting his registration papers to the Election Commission.

Police officials told the Court that they had advised Mr. Chang not to run against Dr. Rhee and that Mr. Chang had agreed.

MALAYA

A. New Paramount Ruler Elected: The rulers of the nine States constituting the Federation of Malaya, elected in Kuala Lumpur on September 21 the Raja of Perlis, Adhil Syed Hassan Jamalullai, as Yang di Pertuan Agong (Paramount Ruler).

He succeeded Sultan Sir Hisamuddin Alam Shah of Selangor who died on September 1.

The Sultan of Trengganu State, Sir Ismail Nasiruddin, was elected Deputy Paramount Ruler.

The Raja of Perlis and the Sultan of Trengganu were sworn-in at a special ceremony held the same night (September 21).

The Raja of Perlis, the smallest and most northerly of the States in the Federation of Malaya, was, like his predecessor, forced for a time in the last War to lead a humble life because he was out of favour with the Japanese. Born on November 25, 1920, he was made heir-presumptive in Perlis in 1938, but when his father died during the Japanese occupation, he was not allowed to succeed. He then earned his living largely by manual work. Before the War reached Malaya, he was a Government servant for two years.

After the British returned to Malaya, he was recognized as Raja in December, 1945, but he was not installed until 1949.

NEPAL

A. Settlement Of Border Dispute with China: In a communique issued in Khatmandu on September 22, the Nepalese Government announced that they had reached a "satisfactory" agreement with China on the principles to solve the border disputes between the two countries.

The communique said that details concerning the final delineation and scientific demarcation of the border would be studied by expert groups of the two countries, who had been asked to submit their report to the Joint Sino-Nepalese Border Commission by September 27 when it would hold its next meeting, the eighth in the series begun in Khatmandu in August, 1960.

More Chinese experts were reported on September 22 to be on their way to Khatmandu to reinforce the group already there.

Observers in Khatmandu were of the view that since a mutually acceptable pattern to solve the disputes had been evolved, all that remained was the ground demarcation of the 800-mile-long Himalayan frontier between Nepal and the Tibet Region of China. For this purpose, teams of technicians like surveyors would be sent out.

The areas under dispute had never been officially disclosed, but the Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, stated some time ago that they did not involve more than a hundred square miles.

The Chinese claim to Mt. Everest did not come under the purview of the Joint Sino-Nepalese Border Commission.

B. Revolt In West Nepal Suppressed: Official sources in Khatmandu said on September 23 that a revolt against the extension of Nepal's judicial administration to the vassal State of Bajhang in West Nepal had been suppressed.

Om Jung, son of the Raja of Bajhang, who led the revolt, was being chased by the police.

According to reports, Om Jung and his followers tried to set up an independent government, but official sources said that the revolt was "one of the sporadic attempts of feudal lords to oppose reform."

The trouble started when, under instructions from Khatmandu, the Raja's court was abolished and a zonal court was set up in the area in June, 1960. Om Jung and his supporters refused to submit papers of the "family court" to the zonal court. They raised the slogan "Bajhang is ours" and asked the zonal court judge to submit all papers to the "family court" and threatened to arrest him.

Early in September, 1960 a police force was sent to quell the disturbances and in a clash outside Bajhang town on September 15, Om Jung and 150 of his supporters were put to flight when their stone-throwing was countered by police firing.

Though Om Jung was said to have proclaimed some sort of a "provisional government" for Bajhang, it was stated that the disturbances at no stage assumed a serious form.

C. Communist Party's Central Committee Session: It was announced in Khatmandu on September 26 that the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Nepal, at its recent 10-day session had taken several important decisions which the Party believed would "give their organization a new look and a more definite political content."

The Committee finalized an elaborate programme to be submitted to the Party's third Congress due to meet at Naraingarh, 100 miles south-west of Khatmandu, on February 18.

For the first time in its history, the Party Congress was expected to define its "first basic objective." The Central Committee recommended that this should be the establishment of "people's democracy." It urged that the present parliamentary system be utilized to the maximum for ushering in a "people's democracy", though mass movements outside Parliament would continue. According to its thinking, the main enemies of the people were feudalists at home and "imperialists led by the United States" abroad.

The Committee did not express any opinion on the institution of monarchy, evidently for tactical reasons. This meant that the section within the Party which had argued that the main political fight in Nepal today had to be waged against the kingship was still in a minority.

It felt that the policies followed by the Party so far had not been well-reasoned. It was, however, satisfied with the strength the Party had built up in recent years. In 1954, at the time of the first Party Congress, card-holding members numbered 800. The number had now increased to 8,000 of whom 5,000 had been admitted as card-holding members during the last 18 months. According to the Party's General Secretary, Dr. Kesar Jung Raimajhi, this increase had been achieved without a relaxation of the admission rules. The bulk of the cadre was still drawn from the middle class in the towns, though the Party regarded peasants as its biggest supporters.

Under the revised Party set-up, the Committee's place would be taken by a National Council. This body would elect the General Secretary and the Secretariat Provincial Committee would disappear. Below the National Council would be district committees and branch committees in that order. Cells would be replaced by groups, which, however, would not be elected.

Among the resolutions adopted by the Central Committee were those calling for the stoppage of recruitment of Gurkhas for the British Army and the closure of British depots maintained in Nepal for that purpose; the withdrawal of American technicians and experts and their replacement if necessary by Asians; and stoppage of American private investment in Nepal.

Though it was generally happy with the new Indo-Nepal Treaty of Trade and Transit, it decided to launch satyagraha against the Gandak project.

It said nothing which could indicate whether it supported Russia or China in the current ideological controversy between the two countries. It noted that at the time of the Mustang incident, the Nepal Congress leaders had tried "to estrange relations with China."

PAKISTAN

A. Troop Concentration On Afghan Border Alleged: Immediately after a Presidential Cabinet meeting in Rawalpindi on September 28, the Pakistan Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, accused Afghanistan of hostile troop concentrations on the Pakistan border.

He said that "some elements of an Afghan lashkar (armed band) infiltrated into Bajaur to the east of the Durand Line in Pakistan territory. Mamund tribesmen of Pakistan have inflicted heavy casualties on the intruders. The lashkar has retreated". A number of rifles had also been captured.

According to information received during the last 12 days, he said, hostile concentrations of Afghans were taking place on the borders of Pakistan. "Afghanistan has called up nearly 70,000 of her reservists and has also requisitioned transport facilities for the movement."

He added: "The Government of Pakistan is holding itself in readiness for all eventualities and is capable of dealing effectively with all attempts at violating Pakistan's frontiers.

"Military concentrations supported by a few tanks are stated to be at Amsar and an Afghan lashkar, consisting of nearly 4,000 men, is said to be at Nawa Pass. There are also reports of large-scale acquisition of clothes of the type worn by tribesmen.

"Afghans are reported to be claiming that they have the support of a certain big Power in the execution of their designs."

The Afghan Embassy in Karachi declined to comment on Mr. Qadir's statement and said that it had no knowledge of any troop concentration on the Afghan side of the Durand Line.

The Afghan Premier, Sardar Mohammed Daud Khan told the Pakistani Ambassador in Kabul that there was no Afghan troop concentration on the border.

The Pakistan Foreign Office had instructed the Pakistan Ambassador in Kabul to protest to the Afghan Government against infiltration and also to demand an explanation from the Afghan Government on the concentration of Afghan troops on the border.

Official Afghan sources in Kabul were understood to have pointed out to the Pakistan Ambassador that inter-tribal clashes on both sides of the border were common.

Afghan Embassy sources in Karachi also said that Bajaur and Amsar were in highly mountainous areas and it was impossible that tanks could move in this area as alleged by Mr. Qadir.

Pakistan's frontier forces on September 29 were reported to be on an "instant alert" footing. Frontier posts, however, reported "all quiet" in Bajaur where an Afghan tribal levy is said to have been repulsed after an incursion into Pakistani territory. "All quiet" was also the report from elsewhere along the thousand miles of the Afghan-Pakistani frontier.

Afghan Denial:

Kabul Radio on September 29 denied charges of troop concentration and infiltration into Pakistani territory and in turn accused the Pakistan Government of "false propaganda to cover up its military occupation of Malakand, Shabqadar, Chakdara and other militarily strategic areas in the Pakhtoon region."

The Radio also quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman who denied the Pakistani allegation that Afghanistan had called up 70,000 reservists and said that these reports were "far from the truth and extremely exaggerated."

The Radio, which had maintained silence until September 29 on the statement of Mr. Manzoor Qadir, that Afghanistan was concentrating troops for "hostile" purposes west of Bajaur and Asmara, said that it was Pakistan which was moving troops to the border. It added that Mr. Qadir's statement was an attempt to "divert" public opinion from what was going on in the "Pakhtoon areas."

Official sources in Karachi said that Kabul Radio's insistence that Pakistan was trying to "occupy the tribal areas of Malakand, Shabqadar and Chakdara indicated the evil designs of Afghanistan." The sources added that these areas in the frontier region had always formed an "integral part of Pakistan."

Pakistan also alleged that Afghanistan wanted to send members of the militia into the tribal areas to foment trouble and that it was the intention of Afghanistan to send regular troops later into this area on the plea that there was internal trouble in the Pakhtoon region.

Pakistan intelligence reported that several hundred members of the Afghan militia dressed as tribals had infiltrated into areas south of the Durand Line. Afghan sources, however, denied this and said that it was Pakistani agents who were "stirring up trouble in the border areas where Pakhtoon tribesmen lived."

Meanwhile, a report from Peshawar said that the Afghan Government had ordered all petrol depots on the road from Kabul to Peshawar to stop issuing petrol to trucks using the road.

The report added that hundreds of trucks had been requisitioned by the Afghan Government in the Jalalabad area to transport troops to Chagha-Sarai on the Pak-Afghan border.

According to Pakistani sources, there was a "sizable" concentration of Afghan militia at Nawa Pass, to the north-west of the Malakand Agency on the frontier and Afghan militia at Asmara, also north-west of Malakand Agency was supported by about a dozen medium-sized tanks.

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Roads To Jordan Under Curfew: The United Arab Republic's First Army, based in the Syrian Region announced in Damascus on September 16 that all roads to Jordan would be closed during the nights until further notice.

The step came amid persistent rumours of Jordanian troop concentration and clashes on the Syrian border.

Traffic between the two countries would be allowed only on officially recognized roads between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. (local time). The Army gave warning that it would not be responsible if the restrictions were ignored.

Tension had mounted between the two countries since the assassination on August 29 of the Jordan Prime Minister, Mr. Hazza Majali. Jordan had subsequently sent a Note to UAR asking the UAR judiciary authorities, under an Extradition Agreement between Syria and Jordan, to extradite the three men allegedly implicated in the crime, but no reply had been received.

B. President G. A. Nasser's Attack On Israel: In a message to the ninth annual convention of the Arab Students Organization in USA, President G. A. Nasser described Israel as a "tool and a base for imperialists" and a "menace to Arab security and integrity."

In spite of colonialist and Zionist plots against the Arabs, he added, "Arab nationalism has been reborn. It is now an established reality, a world factor, a power wielded in the interests of the Arabs and other peoples of the world."

He said that the July 23 Revolution which "heralds the light of a new day throughout the Arab world" had achieved most of its objectives.

He added: "Our Revolution sparked in every Arab land three major revolutions; a national revolution to eradicate colonialism, an Arab revolution to remove the artificial barriers devised by imperialism to divide the Arabs and a social revolution to secure social justice and ensure man's right to a life of dignity."

Stressing UAR's strict adherence to the principles of co-existence and neutrality, he called upon all Powers to liquidate military bases and dissolve military pacts. "We deal with all Powers, small and big alike, on a footing of equality. We stand for the right of all peoples to self-determination. We condemn prejudice and discrimination, whether racial or religious."

C. Soviet Credit: A Protocol amending the USSR-Syria Loan Agreement of October, 1957 was signed in Moscow on September 8 following several months of negotiations.

It was signed by the Chairman of the Executive Council of the Syrian Region, Mr. Nureddin Kahaleh, who led a delegation to USSR for final talks.

A Soviet credit of 185 million roubles (about £17 million) was made available for several projects to be carried out with Soviet aid and the door had been left open for a further credit of 100 million roubles. Contracts in respects of the three main projects—a railway, a fertilizer factory and further prospecting for oil and minerals—were also signed on September 8.

The railway is the proposed line between Lattakiah on the Mediterranean coast and Qamishly in the north-east via Aleppo. USSR would supply technical assistance and equipment for the construction of this line up to a value of 81 million roubles. The two other contracts provided for the construction of a nitrogenous fertilizer factory at Homs and the supply of equipment and technicians for oil prospecting.

According to the Syrian Minister of Communications, Mr. El Alem, the amended Agreement stipulated that a programme of future co-operation will be drawn up, which will increase several other industrial projects.

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. Mr. Sekou Toure's Visit: The President of Guinea, Mr. Sekou Toure, paid a State visit to the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam from September 16 to 19 at the invitation of President Ho Chi-Minh.

Mr. Toure was greeted at Hanoi airport on September 16 by Dr. Ho Chi Minh, the Prime Minister, Mr. Pham Van Dong and others.

In a welcome speech, Dr. Ho Chi-Minh emphasized the "growing solidarity between the newly-independent countries of Africa and the countries of the Socialist bloc."

In Hanoi, Mr. Toure went through a packed schedule of engagements, including State receptions and talks with Viet-Namese leaders.

On September 17, Mr. Toure and Dr. Ho Chi-Minh signed a Joint Statement which contained a special reference to the Congo situation.

The Statement said that Congo's "internal affairs should be decided by the Congolese people themselves". The cause of the "complications and confusion" of the present situation in the Congo "lay in the attempts of the imperialists to cling to their selfish interests".

It added that the "imperialists" had no "right or reason to interfere in the internal affairs of the Congo, to split Congolese territory and to encroach grossly upon Congo's sovereignty in any form and in any capacity whatsoever".

Supporting the policies aimed at general disarmament, banning of nuclear weapons, and the dissolution of military bases on foreign territories, the two leaders expressed satisfaction that "the world situation has of late developed in a direction favourable to the movement for peace."

They noted that the recent movement for national independence in Asia, Africa and Latin America "has expanded and developed at a tempo and with a magnitude never known before".

They also expressed anxiety over "imperialist manoeuvres" designed to overthrow the present legal Government in Laos and to divide Laos, thus seriously threatening the peace and security of the people of Indo-China.

SPORT

A. Mohun Bagan Win IFA Shield: Mohun Bagan won the IFA Shield in Calcutta on September 24 with a solitary-goal victory over the Indian Navy from Bombay and thereby the football season's "double", as they had earlier won the First Division League Championship.

Thus, for the sixth time Mohun Bagan won the Shield, their previous triumphs being in 1911, 1947, 1948, 1954 and 1956. They had also achieved the "double" in 1954 and 1956.

Their latest victory was hard-earned but well deserved and on their consistently superb performances Mohun Bagan deserved the trophy. The speed and thrust which were their main assets throughout the season enabled them to tear the Navy defence wide open. The latter tackled and spoiled to good purpose, but the tendency to panic under pressure told heavily on them and far too many miskicks ran them into trouble.

The teams were:

Mohun Bagan: Sett, S. Guha, Jarnail Singh and P. Sarkhel; Kempiya and Narsiya; Dipu Das, A. Chakravarty, Salauddin, S. Nundy and S. Ghosh.

Navy: Nayar, George, Anthony and S. Ghosh; N. Singh and T. L. Dhur; Hotl, Fernandez, Kundu, Swamy and Inas.

Vol. VI. No. 43

AFGHANISTAN

A. Trade Agreement With India Renewed: It was announced in Kabul on October 5 that an Agreement between India and Afghanistan had been concluded to renew the existing trade arrangements between the two countries until July 20, 1961.

This followed the visit to Afghanistan of an Indian trade delegation, led by Mr. K. R. F. Khilnani, Joint Secretary in the Indian Ministry of Commerce and Industry.

The two Governments re-affirmed their desire to promote trade between them and take such special steps, in terms of the Treaty as might be found practicable. It was agreed of Friendship and Commerce between them, that facilities would be afforded to registered importers for importing into India dry and fresh fruits, hides and skins, etc.

Likewise, facilities would be afforded for import into Afghanistan from India of goods like cotton and woollen textiles, tea, light engineering goods, pharmaceuticals, drugs and chemicals, etc.

Agreement With USSR:

Afghanistan also signed a Treaty with the Soviet Union providing for facilities to Afghan traders for transit of imports and exports and river transport for trade.

At present the major part of Afghanistan's imports and exports passes through Pakistan.

Under the same Treaty, Russia would help Afghanistan to develop a port on the river Oxus. The Treaty approved the extension of the Soviet-Afghan Trade and the Transit Treaty of 1954.

CAMBODIA

A. Relations With China: The Chairman of the People's Republic of China, Mr. Liu Shao-chi and the Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai in messages exchanged with the Cambodian Head of State, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, emphasized the growing friendship between their two countries.

In a message dated September 4, the Chinese leaders invited Prince Norodom Sihanouk to Peking in November, 1960. They said: "The peoples of China and Cambodia have a traditional friendship similar to that among kinsmen. This friendship has attained a satisfactory development in recent years through the exchange of visits between the leaders of our two countries. We are deeply convinced that the coming visit of Your Royal Highness will bring closer the friendly relations between our two countries based on the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the ten principles of the Bandung Conference, thereby contributing to enhancing and defending peace in the Indo-China region and in Asia."

In his reply, Prince Norodom thanked the Chinese leaders for their invitation which he accepted. He said: "...this new visit will certainly be favourable to the strengthening and development of the existing relations between our two countries. These relations have already been further strengthened by the two great outstanding friends of our people, Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, and the Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, during their recent visit to Cambodia.

"When I visit the friendly People's China again, I shall have the opportunity to acquaint myself with the shining success scored by the Chinese people in all fields under your brilliant leadership. These successes will also inspire me to the great benefit of my country.

"Cambodia is proud of this unswerving friendship which has been developed between our two nations with respect for the Bandung principles of peaceful co-existence and for the sake of safeguarding world peace and freedom."

CEYLON

A. Federal Party Executive Meeting: The Working Committee of the Lankai Tamil Arasu Katchi (Federal Party) met in Colombo on October 1 and 2 under the presidentship of one of its Vice-Presidents, Mr. M. Manikkam in the absence of the President, Mr. N. R. Rajavarothayam.

It took stock of the current political situation, particularly in the context of the Government's decision to implement the "Sinhala Only Act" rigorously in all Government departments from January 1, 1961.

It issued a call to all Tamil-speaking people throughout Ceylon not to abandon or relax any of the steps which they had adopted since 1956 to resist the Act until a satisfactory solution was arrived at and implemented.

It appealed to municipal councils, village committees, public and co-operative bodies in Tamil areas to transact all future business with the Government in the Tamil language only.

A spokesman of the Party told newsmen later that after an extensive discussion of the issues involved, the Working Committee came to the decision on the stand the Party should take in this regard and authorized a group of Tamil MPs to apprise the Government of the Party's decision and to report back to the Committee.

He said: "With a view to further strengthening the Party organization and for the purpose of making the Tamil people throughout Ceylon participate more closely in the activities of the Party, the Working Committee adopted a scheme for an intensive membership drive before the next annual session in December, 1960 at which the Party will decide on its programme of action to achieve its objectives."

[The "Sinhala Only Act" stipulated that Sinhalese, the language of the majority community would be the State language of Ceylon, with provision in a later Act for the reasonable use of Tamil, the language of the minority community.]

B. Steps To Curb Illicit Indian Immigration: The Finance Minister, Mr. F. R. D. Bandaranaike, who is also Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of Defence and External Affairs, detailed in the House of Representatives measures the Government proposed to take to curb illicit immigration into Ceylon from India.

He announced that the armed forces would be deployed shortly along the northern coast to prevent illicit immigration. He disclosed that the Navy with its present vessels was unable to pursue illicit immigrants into shallow waters. This shortcoming, he said, would soon be remedied.

He said that special legislation was being prepared to impose prison sentences on people who helped illicit entrants to gain access into the country and those who gave them employment.

Speaking in the debate, the former Premier, Mr. Wijeyananda Dahanayake, said that "international forces were behind the menace of illicit immigration into Ceylon from South India." A planned penetration of Ceylon was taking place and the Sinhalese race, the majority community, was in danger of extinction.

A Government back-bencher, Mr. P. Wickramasuriya, said that he was surprised at Mr. Dahanayake decrying illicit immigration when he had showered distinguished citizenships on Indians while he was Prime Minister of the 'care-taker' Government.

The deputy leader of the Opposition, Mr. J. R. Jayawardene, said that the question of illicit immigration was above party politics and affected the country as a whole. The Sinhalese people were faced with a grave problem and the conferring of 25 distinguished citizenships by the former Premier did not compare with boatloads of illicit immigrants who landed daily on the shores of Ceylon.

He urged the Government to take definite steps to stop the alarming incidence of illicit immigration.

Mr. S. Thondaman (Nominated), leader of the Ceylon Democratic Congress, which represents estate workers of Indian origin, said that no one could object to measures against illicit immigration. In spite of precautions taken, immigration still continued. Publicity was given to the problem of illicit immigration when 200,000 people of Indian origin in Ceylon were recently deprived of citizenship.

He pointed out that it was only ten years after India had taken steps to prevent illicit immigration that Ceylon was attempting to take similar steps. Ceylon had asked for the services of Indians, but India had refused to let her people come unless they were treated as human beings.

CHINA

A. National Day Celebrations: The 11th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China was celebrated throughout the country on October 1.

The biggest show was in Peking where nearly half a million persons, representative of every section of Chinese life, marched past the Tien An Men square in a colourful display.

From the reviewing stand, the Chinese Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi delivered a 25-minute speech to the people.

He said that the past year "has seen the biggest natural calamities in our country since the founding of the People's Republic. Because the advantages of the people's communes have been brought into full play and because of the concerted efforts and heroic struggle waged by commune cadres, the broad masses of commune members and the whole nation, losses which might have been incurred, and areas which might have been afflicted by calamities, have eventually been greatly reduced".

He repeated the recent statements by Chinese leaders that all China's efforts had been devoted to peace and the unity of the socialist camp.

As the parade filed past, the crowd gave a big cheer to a 500-strong party of mountaineers carrying a huge picture of Jomo Lungma (Mount Everest) showing the Chinese flag and a bust of Mr. Mao Tse-tung perched on top. The parade ended with the release of doves and multi-coloured balloons, and the crowd surged forward to give a big ovation to the Communist Party leader, Mr. Mao Tse-tung who had been rarely seen in public recently.

Over 2,000 delegates from 70 countries watched the parade, but official reports did not mention the presence of any Government delegation from the Soviet Union. Tass reported that the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, had sent a telegram to the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai and the Communist Party Chairman, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, reiterating that China and USSR were linked by bonds of "unbreakable friendship which accords with the basic interests of both countries." He stressed that socialist countries were "persistently fighting for the implementation of the principles of peaceful co-existence of States with different social systems."

In a speech delivered at a State banquet for 5,000 guests in Peking on September 30 on the eve of the National Day, the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai said that China had "persistently advocated peaceful co-existence," and stood for the "settlement of all international disputes without resorting to force."

China, he said, would remain loyal to the unity of the socialist camp headed by the Soviet Union, and would support all proposals made by that country.

He spoke at length about the series of treaties concluded recently with some of China's neighbours, culminating in the Boundary Treaty with Burma.

He attacked "US imperialism" and charged USA with preparing for war, obstructing disarmament, and trying to instigate a new form of colonialism under the cover of United Nations, particularly in the Congo.

A Chinese military order, quoted by the New China News Agency, announced that Quemoy and other Kuomintang-held offshore islands would not be shelled on October 1 and 2 so as to enable the islanders to celebrate the National Day "with the whole of the country."

B. Mr. Mao Tse-tung's Views On Communist Principles And Tactics: The fortnightly theoretical journal of the Communist Party, Red Flag, published on October 2 a 4,000-word article reviewing the fourth volume of the works of the Chairman of the Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung.

It opened with a lengthy analysis of the world effects of the Chinese communist victory in 1949, calling it a "victory of Mao Tse-tung's thought" and praised him as a "master at integrating the principles of Marxism-Leninism with concrete practice."

It said that the basic important development of Marxist-Leninist theory he had made was the idea of despising the enemy strategically, but taking full advantage of him tactically.

It explained that this meant the progressive forces realized that reactionary forces, no matter how strong they appeared to be, were bound by "an objective law independent of man's will" to perish and "the new-born forces are bound to triumph."

But, while realizing that "all reactionaries are paper tigers," Mr. Mao Tse-tung insisted that in any particular engagement, whether military, economic or any other, the progressives must take the fullest account of the enemy's strength and concentrate their own so as to defeat him piece-meal. This could be summed up as "pitting one against 10 strategically"—in other words considering small progressive forces capable of tackling large reactionary ones—and "pitting 10 against one tactically"—a policy of victory by overwhelming strength in piece-meal engagements.

The official Hsinhua News, in an English language transmission from Peking, also gave a summary of the fourth volume of Mr. Mao Tse-tung's selected works, including his writings between August, 1945 and September, 1949, when the People's Republic of China was proclaimed in Peking.

In his work entitled Some Appraisals of the Present International Situation written during the civil war, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, said that on some questions, including certain major ones, it was "possible for imperialist and socialist countries to reach compromises.

"Such compromises were only a matter of relations between countries, which were different from and should not be confused with, the class struggle inside a capitalist country." The compromises in question "by no means require the people in the capitalist countries to follow suit by making compromises at home. People in various countries will continue to wage different struggles in accordance with different conditions."

In the same essay, he stated that it was possible to overcome the danger of a World War "provided the forces of the peoples throughout the world waged resolute and effective struggles against the world's reactionary forces."

In a report by him at an inner Party conference of cadres, he explained that "we must not be deceived by them (reactionary forces) or scared by their reactionary bluster, but must carry on a tit-for-tat struggle against them."

Hsinhua News stated that the volume "will become a powerful ideological weapon for accelerating the socialist revolution and socialist construction in our country, and for intensifying the struggle against imperialism and modern revisionism."

C. Archaeological Discoveries: Recent discoveries in ancient tombs at Astana (Sanpao) and Turfan, in the Sinkiang Uighur Autonomous Region, have yielded extremely valuable finds for archaeological research.

A team sent by the Sinkiang Museum in 1959 excavated six tombs, the earliest dated 384 AD, in the Southern and Northern Dynasties and the latest dated 688 AD in the Tang Dynasty. The tombs were built essentially of earth and were square or oblong in shape and the ceilings were vaulted or in the style of a Chinese pavilion, with the centre tapering high above the four roof corners.

There were single tombs for one male or female and also tombs in which husband and wife were interred together. Funeral objects were extremely simple. There were no coffins, the corpses being placed on reed mats or wooden boards.

Silk was the basic dress material. The deceased were fitted with masks and some carried beads stringed to the part covering the nose or eyes.

The shoes were made of silk or linen and paper, inscribed with characters. Sandals made of hemp cordage and shoes made from paper were also found. Such paper was also made from hemp. From characters still discernible on the paper, certain events and records of the time could be traced, which provided invaluable material for research. There was, for instance, a land-lease by one Chao Huai-Man. Some characters on a deed of usury, though badly damaged, were distinguishable.

SUMMARY: Dalai Lama's Appeal To UN; Trade Agreement With Tunisia; Import Policy For October, 1960—March, 1961; FICCI Study On Effects Of ECM On Asian Trade; Exports Survey; Special Reserve Fund For Government Employees; Joint Stock Companies During 1958; Metric Weights To Be Used.

A. Dalai Lama's Appeal To UN: In a letter sent from his camp at Dharamsala on September 29, the Dalai Lama appealed to United Nations to "take appropriate measures to get China to vacate her aggression in Tibet."

The letter, addressed to the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld was released to the Press on October 1.

In the letter, the Dalai Lama expressed happiness at the inscription of the question of Tibet on the agenda of the current session of the UN General Assembly, at the instance of Malaya and Thailand.

He said: "I do hope that all the peace-loving countries will heed the voice of my people and provide for them a ray of light in the night of subjugation and oppression through which they are passing."

He quoted historical evidence to prove that Tibet was "completely independent," and said that the claim of the Chinese to suzerainty over Tibet was based on the 1907 Convention between Britain and Russia to which Tibet was not a party.

He said that between 1912 and 1950 there was "not even a semblance of Chinese authority in Tibet." He pointed out that Tibet was not a party to the Sino-Japanese War and even during the Second World War, it had insisted on its position as a neutral and did not permit the transport of war material from India to China.

Alleging that on October 7, 1950, China committed a "flagrant act of aggression" against Tibet, he said: "As a result of the defeat of the Tibetan Army and after the efforts of the Tibetan Government to get the help of UN had failed, we were compelled to send a delegation to Peking. The delegation was compelled to sign what is known as the 17-point Agreement on May 23, 1951."

He added that the Chinese had committed a "wholesale breach of all the important terms of the 17-point Agreement", and the General Assembly of Tibet (consisting of officials and public) had repudiated that Agreement, "as it was well entitled to do, and re-asserted the independence of Tibet on March 19, 1959."

He said: "Even now refugees are coming into Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim and India practically every day. The number of refugees is 83,500. From the accounts of these refugees, the oppression and wholesale terror....have in no way lessened."

He referred to the finding of the International Commission of Jurists that the Chinese authorities had been "guilty of genocide" in Tibet, and said: "The fighting in Tibet against the occupiers and the oppressors is still going on. I appealed to UN last year and I am making this appeal again in the hope that UN will take appropriate measures to get China to vacate her aggression.

"In my opinion, any measure short of this is not going to be of much help to my country where the communist steamroller is every day crushing out the freedom of my people."

C. Trade Agreement With Tunisia: It was announced in Tunis on October 5 that India and Tunisia had signed a five-year Trade Agreement providing for exchange of $15,500,000 worth of goods.

Under the Agreement, Tunisia would export mainly phosphates and phosphate by-products and import tea and jute from India.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

D. Favourable Trade Balance With USSR: Official sources in Calcutta disclosed on September 30 that India had a favourable trade balance of Rs. 3.56 crores with USSR in the first quarter of 1960 as against a surplus of Rs. 2.7 crores in the corresponding period of 1959.

While the earnings from exports to Russia increased from Rs. 6.1 crores in January-March, 1959 to Rs. 6.36 crores in the period under review, the cost of imports from that country declined from Rs. 3.4 crores to Rs. 2.8 crores.

Raw hides and skins ranked first among the goods shipped to Russia, accounting for Rs. 1.96 crores, followed by jute manufactures, which earned Rs. 1.07 crores.

Plantation products also occupied an important place among the goods exported to Russia, with tea accounting for Rs. 79,49,000, spices for Rs. 77,50,000, fruits and vegetables for Rs. 71,58,000 and coffee for Rs. 11,28,000.

Other important items of export to Russia included raw wool (Rs. 43,45,000), leather and leather manufactures (Rs. 15,55,000), shellac (Rs. 10,08,000) and woollen cloth (Rs. 9,73,000).

Iron and steel manufactures were the most important items of imports and accounted for Rs. 1.33 crores in the first quarter of 1960.

Other goods imported from Russia included fertilizers (Rs. 21,60,000), paper (Rs. 15,77,000), chemicals (Rs. 11,07,000) and wood pulp (Rs. 10,49,000).

E. Fishery Schemes—Co-operation With Japan: It was made known in New Delhi on October 3 that two fishery schemes to be undertaken with Japanese collaboration had been approved for inclusion under the yen credit programme.

Under the first scheme, the Taiyo Fishing Company would operate prawn fisheries with its base at Cochin and would undertake trawling as part of the expanded activities of an Indian company. The expansion scheme had been approved and the Company's representatives were finalizing the details in Tokyo.

The second project concerned the offer of the Aichi Prefectural Government to send a survey vessel to the Mangalore coast. An operating company, in collaboration with the Mysore Government, was proposed to be established, should the results be favourable. The survey vessel was ready to commence work and the Mysore Government had been asked to meet the local costs.

The schemes were the first concrete result of an Indian team's investigations in Tokyo in March, 1960. The team discussed with the Japanese Department of Economic Co-operation, the fisheries agency and companies the terms and conditions laid down by the Government of India for establishing fishing companies with foreign collaboration. The main points related to the repatriation of capital, remittance of wages and profits, relaxation of income-tax laws, payment of charges for chartering ships, shore facilities for repairs, storage and processing and in particular the inclusion of fishing activities under the yen credit.

F. Import Policy For October, 1960-March, 1961: The import policy for the period October. 1960-March, 1961 was announced in New Delhi on October 1.

The main features of the new policy were cuts in the import of a number of items including cotton fabrics, raw films, wines and whisky, scaling down of the import quotas for a wide range of industrial goods and chemicals in regard to which indigenous production had increased lately and extension of the Pakistan Open General Licence (OGL) for a further period of six months.

A Press Note issued by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the new policy said:

"In formulating the policy, the views expressed at the meeting of the last Import Advisory Council have been taken into account. Every effort has been made to make adequate provision to sustain industrial activity, and to ensure adequate utilization of the country's industrial potential.

"Having regard to the insistent need to effect the maximum possible economy in the country's imports, the new import policy is, of necessity, restrictive on account of foreign exchange considerations and cuts have had to be made on many items of consumer interest such as wines, whisky, cotton fabrics, sheet and plate glass, time-pieces, etc.

"Import quotas have also been scaled down over the range of items having a strong indigenous industry angle such as pipes or tubes flexible, malleable iron pipe fittings, cast-iron pipe fittings, iron and steel wire ropes, boot and shoe grindery, copper manufactures, brass manufactures, leather belting, electric insulations, house service meters, industrial and street light fittings, paste board, mill board, water meters, vulcanized fibre sheets, certain chemical items such as hydrosulphite of soda, bleaching powder, calcium carbide, textile preservatives, carbody methyl, acetic acid, anhydrous ammonia, certain items of motor vehicle parts such as gaskets, radiators, assembly shock absorbers, piston assemblies, piston rings, thin walled bearings and certain items of drugs and medicines.

"Although the quota for drugs and medicines, not otherwise specified, has been reduced, a provision has been made, according to which quota licences issued for specified items can also be utilized for import of drugs and medicines not otherwise specified so that adequate quantities may still be imported within the lower cost ceiling.

"The quota for raw film has been scaled down from 66-2|3 per cent Gen. and 66-2|3 per cent Soft to 50 per cent Gen. and 50 per cent Soft. This reduction is not, however, likely to affect the film industry adversely, in view of the fact that the film industry has shown its willingness to effect a cut in the length of films.

"At the time, in spite of the foreign exchange difficulty, the quotas for import of spare parts of sugar manufacturing machinery and spare parts of earth-moving machinery have been slightly increased. The face value provisions for import of certain items such as bolts and nuts, ball bearings, garage tools against licences for certain machinery items have been liberalized. The import of mercury will be canalized to reduce speculative spurts in price.

"The import policy for about 20 items such as dates, spices, betelnuts, paper items, cotton yarn, photographic sensitized materials, watches, giant tyres, agricultural tractors etc., will be announced later.

"The OGL for import from Pakistan which covers four items, has been extended for a further period of six months.

"The list of items, for which Actual User Licences will be granted, has been expanded. The basic period for a few items has been extended to include the year 1957-58 and 1958-59. With a view to curtailing procedural delay in the issue of import licences, the scheme of 'Repeat' licensing, introduced during the period October, 1959—March, 1960, is being continued during the period October, 1960-March, 1961.

"The new import policy, which has been closely geared to the developmental needs of the Second Five-Year Plan, will, of course, have repercussions on those engaged in trade as distinct from industry. This is, however, unavoidable in the larger national interest; and here too, the attempt has been to reduce to the minimum such hardship as may be caused.

"The new import policy places a great deal of responsibility on industrial entrepreneurs and established importers. The Government expects that they will use their licences and quotas to make wise purchases, to make equitable distribution of what is available, to maintain a steady price level and to help expand production."

An official spokesman said in New Delhi on October 1 that the aim of the new import policy was to "keep the economy ticking at the present level of tempo" and to permit "some expansion."

He added that in order to ensure that the scarce foreign exchange was put to the best use, the quotas of established importers had been restricted, while the list of items to be imported directly by actual users had been expanded.

As regards the 20 items which had not been covered by the new import policy announcement, he said that a decision would be taken only after the return of the Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, from his tour abroad, when a clearer picture of the country's foreign exchange position would be available.

He explained that the cut in the import of raw films was not likely to affect the film industry as the industry itself had agreed to "effect a cut in the length of films." It had voluntarily offered to put a ceiling of 12,000 ft. on Bengali films, 13,000 ft. on Hindi films and 15,000 ft. on Tamil films. The average length of films was expected to be less than the proposed ceiling.

He added that there would be "no cut in the total supply of newsprint" under the new policy. However, the proportion of NEPA newsprint to be used by each unit had been raised from five per cent to ten per cent of the quota.

Explanatory Statement:

Along with the Press Note, a statement containing an analysis of the changes made in regard to the import of various items under the new policy was made available.

According to the statement, the list of 26 items in respect of which applications from actual users would be considered included ferro alloys, chemicals (mainly cadmium compounds), knitting machines (including hosiery machines and embroidery machines) for replacement purposes, linen thread, tyre retreading moulds and "Synthetic Ion Exchange" resins for softening and demineralizing of water and other liquids.

The eight items, which had been brought under the export promotion scheme, included vegetable and food products, canned or bottled (other than mango chutney), graphite pencils, lenses (polishing rouge), gas mantles, shark fins and fish maws and monumental stones and granite slabs.

Items in regard to which the basic period had been extended upto and including 1957-58 comprised powdered milk containing not less than 18 per cent cream intended for infant feeding and tape and wire recorders of all sorts.

[Import of magnetic tapes, magnetic perforated films, spares and recording wire only is permitted].

The basic period had been extended up to and including 1958-59 for items including solubilized vat dyes other than the banned dyes, motor-vehicle parts not otherwise specified, wheeled and crawler tractors above 50d. B.H.P., shovels, excavators, motorized graders, vibrating soil compactors, stone granulators, tar and bitumen boilers, sprayers, concrete mixers, mortar mills and spare parts of earth-moving machinery.

Import quota of wines and spirits had been slashed by half—from 10 per cent to 5 per cent—and was expected to result in a foreign exchange saving of about Rs. 10,00,000.

The import of artificial teeth had been cut from 10 per cent to 2.5 per cent, gum arabic from 40 per cent to 20 per cent, time-pieces (one-day alarm clocks and parts thereof) from 20 per cent to 10 per cent, record changers and component parts from 7.5 per cent to 5 per cent, artificial silk yarn and thread from 7.5 per cent to 5 per cent and sheet and plate-glass from 10 per cent to 5 per cent.

Items on which "face value restrictions" had been imposed included sound and projection equipment ¼ h.p. and above, sound and projection reproduction equipment under ¼ h.p. and film studio equipment. Not more than 33-1|3 per cent of the face value of the licence could be utilized for each of the three items for the new six-month period as against 66-2|3 per cent, for the half year April-September, 1960.

Quota licences issued for "refrigeration and air-conditioning machinery—other types" would hereafter not be allowed for the import of condensers, receivers, chillers and oil separators. They would, however, be allowed again for the import of air-lifters, controls, gauges, valves, copper pipes, tubes and fittings, extra-heavy steel pipes, refrigerant and compressor oil for first chargers, humidistants and compressors.

No licences would be issued to established importers in respect of some 25 items included in the Import Trade Control Schedule for the period April-September, 1960. These included cotton fabrics, grey piece-goods and printed piece-goods and fabrics, palm oil and industrial and street-light fittings and floodlights. However, applications for some of these items, such as palm oil, would be entertained directly from actual users.

G. FICCI Study Of Effects Of ECM On Asian Trade: A Study by the Federation of the Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) of the effects of the European Common Market (ECM) and the Free Trade Association on the trade and economics of Asia, released in New Delhi on September 29, showed that any counteracting steps that might be adopted by the under-developed countries could not have more than a marginal value.

The Study was submitted to the International Chambers of Commerce for consideration by its Commission on Asian and Far Eastern Affairs, due to hold its ninth session in Karachi on December 5.

The Federation's view appeared to be that the immediate establishment of an Asian Common Market would not be a practicable proposition because of the stronger economic position of Western Europe to withstand the challenge and because of the difficulties in the way of the evolution of a uniform programme for the scaling down of import and export duties.

There were also other unfavourable factors like the Asian nations being geographically not as well-knit as the countries of Western Europe; their being linked with different economic systems, such as the Commonwealth; and a lack of background of economic co-operation like the one that preceded the establishment of the economic groupings in the West.

The situation was not bleak, however, and the Study recommended the institution of steps to promote intra-regional trade in Asia through a gradual extension to all the most favoured import and export tariffs and the establishment of a group to study promotion of free trade in the region in certain selected commodities.

It quoted an ECAFE report to the effect that "it would be of benefit to the region as a whole to mobilize available under-utilized resources in manufacturing and agricultural production and substitute them for supplies now obtained from outside the region."

There was need for devising a scheme by which the countries of the region could mutually exchange their surplus commodities without placing extra burdens on their foreign exchange resources and without upsetting their present trade arrangements. This could be done, for instance, by providing that payment or part payment for such goods might be made outside the usual payment mechanism and in a currency account which might not create the immediate problem of arranging foreign exchange for the importing country.

It said: "While there are various handicaps in forming a common market or free trade area comprising all the countries of Asia, it is still possible that some selected countries of the region may enter into arrangements on the lines of free trade associations being established in other parts of the world."

A second point of attack to rectify the situation created by the new European economic groupings would be the forum provided by General Agreement on Tariffs And Trade (GATT), which had discussed the matter on a number of occasions in the past and was due to take it up again towards the end of October. The Study said that Asian delegations should advocate the following at future discussions:

(1) The association of the associated territories with the common market should be reviewed by GATT, as these territories were not incorporated into the EEC Customs Union but stood in a preferential relation to it. Therefore, either the duties levied by the associated territories on the goods of the common market countries could be fixed on the basis of an average, or the duties levied on the 'third' countries could be substantially reduced;

(2) The common tariffs of the common market should be as near as possible to the tariffs levied by the low tariff member countries, and in no case should exceed the weighted arithmetic average of the duties levied by the common market territories. There was no justification for the high rates of duties fixed for some of the items such as tea. The common tariff of 35 per cent on tea should be substantially reduced and it should not exceed the common tariff for coffee as the two commodities served as substitutes for each other;

(3) The common market and the free trade association should agree to the principle that in case total imports of the area of any commodity from the non-member countries were continuously lower as compared to the average imports before the schemes came into operation, the external tariff on the item in question should be suitably reduced;

(4) Provisions should be incorporated in the Rome Treaty providing for necessary checks against monopolistic tendencies in regard to the trade of the common market countries with outside countries.

The Study pointed out that the ministerial meeting held at the time of the 13th session of GATT in October, 1958 had agreed that a more rapid rate of expansion in the export trade of the less-developed countries was an essential condition for economic development. After considering the report of the panel of experts on "trends in international trade", the contracting parties of GATT had decided to formulate a co-ordinated programme of action directed towards the further expansion of international trade, and had established three committees to carry out the programme. One of the committees was entrusted with the task of examining the difficulties which were faced by the less-developed countries in expanding their export trade with the rest of the world. It had recommended that individual countries should without delay report progress towards modification and elimination of these obstacles. However, action in this regard was slow and halting.

It added that the increasing deficits in the trade of under-developed countries were to some extent the result of their development programmes and the increasing requirements of capital goods. In their efforts to earn the necessary foreign exchange, the less-developed countries were induced to sell their products at lower and lower prices while paying higher and higher prices for the products of the industrialized countries, in particular for machinery and capital goods.

It was time, it added, that due attention was paid to the promotion of trade between under-developed countries inter se. The intra-areas trade of non-industrial countries amounted to only about 30 per cent of their total trade. This could be substantially stepped up if the non-industrial countries were in a position to exchange tariff and quota concessions on a group basis instead of the most-favoured-nation basis. If accepted, the proposal would mean the formation of a smaller club of less-developed nations within GATT.

H. Exports Survey: It was announced by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry in New Delhi on October 1 that in the current year the exports stood at Rs. 408 crores at the end of August, 1960 as against imports totalling Rs. 613 crores in the same period.

The total exports in 1958 and 1959 were Rs. 562 crores and Rs. 623 crores as against imports totalling Rs. 878 crores and Rs. 887 crores, respectively, in the same years.

The sterling reserves, which stood at Rs. 207.81 crores in January, 1960 dropped to Rs. 153.23 crores in July and Rs. 146.05 by September 16. There had been a further decline of nearly Rs. 3 crores subsequently.

Food imports amounted to Rs. 149 crores in 1958 and Rs. 123 crores in 1959, iron and steel Rs. 98 crores and Rs. 84 crores, and petroleum products Rs. 75 crores and Rs. 77 crores, respectively.

I. Industrial Policy: The new four-point industrial policy of the Government was defined by the Central Minister for Industries, Mr. Manubhai Shah, in an address to a gathering of industrialists in Bombay on October 1.

He said that the four concepts on which the new policy rested were: (1) the manufacture of basic raw materials within the country; (2) indigenous production of capital goods; (3) recourse to the theory of "import from where you can"; and (4) export promotion.

He added that the country was beginning to feel the stresses and strains involved in large-scale economic and industrial development and there was need for re-thinking about the industrial programme both at the national and individual levels.

He suggested that those interested in the industrial advancement of the country should get together to find or produce raw materials within the country and urged the revival of the spirit of Swadeshi. Nothing was more degrading than the country's dependence on import of capital goods. The old preferences in regard to imports had to be given up in favour of a new policy of "import from wherever possible."

J. Rubber Production: It was made known in Calcutta on September 30 that despite measures taken by the Government to step up rubber production, the gap between production and consumption was widening due to the rapid expansion of the rubber manufacturing industry.

In the first six months of 1960, total production of natural rubber at 9,660 tons showed an increase of 780 tons over the corresponding period of 1959, but total consumption of natural and synthetic rubber at 21,320 tons showed a rise of 2,440 tons.

The gap had to be filled by larger imports, which totalled 9,045 tons in January-June, 1960 against 6,290 tons in the first half of 1959. This gap, which was only a continuation of the trend noticed in the past few years, was likely to increase with the expansion of the rubber manufacturing industry in the Third Five-Year Plan period.

The production of rubber in the Third Plan period was expected to rise from 26,000 tons in 1960-61 to 40,800 tons in 1965-66, while consumption of natural rubber would go up from 40,000 tons to 54,300 tons.

K. Allotment Of Newsprint Quota: A Press release issued in New Delhi on October 2 said that under the new import trade policy announced on October 1, actual user licences would be issued to publishers and printers of newspapers and periodicals only for meeting part of their entitlement of newsprint, while the balance would be made available through canalized imports and NEPA newsprint.

Actual users who did not apply during the April-September, 1960 licensing period, might submit their applications to the Chief Controller of Imports (C.C.I.) New Delhi. The entitlement of these newspapers would be determined for six months in consultation with the Registrar of Newspapers for India, (Ministry of Information and Broadcasting) on the basis of pages, area, average number of pages published during 1957, and average circulation during 1959.

On the entitlement thus calculated, a cut of 20 per cent would be imposed. Newspapers would, however, be allowed to make good this cut from indigenous newsprint manufactured by NEPA mills as far as possible. This cut would not apply to newspapers whose entitlement during this period would be less than 50 tons. Their entitlement would be met from canalized imports of newsprint. Those newspapers, whose entitlement was more than 50 tons would be licensed 50 per cent from "free resources" and 50 per cent from rupee payment countries.

Separate applications for allocation of NEPA newsprint should be addressed to the Registrar of Newspapers for India in New Delhi. Requests for additional newsprint on account of any increase in circulation during July-December, 1960 would be considered by the Registrar of Newspapers on receipt of applications supported by a chartered accountant's certificate.

The requests of actual users who might bring out new newspapers would also be considered, but their requirements for the first three months would be met from NEPA. In the allotment of newsprint, the maximum number of pages that might be considered for a daily newspaper would be eight. Similarly, in the case of periodicals, the calculation would be made only on the number of pages considered reasonable. The number of pages in the case of new newspapers and also those who were not in existence during 1957, would be determined in consultation with the Registrar of Newspapers. After the completion of three months, applications from new newspapers for imported newsprint would be considered, when supported with additional necessary information and also a certificate from a chartered accountant showing the circulation during the initial period of three months. Actual user applications from publishers of books would be considered. Such requests should be supported by a chartered accountant's certificate showing the past consumption, if any, of imported or indigenous newsprint during 1958 or 1959. Chartered accountant's certificate should be furnished in the prescribed form.

Actual user applications from newspaper establishments for their specialized requirements such as stereo-flongs, rubber blankets, spare parts of printing machinery or any other essential item which was not indigenously available, would be considered in consultation with the Registrar of Newspapers on the basis of circulation, regularity of publication, etc. of the paper and whether the publisher or printer owned the printing press for which these requirements had been applied.

L. Special Reserve Fund For Government Employees Set Up: According to a Press Note issued in New Delhi on October 2, the Government of India had constituted a Special Reserve Fund of Rs. 20,00,000 under the Employees' Provident Fund Scheme, to help subscribers or their nominees in the event of employers failing to pay in full the Provident Fund accumulations in the subscribers' accounts.

The sum had been transferred to the Special Reserve Fund from the reserve and forfeiture accounts of the Employees' Provident Fund. Detailed instructions had been issued by the Government to the Central Provident Fund Commissioner as to how the Special Reserve Fund would be operated.

The Fund would be utilized for making payments to outgoing members or their nominees or heirs, if Provident Fund contributions were actually deducted from the members' wages, but were not deposited or were only partly deposited by their employers together with their own corresponding contributions. In such cases when payment became due, the member or his nominee or heir, as the case may be, would immediately be paid from the Employees' Provident Fund the entire amount already received from the employer in his account, together with interest thereon.

Payment of the balance due to the member from the Special Reserve Fund would be regulated as follows:

(1) 50 per cent of the balance due would be paid to the member or his nominee or heir from the Special Reserve Fund;

(2) Another 25 per cent of the balance due would be paid to the member or his nominee or heir on recovery of 50 per cent of the Provident Fund contributions recoverable from the employer;

(3) Payment towards the remaining 25 per cent of the balance due would be made in proportion to the recovery of the remaining 50 per cent of the Provident Fund contributions recoverable;

(4) Interest payable on the instalments paid, as stated above, would be paid at the usual rates along with the last instalment, provided that adequate amount of damages had been recovered from the employer.

Payments from the Special Reserve Fund, for the present, would be restricted to the following cases only:

(1) On retirement or superannuation of a subscriber at or after 55 years; (2) On the death of the subscriber; and (3) in the case of total and permanent disability of a subscriber certified by a medical board set up by the board of trustees of the Employees' Provident Fund or by an authority decided upon by the board of trustees of the Employees' Provident Fund.

The Special Reserve Fund would be operated upon as an imprest and as soon as the arrears, against which payment had been made from the Fund, had been recovered from the employers, such amounts would be paid back into the Special Reserve Fund.

M. Interest On Government Savings Certificates After Maturity: It was announced in New Delhi on October 1 that the Central Government had decided that interest might be allowed for a maximum period of five years for which the national savings certificates and Treasury savings deposit certificates remained unencashed with the Government after maturity.

A Press Note issued by the Finance Ministry said that holders of 10-year (3½ per cent) Treasury savings deposit certificates, 12-year and seven-year national savings certificates would be allowed to retain their holdings for a period of five years after maturity, on which simple interest at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum would be paid for each completed year. No interest would be payable for broken periods of a year.

Similarly, in the case of five-year national savings certificates where the holders had opted to retain them for the extended period of seven years, interest would be allowed at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum for each completed year for a maximum of five years for which the certificates remained unencashed after the expiry of the extended period of seven years.

The holders of the certificates were not at present entitled to receive any interest for the period for which these certificates were not encashed after maturity. The Government had decided to pay interest after maturity if the certificates were unencashed, in order to encourage the retention of such investments. The amount of interest due would be calculated on the matured value of the certificates in the case of national savings certificates and on the face value of the Treasury savings deposit certificates and would be paid to the holder at the time of their final discharge along with the matured value.

N. Joint Stock Companies During 1958: According to a Study reviewing the finances of Indian Joint Stock Companies for the year 1958 publish-end in a monthly bulletin of the Reserve Bank on October 5, the up-trend in industrial growth, noticed since 1953 continued during 1958, but at a slower pace as compared to 1956 and 1957.

The Study, based on statistics of 1,001 companies comprising 77 per cent of the paid-up capital of all companies covered, did not include banking insurance and investment companies, Government companies, companies and associations not functioning for profit and companies limited by guarantee.

Fixed assets showed a smaller expansion in 1958 than in 1957, due partly to the completion or virtual completion in the preceding two years of the investment programmes in some industries under the Second Five-Year Plan, while inventory build-up which had already slowed down in 1957, was negligible in 1958. reflecting among other things, the continued shortages of certain essential raw materials due to import restriction.

The total gross capital formation was, therefore, smaller at Rs. 147 crores as compared to Rs. 227 crores in 1957. Sales (main income) showed a smaller rise than in 1957. Total expenditure also rose in 1958, but the rise was smaller than that under sales and other income.

Profits before tax, which had suffered a sharp fall in 1957, showed a modest rise in 1958. Dividends were somewhat larger in 1958 than in 1957, while at the same time, retained profits recorded a moderate increase.

As regards sources of finance, the Study showed that the share of external sources declined sharply from 72.3 per cent in 1957 to 51.5 per cent in 1958, due mainly to the considerably reduced recourse to borrowing from banks; correspondingly the share of internal sources rose from 27.7 per cent in 1957 to 48.5 per cent for the period under review.

The up-trend in sales (main income) noticed since 1953 continued during 1958, though at a diminishing rate. Sales rose by Rs. 86 crores (5.1 per cent) to Rs. 1,789 crores in 1958, as compared to Rs. 137 crores (8.7 per cent) in 1957. Of the total increase of Rs. 86 crores in sales, about three-fourths was accounted for by five industries—cotton textiles, iron and steel, sugar, cement and other textiles.

On the expenditure side, the consumption of raw materials and other manufacturing expenses dropped by Rs. 19.8 crores to Rs. 1007.6 crores as compared to increases of Rs. 72.2 crores and Rs. 125.5 crores in 1957 and 1956 respectively. All other items showed increases, important among them being salaries and wages, which rose by Rs. 12.1 crores to Rs. 287.8 crores and payments on account of excise duty, which rose by Rs. 25.9 crores to Rs. 114.8 crores. Managing agents' remuneration recorded a small increase of Rs. 44,00,000 as compared to a fall of Rs. 3.4 crores in 1957.

The sharp break in the up-trend in profits noticed in 1957 proved temporary and profits looked up again in 1958. Profits before tax of the 1,001 companies which had fallen by Rs. 23.6 crores to Rs. 107.3 crores in 1957 rose by Rs. 12.6 crores to Rs. 119.9 crores in 1958. This rise, according to the Study, was mainly accounted for by cotton and jute textiles, transport equipment, paper and paper products and tea plantations.

An industry-wise distribution according to percentage of gross profits to total capital employed showed that in 1958, out of 1,001 companies, 579 companies showed a profitability rate of four to 15 per cent and 148 companies of over 15 per cent. As against this, the profitablity rate of 163 companies was small, ranging between 0-4 per cent, while in the remaining 111 companies the ratio was negative because of losses incurred during 1958.

The average rate of dividends on ordinary shares was slightly higher as compared to that of 1957—the highest for "other plantations" (14.8 per cent) followed by sugar, mineral oils, paper and paper products, matches and tea plantations. Cotton textiles, iron and steel, cement and shipping industries pruned down the rate of dividends.

The total gross assets formation in 1958 was smaller at Rs. 160 crores, as compared to Rs. 237 crores in 1957 and Rs. 259 crores in 1956. The rise in gross fixed assets amounted to Rs. 144 crores, or Rs. 30 crores less than the rise in 1957, the annual rate of expansion being lower at 11.6 per cent in 1958 as against 16.3 per cent in 1957. The rise in the inventories was only Rs. 3 crores (0.5 per cent) as against Rs. 52 crores (10.1 per cent) in 1957 and Rs. 91 crores (21.6 per cent) in 1956.

Gross capital formation comprising fixed assets and inventories thus amounted to Rs. 147 crores in 1958, as compared to Rs. 227 crores in 1957. The Study estimated capital formation for the entire public limited companies sector at Rs. 191 crores in 1958 of which gross fixed assets would be Rs. 187 crores and inventories Rs. 4 crores. For the three years 1956-58 together, which broadly corresponded to the first three years of the Second Five-Year Plan, gross capital formation in the public limited companies sector were placed around Rs. 778 crores, of which about Rs. 589 crores were in fixed assets.

Of the gross fixed assets formation of Rs. 144 crores in 1958, the iron and steel industry alone accounted for Rs. 40 crores (28 per cent); this industry together with cotton textiles, engineering, cement and shipping contributed about two-thirds of gross fixed assets formation in 1958.

The pattern of financing assets formation underwent a significant change during the period under review.

Industry-wise, the bulk of the finance for jute textiles, engineering, mineral oils, paper, matches, coal, tea and other plantations was obtained from internal sources, while in cotton textiles, iron and steel, cement, chemicals, vegetable oils and electrical industries, external sources provided a major part of the total finance.

New issues of shares and debentures in 1958 at Rs. 27.1 crores were smaller than in 1957 (Rs. 29.1 crores), but larger than in 1958 (Rs. 23.8 crores). The proportion of ordinary shares in total new issues declined from 84.8 per cent in 1957 to 21.8 per cent in 1958.

The total gross assets of the 1001 companies as at the end of 1958 amounted to Rs. 2,492 crores and their net assets to Rs. 1,954 crores. Net fixed assets at Rs. 852 crores constituted 43.6 per cent of total net assets as against 41.1 per cent in 1957. Net worth paid up capital and free reserves as a percentage of total liabilities showed a further fractional decline from 46.9 per cent in 1957 to 46.5 per cent in 1958.

The declining trend in the liquidity of companies, noticed since 1955, continued during 1958 also. The percentage of current assets to total net assets which had dropped from 59.8 in 1955 to 56.5 in 1957, fell further to 54.0 in 1958. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities also stood lower at 1.27 per cent as against 1.31 per cent in 1957 and 1.49 per cent in 1955.

O. Sugar Price Formula Referred To Tariff Commission: An official announcement in New Delhi on October 3 said that the Government of India had referred to the Tariff Commission the question of revising the price-linking formula for sharing the sugar prices between the factories and cane-growers.

The Government, it was stated, felt that a fresh examination of the question had become necessary, in view of the difficulties experienced in working the present formula and the representations received from the industry and cane-growers.

The Tariff Commission had been asked to examine the issue in all its aspects and suggest modification in the existing formula, with a view to improving it, or to suggest a revised all-India formula or regional formulae, in the light of the cost schedule given by the Commission in its report on cost structure of sugar and fair price payable to the industry. The Commission had been asked to keep in view the need for making the formula simple, easy of application and intelligible to cane-growers.

The Commission would also examine whether the industry's claims for rehabilitation allowance in the matter of division of sugar price between cane-growers and the industry was justified and, if so, the rate at which such allowance should be provided in the price-linking formula.

Another issue, which the Commission had been asked to examine was whether the formula should apply to regions where ex-factory prices had been fixed and, in case the formula was not applied, how the advantage of special incentives given to factories in years of control should be shared between the industry and the growers.

The Commission would also examine the effect of the price-linking formula on the establishment of new factories with heavy capital outlay and consider whether any concession should be allowed to them.

P. Metric Weights To Be Used From October 1, 1960: It was announced in New Delhi on September 29 that from October 1, 1960, the use of metric weights would be compulsory in the notified areas, industries and trades. The use of weights other than metric would be illegal in these areas and industries.

The notified areas cover about a tenth of the country. The Central Standards of Weights and Measures Act, which provides for the introduction of the reform in gradual stages, applies to about 23 industries. The reform would be completed in 10 years.

The Central Deputy Minister for Commerce and Industry, Mr. Satish Chandra expressed the hope that the business community and the people would make an attempt to take to the change-over and make this measure of national reform a success.

The measure, he added, was in the interests of the people and the country and instructions had been sent to the State Governments to see that the Enforcement Directorates put more emphasis on persuasive methods than on coercive ones in the initial stages of the reform.

The metric units would not apply to the textile trade for a period of six months. This had been done with a view to facilitating the consumers.

Steps were also taken to see that there was no profiteering in the selling of metric weights. Adequate manufacturing capacity had been established in practically all the States to meet the demand for new weights.

The Central and State Governments had taken various steps to facilitate the smooth introduction of the reform. The required legal base was laid by all the State Governments, which had also set up weights and measures organizations with proper equipment.

A phased programme had been drawn up for use of metric units in the trades and industries connected with buildings and constructions. These, combined with the industries and trades where the new system had been introduced earlier, covered practically the whole area of organized industrial and trading activity in the country.

The Railways adopted the metric system in their commercial departments on April 1, 1960. The Customs and Central Excise Departments, Import and Export Trade Control Organizations and the commercial branches of ports and shipping adopted the new system from October 1.

The use of metric weights in the remaining areas of the country and in industries and trades, which had not already been covered, had been permitted from April 1, 1960. There would be a transition period of two years, at the end of which metric weights would become compulsory throughout the country.

Sale Of Cement:

An official announcement in New Delhi on September 21 said that the Government of India had decided that from October 1, 1960, only metric weights would be used for sale of cement throughout the country.

Previously, cement was sold on a gross weight basis. Since October 1, 1958, cement bags were marked to indicate that each bag weighed 1 cwt. or 51 kg. gross. While switching over to the metric system, it was decided that cement would be packed on a net-weight basis. Under the new system, each bag would contain 50 kg. cement net, exclusive of the weight of the bag and would be marked accordingly.

On the adoption of metric weights on October 1, the price at which the State Trading Corporation would sell cement was fixed at Rs. 116.75 for a metric ton of packed cement, as against the previous price of Rs. 117.50 for a British ton.

Q. Engineering Institute At Kurukshetra To Be Set Up: It was announced in Kurukshetra on October 3 that the Central Government had decided to locate a higher Engineering Institute at Kurukshetra. The Institute would be built on a site adjoining Kurukshetra University.

The Vice-Chancellor of Kurukshetra University, Mr. Hardwari Lal, gave details of the number of institutions and faculties proposed to be established from July, 1960. The programme included an Institute of Indology with departments of Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrits, Ancient Indian History, Culture and Archaeology, Linguistics and Indian Philosophy. All these departments would be teaching-cum-research departments.

He announced that the Punjab State Government was considering a proposal to build in the University campus a college for women by July, 1961.

He said that a plan had been drawn up for the development of the University at a cost of Rs. 1 crore. Land measuring 400 acres had been acquired and the construction work was expected to start soon.

He added that the University Grants Commission (UGC) had refused to render help to Kurukshetra University because it was a purely unitary teaching and residential University.

The Chief Minister of Punjab, Sardar Pratap Singh Kairon had offered to contribute any surpluses in the State funds for the development of the University.

Ad hoc grants amounting to Rs. 20,00,000 had been sanctioned by the State Government and another amount of Rs. 1,100,000 had come from local bodies in the State. A sum of Rs. 1 crore had still to be arranged during the Third Five-Year Plan period to attain a level of development grants from the UGC.

The University authorities had also decided to create a Scholarship Fund to help the poor students. The College of Education had attracted quality students from different parts of the State and initially, 100 students had been admitted to the four-year teachers training course.

The State Government, Mr. Lal added, had not only made provision for tuition-free instructions but had also guaranteed jobs to scholars on the successful conclusion of their course.

R. Railway Bridge Over River Son To Be Built: The Central Minister of Railways, Mr. Jagjivan Ram, on October 2 laid the foundation-stone of the largest bridge to be constructed by the Northern Railway in Chopan (UP) under the Second Five-Year Plan. The 3,875-ft-long bridge will span the Son river and the Robertsganj-Garhwa Road railway line will be laid across it.

The bridge will provide a diversion for the transmission of coal and other minerals to northern, western and central India, easing the pressure on the Mughalsarai marshalling yard.

The railway line, which will be 101 miles long, will be a boon to the industries growing in south-east Uttar Pradesh, around Mirzapur and Mughalsarai. The entire project, which is the Northern Railway's biggest Second Plan venture, entails an expenditure of Rs. 17.50 crores.

The Son river, when in spate, has a discharge rate of 1.6 million cubic ft. of water per second. In the case of the river Jumna near Delhi, the figure is 0.25 million cubic ft. per second.

The Vindhya terrain, which the Robertsganj-Garhwa Road line is designed to serve, conceals veins of limestone, coal, iron, marble and mica. Its streams offer vast possibilities of hydel power. The Rihand Dam, UP's biggest power project, the Government cement factory at Churk and an aluminium factory in the private sector are already located in this region to pave the way for further industrial development. When completed the line will carry 30,000 tons of coal daily. Bauxite, needed for aluminium production, will be delivered at Pipri, one of the stations on this route.

Limestone will be carried from this region to the new steel plants. Singrauli's new coal-fields will also be served by the railway. At present all broad gauge trains running between Bihar and UP converge on Mughalsarai. In 1952, when the Northern Railway was formed, the number of wagons interchanged at Mughalsarai was only 2,900 per day. The number has now increased to 4,800. Under the Third Five-Year Plan, the daily interchange of wagons is expected to rise to 9,000 per day.

S. Ordnance Factories To Manufacture Army Tanks: It was announced by the Defence Ministry in New Delhi on October 2 that the ordnance factories would manufacture tanks for the Indian Army during the Third Five-Year Plan.

This major step in the field of indigenous defence production was taken in the light of the experience gained in the manufacture of tractors and trucks in the ordnance factories and the development of new technical skills.

Soon after Independence, efforts had been made to put up a tank factory in the country in collaboration with foreign firms. The scheme had to be kept in abeyance on account of the re-organization of the ordnance factories following the recommendations of the Baldev Singh Committee.

Steel-making capacity of the ordnance factories was also proposed to be augmented during the Third Plan period. A new alloy steel plant which would cater to the defence needs as well as certain civil requirements might be installed. This would increase the alloy steel capacity in the defence sector to about 5,000 tons. A 12-ton electric arc steel furnace was installed in 1959 at an ordnance factory near Calcutta.

The Defence Ministry further proposed to modernize and expand the Mazagaon docks and Garden Beach workshops (which were acquired in July, 1960) to undertake repair, refit and construction work. It was planned to build small craft like coastal tankers and survey vessels for the Indian Navy and the Oil and Natural Gas Commission.

T. Protection To Linguistic Minorities: It was officially stated in New Delhi on October 2 that the Government of India had commended the safeguards agreed to by the Southern States—Madras, Mysore, Kerala and Andhra Pradesh—for the protection of linguistic minorities for acceptance by other States.

The statement said that these safeguards went beyond the Central directives on the subject.

The safeguards were agreed to by a Committee of the Southern Zonal Council and were approved by the Council at its meeting in New Delhi early in 1960. They covered the fields of education, administration and recruitment to the services.

They provided that all important Government notices and rules, electoral rolls, etc. would be published in a minority language etc., to be used by the public would be printed in languages of every local area, and forms, etc. both in the regional language and in the minority languages. Every municipal town and the non-municipal area of every taluk would be treated as a separate local area for the purpose of recognizing minority languages.

Seven minority languages were recognized for use in the Southern Zone—Tamil, Telugu, Kannada, Malayalam, Hindi, Urdu and English, Marathi was also recognized as a minority language in Mysore.

Correspondence with State Governments in the minority language would be permitted. Similarly, facilities would be provided for registration of documents in the minority languages. Permission would also be given to file documents in minority languages in the courts of the local area. As far as practicable and with due regard to administrative convenience, officers posted to work in local areas would possess adequate knowledge of the minority language.

In the fields of education and recruitment to Services, the Council decided upon adequate safeguards for the minorities.

Primary Education:

As far as primary education was concerned, it was decided that the Southern States would maintain the position in respect of pupil strength and school facilities in respect of separate schools and separate sections for linguistic minorities as was prevalent at the time of the States' reorganization.

Regarding Telugu pupils in Madras and Tamil pupils in Andhra Pradesh, the relevant date would be the separation of Andhra from Madras. If the number of pupils increased, additional facilities would be made available.

Even if the number of pupils in a school decreased, existing facilities would not be withdrawn except with the specific permission of the State Government.

All primary schools would entertain applications from parents belonging to linguistic minorities for the admission of their childern and instruction in their mother-tongue for three months before the commencement of the school year. These applications would be entered in a register and departmental arrangements would be made to provide for inter-school transfers to enable linguistic minorities' children to receive instruction in their mother-tongues.

In the secondary stage of education, the position that obtained on the date of the States' re-organization, or separation of Andhra, as the case might be, would be ascertained and maintained. In regard to provision of facilities where none now existed, education through the mother-tongue would be provided in secondary schools in a minority language if there was a minimum strength of 60 pupils in new standards, eighth to eleven of the higher secondary course, and 15 pupils in each such standard.

State Services:

As regards recruitment to State Services, safeguards would be provided in respect of linguistic minorities in regard to knowledge of the regional language and the medium of competitive examination.

These safeguards would be available to non-Tamilians in Madras, non-Telugus in Andhra Pradesh, non-Kannadigas in Mysore and non-Malayalis in Kerala "who have passed the examination qualifying for the post for which recruitment is to be made from an educational institution within Madras or Andhra Pradesh or Mysore or Kerala as the case may be."

It would be open to any candidate belonging to the linguistic minority of the State to apply for any post notwithstanding that at the time of such application he did not possess adequate knowledge of the regional language of the State, but after selection the candidate should pass the Second Class Language test in that language within the time prescribed as a condition precedent to completion of probation and confirmation.

The candidate could offer his mother-tongue in lieu of the regional language where it was so prescribed as the medium of examination.

A review by the Central Government of the progress made in the implementation of these decisions was circulated to the Southern States.

U. Co-operative Farming—Recommendations Of Working Group Accepted By Government: It was decided by the Central Government on October 2 that a Co-operative Farming Board would be set up at the Centre for the promotion of co-operative farming and 3,200 co-operative farms would be organized on a voluntary basis under a Pilot Projects Scheme.

These and other decisions were taken on the recommendations of the Working Group on Co-operative Farming, presided over by Mr. S. Nijalingappa.

The question of setting up Co-operative Farming Boards at the State level was left to the State Governments. It was also indicated that separate unions of co-operative farming need not be established at this stage, but district co-operative unions should look after the co-operative farming societies along with other types of co-operative societies at the district level.

The State Governments were asked to see that co-operative farming societies should be eligible for assistance on a priority basis under various schemes which provided for assistance to individual cultivators. Rules governing such assistance might be suitably revised for this purpose, if necessary.

Co-operative farming societies would generally need credit on a large scale than individual cultivators, as they were expected to take up more comprehensive production programmes.

In the case of co-operative farming societies composed predominantly of landless cultivators and marginal and sub-marginal farmers, it would be specially necessary to ensure that they had the requisite borrowing power. The State Governments might participate in the share capital of such societies subject to a ceiling of Rs. 2,000 for a society.

As a general rule, the amount of share capital contributed by the State should not exceed the amount raised by the members of the society and the State's share capital could be retired over a period of 10 years. Contributions to the share capital need not be accompanied by nomination of directors by the Government.

It would be ensured that policies for promoting co-operative farming and primary service co-operatives at the primary level did not clash and at all stages co-operative farming was visualized as a stage in co-operative development, and not as a programme isolated from the normal pattern of growth of rural economy to be achieved through community development.

The short-term credit required by a co-operative farming society would be made available either by the central bank direct or by the village service co-operative according to convenience and local facilities and resources available. The co-operative farming society would be able to take full advantage of the primary service co-operative in respect of supplies and marketing and thereby strengthen its activities.

A total subsidy not exceeding Rs. 1,200 could be given to a co-operative farming society over a period of three to five years towards its managerial expenses. A sum not exceeding Rs. 5,000 (25 per cent subsidy and 75 per cent loan) could be given to a co-operative farming society for the construction of a godown-cum-cattle shed. In giving such assistance, care would be taken to avoid duplication and overlapping between the construction of accommodation for the service co-operative and co-operative farming societies in the village.

If societies were unable to secure their requirements for medium and long-term loan from central co-operative banks or land mortgage banks, the Government would provide such loans on an average up to Rs. 4,000 per society for their development programmes.

To the maximum extent possible, additional requirements of co-operative farming societies would be met out of the provisions available in the agricultural sector of the Second Five-Year Plan.

V. Lahaul And Spiti Development Programme: It was announced in Chandigarh on September 30 that the Punjab Government had decided to launch an intensive development programme in the strategic Lahaul and Spiti Valleys on the Indo-Tibetan border.

Blueprints of the programme have been prepared for schemes designed to forge closer links between the border people and the rest of the country.

Lahaul and Spiti, which now constitute a single district (see page 3427) cover 4,595 square miles with a population of about 19,000. The Valley is snow-clad for eight months of the year and is accessible in Summer through passes situated at an altitude of 13,000 to 15,000 feet.

Punjab's Third Five-Year Plan for Lahaul and Spiti provides for an expenditure of Rs. 68,38,00,000 on communications. The allocation would be utilized to construct 100 miles of roads, including bridges and possibly an airstrip. This would be in addition to the construction of border roads under the control of the Central Government.

During the Second Plan period, a nine-mile jeepable road had been constructed from Manali to Rahla, and another stretch of 23 miles from Gramphoo to Keylong. While jeeps plied on the second road, work was in progress to bring the road to required specifications.

The project would open up the area during the first two years of the Third Plan, as communications would be established by then across the Rohtang and Kunzam passes. It would then be possible to accelerate the pace of general development.

The other schemes were:

Irrigation: An outlay of Rs. 27,00,000 was proposed for the development of irrigation facilities. Irrigation is provided in these areas through "kuhls". The cultivated area is only 6,000 acres. It is scattered and adequate provision for irrigation could be only made over a period of years.

Water Supply: During Winter when the area is covered with snow, pure drinking water is not available and snow water is injurious to health. A water supply scheme to benefit 117 villages, costing Rs. 21,73,00,000 was included in the Third Plan.

Health: It was proposed to spend Rs. 18,58,00,000 during the Third Plan on the opening and upgrading of dispensaries, the installation of an X-ray plant in the civil dispensary at Keylong and on other health schemes.

Electricity: It was proposed to install eight sets of 655 kw. with which 25 villages in the Lahaul Valley would be electrified. For the Spiti Valley, a survey was being undertaken. The entire project was estimated to cost Rs. 30,45,00,000.

Education: It was proposed to open 15 primary schools, to convert 12 primary schools into the basic type and to upgrade five primary schools to the middle standard. The high school at Keylong was proposed to be converted into a higher secondary type.

Stipends would be given to 600 students. Mid-day meals and books would be given to them free of charge. Free studentships would be provided for 100 boys at Manali. Buildings would be constructed for two middle schools and a high school at Keylong and for a hostel for 100 students. The financial outlay involved would be Rs. 29,49,00,000.

INDONESIA

A. Restrictions On Newspapers: A spokesman for the Djakarta Garrison Command, Captain Eddy Djadlang, said on October 1 that only newspapers supporting the Government's political philosophy would be allowed to be published.

He said that licences would be issued only to newspapers willing to follow a "guiding line" drawn up by the Djakarta War Administration.

The "guiding line," he said, would be adopted by President Sukarno's political manifesto, and his concepts of "guided democracy," "guided economy," "Indonesian socialism," "Indonesian identity" and the present revolutionary Constitution.

Meanwhile, it was announced that the Government had confiscated eight printing presses in Djakarta, Bandung, Semarang, Surabaya and Macassar, causing the closure of 11 daily papers.

An explanatory Note issued with the seizure order said that the presses had been used, or appeared likely to be used, for upsetting law and order. All the papers affected had moderate or Right-inclined editorial policies.

IRAN

A. Shah On Soviet-Iranian Relations: The Shah of Iran said at his monthly news conference in Tehran on September 24 that Iran would reciprocate "if our mighty northern neighbour, the Soviet Union, proffers friendship".

He added: "We will not fail to make all efforts to improve relations, but we will not take any steps against our sovereignty and against our international commitments and we will not buy friendship at any price."

He said that Iran's policy was based on friendship with all States which reciprocated her friendship.

On September 22, the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Nikolai Pegov, had his first audience with the Shah since his return to Iran, which he had left nine months earlier in protest against the conclusion of a bilateral Defence Agreement with USA.

IRAQ

A. Oil Talks Between Gen. A. K. Kassem And Iraq Petroleum Company: Details of the Conference held in August, 1960 between the Prime Minister, Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem and the Iraq Petroleum Company (IPC) and its associates, were broadcast by Baghdad Radio on September 29.

The major meeting, which lasted seven and a half hours on August 31, was attended by Gen. Kassem and Mr. G. H. Herridge, Managing Director of the Company and leader of the delegation representing IPC, the Basra Oil Company and the Mosul Oil Company and its associates.

The major topic in the negotiations, according to the broadcast, was the question of providing representation to the Iraqi Government in the companies by appointing an Iraqi executive director to their boards in London.

Other items included the establishment of a Joint Committee to supervise the expenses of using oil tankers which Iraq proposed to build, the cost of drilling productive and unproductive wells, sales rebates on oil, the relinquishing of unexploited areas and port dues on crude oil exports from Basra in southern Iraq.

The Radio said that at a preliminary meeting with Gen. Kassem in October, 1959, the oil companies had asked for sufficient time to consider Iraq's demands. It said that the companies' attitude towards Iraq was then obstinate. It added that a week later, "treacherous elements from greedy and imperialist agents" made an attempt on Gen. Kassem's life, and the talks were cut off, to be resumed on October 15, 1959. In several meetings thereafter, the Iraqi negotiators had found "great difficulties" in making the companies consider Iraq's rights.

Quoting Mr. Herridge, the Radio said that the "practical way" to seek a solution would be found between Mr. F. C. Ryland, IPC's chief representative and Dr. Talaat Sheibani, Iraq's Acting Minister for Petroleum Affairs.

It added that Mr. Herridge claimed that the companies had not been informed of the Government's decision on the appointment of an Iraqi director in London, and had not disagreed with the formation of a Joint Committee to supervise tanker expenses, on which they had promised to submit proposals.

It quoted Gen. Kassem as saying that the oil companies devoutly hoped that Iraq would die of hunger once oil production had stopped.

Referring to the increased shares some neighbouring countries got from oil, Gen. Kassem said that Iraq would demand an increased share of the profits in accordance with the terms of the 1952 Agreement.

Mr. Herridge had not agreed to Gen. Kassem's demand that the companies relinquish 10,000 square miles of concessionary territories and the proposed 90,000 square miles, provided the company had the right to select unexploited areas. Denying this right, Gen. Kassem said that the companies had all these years exploited only three or four per cent of its concessionary areas. Mr. Herridge replied that further discussion was impossible unless the right of selection was an acceptable principle.

In regard to increased Basra port dues on oil exports, Mr. Herridge expressed disapproval of this unilateral decision, but both he and Gen. Kassem agreed to discuss the issue later.

KOREA (South)

A. Purge Of Officials: The Government on September 23 issued a decree calling for the dismissal of several hundred senior police, central and provincial Government officials of the Rhee administration—the largest purge of officials in South Korean history.

An official estimated that at least 5,000 officials, out of a total of 230,000 public servants, were involved. The largest single group was among the national police.

The same day (September 23) the Pusan District Court sentenced one policemen to death, two to life imprisonment and three to prison terms ranging from three to 15 years. They were convicted of shooting at demonstrators in Pusan during the presidential elections, killing a student.

LAOS

A. Civil War And Cease-Fire: It was made known in Vientiane on September 16 that the Rightist forces led by Gen. Phoumi Nosavan and Prince Boun Oum Champassak had decided to oust the Government of Prince Souvanna Phouma by force as the reconstitution of the Cabinet (see page 3562) did not satisfy either the Rightist or the Leftist factions in Laos.

At this stage the struggle in the country involved three factions:

(1) The neutralist Government of Prince Souvanna Phouma who became Premier after a coup by the paratroop commander, Captain Kong Lae, on August 9 had ousted the pro-Western regime of Mr. Tiao Somsanith;

(2) The Rightist insurgents in the south, led by Gen. Nosavan and Prince Boun Oum Champassak, who were said to be supported by the bulk of the Army; and

(3) The pro-Communist Pathet Lao in the north, headed by the Premier's step-brother, Prince Souphanouvong.

Prince Souvanna Phouma's policy had been aimed at ending the long war against the Pathet Lao, restoring peace to Laos and establishing friendly relations with all nations—communist, neutralist and Western.

The pro-West Rightist insurgents based in Savannakhet had formed a Revolutionary Committee to take over the country and in the second week of September, King Savang Vathana appealed to the Committee to negotiate its differences with Prince Souvanna Phouma lest Laos be plunged into civil war. Prince Boun Oum Champassak agreed to the talks.

Representatives of the Cabinet at Vientiane and of the Rightist rival group at Savannakhet had separate talks with the King but they were inconclusive. The issue then became a military one and the Rightist forces marched toward Vientiane which was bombarded with mortars and heavy shells on September 18, but no casualties were reported.

Meanwhile, the authorities in Vientiane alleged Thailand's connivance in the Rightist insurrection. Prince Souvanna Phouma protested against the use of Thai territory which he called a "base for aggression and sabotage."

[The Thai Prime Minister, Field-Marshal Sarit Thanarat, had frequently expressed his alarm at the policies of the Vientiane Government, and the Thai-Laotian frontier had been closed after Capt. Kong Lae's coup on August 9.]

There were minor clashes for about a week, and on September 22 the Vientiane forces, led by Captain Kong Lae, registered a significant victory over the Rightist insurgents at Paksane, 80 miles from Vientiane.

On September 26, the Government served an ultimatum on Gen. Phoumi Nosavan and Prince Boun Oum Champassak to surrender before October 1.

While Government forces were engaged in fighting the Rightist insurgents, in the north Pathet Lao forces captured Sam Neua. Prince Souvanna Phouma put the responsibility for the fall of the provincial capital entirely on the Rightist leaders who, he said, had refused to allow Government troops to replace them.

In the midst of this fighting reconciliation efforts were pursued and after negotiations under the aegis of King Savang Vathana at Luang Prabang, Prince Souvanna Phouma announced on September 29 a general cease-fire throughout the country.

He said that Army leaders had proposed a "Government of National Union" to end the country's incipient civil war. The Government would, he said, include Prince Boun Oum Champassak and Prince Souphanouvong.

However, on September 30, Captain Kong Lae said that his forces were pressing on to take rebel strongholds in the south despite the cease-fire. At a news conference he criticized Prince Souvanna Phouma for being "too soft." "He should be respected, but if he leads the country the wrong way, the people should get rid of him."

He said that he had been asking Prince Souvanna Phouma for two months to seek aid from China, North Viet-Nam and Cambodia.

The same day (September 39) Prince Souvanna Phouma told newsmen that he did not agree with Captain Kong Lae in continuing the fighting. He said: "It is no good starting an offensive unless you know what forces you have behind you."

On October 1, Army Headquarters in Vientiane announced that the last troops in northern Laos loyal to Gen. Nosavan, had surrendered to the Government, handed over their arms and declared their loyalty to Prince Souvanna Phouma's Government.

MALAYA

A. Despatch Of Forces To Congo: A special session of Parliament held in Kuala Lumpur on September 30 supported the Government's action in despatching a special force to the Congo Republic.

Addressing the House, the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, supported the UN stand on the Congo and the action taken by the UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, in carrying out the Security Council's resolutions.

He said that Malaya would not have sent a force to the Congo if USSR, by the turn of events, were in command of the situation there.

He said that the Malayan contingent would not get involved in any outbreak of hostilities between the warring political parties. They were there to preserve life and property "without fear or favour."

He announced that Malayan troops were ready to fight in support of United Nations if Russia decided to send aid directly to the warring factions in the Congo.

He added: "The Congo is a 'cold war' which might eventually turn into something worse—a second Korea—due to Russian influence."

He described Mr. Khruschev's proposal to replace the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Hammarskjoeld, by a three-man Secretariat as a "mischievous idea aimed to turn countries against each other." He said that this "despicable move" should be ignored as it was intended to turn United Nations into a "disunited nations."

PAKISTAN

A. Mr. J. Nehru Visits West Pakistan: The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru, arrived in Karachi on September 19 on a visit to West Pakistan, to sign the Indo-Pakistan Canal Waters Treaty. Within an hour of his arrival, he laid a wreath on the grave of Mr. Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the founder of Pakistan.

Large crowds lined the road to the grave of Mr. Jinnah and cheered Mr. Nehru as he drove past.

Civic Reception:

The same day (September 19) the citizens of Karachi honoured Mr. Nehru at a civic reception.

An Address of welcome was presented to Mr. Nehru in a big silver casket, a replica of the Karachi Municipal Council building, by the Karachi Administrator, Mr. A. A. Hamid.

The Address, which was in Urdu, said: "Your presence in Karachi is a source of joy to the residents of Karachi, not only because you are the Prime Minister of a neighbouring country, but also because you are one of those renowned world personalities whose names have earned for themselves a very important place in world history.

"The whole world is aware of the gracious and unforgettable part played by you in the struggle for freedom in the sub-continent.

"We can rightfully hope that after the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty today, there will be a marked and pleasant change in the relations between the two neighbouring countries.

"The secret of the success of the efforts made by you and F-M Ayub Khan in bringing about this change of atmosphere is that anything which is done with sincerity of purpose and statesmanship and understanding is bound to lead to a successful conclusion."

The Address also expressed the hope that during their forthcoming talks the two leaders would try to solve all outstanding problems between the two countries and establish friendship and amity between them.

Replying to the Address, Mr. Nehru described his visit to Pakistan as a symbol of the new relationship between India and Pakistan. "There is not only a desire to forget the past but also to establish new relations on both sides of the frontier. Therefore, my coming here is a symbol of this basic factor."

He said: "No two countries, I believe, are closer to each other in many sectors of life than India and Pakistan." He added that it was his hope that the old and ancient relations between the people of the two countries would again become closer and friendly.

He was cheered by the gathering when he extended an invitation to F-M Ayub Khan to visit India.

Mr. Nehru, who spoke in Urdu, said: "The factors which bind India and Pakistan are many. I hope we come closer and closer every day. Momentary and temporary events cannot keep us apart."

He recalled the struggle for independence in the sub-continent in which the common people of the two countries had participated. He said he was reminded of this period as he stood to speak, because Karachi had been in the forefront of the struggle.

He said: "There was no need for me to have come to Karachi at all, nor was it necessary for the President to be here to sign the Treaty. Representatives of our two countries could have signed it. But the President of Pakistan took the trouble of inviting me to come here.

"I accepted the invitation with great pleasure because there was a desire in my heart to come here with a message of goodwill and friendship from my Government and the people of India."

Referring to the world situation, he said that in spite of every effort, it had not been possible to solve the problems facing the world today and establish permanent peace. Peace seemed to rest on the edge of a sword.

The main difficulty, he said, was that even if some people worked hard and with sincerity, their minds were closed, they did not trust others and even suspected other persons' bona fides. That was, in other words, a 'cold war'. Such a state of mind, he said, brought disaster to the world. The question was how to remove this barrier and establish mutual faith and trust. The solution called for patient effort.

Another dangerous feature of the international situation, he said, was the armaments race that was going on in the world. The whole world was conscious that if war broke out, there would be no question of any country escaping, or any human being surviving; it would mean total destruction, in fact, the end of the world. Every country was, therefore, interested in removing this danger. The problem defied solution, but it had to be be solved.

He added: "It should be our endeavour to curb and control this drift towards war. Ultimately we come to the question: How can we stop this trend? It is only by keeping an open mind and open heart that we can remove suspicion and distrust.

"First of all, we have to face each difficulty and understand our problems. If the question itself is not understood properly, it will not be easy for us to find a proper answer."

He referred to the efforts of various countries in the world to help rid Asia of poverty and help the people in this region to get the necessaries of life. He said that prosperous people in other parts of the world had realized that unless they did this, complications would arise.

Referring to Africa, he said that that continent had remained a silent world for a long time. No one had heard the voice of the African people, who had been dominated by others and who had undergone suffering. Now, however, a new movement was growing in that continent, and it had taken a form which shook not only Africa but the entire world. There was tremendous power in the world which could be used for progress and advancement of all backward peoples. New scientific advances in the world could be used for the progress and prosperity of all peoples and for providing them opportunities.

Later in the evening (September 19), Mr. Nehru and over a thousand guests attended a reception on the lawns of President's House to celebrate the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty.

At night, F-M Ayub Khan gave a banquet in honour of the Mr. Nehru, who was accorded the honour due to a Head of State during his visit to Pakistan.

Before leaving Karachi for Murree on September 20, Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan had their first round of talks, which lasted 90 minutes.

The talks were understood to have started with F-M Ayub Khan reciprocating Mr.

Nehru's statement at the civic reception the previous evening (September 19) that a new era of friendship between India and Pakistan had begun with the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty.

Financial issues were understood to have figured prominently in the talks between the two leaders.

The Finance Minister, Mr. M. Shoaib, was understood to have explained Pakistan's point of view and answered a number of questions put by Mr. Nehru relating to the outstanding financial matters between the two countries.

Later, Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, told Pakistani newsmen that the talks were held "in a very friendly and most cordial atmosphere" and were full of a spirit of understanding.

Besides financial, economic and commercial matters, it was understood that the two leaders had also made a reference to the issues connected with evacuee property, train travel and visas.

Soon after the talks, Mr. Nehru visited the Indian Chancery where he was received by the Acting High Commissioner, Mr. K. V. Padmanabhan, and other High Commission officers.

He went round the newly-built High Commission office building and showed keen interest in the library, about which he asked several questions.

Addressing the High Commission staff, their families and Indian nationals living in Karachi, Mr. Nehru referred to the bonds between India and Pakistan and said that no two countries in the world were so closely related to each other as India and Pakistan.

India's policy, he emphasized, was that relations with Pakistan should grow stronger and stronger. It was true that some events in the past had embittered the feelings of the people in both countries, but that was a thing of the past and had best be forgotten.

Referring to the big strides India was taking in every field to banish poverty, illiteracy and disease from the country, Mr. Nehru said that one had to try to succeed. "If we fall down we get up and try to walk again and that is the only way to succeed."

The talks between Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan were continued in Murree on September 21.

Despatches from Murree said that the talks between Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan covered most of the points in dispute between India and Pakistan. Among the principal subjects discussed on September 21 was Kashmir.

The two leaders left for Rawalpindi on September 22 to visit Islamabad, the site of the new capital, eight miles from Rawalpindi.

Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan also visited the site of the Rawal dam which will supply water to the new capital. Mr. Nehru was then presented with an album of pictures of various views of the new capital site. He was the first to sign the distinguished visitors' book specially opened to mark the occasion.

In Lahore:

The two leaders arrived in Lahore at 3-45 p.m. the same day (September 22).

Hundreds of people, cheered Mr. Nehru as he stepped down from the Pakistan President's Viscount.

Mr. Nehru was received by West Pakistan's Governor, Malik Amir Mohammed Khan and Lt-Gen. Bakhtiar Rana, Martial Law Administrator of "B" Zone.

He then took a general salute from an inter-Services guard of honour as a military band played the national anthems of India and Pakistan.

Later in the day, (September 22) he drove to the Shalimar Gardens of Lahore to attend a public reception organized by the citizens of Lahore.

The Chairman of the Lahore Municipal Committee, Mr. M. Masood, presented an Address of welcome to Mr. Nehru in an artistic golden replica of the Shalimar Gardens.

Replying to the Address, Mr. Nehru expressed the hope that even though their forms of government differed, India and Pakistan would cast their weight in the cause of world peace and also come together and make progress in friendship and understanding. He said that they had solved some of the differences between Pakistan and India and they should continue their efforts to solve the others.

He called upon the people of the two countries to develop relations in which both countries could live in harmony and love. He said that many difficulties had interfered with friendly relations between the two peoples. He then quoted the English saying "To fall out with the one we love works madness on the brain" to the continuous cheers of over 2,000 people who had fringed the lakes and gardens below.

He said he had often wondered why India and Pakistan should not become friendly again, as their people had lived together in the ages past, and demonstrate to the world their new unity. India and Pakistan, he said, had one history, one culture and the same traditions.

He added that for 200 years, the people of the sub-continent had lived in slavery. Then they fought for freedom together and ultimately won it. The sub-continent was divided into two countries and "we all willingly agreed to this Partition." But so many differences had followed Partition and disrupted the good relations that existed between the two peoples.

He said: "Now both the peoples have realized that we should once again come closer and work together. Our people realize that these temporary difficulties cannot disrupt age-old relations that existed between us."

He warned the people of the troubled situation in the world and said that it was necessary for the two countries to forget differences and join hands "to make their weight felt on the side of peace."

The world was changing rapidly and tremendous scientific developments had created enormous powers that could be used for the good of humanity or for the total destruction of it.

He said that the main problem facing Pakistan and India as newly developing countries was to utilize to the maximum all resources which the world had made available for "overcoming the curse of poverty and lifting their peoples out of the slough into which they had fallen. Only thus may we share the benefits of the new world." It was in this context that it was essential that the two neighbouring countries should help each other and strengthen their friendship.

He added that he had come to Pakistan with a message of love from the people of India. During his four-day stay in Pakistan he had also seen signs of love in the eyes and faces of the people of Pakistan. Ultimately, he said, the two countries had to go along the same path. Their progress was inter-linked and it was obvious that relations built over hundreds of years of contact could not be destroyed easily in spite of some bitterness.

News Conference:

Mr. Nehru told a news conference in Lahore on September 23 that his talks with F-M Ayub Khan on the Kashmir issue had not yielded any "precise results." There were still differences on aims and approaches.

He disclosed that F-M Ayub Khan had accepted his invitation to visit India. He hoped that the visit would further strengthen the spirit of friendliness and co-operation between India and Pakistan noticeable during the past two years, and said that the discussions on common problems, which he had had with F-M Ayub Khan might be continued with him in India.

He said that the question of Indo-Pakistan joint defence was not discussed. The basic joint defence for India and Pakistan, he said, was friendliness between the two neighbours. India was opposed to any idea of joint defence or military alliance, because India's definite policy was to be friendly with all countries. This policy of friendliness to all and opposition to military alliances was "the only feasible thing in the circumstances of the world today."

He emphasized the need for removing mutual suspicions and said: "It will be a great tragedy, if Indians and Pakistanis were to live for ever suspicious of each other."

Answering a question on Asian problems, he suggested that there should be regional co-operation in economic development and the development of trade and travel facilities. Though the whole of Asia could not be treated as one region, there might be something like regional common markets for groups of Asian countries like the European Common Market. Later, he explained that the common market idea should be kept as a goal.

His replies to questions on Kashmir made it clear that the talks on the subject were in the nature of an informal exchange of thoughts.

The Kashmir issue being the main cause of discord between India and Pakistan, he explained that both he and F-M Ayub Khan were anxious to settle it.

Joint Communique:

A joint communique was issued by Mr. Nehru and F-M Ayub Khan on September 23.

The following is the text of the communique:

"The Prime Minister of India, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, arrived in Karachi on the morning of September 19 on a five-day visit to Pakistan at the invitation of Field-Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan. The Prime Minister was accompanied by Hafiz Mohammed Ibrahim, Minister for Irrigation and Power, Mr. Jaisukhlal Hathi, Deputy Minister for Irrigation and Power, and officials of the Government of India.

"In the afternoon, the Canal Waters Treaty, 1960, was signed by the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan on behalf of their respective countries and by Mr. W. A. B. Iliff on behalf of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

"The Prime Minister and the President left Karachi on September 20 for Murree, visited Nathiagali on the September 21 and left for Lahore via Rawalpindi on September 22. The Prime Minister visited the site of the new Capital, Islamabad, on his way to Rawalpindi and left for New Delhi on September 23.

"The two leaders, during these five days, discussed matters affecting Indo-Pakistan relations and exchanged informally views on current international questions.

"The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India were convinced that the primary need of the two countries was the rapid development of their resources and the raising of the living standards of their people.

"The two leaders acknowledged that the settlement of the Indus basin waters question and the elimination of their border disputes presented to their two Governments an unparalleled opportunity to direct their policies towards the promotion of mutual understanding and friendly co-operation between their two countries.

"They agreed that their Governments and people should work for the promotion of friendly and co-operative relations between their two countries and eliminate old emotional strains and tensions.

"They recognized that reduction in tensions and development of friendly neighbourly co-operative relations will enable each of their countries to devote its energies to the achievement of their basic objectives of economic and social development.

"In furtherance of these common objectives, the Prime Minister and the President have also agreed to the following:

"(a) A meeting between the Ministers of Finance of the two countries to consider further and resolve the differences on financial matters between the two countries;

"(b) A Minister-level Conference between India and Pakistan to review the implementation of the border agreements and to resolve the outstanding differences on border matters;

"(c) An early meeting of the high level Implementation Committee set up under the Moveable Properties Agreement;

"(d) Promotion of co-operation between the two countries on scientific and technical matters and exchange of information on agricultural research;

"(e) Evolving of procedures for exchange of information with regard to the projects for utilization of water resources of the common rivers in India and East Pakistan; and

"(f) Exploring the possibilities of increasing trade and economic exchange between the two countries and examining the need for opening new offices to further this objective.

"It was suggested that Pakistan, inter alia, should buy cement, iron and steel from India and should sell to India, jute, cotton, rock salt, Sui gas, etc.

"There was a frank and friendly exchange of views between the Prime Minister and the President in regard to Kashmir. The talks were conducted in an atmosphere of cordiality. They came to the conclusion that it was a difficult question which required careful consideration of all aspects. The President and Prime Minister agreed to give further thought to this question with a view to finding a solution.

"The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India welcomed this opportunity of renewing their personal contact and of having friendly and fruitful discussions. They have agreed to keep in touch with each other in furtherance of their common objectives.

"The Prime Minister of India has invited the President of Pakistan to visit India. The President of Pakistan has accepted the invitation."

F-M Ayub Khan's Comment:

Speaking to newsmen in Lahore airport on September 23 after he had given a warm send-off to Mr. Nehru, F-M Ayub Khan said: "We have made a good start".

He explained that during the talks, except for Kashmir, they had been able to indicate the next step. The Kashmir problem, he said, was of great importance. It was Kashmir which was keeping the two countries apart. If the problem was not resolved, there was a danger of the good done in other respects being "nullified".

He claimed that his concern with the Kashmir question was more recent and, therefore, he could take a more detached view. However, the basic fact was that the two countries had to learn to live together more normally, because even the Kashmir question had to be solved ultimately.

B. National Prize Bond Scheme Inaugurated: The Acting Finance Minister, Lt.-General K. M. Shaikh inaugurated the National Prize Bond Scheme on October 1 by purchasing the first bond at the counter of the State Bank of Pakistan at Rawalpindi.

He appealed to the people to participate in the Scheme by subscribing handsomely to the prize bonds which, he said, provided a safe outlet for the savings of small investors.

He said: "Small savings are the life blood of the development process and to this vital stream all of us should contribute. Small savings schemes are particularly welcome because they enable people of modest means to participate in the country's growth and prosperity."

He pointed out that the country was on the threshold of a large development effort embodied in the Second Five-Year Plan. The Plan called for a substantial rise in development expenditure and a large part of the resources required to implement the Plan would obviously have to be found at home.

He added that now the climate of investment had improved, a greater flow of savings could come forward.

The bonds were sold to the public by about 25 banks and their branches all over the Province. They were offered in only Rs. 10 denominations. The draws on this series of bonds would take place on July 1, 1961 when a total of Rs. 50,000 would be distributed in 136 prizes.

TURKEY

A. Democratic Party Liquidated: The Democratic Party, which had ruled Turkey for 10 years until it was deposed by the military coup d'etat in May, 1960 was finally liquidated on September 29 by the decision of an Ankara court.

A statement by the former Premier, Mr. A. Menderes was read in court. It said: "I agree that in the present circumstances, the Party should be closed down and I would like this to happen".

The case for liquidation of the Democratic Party, which was brought by a member of the Party, was decided on a technicality of the law which prescribes that all political parties must hold an annual Convention, which the Democratic Party had not done for five years. The entire property of the Party will be turned over to the State.

The Democratic Party was founded in 1945, when four men—Mr. Celal Bayar, Mr. Adnan Menderes, Mr. Refik Koraltan and Mr. Fuad Koprulu—broke away from the ruling Republican People's Party to form a political Opposition. It was not the first opposition Party in Turkey because it had been twice tried unsuccessfully under Kemal Ataturk.

The Party was launched with high ideals and an excellent programme and was elected to power in 1950. This was the first change of power in Turkey by free elections. In its first five years, the Party governed reasonably well, but after 1955 it became gradually more dictatorial and corrupt and followed unpopular economic policies.

SPORT

A. World Amateur Team Golf Championship Won By USA: The United States clinched her anticipated victory in the second World Amateur Team Golf Championship for the Eisenhower Trophy, by a vast margin of 42 strokes in Ardmore (Pennsylvania) on October 1.

USA, who led easily throughout, finished the four-day event over the tricky 6,694-yard east course of the Merion Club with a 72-holes aggregate of 834 strokes.

Australia, winners of the inaugural event in 1958 at St. Andrews (Scotland) after play-off with the United States, were second with 876 strokes, and the United Kingdom and Ireland, repeating their 1958 position, were third, five strokes further away.

British Commonwealth members provided six of the top eight placings, with South Africa fourth with 893; New Zealand fifth with 895; and Canada sixth with 906. Mexico was seventh with 909 and Rhodesia and Nyasaland eighth with 914.

Final team positions with the fourth round individual scores were:

834—United States, (Jack Nicklaus 68, Deane Beman 75 and Hyndman 75).

876—Australia, (Eric Routley 72, Bruce Devlin 74 and Edward Ball 76).

881—Britain and Ireland (Doug Sewell 74, Guy Wolstenholme 75 and Michael Bonallack 78).

893—South Africa, (Johannes le Roux 74, Arthur Walker 76 and Reginald Taylor 84).

895—New Zealand; 906—Canada; 909—Mexico; 914—Rhodesia and Nyasaland; 917—Argentina; 923—Sweden; 935—Italy; 937—France; 940—West Germany; 942—Philippines; 952—Denmark; 954—Japan; 960—Belgium; 962—Venezuela; 972—Brazil; 975—India; 977—Switzerland and Taiwan; 979—Norway; 999—Peru; 1,001—Bermuda; 1,005—Australia; 1,009—Netherlands; 1,023—Finland; 1,035—Portugal; 1,045—United Arab Republic; 1,089—Malaya and 1,104—Ceylon.

ASIAN RECORDER

October 29—November 4, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 44

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: 15th Session Of UN General Assembly Begins—Election Of New President—Admission Of African Countries To UN—Addresses By President D. D. Eisenhower, Mr. N. Khruschev, Mr. J. Nehru And Other Leaders—Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld Answers Soviet Criticism Of His Role In Congo —Statements And Contacts Of Leaders Outside UN.

A. UN General Assembly Session: The 15th session of the United Nations General Assembly began in New York on September 20. Several Heads of Government, including Mr. J. Nehru of India, Mr. Nikita Khruschev of USSR, President Josip Broz Tito of Yugoslavia, President Sukarno of Indonesia and President G. A. Nasser of the United Arab Republic, attended the session.

Dr. V. A. Belaunde's Farewell Speech:

The outgoing President of the Assembly, Dr. Victor A. Belaunde (Peru) in his farewell speech said that the preceding year had been "one of trial for our Organization."

Referring to earlier developments in the Assembly, he noted in particular the unanimous vote on disarmament. He said that the same unanimity obtained on the re-constitution of the Outer Space Committee.

World interest, he said, had been geared to solution of the nuclear disarmament question and to the control of the international use of outer space.

He praised the Security Council's role in the Congo and the work of the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld. He said that the use of the UN forces prompted him to hope that this might become a standing institution of the world Organization.

He noted the "solidarity of the African countries who had been interested in saving the Congo from chaos."

Mankind, he said, must applaud Mr. Hammarskjoeld and the Security Council for making use of African forces and impartial countries of Europe in safeguarding order in the Congo.

Referring to the recent emergency session of the General Assembly on the Congo, he said that member-States had strengthened resolutions of the Security Council and given approval to the important work which had been so efficiently carried out by Mr. Hammarskjoeld. They could now state that the Congo problem was heading to a just solution, under the authority of the highest international body in the world.

Expressing pleasure that 12 new nations were to become members this year, he said that universality of the Organization had been almost achieved.

Referring to the presence in the Assembly of not only many Foreign Ministers, but Prime Ministers and even Heads of State, he said: "This unique chance makes manifest again how conscious we are at the threshold of crucial events in the history of mankind."

He said that peace now was a vital imperative and solution of the nuclear problem could not be left to the balance of the Great Powers. Nuclear disarmament and the control of outer space were problems which touched all mankind directly and were part of the "irrefutable competence of our Organization."

He added that the Assembly must concentrate all its efforts on disarmament and urged the Great Powers to "accept arbitration from the Assembly."

Mr. Frederick Boland Elected New President:

Mr. Frederick Boland (Ireland) was elected the new President by a majority of 46 votes, five more than the necessary minimum.

In his inaugural address, Mr. Boland expressed regret that his election had not received the support of all members of the Assembly and said that it would be his constant and sincere endeavour to discharge his duties so as to merit and receive the trust and confidence of the Assembly, as a whole.

He said that he took his election as being above all a compliment to the country and people he represented. Ireland was a relatively recent member of the world family of sovereign nations, but, he said, it was an ancient nation.

Election Of Vice-Presidents And Chairmen Of Standing Committees:

The General Assembly on September 21 elected its officers.

Delegates from Japan, Libya, the Sudan, Pakistan, Bulgaria, Venezuela, Panama and Canada were elected Vice-Presidents, along with the five nations who automatically obtain Vice-Presidential seats: the Soviet Union, USA, Britain, France and Kuomintang China.

The Chairmen of the seven Standing Committees elected were:

Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon)—President of the Political and Security Committee;

Mr. Auguste Carlet (Haiti)—Chairman of the Special ad hoc Political Committee;

Mr. Anos Stanovnik (Yugoslavia)—Chairman of the Economic and Financial Committee;

Mr. Edward Mezinescu (Rumania)—Chairman of the Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee;

Mr. Adnan Pachachi (Iran)—Chairman of the Trusteeship Committee;

Mr. Mario Maioli (Italy)—Chairman of the Administrative and Budgetary Committee; and Mr. Ortis Martin (Costa Rica)—Chairman of the Legal Committee.

Newly-Independent Countries Admitted:

At the opening session, 12 newly-independent countries of Africa and Cyprus were admitted as members.

The African countries were—Republic of Cameroon, Togolese Republic, Malagasy Republic, Republic of Somalia, Republic of Congo (Leopoldville), Republic of Dahomey, Republic of Niger, Republic of Upper Volta, Republic of the Ivory Coast, Republic of Chad, Gabon Republic and the Central African Republic.

Welcoming the new members, the French Foreign Minister, M. Maurice Couve de Murville said that their admission was a source of joy and pride to France as it represented the consummation of endeavour which in some cases was more than a century old.

He added that France claimed her place in the historic development which had led to the naming of the 1960's as "the decade of Africa."

The Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, made Russia's first intervention in the General Assembly by expressing "profound gratification" at "this new filling out of our ranks" which he described as "a great event indeed."

He said that in Africa there had been for decades the image of a very wealthy continent "groaning under the yoke of foreign domination, its territory having been divided by foreign invaders." Now the "system of colonial domination" was collapsing like a house of cards.

The new British Foreign Secretary, Earl Home, welcomed Cyprus to the Assembly and said he was happy that his "first words to the General Assembly should add to the unity of our proceedings."

Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon) said that "the liberation movement in Africa is perhaps the greatest single phenomenon of this century and we hope we will soon have here other States who are not yet free."

The US Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter said that the new States represented a dramatic example of countries achieving freedom and by entering UN they were taking on the task of maintaining and expanding the cause of peace. United Nations was in a unique position to help new States, and the United States would continue to co-operate with UN's efforts.

The Israeli Foreign Minister, Mrs. Golda Meir, speaking on the admission of the new member-States, said that it was "probably one of the greatest days in the history of the human race."

President Antonin Novotny of Czechoslovakia said that the advance of the African peoples to freedom had "shown that the colonial Powers cannot for ever keep nations under their yoke."

The Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Mr. Koca Popovic, said that the new States had received powerful assistance from the UN Charter and Yugoslavia welcomed them to UN.

The Liberian, Ethiopian, Pakistani, United Arab Republic, Guinea and Sudanese delegates also expressed satisfaction at the admission of the new States to UN.

Mr. Paul Gouras, (Greece) gave a special welcome to Cyprus, wishing it a "happy independent life" and declared his conviction that Cyprus would be a constructive member.

The Turkish Foreign Minister, Mr. Selim Sarper said that there were many Turks in Cyprus and Turkey who shared Greece's pride in the Island's attainment of political maturity.

On September 28 the General Assembly raised its membership to 98 by admitting the two new Republics of Mali and Senegal.

Without discussion, the Assembly accepted amid acclamation the two applications for membership, which earlier in the day (September 28) had been unanimously endorsed by the Security Council.

Mr. V. K. K. Menon's Speech:

Congratulating Mali and Senegal on their admission to UN on September 28, the Indian delegate, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, made a reference to Algeria's demand for freedom.

Speaking on behalf of India and Pakistan, he said that the great French Empire which once had an area of 4,500,000 sq. miles had now only three-quarters of a million sq. miles left. He declared: "It is our hope that with victory and freedom in Algeria, a greater part of that area also would come within the ambit of freedom."

He referred to South Africa and the Portuguese colonies in Africa and said that what was "truly dark Africa" remained in South-West Africa, administered by South Africa under a League of Nations mandate. South Africa, he said, was an independent country with a large number of its people not yet independent.

Turning to "Portugal in Africa" he said he referred to Angola as "Portugal" (in keeping with Portugal's claim that this region was an overseas province of the metropolitan country) and added: "We have no doubt that the impact of public opinion and the vigour and determination of the African peoples backed by enlightened public opinion and the conscience of humanity will see the dismemberment of the Portuguese empire and the liberation of African peoples and others subject to Portuguese colonialism."

He referred to the settlement of the dispute over the Federation by Mali and Senegal in a peaceful way and observed: "If countries and nations, particularly colonial countries are allowed to settle their own affairs, probably they are likely to be settled."

He remarked that a modern version of the old doctrine of 'divide and rule' was 'divide and leave'. He said that the Mali and Senegal settlement had "saved" UN from another crisis.

In a reference to the "gloomy" world situation, he said that so far the gathering of the world's statesmen had not reduced tensions. But the example of an agreement between Mali and Senegal was a silver lining in the clouds and he hoped that their example would help disperse the clouds.

President D. D. Eisenhower's Speech:

The US President, Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's speech to the General Assembly on September 22 marked the opening of the general debate.

He urged United Nations to open an offensive against poverty, illiteracy and disease in Africa and called on the major world Powers to avoid an arms race there.

He put forward a five-point programme for Africa and also made specific recommendations calling for controlled disarmament, international control on outer space, food-for-peace and the transfer of fissionable materials from military to peaceful purposes.

He gave unconditional support to the UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, in his dispute with the Soviet Union over the Congo policy and criticized the "few nations who wish to prolong strife in the Congo for their own selfish purposes". He said that the attacks on Mr. Hammarskjoeld were nothing less than a direct attack on UN itself.

He urged nations not to send arms to the Congo or incite the Congolese leaders and people to violence against each other.

His proposals on Africa were: (1) Non-interference in the internal affairs of the African States; (2) Help in assuring their security without wasteful and dangerous competition in armaments; (3) Emergency aid to the Congo, with USA contributing substantially to the proposed $100,000,000 UN Emergency Fund; (4) International assistance in shaping long-term development programmes; and (5) UN aid to education.

He said that he had avoided mention of several immediate problems troubling USA and other nations, but his failure to do so did not mean that they were not of great concern.

He added: "For example, accumulating evidence of threatening encroachments on the freedom of the people of West Berlin continue to disturb us deeply."

He also spoke of the Soviet Union's "shocking affront" to peaceful passage on and over the high seas by her shooting down an American RB-47 reconnaissance bomber near the Russian coast in July, 1960.

On the issue of outer space, he proposed that all launchings of space-craft should be verified in advance by UN and that, subject to appropriate verification, no nation would put weapons of mass destruction into orbit or station them in outer space.

He also proposed that the nations should agree that celestial bodies were not subject to national appropriation by claims of sovereignty and that they should not engage in warlike activities on those bodies.

He called on the Soviet Union to re-open disarmament negotiations and said that, if negotiations were resumed, it might be possible to deal particularly with the "pressing dangers" of war by miscalculation and mounting nuclear stocks.

He said: "I solemnly declare, on behalf of USA, that we are prepared to submit to any international inspection, provided only that it is effective and truly reciprocal."

To stop the prospective spread of nuclear weapons stock-piles, he proposed that nations producing these weapons "immediately convene experts to design a system for terminating, under verification procedures, all production of fissionable materials" for military purposes.

He added: "USA is prepared, in the event of termination of production, to join USSR in transferring substantial quantities of fissionable materials to international stock-piles ...USA would be willing to match USSR in shutting down major plants producing fissionable materials one by one under international inspection and verification."

Referring to Africa, he said that the changes occurring there were also evident elsewhere and UN must intensify programmes for economic and social development in freedom of other areas, particularly Latin America, Asia and the Middle East.

He said: "We must never forget that there are hundreds of millions of people, particularly in the less developed parts of the world, suffering from hunger and malnutrition, even though a number of countries, my own included, are producing food in surplus. This paradox should not continue."

He added: "Nowhere is the challenge to the international community and to peace and orderly progress more evident than in Africa, rich in human and natural resources and bright with promise. Recent events there have brought into being what is, in effect, a vast continent of newly independent nations.

"In response to the call of the Republic of the Congo, UN, under its outstanding Secretary-General, has recently mounted a large-scale effort to provide that new Republic with help. That effort has been flagrantly attacked by a few nations who wish to prolong strife in the Congo for their own selfish purposes. The criticism directed by these nations against the Secretary-General, who has honourably and effectively fulfilled the mandate which he received from UN, is nothing less than a direct attack upon UN itself. He has earned the support of every peace-loving nation.

"The people of the Congo are entitled to build up their country in peace and freedom. Intervention by other nations in their internal affairs would deny them that right and create a focus of conflict in the heart of Africa.

"The issue thus posed in the Congo could well arise elsewhere in Africa. The resolution of this issue will determine whether UN is able to protect not only the new nations of Africa, but also other countries against outside pressures. It is the smaller nations that have the greatest stake in the effective functioning of UN.

"UN should be prepared to help the African countries maintain their security without wasteful and dangerous competition in armaments.

"The outstanding speed and success of UN in dispatching substantial forces to the Congo should give these States assurance that they can rely on UN to organize an effective response if their security is threatened. This should reduce any pressures on them to raise larger forces than are required to maintain internal security. Thus, they would help to free their resources for more constructive purposes.

"UN should help newly developing African countries to shape their long-term modernization programmes to this end. The UN Special Fund and expanded technical assistance programmes should be increased so that in combination they can reach their annual $100 million goal in 1961. The Special Fund's functions should be expanded so that it can assist countries in planning economic development.

"The UN operational and executive personnel programme (OPEX) for making available trained administrators to newly developing countries should be expanded and placed on a permanent basis. USA is prepared to join other countries in contributing increased funds for this programme for the Special Fund and for the UN technical assistance programme.

"As the final element of this programme, I propose an all-out UN effort to help African countries launch such educational activities as they may wish to undertake."

In calling on the Soviet Union to resume disarmament negotiations, broken off by the communist nations at the East-West Conference at Geneva earlier in 1960, he said: "Some who have followed closely the many fruitless disarmament talks since the war tend to become cynical—to assume that the task is hopeless. This is not the position of the United States.

"Men everywhere want to disarm. They want their wealth and labour to be spent not for war, but for food, clothing, shelter, medicines and schools.

"Time and again, the American people have voiced this yearning—to join with men of goodwill everywhere in building a better world. We always stand ready to consider any feasible proposal to this end."

He added: "The international control of atomic energy and general and complete disarmament can no more be accomplished by rhetoric than can the economic development of newly independent countries. Both of these immense tasks facing mankind call for serious, painstaking, costly, laborious and non-propaganda approaches."

He said that there was no doubt about the immensity of the task but, he added: "We should not have to wait until we have agreed on all the detailed measures to reach this goal before we begin to move towards disarmament.

"Specific and promising steps to this end were suggested in our June 27 proposals. If negotiations can be resumed, it may be possible to deal particularly with two pressing dangers, that of war by miscalculation and that of mounting nuclear weapons stock-piles."

He said that nations should be able swiftly to "assure each other that they are not preparing aggressive moves, particularly in international crises."

He added: "USA wants the Soviet Union and all the nations of the world to know enough about US defence preparations to be assured that US forces exist only for deterrence and defence, not for surprise attacks."

He had three major suggestions to strengthen UN:

(1) Members should take "positive action" on Mr. Hammarskjoeld's proposals for the creation of a special group of advisers to assist him in meeting future needs for UN forces;

(2) All members should earmark national contingents which could take part in UN forces in case of need;

(3) USA would earmark substantial air and sea transport facilities, on a stand-by basis, to be used to rush UN forces to trouble spots in any emergency.

He said he hoped that the Soviet Union likewise would assure USA and other nations of the non-aggressive nature of her security precautions.

President Josip Broz Tito (Yugoslavia):

President J. B. Tito of Yugoslavia addressed the Assembly on September 22.

On disarmament, he said that the world faced a "seemingly insoluble contradiction." On the one hand, war was becoming even more absurd owing to the "appalling destructive capabilities of contemporary weapons." On the other, the piling up of ever more destructive weapons itself led to war.

He added: "We insist that disarmament talks should be renewed as soon as possible within an adequate frame-work. If no agreement on general disarmament can be reached at the present moment, we should be ready to engage in a partial agreement. Once the idea of a partial agreement is accepted, we must be ready to face the fact that such an agreement will fall short of perfection. The risks involved are obviously incomparably smaller than those contained in the present, completely uncontrolled armaments race.

"It is evident that co-existence in the atmosphere of the arms race can in no way provide a basis for a lasting and stable peace. On the contrary, peace can be ensured and strengthened only through the development of broad co-operation on all questions of general interest and through a resolute struggle for disarmament and for the abolition of unequal relations."

Mr. Nikita Khruschev (USSR):

The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, addressed the Assembly on September 23.

He made a plea for freeing "at once" all colonies, mandated territories and other non-autonomous territories.

He made friendly references to India more than once and referred to Goa as among the colonies where "the shameful colonial regime should be buried."

The time had come, he said, for the "liberation and revival of nations, peoples and tribes which were recently oppressed and down-trodden. The member-States of UN cannot remain indifferent when over 100 million people still languish in colonial subjugation in the ancient lands of Africa and Asia, on the islands of Oceania, on the islands of the Caribbean and in other places.

"However, selfish interests of the imperialist circles in the West stand in their way and hinder the realization of the just aspirations of these people."

He asked: "Did the massacre of tens and hundreds of thousands of people of Indo-China save colonial rule there?

"Could the crimes committed now against the peoples of Africa stop the irresistible process of the liberation of African nations?

"Can one turn a deaf ear to the moaning of the people of Kenya, where colonial authorities continue to exterminate a local population driven into reservations, prisons and concentration camps, and to the sufferings of the peoples of Oman against whom aggressive war is being waged?

"Who can remain calm seeing the unending carnage of the populations of Nyasaland, Angola, Mozambique, Rhodesia, Ruanda-Urundi, South-West Africa, Tanganyika and Uganda? Such a situation is intolerable in our time."

He alluded to the Algerian conflict and said that Algerian Nationalists had for nearly six years been fighting "with selfless courage for the freedom and independence of their Motherland". Many of France's sons were "dying for the unjust cause".

He asked what civilization had been brought as a result of five centuries of the "tyrannical, colonial rule to the African countries of Angola, Mozambique, and Portuguese Guinea." They had brought misery and lawlessness, forceful deprivation of lands and expulsion of farmers into barren regions.

He said: "Arbitrary rule, famine, ignorance and disease rage there. Slavery and forced labour are actually in existence there. There is not a single establishment of higher education, while secondary education is almost totally lacking.

"Why should Portugal exercise such lawless things and colonies in our time. On what grounds?"

He also attacked the UN trusteeship system and said that it had "outlived itself." No exact dates had been fixed for granting independence to trusteeship territories, including the largest of them—Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi and New Guinea.

He added: "The trusteeship system has not justified itself anywhere and should be buried together with the entire colonial system which is an anachronism."

Referring to UN, he said that UN was one-sided, approaching solutions to problems "from the standpoint of a certain group of countries."

He declared that the Western Powers had exploited the post of Secretary-General in their own interests by nominating a person who was acceptable to them, while the personnel of the Organization was also "one-sided."

He added that the Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, had shown partiality in the implementation of measures to cope with the Congo crisis, and had sided "with the colonialists and with the countries that support the colonialists."

It would be "reasonable and just", he said, for the executive body of UN not to be constituted as one person, the Secretary-General, but as three representatives, one each from States belonging to the Western alliance, the Communist alliance, and the neutral countries.

He also spoke of the "inconveniences caused by the location of UN in the United States", and said that the question arose whether thought should be given to the choice of another locale which would "better facilitate the effective work of this international Organization".

Switzerland or Austria, for example, he said, might well be such a place and if it should be considered "expedient to house the United Nations headquarters in the Soviet Union, we guarantee the best possible conditions for its work."

He added: "You all know that in the past the Soviet Government supported the proposal that USA be chosen as the locale of UN. However, latest developments show that USA is evidently irked and burdened by this. Perhaps the release of USA from such a burden should be contemplated.

"Facts are known, for instance, of the representatives of new African and Asian States being subjected to racial discrimination in USA and, moreover, to attacks by gangsters."

Referring to President Eisenhower's speech the previous day, he said that it was strange that Mr. Eisenhower had not said a single word about the U-2 spy-plane incident.

He added: "The allies of the United States sometimes rebuke us for criticizing the American Government too severely. To fight for peace means courageously to expose any actions which cause a war danger, whatever be their source."

He went on to refer to Cuba which, he said, had become the object of "all kinds of attacks, intrigues, and subversion, economic aggression and finally, poorly concealed threats of intervention." United Nations must do all it could to remove Cuba from the "over-hanging threat of interference from outside."

He said that "stormy developments" had flared up on the African continent where armed aggression had taken place against the Congo. The UN force which had been sent at the request of the legal Government of the Congo to help that Government had taken over airports and the radio station, disorganized the life of the State and paralyzed the Government's activities.

Meanwhile, the colonialists and those who served them had said that Mr. Patrice Lumumba, the Congolese leader, was a Communist.

He added: "Lumumba is certainly no Communist, but he is a patriot for his country and honestly serves his own people in their struggle for liberation from the colonial yoke."

He denied any reference to Soviet intervention in the Congo, and said that it had always been the Soviet position that the African peoples should establish order in their countries according to their "own will and choice." He also spoke of Belgian aggression against the Congo which, he said, had been undertaken not out of concern for the life of Belgian citizens but the "far more tangible interests of the all-powerful monopolies which have taken root on Congolese land."

Referring to Mr. Hammarskjoeld's role in the Congo, he said that the Assembly "should give a rebuff" to the colonialists and their stooges and call Mr. Hammarskjoeld to order so that he should not abuse his position as Secretary-General and should discharge his duties in strict conformity with the provisions of the UN Charter and the decisions of the Security Council.

He added: "It is the opinion of the Soviet Government, that a decision should be taken that only the troops of the countries of Africa and Asia should be left in the Congo, those troops remaining there only with the consent of the legally elected Government of Mr. Lumumba and being used only at the discretion of his Government in the interests of ensuring the normal functioning of the legitimate Government and Parliament of the Congo Republic."

The Soviet Union, he said, was convinced that the Congolese people themselves would cope with the present difficulties and succeed in establishing order in their country.

He accused the Western countries, especially USA, of ignoring reality in blocking the admission of communist China to United Nations. Such a situation, he said, was harmful for the cause of peace and humiliating for the world Organization.

He also appealed for the admission of Outer Mongolia, whose application the Security Council so far had declined to endorse. He added: "Is the solution of major international problems conceivable today without the participation of the People's Republic of China?"

Calling for the complete elimination of the colonial regime, he said: "I can hear in advance the critical voice of the defenders of the colonial regime, but we say to those who are accustomed to build their welfare at the expense of the oppressed people in the colonies: This is over. Take a look at what is going on around you.

"If not today, then soon, very soon, the colonial order will finally perish and if you do not get out of the way in time, you will be swept away.

"Neither by plots nor by the force of arms can one add life to the doomed, colonial regime. All this will only strengthen and embitter the struggle of the peoples against this completely rotten regime."

Turning to disarmament, he said that the Soviet Union was compelled to maintain armed forces only because her proposals on complete and general disarmament had not yet been accepted. No progress had been made in that sphere in the past year, and that was because of the position taken by USA and her NATO allies.

He accused the West of evading discussion of the Soviet disarmament plan in the 10-Nation Disarmament Committee which had met earlier in Geneva. On its part, the West had put forward proposals which provided for neither general nor complete disarmament, nor for disarmament at all, but only for measures of control, which was control without disarmament.

He said that acting contrary to the UN General Assembly resolution of 1959, the Western Powers in the ten-nation Committee had indulged in nothing but meaningless talk about disarmament, trying to hinder any possible progress in this matter and to discredit the idea of general and complete disarmament in world public opinion.

He went on to submit the basic provisions of a Treaty on general and complete disarmament which were covered in a separate document which he asked the President of the Assembly, Mr. F. H. Boland of Ireland and the Secretariat to circulate.

He proposed a three-stage disarmament programme.

The first stage of the plan would include steps for the elimination from the armed forces of all means of delivering nuclear weapons, the discontinuance of their manufacture and the destruction of the existing ones.

In the second stage, there would be complete prohibition of nuclear, chemical, biological and other weapons of mass destruction, with the cessation of manufacture and destruction of all stock-piles and further reduction of armed forces and armaments to levels to be agreed in future.

In the third stage, all States would complete the abolition of their armed forces and retain only limited contingents of militia equipped with light firearms for maintaining internal order. All remaining types of conventional armaments and ammunition would be destroyed and military equipment destroyed or put to peaceful uses.

He also proposed control measures for the first stage:

(1) Onsite international control should be undertaken over the destruction of rocket weapons, military aircraft, surface warships, submarines and other means of carrying atomic and hydrogen weapons;

(2) International inspection teams would be sent to places where there were military bases and troops on foreign territory to supervise the elimination of bases and the withdrawal of troops. Control would be established at airfields and airports to ensure that these were not used for military purposes;

(3) At the same time rocket launching sites, other than those for peaceful purposes, would be destroyed under the supervision of the control body; and

(4) Joint studies would be undertaken of measures to be implemented in the second stage for the discontinuance of the manufacture of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and destruction of stock-piles.

The first stage should be completed in about a year to 19 months, with the control organization reviewing results and reporting on them to the States which were parties to the Disarmament Treaty and to the UN Security Council and General Assembly.

In the second stage, on-site control should be undertaken over the disbanding of troops and destruction of armaments while there would be joint studies on measures to ensure observance of the Treaty. The control organization would review results of the second stage measures as they would have done in the first stage.

In the third stage, the control organization would send inspectors to verify on the spot the abolition of War Ministries, General Staffs and all military and para-military organizations and the termination of military training and all other forms of military activity.

He said: "In many respects this proposal meets halfway the position of the Western Powers which, as we hope, will facilitate an early agreement on disarmament.

"We now provide in particular for the elimination of all means of delivery of nuclear weapons to their target as early as in the first stage of general and complete disarmament, include a detailed elaboration of measures for effective international control in all the stages to take into account the wishes of some Western Powers that the reduction of the strength of the armed forces and conventional armaments should be provided for from the outset.

"Quite a number of other changes and modifications were brought into our programme. All these changes, in our opinion, make the programme of general and complete disarmament more complete and even more realistic and practicable."

Referring to the US disarmament proposals that both sides should transfer 30,000 milligrams of fissionable material to peaceful purposes and begin closing down nuclear weapons plants, he said: "Only an ignorant person can believe that these proposals are aimed at reducing the threat of nuclear war. Indeed, the US proposals do not provide either for elimination of nuclear weapons or destruction of their stock-piles or even the prohibition of their use."

In a reference to peaceful co-existence, he said that was not some "gimmick" invented by the communists but something dictated by life itself.

He added: "I will not disclose a secret by saying that we entertain no liking for capitalism, but we do not want to foist our system upon other countries. So, let those who determine the policy of States, whose social system differs from ours, also abandon their fruitless and dangerous attempts to dictate their will."

He said that he left USA after his State visit in 1959 "with the thought that there existed practical possibilities to remove from the relations between our countries the gloomy shadows of suspicion, fear and distrust, that the Soviet Union and USA could go hand in hand in the name of consolidating peace and establishing effective international co-operation of all States."

He added: "I must say that this conviction was not shaken despite all that took place between USA and the Soviet Union in recent months. In our time, it would be sheer nonsense if the two most powerful nations could not come to terms between themselves.

"This should be done at least in virtue of the great importance of relations between USSR and USA for the destinies of the world.

"The Soviet Government is ready to go on doing its best to improve relations between our country and USA."

Dr. K. Nkrumah (Ghana):

Dr. K. Nkrumah of Ghana on September 23 demanded an immediate change in the UN Command in the Congo, with clear directions to support the legitimate Government with Mr. Joseph Kasavubu as President and Mr. Patrice Lumumba as Prime Minister.

He said: "In other words, the whole composition of the UN force, its military command and the administration should be altered so that it is drawn entirely from contingents of forces of the independent African States now serving in the Congo."

He made further points on the Congo:

(1) Every support should be given to the Central Government as the legitimate Government of the Congo with the full support of UN;

(2) All private armies, including the Belgian-officered forces in Katanga, should be disarmed forthwith and the Congolese National Army be regrouped and re-organized for the purpose of training, so that ultimately it can play its proper role as a national army of the Congo Republic until such time that the Central Government considers it possible to dispense with the services of the UN forces;

(3) This new command of the UN forces should support the Central Government to restore law and order in the Congo in accordance with the first resolution of the Security Council in relying on which Ghana and other independent African States had placed their forces under UN command;

(4) UN should guarantee the territorial integrity of the Congo in accordance with the provisional constitution agreed at the time of independence;

(5) All financial aid and technical assistance to the Congo should be arranged only with the legitimate Government of the Congo and channelled through UN and guaranteed and supervised by a committee of independent African States appointed by UN.

In a reference to the secessionist province of Katanga, he said that there had been "the most vicious attempts" by "vested interests to bolster up a puppet regime there, using poor Moishe Tshombe against his own Government to break up the Congo Republic."

He added: "No African State will lend support to any secessionist move in the Congo.

"The Congo...is indivisible. Any other approach is wishful thinking, for not all the mineral wealth in that integral part of the Congo can create Katanga into a separate State."

Speaking on South Africa, he said that for 13 years the Union Government had consistently disregarded the requests of UN regarding South-West Africa.

He said: "The Union imposes the most harsh and degrading regime upon the inhabitants which is not in any way in accordance with the provisions of the mandate. There is a duty on UN to enforce the mandate and UN must not fail in this duty."

Afro-Asian circles considered as extremely unfortunate the US Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter's criticism of Dr. Nkrumah's remarks on the Congo in the General Assembly as marking him out as one having very definite leanings towards the Soviet bloc.

A prominent Afro-Asian source said: "Dr. Nkrumah made an extreme speech but it was an African speech, not a Communist speech. Dr. Nkrumah happens to believe that UN must use its power and authority to support what he regards as the legitimate Government."

Mr. Herter, asked to comment on Dr. Nkrumah's speech, said on September 23 it appeared to him that he was making a bid for the leadership of what one might call the Left-wing group of African States.

He said he noted some similarity between the speeches of Dr. Nkrumah and Mr. Khruschev, but he did not know whether this was a coincidence or whether it was prearranged. But, he said it appeared that Ghana was now moving towards the Communist camp.

In a statement later, Dr. Nkrumah said of Mr. Herter's comment: "I thought that Mr. Herter understood the African view-point on these matters. This is only a re-iteration of what I have been saying for the last 10 years, and the situation in the Congo has proved me right."

Mr. J. Wadsworth (USA):

The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, told the Assembly on September 23 that UN had reached a crisis following the speech by Mr. Khruschev.

He said that the Soviet Union had injected into the Assembly an "atmosphere of dissension and vindictiveness". The Soviet Union had tried to destroy the office of the Secretary-General and with it, UN itself. He added: "The crisis has now been sharpened by a direct attack of the Soviet Head of State himself against the office of the Secretary-General." He said that UN must seize the crisis head-on, otherwise it would fail.

He opposed the Soviet proposal to have a debate on disarmament in plenary session rather than in the Committees of the Assembly.

Dr. Fidel Castro (Cuba):

Dr. Fidel Castro of Cuba on September 26 attacked American policies in regard to his country.

He lambasted American "aggression, imperialism and colonialism" and said that he was considering making a demand that USA should evacuate the Quantinamo naval base in Cuba.

He said: "Are we, the representatives of the Cubans, such as to deserve the ill-treatment we have received?" in a reference to restrictions on his movements in New York and the difficulties he had had over accommodation. (He was then living in a hotel in New York's negro quarters).

He said that there had been a "notice to all hotels to blackball us" and hostility had been shown to the Cuban delegation "under the pretext of security."

He alleged that degrading and humiliating treatment, eviction from a hotel and "extortion efforts," had been accorded to the Cuban delegation, which had curtailed its movements to avoid problems. But this had not sufficed.

Tracing Cuban history, he said that the best crop-lands had been acquired by American firms while enterprises and concessions as well as the public services, all had been exploited by Americans. The American Ambassador had ruled Cuba, but now no Embassy ruled Cuba. He declared: "Cuba is ruled by its people".

He then held up a torn document which he described as a military pact between USA and Gen. Batista, authorizing assistance to him against Dr. Castro's revolution.

He said that his revolution had been "painted red because we met head-on the interests of the American monopolies."

Referring to his agrarian reform law, he said that without agrarian reform, Cuba could not have taken its "first tottering steps towards development. He said he must warn other Latin American States that if they ever adopted "just agrarian reforms" they would encounter opposition similar to that which had greeted Cuba, "especially if much of the land is in American hands."

He said that since his Government took office, 10,000 new schools had been built and 25,000 houses erected in rural areas. It had set itself the ambitious goal of wiping out illiteracy, which no country in Latin America had yet done.

He added that he was serious considering within the frame-work of international law that US military forces be withdrawn from the Quantinamo naval base in Cuba.

He also spoke out against "the way in which UN forces' intervention was called out in the Congo." He said that the UN troops "did not go into action against the forces which had first intervened and for which they were originally called." Time had first been given to cause dissension and when that did not suffice the broadcasting station in Leopoldville and Congolese airfields were seized so that "a third man" might emerge. "In 1954 in my country, this type of saviour was Batista. In the Congo it is Mobutu."

He also voiced "100 per cent support" for the Algerian Nationalists and said: "Algeria belongs to Africa, while France belongs to Europe." It was ludicrous, he said, to claim, as France claimed, that Algeria was part of Metropolitan France. "We were so quick to go to the Congo" he said, "and yet so half-heartedly do we go to Algeria."

He added: "I only wish we would go—but with very different purposes—to defend the interests of the Algerians, and not the colonizers".

Mr. John Diefenbaker (Canada):

The Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. John Diefenbaker, in his address to the Assembly on September 26, opposed Mr. N. Khruschev's proposal to replace the office of the UN Secretary-General by a triumvirate.

He told the Assembly: "Canada is opposed to this absurd proposal which would reduce UN to innocuity and indecision."

He gave full backing to the Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, and said: "I reject categorically the unjust and intemperate attacks that have been made on the office and person of the wholly-dedicated and impartial Secretary-General."

He described Mr. Khruschev's speech in these words: "Mr. Khruschev, in a gigantic propaganda drama of destructive misrepresentation, launched a major offensive in the 'cold war' while giving lip service to UN which would be destroyed by his proposal for a triumvirate. His speech could not have been intended to bring the world closer to peace, yet to bring the world closer to peace is the reason we are here."

In contrast, he described President Eisenhower's speech on September 22 as one that had presented "a constructive programme for a world community at peace."

He summarized Canada's views on the Congo and the larger African problem in these words: "The African continent must not become the focus of an East-West struggle. It must be free from the direct interference of the major Powers. The African nations must be permitted to work out their own destinies, and, if they need help, the best source is through the agencies of UN."

On the question of disarmament, he proposed the immediate consideration of seven specific measures: (1) Systematic control of missiles designed to deliver nuclear weapons of mass destruction; (2) Designation and inspection of missile launching sites; (3) Abolition of biological and chemical weapons; (4) Outlawing of outer space for military purposes and banning the mounting of armaments on orbital satellites; (5) Cessation of production of fissionable material for weapons and the conversion of existing stocks to peaceful purposes; (6) An end to nuclear testing; and (7) Development of adequate peace-keeping machinery within the UN frame-work to ensure peace and security in a disarmed world.

Mr. A. Novotny (Czechoslovakia):

The President of Czechoslovakia, Mr. Antonin Novotny called on United Nations to arrange "for immediate restoration of the free activities" of the Congolese Government of M. Patrice Lumumba.

UN, he said, had "supported various secessionist groups sold to colonizers, and thus in fact prepared the ground for paralyzing the political life and the disintegration of the unity of the Congo."

He also delivered an emphatic protest against the United States' limitation of the movements of Mr. N. Khruschev in New York, which, he said, showed "a complete lack of goodwill in seeking ways of understanding."

He supported Mr. Khruschev's suggestion for the removal of UN headquarters from USA.

He also expressed support for Mr. Khruschev's proposal to substitute the post of UN Secretary-General with a triumvirate "collective executive organ."

Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld's Reply To Criticism Of His Role In Congo:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld told the General Assembly on September 26 that the criticism made about his work was a question not of a man but of an institution.

Mr. Hammarskjoeld, who was making a statement before the General Assembly resumed its general debate on September 26, referred to the Congo operation and said that UN was not under the orders of any Government which had requested its assistance. If the office of the Secretary-General became a stumbling block to anyone because the incumbent stood by the basic principles which must guide his activity, such criticism struck at the very office and the very concepts on which it was based. He said he would rather see that office break than drift on compromise.

Sometimes, he said, one got the impression that the Congo operation was looked at as being in the hands of the Secretary-General, as distinct from United Nations. He added: "No, gentlemen, this is your operation."

It was the Security Council, he said, which gave its mandate to the Secretary-General on July 14, 1960 and which had given further mandates in later resolutions.

He said that he was grateful for positive advice, but if this was not forthcoming he had no choice but to follow his own conviction.

The question before the Assembly was no longer one of actions but of principles. Time and again UN had had to face situations in which the wrong move might have tended to throw the Organization towards this or that course. To permit that to happen was indeed to intervene in the domestic affairs contrary to the letter and spirit of the Charter. To avoid doing so was to remain true to the Charter no matter what Power might be disappointed, no matter what it cost.

This, he said, was the basic reason for the principles spelled out at the beginning of the Congo operation, to the effect that the UN force was not and could not be under the Government requesting assistance and could not be a party to internal conflicts.

He added: "It was the Security Council which commended his report on the principles which should be applied. It was the Security Council, on August 19 which, again without any dissenting vote, commended the authority granted to the Secretary-General.

"Just a week ago the General Assembly, without a dissenting vote requested the Secretary-General to take all necessary action on the Congo operation.

"It is for you to indicate what you want to have done."

President G. A. Nasser (UAR):

In his first-ever address to the General Assembly on September 27, the President of the United Arab Republic, Col. G. A. Nasser, proposed that President Eisenhower and Mr. Khruschev meet in a new bid to solve the disarmament problem and that UN should supervise a plebiscite for Algerians to decide their own future.

He also referred to the attempt by "some Big Powers" to look upon UN as a tool they could use in the 'cold war'. Such a way of looking at the world Organization was an illusion and must be discarded.

He called on UN to open its doors to communist China.

He said that the greater danger that confronted the people of the Congo, "a danger which we ourselves share, is that imperialism is trying to take UN as a mask to conceal its designs.

"This imperialist manoeuvre today has two victims: the people of the Congo and UN. It is for the sake of both, who face the same danger, that we call on all who believe in freedom and in UN as the foremost way to the development of human society to stand together in their defence.

"In the Congo, matters should return to the situation prevalent when the legitimate Government in Leopoldville requested the help of UN and when UN accepted this request with the object of safeguarding Congolese unity.

"As for Palestine, UN has to bear its responsibilities towards Palestine and the Arab people." He demanded restoration of the full rights of the "people of Palestine."

On Algeria, he said: "The French Government has hampered every attempt by UN aimed at putting a stop to the imperialist slaughter in Algeria." He added that there was no doubt that the war in Algeria "cannot but end with the triumph of liberty."

In a reference to the Suez Canal, he said: "Now, you all know that the Suez Canal under Arab administration performs its role in the service of world economy more ably and efficiently than was the case before its restoration to the people who dug it as a water-way for the advancement and prosperity of the world.

"We faced the test of our development and reacted to it. We have proved that, in spite of all the difficulties we faced, and in spite of what we had to face through trial and error, the average yearly revenue of the individual in the Egyptian Region of the United Arab Republic has increased by 70 per cent in the course of seven years following the achievement of our freedom."

He re-iterated that UAR believed in the policy of non-alignment and adhered to it as a strict yardstick.

He also revealed that at the beginning of 1956 the French Government had asked him through its Foreign Minister to mediate for a peaceful solution in Algeria.

He said, "My answer was that I was ready to mediate to safeguard the rights and avoid bloodshed. Nothing is dearer to us than to reach an honourable peace preserving to everyone the rights due to him. "At the time, the French Government expressed the wish of sending a mission to Cairo to negotiate with the leaders, inviting them to come to Cairo to meet with the French mission on its arrival, hoping that the attempt might lead to a glimpse of hope. Unfortunately, the French mission did arrive in Cairo, met the Algerian mission, and then flew back to France to consult with its Government. The Algerian mission waited in Cairo, but the French mission never returned."

Mr. G. Gheorghiu-dej (Rumania):

The first Secretary of the Rumanian Workers Party, Mr. G. Gheorghiu-dej, backed the Soviet proposal to replace the Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, by a triumvirate composed of representatives of East, West, and neutralist nations.

He said that the necessity for this had been demonstrated in the Congo where "Mr. Hammarskjoeld acted actually as a spokesman of the colonial policy instead of ensuring the implementation of the decisions of the Security Council."

Mr. Wladislav Gomulka (Poland):

The Polish Communist Party leader, Mr. W. Gomulka on September 28 called for a world-wide plebiscite in which people all over the world could say whether they wanted atomic weapons and missile-launching sites in their countries or general and complete disarmament.

He said that if all Governments agreed to hold such a plebiscite, there would be solved a basic problem of current times—the threat of war.

He added that Poland's present frontiers were fixed, and to advance territorial claims against her would be war propaganda.

He called for the signing of a Peace Treaty with the two Germanies. The East, he said, would like to solve this problem jointly with the Western Powers, but if this did not happen, "we would be obliged—along with Powers who are ready to join us—to conclude a Peace Treaty with the German Democratic Republic."

He also called for the admission of China to UN membership and said that he favoured independence for Algeria.

Dr. D. R. Pastor (Paraguay):

The Foreign Minister of Paraguay, Dr. Don Raul Pastor, said that the realities of the disarmament question were so grave that they must be discussed among a small number of nations before any general discussion among all members of UN.

Senor J. Unda-Murillo (Guatemala):

Guatemala's Foreign Minister, Senor Jesus Unda-Murillo, said that with the sharpening of the "conflict of ideologies", the people of Latin America had become the focus of a "subversive campaign" aimed at disturbing their traditions and their ideals of peaceful co-existence.

He added it was no secret that the Soviet Union had offered Cuba all kinds of assistance with the object of destroying the fundamental principles of the peoples of Latin America.

Mr. Thanat Khoman (Thailand):

Thailand's Foreign Minister, Mr. Thanat Khoman, referred to charges that his Government had interfered in the affairs of Laos and suggested that an investigation might be made to "show who is intervening, by what means and to what extent."

Thailand, he said, had scrupulously refrained from interfering "in the affairs of that country, or of any country."

Senor E. V. Haedo (Uruguay):

The President-elect of Uruguay's National Council of Government, Senor Eduardo Victor Haedo, said that in the current international crisis "the worst that could happen would be for us to look to the future with pessimism."

The small countries, he said, had an important role to play because they had "everything to lose and nothing to gain from violence."

Referring to regional problems, Senor Haedo said that all American differences should be solved within the American orbit. He added: "We decisively reject any intervention or any outside interference in the affairs of this continent."

Mr. J. O. Krag (Denmark):

The Danish Foreign Minister, Mr. J. O. Krag, said that the risk involved in leaving the problem of disarmament unsolved "has never been greater than it is today."

He added: "It should be possible for military and scientific experts to work out proposals for a series of gradual, adequately controlled disarmament measures in such a way that the balance of power would at no point be shifted."

Negotiations to this end, he said, should be the responsibility of a body established by the Assembly. Meanwhile, work on more limited disarmament projects, like a ban on nuclear tests, should be continued "energetically."

He said that the problem next in importance was that of helping under-developed countries. Denmark supported the Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, in his proposals to meet the Congo crisis, and the Danish Government was prepared to seek parliamentary authority for a contribution to the Congo economic aid fund.

On South Africa, he said that "not only in her own territory but also—to our even greater regret—within the mandate territory of South-West Africa, there is virtual agreement within UN on these questions, but so far the Government of South Africa has chosen to disregard the resolutions of the Assembly."

Mr. T. Zhivkov (Bulgaria):

The Bulgarian President, Mr. Todor Zhivkov, came out strongly in support of Mr. Khruschev's proposal that the office of Secretary-General be replaced by a triumvirate.

He said that Mr. Hammarskjoeld's own frank statement that when he had no concrete instructions he had no other choice but to follow his conscience, "only comes to prove the expediency of the proposal to establish a collective UN Secretariat."

Mr. Harold Macmillan (UK):

The British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan in his address to the Assembly on September 29, defended Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld against Soviet charges and rejected Mr. N. Khruschev's attacks on colonialism as "out of date" slogans.

Any new 'summit' conference, he said, would be bound to be economic as well as political. It was foolish to deny the existence of the great divisions in the world and a delusion to think that they could be removed by mere words. He appealed for a return to the "spirit that seemed to be at work even a few months ago", and said that if that spirit could be recaptured "we could make a new start". The period of crisis could be "a turning point to better things".

He said: "I am sure that the only way forward is by a gradual approach and working step-by-step in practical ways to improve the position. It is in this spirit that we should work together".

He said he believed that the Soviet proposal to change the structure of UN would be unacceptable to the majority of members.

Referring to the problem of international control and disarmament, he said that Britain "will gladly allow any form of inspection and control that is accepted by the Soviet Union."

He referred to the suggestion made by the Danish Foreign Minister, Mr. Jens Otta Krag, that it should be possible for military and scientific experts to work out proposals for a series of gradual, adequately controlled disarmament measures in such a way that the balance of power would, at no point, be shifted. He developed this idea and made the "specific proposal that there should be appointed a group of technical experts, scientific, military and administrative, to prepare a report within a period to be agreed."

He added: "This period need not be unduly long. For a great deal of work has been done on this subject by the various committees which have sat over the years. It has been largely lost in the discussions on all other aspects of the question. Valuable material exists on which this new inquiry could draw."

He referred to Mr. Hammarskjoeld and said: "As for the Secretary-General, I would like to associate myself with the wide expression of confidence in his energy and resourcefulness and above all, his integrity."

He described President Eisenhower's address to the General Assembly as a "remarkable speech".

He added: "A period of crisis is always a period of opportunity. If this meeting is dramatic, it may well be historic. It may mark the beginning of a period of steady deterioration, ending, so far as human intelligence can foresee, in tragedy. Or it may be the beginning of better things."

He said that whatever UN's difficulties and shortcomings, it was the only Organization which "we have available", and whose influence was continually growing.

On the Congo, he said that his Government felt that what UN had done in the Congo was "timely and should continue". He did not think that the constitutional disagreements between the Congolese leaders were a matter for this Assembly.

He added: "It would be a tragedy if the Congo were to become the arena for the contest between the two great groups of Powers."

Prince Norodom Sihanouk (Cambodia):

Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia said that the presence of Heads of Government at the present session of the Assembly was "a two-edged sword with regard to world problems."

He added: "If we do not succeed in giving the peoples we represent definite assurances of a happy and early result of our discussions on vital problems, such a failure might lead to catastrophe."

On Algeria, he said: "The whole world is awaiting from France a gesture of grandeur towards Algeria, a gesture like the one she has just made towards her African possessions, a gesture which will regain, for her the friendship of the Afro-Asian world and the Arab peoples in particular."

Dr. Bruno Kreisky (Austria):

The Austrian Foreign Minister, Dr. Bruno Kreisky, told the General Assembly it appeared that USA and the Soviet Union were agreed that the new nations which were now emerging "must be given aid and support by tangible evidence of international solidarity".

He saw this agreement as "the outstanding result" of the current General Assembly session to date.

In the context of the recognition of new nations, he said: "We must also take note of the regrettable fact that Germany is not yet a member of UN and that the question of the representation of China has not been solved in a manner satisfactory to all member-States."

He supported Mr. Hammarskjoeld, "whose activity we have had occasion to observe with increasing admiration during the past weeks".

Mr. Z. A. Bhutto (Pakistan):

Speaking in the general debate on September 29, the Pakistan delegate, Mr. Z. A. Bhutto, said that new efforts to end the dispute between India and Pakistan over Kashmir should follow their recent agreement on the division of the Indus waters.

He said: "The principle of the peaceful settlement of international disputes is a cardinal feature of the foreign policy of Pakistan. We are hopeful that this initiative for peace will be extended now to the only grave issue still outstanding between India and Pakistan, namely, the Kashmir question. It is our most earnest hope that this noble precedent will give rise to a new spirit in the relations between Pakistan and India, and lead to a settlement of this problem of problems."

Referring to South Africa, he said: "I am appalled that in a country which claims to be civilized and Christian, human beings should be denied basic human rights because of their race and colour.

"The future generations of South Africa may have to pay a very heavy price for the resentment and rancour that the apartheid policy of that country is creating around her."

Referring to Algeria, he said: "Let me declare here that the sympathies of the people of Pakistan are with the valiant sons of Algeria fighting heroically for their freedom."

Agreeing to an expansion of the 10-Nation Disarmament Committee by the admission of non-aligned States, he added: "We agree to all this, but in our view what is more important is the immediate resumption of negotiations."

Mr. B. P. Koirala (Nepal):

The Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told the Assembly that the international situation was dominated by what one might call a "Big Power complex".

The admission of so many new countries to the world Organization would help reduce that complex.

He referred to recent Soviet criticism of Mr. Hammarskjoeld's handling of the Congo crisis and said that Nepal would "have no part in these criticisms". Of the Soviet proposal to replace Mr. Hammarskjoeld with a triumvirate, he said: "To my mind this would only hamper UN in taking quick and effective action in a grave crisis and also hinder it in the discharge of its normal functions".

President Sukarno (Indonesia):

President Sukarno of Indonesia told the Assembly on September 30 that the time had come for a revision of the UN Charter, so that it could reflect the true position of the present-day world.

He called for re-organization of the UN Secretariat as well as of the agencies of the world Organization and suggested that the UN Headquarters should be removed from the atmosphere of the 'cold war' to a place in Asia, Africa or Geneva.

It was also essential, he said, that the distribution of seats in the Security Council and other UN agencies should be revised. He was not thinking in terms of blocs, but of the urgency brought about by the changed conditions. There were a number of agencies in UN which did not represent the rise of the Socialist countries or the pace of African and Asian independence.

He added that the world body had been greatly weakened beause it had rejected the admission to UN of People's China, one of the biggest nations of the world.

Referring to the Congo, he said that the deplorable situation there had been caused directly and immediately by imperialism, and urged that there should be no interference in the internal affairs of Congo or any support, open or hidden, for its disintegration.

He also called for a plebiscite in Algeria under UN auspices.

Regarding Indonesia's claim to West Irian, he said that the situation there was dangerous and explosive and constituted a threat to peace.

Mr. Ahmed Shukairy (Saudi Arabia):

The Saudi Arabian delegate, Mr. Ahmed Shukairy, supported Dr. Sukarno's suggestion that the UN Headquarters should be moved from New York, which had not proved to be an ideal home for the world body.

Mr. N. Khruschev's Second Address:

Addressing the General Assembly again on October 3, Mr. N. Khruschev repeated his criticism of the UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld.

He accused Mr. Hammarskjoeld of being biased against the Socialist countries and said that it was only he who was the interpreter and executor of all the decisions of the Assembly and the Security Council.

In the Congo, the Secretary-General had played a deplorable role and he again urged replacement of the Secretary-General by a three-man executive.

He declared: "The Soviet Union does not trust Mr. Hammarskjoeld. If he does not resign in a chivalrous manner, then we shall draw the necessary conclusions from the obtaining situation". He added that any one Secretary-General would fail to represent objectively the three different groups of nations—East, West and the neutrals in UN.

Pleading for China's admission to UN, he said that without China there could be no disarmament and normal work of UN could not be carried on.

Answering statements on disarmament made previously in the Assembly by President Eisenhower and Mr. Macmillan, Mr. Khruschev asked for the real meaning of control over armaments which had been proposed by Mr. Eisenhower and to which Mr. Macmillan had also referred. Control over armaments meant recognition of the necessity to have armaments in the future, but it was clear to all that if armaments existed, then whether they wished it or not, all those who possessed armaments would reach for the arms at any critical moment. At such a moment, those who possessed arms and adhered to the policy of positions of strength, would not ask the Security Council or convene the General Assembly to discuss the question whether or not they should use their arms. They would just use them; and if this happened, no Assembly would meet because a war would have broken out with all its destructive consequences. That was why, he said, the best guarantees of peace lay in the destruction of armaments.

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's Reply To Mr. N. Khruschev:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, was given a big ovation in the Assembly on October 3 when he rejected Mr. Khruschev's challenge asking him to resign.

He said that by resigning at this critical juncture he would be throwing the UN Organization to the winds.

He said that he had been accused of working on the side of the colonialists in the Congo affair, but it was for all the members of the Assembly and not any single party to judge the Secretary-General's role. The Soviet proposal to replace him by a three-man directorate would weaken the UN Executive, making it unable to give effective protection to those who needed it. In the circumstances, he said, he had no right to resign because he had a responsibility to all those States for whom UN was of decisive importance.

King Hussein (Jordan):

Speaking after Mr. Khruschev on October 3, King Hussein of Jordan said that the Soviet Union wanted to destroy UN and had no other object in view in its attacks on the Secretary-General.

He referred to tensions between Jordan and the United Arab Republic and said that these should be discussed by the General Assembly. He added: "We must believe that the aim of our sister Arab State is our destruction."

He complained that the aims of the Arabs as set out from time to time at meetings of the Arab League had been consistently violated by UAR.

Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru (India):

Addressing the Assembly on October 3, the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru appealed to the world to accept the principle of co-existence if it was not to perish in a nuclear war.

He said: "We must not compel others to function according to our own particular way. The moment there is an attempt at coercion, there is fear and conflict, and the seeds of war are sown. That is the basic philosophy underlying the attempt to avoid military or other violent methods for the solution of problems."

He added: "I have listened attentively and with respect to many of the speeches here, and sometimes I have felt as if I was being buffeted by the icy winds of the 'cold war.' Coming from a warm country, I have shivered occasionally at these cold blasts.

"Sitting here in this Assembly chamber an old memory comes back to me. In the fateful summer of 1938, I was a visitor at a meeting of the League of Nations at Geneva. Hitler was advancing then and holding out threats of war. There was mobilization in many parts of Europe, and the tramp of armed men was heard.

"But, even so, the League of Nations appeared to be unconcerned with the shadow of war and discussed all manner of topics, but not the most vital subject of the day. War did not start then. It was a year later that it descended upon the world with all its thunder and destructive fury. After many years of carnage, the War ended, and a new age—the atomic age—was ushered in by the terrible experience of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

"Fresh from these horrors, the minds of men turned to thoughts of peace, and there was a passionate desire to put an end to war itself. UN took birth on a note of high idealism embodied in the noble wording of the Charter. There was this aspect of idealism. But there was also a realization of the state of the post-War world as it was then. And so, provision was made in the structure of the Organization to balance certain conflicting urges.

"There were the permanent members of the Security Council and the provision for Great Power unanimity. All this was not very logical. But it represented certain realities of the world as it was, and, because of this, we accepted them. At that time, many large areas in Asia and even more so, in Africa, were not represented in UN as they were under colonial domination.

"Since then, the colonial part of the world has shrunk greatly and we welcome here many countries from Africa in their new freedom. UN has become progressively more representative. But we must remember that, even now, it is not fully so. Colonialism still has its strong footholds in some parts and racialism and racial domination are still prevalent, more especially in Africa.

"During these past 15 years, UN has often been criticized for its structure and for some of its activities. These criticisms have often had some justification behind them. But, looking at this broad picture, I think, we can definitely say that UN has amply justified its existence and repeatedly prevented our recurrent crises from developing into war. It has played a great role and it is a little difficult now to think of this troubled world without UN. If it has defects, those defects lie in the world situation itself which inevitably it mirrors. If there had been no UN today, our first task would be to create something of that kind. I should like therefore to pay tribute to the work of UN as a whole, even though I might criticize some aspect of it from time to time.

"The structure of UN when it started was weighted in favour of Europe and the Americas. It did not seem to us to be fair to the countries of Asia and Africa. But we appreciated the difficulties of the situation and did not press for any changes. With the growth of UN and more countries coming in, that structure today is still more unbalanced.

"Even so, we wish to proceed slowly and with agreement and not to press for any change which would involve an immediate amendment of the Charter and the raising of heated controversies.

"Many of the speakers from this forum have surveyed the world scene and spoken on a variety of problems. I would like to concentrate on what I consider the most basic problem of all.

"The Charter of UN declares our determination to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war and to re-affirm faith in fundamental human rights and for these ends, to practise tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours. The main purpose of UN is to build up a world without war, a world based on the co-operation of nations and peoples. It is not merely a world where war is kept in check or a balancing of armed forces. It is much deeper than that; it is a world from which the major causes of war have been removed and social structures built up, which further peaceful co-operation within a nation as well as between nations.

"Disarmament is a part of this process, for it will create an atmosphere helpful to co-operation; but it is only a step towards our objective, a part of the larger effort to rid the world of war and the causes of war. In the present context, however, disarmament assumes a very special importance for all of us, over-riding all others. But we must always remember that even in pursuing disarmament we have to keep in view our larger purpose.

"For many years past, there has been talk of disarmament, and some progress has undoubtedly been made insofar as plans and proposals are concerned. But still we find that the race of armaments continues and so also the effort to find ever more powerful engines of destruction. Fear and hatred overshadow the world. If even a small part of this effort was directed to the search of peace, probably the problem of disarmament would have been solved by this time.

"Apart from the moral imperative of space, every practical consideration leads us to that conclusion. For, as everyone knows, the choice today, in this nuclear age, is one between utter annihilation and the destruction of civilization or in some way to have peaceful co-existence between nations. There is no middle way. The world consists of a great variety of nations and peoples, differing in their ideas and urges and in their economic development. All of them desire peace and progress for their people. And yet, many of them are afraid of each other and therefore cannot concentrate on the quest of peace.

"We must recognize this variety of opinion and objectives in the world and not seek to coerce or compel others to function according to our own particular way. The moment there is an attempt at coercion, there is fear and conflict, and the seeds of war are sown. That is the basic philosophy underlying the attempt to avoid military or other violent methods for the solution of problems. That is the main reason which impels those countries, who are called 'unaligned,' to avoid military pacts.

"It may not be possible to reach full disarmament in one step, though every step should be conditioned to that end. Much has already been done in these discussions of disarmament. But the sands of time run out and we dare not play about with it or delay its consideration. That, indeed, is the main duty of UN today and, if it fails in this, UN fails in its main purpose.

"We live in an age of great revolutionary changes brought about by the advance of science and technology. Therein lie hopes for the world and also the danger of sudden death. Because of these advances, the time we have for controlling the forces of destruction, is strictly limited. If within the next three or four years, effective disarmament is not agreed to and implemented, then it may be too late, and all the goodwill in the world will not be able to stop the drift to certain disaster. We may not, therefore, delay or postpone the consideration of this vital problem.

"In the context of things today, two great nations, USA and the Soviet Union hold the key to war and peace. Theirs is a great responsibility. But every country, small or big, is concerned in this matter of peace and war, and, therefore, every country must shoulder its responsibility and work to this end. It is easy to criticize the action or inaction of any country. But this criticism does not help us. It only increases tension and fear and nations take up rigid attitudes from which it is difficult to dislodge them.

"The issues before the world are too vital to be left to a few countries only or to be affected by personal likes and dislikes. In order to deal with these big issues effectively, we have to take big and impersonal views. It is only UN as a whole that can ultimately solve this problem. Therefore, while all efforts towards disarmament must be welcomed, UN should be closely associated with them.

"The question of disarmament has been considered at various levels. There is general disarmament and the ending of test explosions of nuclear and thermo-nuclear weapons. So far as test explosions are concerned, considerable progress has been made by the Committee which has been meeting in Geneva.

"Indeed, it would appear that an agreement has been reached there on many basic issues and only a little more effort is needed to complete this agreement. I suggest that a final agreement on this subject should be reached as early as possible. This is not, strictly speaking, disarmament, but undoubtedly any such agreement will bring a large measure of relief to the world.

"Disarmament must include the prohibition of the manufacture, storage and use of weapons of mass destruction as well as the progressive limitation of conventional weapons. It is well to remember that there is a great deal of common ground already covered, and the various proposals made by different countries indicate this common ground.

"But certain important questions have not been solved yet. Behind all this lies the fear of a surprise attack and of any one country becoming stronger than the other in the process of disarmament. It is on this basis only that success can be achieved, and this pervading sense of fear countered.

"There is an argument as to whether disarmament should precede controls or controls should precede disarmament. This is a strange argument because it is perfectly clear that disarmament without controls is not a feasible proposition. It is even more clear that controls without disarmament have no meaning. The conception of controls comes in only because of disarmament. It is not proposed, I hope, to have controls of existing armaments and thus in a way, to perpetuate those armaments. It must therefore be clearly understood that disarmament and a machinery for control must go together, and neither of these can be taken up singly.

"It seems very extraordinary to me that great nations should argue about priorities in this matter and make that a reason for not going ahead. Therefore, both questions should be tackled simultaneously and as parts of a single problem. Success may not come immediately. But it is, I think, of the greatest importance that there should be no gap, no discontinuity in our dealing with this problem. Once there is discontinuity, it will lead to a rapid deterioration of the present situation and it will be much more difficult to start afresh.

"A proposal has been made that this question of disarmament should be referred to a committee of experts. One can have no objection to such a reference. But, in fact experts have been considering this matter during the past years, and we have the advantage of their views. In any event, any reference to a committee of experts should not lead to a postponement of the major issue. Any such delay may well be disastrous. Possibly while the major issues are being considered by the UN commissions or other committees a reference of any special aspect might be made to experts. What is important is that UN at this present juncture should ensure that there is adequate machinery for promoting disarmament and that this machinery should function continuously from now onwards.

"The fear of surprise attacks or accidental happenings leading to dangerous developments is undoubtedly present. That itself is a reflection of the climate of the 'cold war' in which unfortunately we live. The best way to deal with this fear is to reduce international tensions and create an atmosphere which will make it very difficult for any surprise attack to take place in that atmosphere. Even some accidental happening might lead to a final crisis. In addition to this, such other steps as may be considered necessary for the prevention of surprise attacks should be taken. Thus, if there is an agreement on the stoppage of nuclear tests and use of carriers, immediately the danger from surprise attacks will be greatly lessened.

"While disarmament is by far the most important and urgent problem before UN and is a subject which brooks no delay, we have to face today a situation in Africa in the Congo, which has led UN to assume heavy and novel responsibilities. Everyone present here, I am sure, warmly welcomes the coming of independence to many peoples who have suffered untold agony for ages past. We wish them well, and UN has shown its readiness to help them in various ways.

"There are three aspects of the African problem. First, the full implementation of the independence and freedom that have been achieved; secondly, the liberation of the countries in Africa which are still under colonial domination. This has become an urgent task today. Some of these countries are almost cut off from the outside world and no news is allowed to reach us. From such accounts as we have, the fate of the people there is even worse than we have known in other countries of Africa.

"Thirdly, there is the question of some countries in Africa which are independent but where that freedom is confined to a minority, and the great majority have no share in it and indeed are suppressed politically, socially and racially in defiance of everything that UN and the world community stand for. Racialism and the doctrine of a master race dominating over others can be tolerated no longer and can only lead to vast racial conflicts.

"Recent developments in Africa have indicated the great danger of delay. It is not possible any longer to maintain colonial domination in any of these countries and I think it is the duty and the basic responsibility of UN to expedite this freedom. There is a tremendous ferment all over the continent of Africa and this has to be recognized and appreciated and met with foresight and wisdom.

"The question of the Republic of Congo has especially come before us and cast on UN difficult responsibilities. The first thing that strikes one is the utter failure of a colonial system which left the Congo in its present state. Long years of colonial rule resulted in extracting vast wealth from that country for the enrichment of the colonial Power, while the people of the country remained utterly poor and backward.

"What is the role of UN in Congo? The situation there is a complicated and frequently changing one, and it is not always easy to know what is happening. Disruptive forces have been let loose and have been encouraged by people who do not wish well to this newly independent Congo. Some footholds of the old colonialism are still engaged in working to this end. It appears that many thousands of Belgians, including military men, are still in the Congo, more especially in the Katanga province. Because of past colonial history, this is particularly unfortunate and is likely to be considered a continuation of occupation by whatever name it may be called. Also, it is an encouragement to the disruption of the State.

"We must realize that it is essential to maintain the integrity of Congo for if there is disintegration of the State, this is bound to lead to internal civil wars on a large scale. There will be no peace in Congo except on the basis of the integrity of the State. Foreign countries must particularly avoid any interference in these internal affairs or the encouragement of one faction against another. The role of UN is a mediatory one, to reconcile and help in the proper functioning of the Central Government. Help in the development of Congo is again a tremendous and long-term problem.

"Ultimately it is the people of Congo who will have to produce their own leadership, whether it is good or bad. Leadership cannot be imposed, and any attempt to do so will lead to conflict. UN obviously cannot act all the time as policeman, nor should any outside Power intervene.

"There is at present an elected Parliament in Congo, though it does not appear to be functioning. I think that it should be the function of UN to help this Parliament to meet and function so that out of its deliberations the problems of Congo may be dealt with by the people themselves. Decisions must be that of Parliament as representing the people of Congo and not of others. The functioning of Parliament may itself lead to the ironing out of internal differences. I hope that it will be possible soon for Congo representatives to take their places in the Assembly.

"The Security Council has repeatedly laid stress on Belgian military personnel leaving Congo. These decisions have apparently not been given full effect. This is highly undesirable. It seems to me of great importance both in view of past history and present conditions, that every type of military or semi-military personnel of Belgium should leave Congo. The General Assembly might well consider sending a delegation to Congo to find out what foreign troops or other personnel (apart from those sent on behalf of UN) are still there, and how far they are interfering in local affairs.

"Recently, an emergency session of the General Assembly considered the situation in Congo and made certain suggestions. I think that this resolution of the emergency session has rightly indicated the broad lines of approach and the basic principles laid down in it should be implemented.

"The Congo situation has emphasized the increasing responsibilities of UN. Not only have military forces been sent there, but the problem of the development of a huge country has become partly the responsibility of UN. These responsibilities cannot be shirked, and it may have to be considered how best to shoulder these responsibilities.

"Two aspects have to be borne in mind. The broad policies in these grave matters must be laid down by the General Assembly or by the Security Council. Insofar as executive action is concerned, it would not be desirable for the executive to be weakened when frequent and rapid decisions have to be made. That would an abdication of the responsibilities undertaken by UN. If the executive itself is split and pulls in different directions it will not be able to function adequately or with speed. For that reason, the executive should be given authority to act within the terms of the directions issued.

"At the same time the executive has to keep in view all the time the impact of various forces in the world, for we must realize that unfortunately we live in a world where there are many pulls in different directions. The Secretary-General might well consider what organizational steps should be taken to deal adequately with this novel situation.

"It has been suggested that some structural changes should take place in UN. Probably some changes would be desirable, as I have indicated above and because of the emergence of many independent countries in Asia and Africa. But any attempt at bringing about these structural changes by an amendment of the Charter at the present juncture is likely to raise many controversial questions and thus add greatly to the difficulties we face. It should be possible for us, even within the terms of the Charter, to adapt the UN machinery to meet situations as they arise, in view more especially of the increasing responsibilities of UN.

"If, as I earnestly hope, disarmament makes progress, then another domain of vast responsibility will come to UN. It will have to be carefully considered how this responsibility is to be discharged; possibly special commissions, working under the umbrella of UN might be charged with the task."

Referring to China's representation in UN, he said: "For a number of years, India has brought this issue before UN because we have felt that it is not only improper for this great and powerful country to remain unrepresented, but that this has an urgent bearing on all world problems and especially those of disarmament. We hold that all countries must be represented in UN.

"It appears most extraordinary that any argument should be advanced to keep out China and to give the seat meant for China to those who certainly do not and cannot represent China.

"It is well known that we in India have had, and are having, a controversy with the People's Government of China over our frontier. In spite of that controversy, we continue to feel that proper representation of the People's Republic in UN is essential and the longer we delay it, the more harm we cause to UN and to the consideration of the major problems we have before us. This is not a question of liking or disliking but of doing the right thing.

"In this connexion, I should like to mention another country—Mongolia. When we are rightly admitting so many countries to UN, why should Mongolia be left out? What wrong has it done, what violation of the Charter? Here are a quiet and peaceful people working hard for their progress, and it seems to me utterly wrong from any point of principle to exclude them from this great Organization. India has a special sentiment in regard to Mongolia because our relations go back into the distant past of more than 1,500 years ago. Even now there are many evidences of these old contacts and friendly relations between these two countries. I would earnestly recommend that Mongolia should be accepted in this world assembly of nations."

Referring to Algeria he said: "It has been a pain and a torment to many of us in Asia, as in Africa and possibly elsewhere, to witness this continuing tragedy of a brave people fighting for their freedom.

"Once or twice, it appeared that the struggle might end satisfactorily in freedom by the exercise of self-determination. But the moment slipped by, and the tragedy continued. I am convinced that every country in Asia and Africa, and I believe, many countries in other continents also are deeply concerned over this matter and hope earnestly that this terrible war will end soon, bringing freedom in its train for the Algerian people. This is an urgent problem to which UN must address itself in order to bring about an early solution."

He added: "Two or three days ago, I presented on behalf of Ghana, UAR, Indonesia, Yugoslavia and India, a resolution to the General Assembly. That resolution is a simple one and requires little argument to support it. It does not seek to prejudge any issue; it does not seek to bring pressure to bear on any country or individual. There is no cynicism in it. The main purpose of that resolution is to avoid a deadlock in the international situation. Every delegate present here knows how unsatisfactory that situation is today, and how gradually every door and window for the discussion of vital issues is being closed and bolted. As the resolution says, we are deeply concerned with the recent deterioration in international relations which threatens the world with grave consequences.

"There can be no doubt that people everywhere in the world look to this Assembly to take some step to help to ease this situation and lessen world tensions. If this Assembly is unable to take that step, there will be utter disappointment everywhere and not only will the deadlock continue, but there will be a drift in a direction from which it will become increasingly difficult to turn back. The Assembly cannot allow itself to be paralyzed in a matter of such vital importance.

"The responsibility for this deadlock has to be shared by all of us. But in the circumstances as they exist in the world today, a great deal depends upon the two mighty nations, USA and the Soviet Union and if even a small step can be taken by them, the world will heave a sigh of relief.

"We do not accept that by the renewal of contacts between these two great countries, some solution is likely to emerge. We do not underrate the difficulties. Realizing all this and after giving a great deal of thought to these matters, we decided to share our apprehensions with this Assembly and to suggest a step which undoubtedly will help to ease tensions. The resolution has not been placed before this Assembly to add to the controversies already existing, nor to embarrass anyone, but solely with the desire, anxiously felt, that something must be done. We cannot meet here in this Assembly and sit helplessly by, watching the world drift in a direction which can only end in catastrophe.

"Last night I received a letter from the President of USA in which he was good enough to deal with this resolution. I presume that the other sponsors of this resolution have also received a similar reply. This reply has appeared in the Press. I am grateful to the President for writing to us in reply immediately after receiving our communication. Although this letter does not indicate that any contacts, such as we had recommended, are likely to take place in the near future, I should like to point out to this Assembly that the President has not wholly rejected the plea. The door is still open for consideration and the President has expressed his deep anxiety to help in the lessening of international tensions.

"The President has pointed out that the chief problems in the world today are not due to differences between the Soviet Union and USA alone, and therefore are not possible of solution on a bilateral basis. The questions which are disrupting the world at the present time are of immediate and vital concern to other nations as well.

"May I express respectfully my complete agreement with what the President has said. We are convinced that these great questions cannot be dealt with on a bilateral basis or even by a group of countries. They are of intimate and vital concern to the entire world and to all those who have gathered here at this General Assembly meeting from the four corners of the earth. It was because of this feeling that some of us ventured to put this solution before this Assembly.

"If the matter is of concern only to two countries, then perhaps no such necessity would have arisen for us to raise it here. Nor did we think that a renewal of contacts would lead to some magical solution. Such a solution will only come after long and arduous labour in which many countries participate. But we did think that in this present situation of dangerous drift, even a small approach on behalf of the representatives of the two great countries would make a difference and might mark a turn of the tide.

"We are dealing with the future of humanity and no efforts which might have perhaps improved the present situation should be left undone. It is with that intention that we put forward that resolution as a part of the efforts that should be made to open the door for future consultations not only between the two eminent individuals who were mentioned in the resolution but to the world community.

"I earnestly trust and appeal to the Assembly to adopt this resolution unanimously at an early date."

According to an Agency message, Mr. Nehru's speech was hailed in UN lobbies as one of the very few which went beyond the 'cold war' and tried to bring the Assembly back to its historic task as an instrument of peace.

Crown Prince Moulay Hassan (Morocco):

On October 4, Crown Prince Mouby Hassan told the General Assembly that current world tensions were a source of "concern" to his Government.

He criticized what he called attempts at interference in the affairs of small countries and suggested that a sub-committee of five neutral members of the Assembly meet to clear the way for agreements between the Big Powers.

Dr. J. M. A. H. Luns (Netherlands):

The Netherlands Foreign Minister, Dr. J. M. A. H. Luns, affirmed that his Government was prepared to subject its policy and actions in Dutch New Guinea (West Irian) "to the continuous scrutiny and judgment" of UN.

He declared that Dutch policy in the territory, over which Indonesia claimed sovereignty, was "aimed at the self-determination by the Papuan people."

He added that Indonesia "sustained a territorial claim to a part of the island of New Guinea...it wishes to annex part of that island to its own territory without allowing the population of the island to exercise its right of self-determination."

Mr. N. Podgorny (Ukraine):

Addressing the Assembly on October 4, the Ukrainian delegate, Mr. Nikolai Podgorny, said that the most important and acute problem before the Assembly was disarmament.

Lack of an agreement on this meant only an armed peace fraught with the danger of war.

He charged West Germany with pursuing a policy of militarism and said that the policies of the West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, were worse than those of Kaiser Wilhelm and Hitler.

He said that UN had been disgraced in the Congo and Mr. Hammarskjoeld's reply to Mr. Khruschev's demand that he should resign showed that he was still a servant of the Western Powers and not of UN.

Mr. Saeb Salam (Lebanon):

The Prime Minister of Lebanon, Mr. Saeb Salam, declared that "whatever the difficulties in the past, we believe we should give support to the Secretary-General in his efforts to implement the resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council".

Referring to the question of Israel and Palestine, he said that "perhaps the most explosive aspect of Zionist ideology" was the policy of unlimited Zionist immigration into Palestine. Established Jewish communities in all parts of the world were being uprooted to swell the ranks of the Israeli population in Palestine, but this was a patently "mischievous policy" and could only end in disaster.

Indonesia-Netherlands Exchanges:

On October 5, Indonesia and Netherlands traded accusations in the General Assembly over their rival claims to the region of West Irian (Dutch New Guinea).

Mr. R. Subandrio, Indonesian Foreign Minister, took the floor to reply to the statement on October 4 by the Dutch Foreign Minister. The conflict between the Netherlands and Indonesia, he said, arose from the fact that the former had refused to recognize the transfer of sovereignty to all of Indonesia. It was agreed that when Indonesia became independent, that independence would apply to the entire territory of New Guinea.

He added: "Indonesia is not sustaining any territorial claim to New Guinea as Mr. Luns said. We are simply declaring the right of the Indonesian people to be independent and sovereign all over their territory.

"We make no territorial claims. We have no wish to expand our frontiers. It is becoming usual that whenever sovereignty is transferred to a new State, doubts are raised as to whether all parts of the territory should belong to the new State."

Mr. C. W. A. Schurmann, the Netherlands Resident Representative, said: "The Foreign Minister of Indonesia mentioned the agreement made between Indonesia and the Netherlands by which Indonesia became independent and we would transfer the whole territory which was formerly the Dutch East Indies. The Foreign Minister knows as well as I do that that is not correct. There was a Treaty called the Charter of Transfer of Sovereignty in which it was accepted that the fate and future of Dutch New Guinea would be decided within a year."

He added: "Indonesia took it for granted that the population of Dutch New Guinea wished to join Indonesia. But if those people really did want to be part of Indonesia they would make it clear at the appropriate time."

Mr. Frank Aiken (Ireland):

When the general debate was resumed on October 6, the Irish Foreign Minister, Mr. F. Aiken, suggested a non-aggression pact among the Central African States.

Contacts And Statements Of Leaders Outside UN:

Several top-ranking leaders held discussions outside UN and issued statements on problems facing the world Organization.

The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru had meetings with, among others, Marshal Tito, Mr. Harold Macmillan, Dr. K. Nkrumah, Mr. John Diefenbaker, Mr. Christian A. Herter, Dr. Fidel Castro, President G. A. Nasser, Mr. N. Khruschev, President Sukarno and President D. Eisenhower.

Speaking at a dinner given by the United Nations Correspondents Association on October 4, Mr. Nehru said he had the impression that the door was not closed for renewal of contacts between President Eisenhower and Mr. Khruschev.

He re-iterated the Indian view that the present structure of UN was not quite fair to Asia and Africa. The whole structure of UN at San Francisco was based on certain balances which then existed. With the admission of a large number of Afro-Asian States and others, the structure of UN should have kept those changes in view and adapted itself to those conditions step by step. Otherwise, it would lose touch with the realities of the situation.

Asked questions regarding Mr. Khruschev's attack on Mr. Hammarskjoeld and Mr. Hammarskjoeld's impartiality, Mr. Nehru said that all one could do was deliberately try to be impartial, "but our own thinking colours our action."

He said that the five-Power resolution aimed at a renewal of Soviet-American contacts and added that the draft did not mean that "we are ignoring the Heads of other important countries." They were essential to a 'summit' talk.

He said: "You will notice that in the five-Power resolution, it is suggested that there should be a renewal, as a first step, of contacts—our words were carefully chosen—between the President of the United States and the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR. We were troubled by the lack of contact between these two great leaders."

Asked about the UN Secretariat's handling of the Congo operation, he said that it had managed a very difficult and complicated situation with integrity.

Mr. Khruschev told newsmen on September 25 that the disarmament problem would remain unsolved unless his plan for re-organizing United Nations was adopted. USSR was ready to resume disarmament talks, but with neutral nations represented as well as East and West.

On the UN Secretary-General, he said: "If there had been three Secretary-Generals there would have been no crisis in the Congo. Mr. Hammarskjoeld pursued a line which led to paralysation of the legally-constituted Government."

He also had meetings with several leaders including Marshal Tito, Mr. Harold Macmillan, Dr. Nkrumah, President Sukarno, Mr. Nehru and President G. A. Nasser.

After his meeting with Mr. Macmillan on September 29, an official British statement on the talks said that the two leaders discussed the events of the period of the Paris 'Summit' Conference and the situation that had developed since.

The statement said: "The purpose of the meeting was to have an exchange of views which might enable each to understand the other's approach to the basic problems of the day in the hope that it might be possible to find a common language of negotiation.

"Among the subjects they discussed were disarmament, Berlin and the structure of United Nations."

Mr. Khruschev told newsmen on September 29 that it was possible that Russian spies operated in America, but added: "It is one thing if a spy spies; it is another thing for a State to say that it has a right to fly over countries. That is war."

The following day (October 1), he told a news conference at Glen Cove that he still wanted an apology from President Eisenhower for the flight of the American U-2 spy-plane over the Soviet Union on May 1.

Mr. Macmillan had a second meeting with Mr. Khruschev on October 4 when the Soviet Prime Minister called on him.

A communique issued after the meeting said that they had a long and useful talk devoted almost entirely to the means of achieving progress in the field of disarmament.

A British spokesman said that the general assumption was that there would be negotiations at the 'summit' some time later, but there was no specific consideration as to where and when this would take place. He added that the British delegation had received the clear impression that Mr. Khruschev was not willing to take part in a 'Summit' Conference as long as Mr. Eisenhower was President of the United States.

President Eisenhower met a number of leaders between September 22 and 28 and conferred with Latin American leaders as well as Mr. Nehru, President Nasser, Mr. Macmillan and Marshal Tito. He also received the Prime Minister of Nepal, Mr. B. P. Koirala.

President Eisenhower told Mr. Nehru on September 26 during a meeting lasting just over one hour that "this is the time when calm voices are needed" and stressed the importance of arriving at an agreement on disarmament.

On September 27, President Eisenhower and Mr. Macmillan discussed world affairs and issued a call for serious, sober and constructive work in the General Assembly, notably in the matter of disarmament.

At a private meeting of Afro-Asian delegations on September 27, Dr. Nkrumah proposed the establishment of a neutralist group in UN to act as a strong third force between the East and West.

He said: "If we could maintain a solid front, we should be able to establish a neutralist group and together with other uncommitted nations become a strong third force not to be buffeted by the quarrels and ambitions of the Great Powers."

Addressing a luncheon meeting arranged by the United Nations Correspondents Association on September 30, he suggested the appointment of three Deputy Secretary-Generals so as to lift Mr. Hammarskjoeld out of the realm of controversy and criticism.

B. FAO Annual Report: In its Report for 1960 released on October 2, the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) forecast a larger world production of most of the agricultural commodities during 1960-61.

In India, however, there would be reduced yields of wheat and pulses because of drought in the northern part of the country earlier in 1960.

The Report stated that preliminary estimates made by various countries indicated that an increase of five per cent in world agricultural production (excluding mainland China) in 1958-59 was followed in 1959-60 by a rise of about two per cent. The biggest increases in agricultural production during 1959-60, however, were in Western Europe and the Far East.

Discussing the outlook for agricultural production for 1960-61 in the Far East, the Report said: "The large grain crops of the past two seasons have been due, at least in part, to particularly favourable weather and it is, therefore, possible that there may be some levelling off in 1960-61. Extended drought early in 1960 in northern India is expected to reduce the yields of wheat and pulses. Copra production in the Philippines is recovering from the effects of the drought which had reduced the output to low levels in 1958 and 1959."

Reviewing the agricultural policies and development plans of individual countries, it said: "An important new departure in India, which may also have valuable lessons for other less developed countries, is the intensive agricultural district programme known as the 'package' programme, under which a wide range of the materials and services needed by farmers to achieve substantial increases in agricultural production are to be concentrated in select pilot districts."

According to the Report, new economic development plans were announced in Cambodia, Ceylon, Laos, Pakistan, Sarawak and Formosa and new plans were being drafted in India and Thailand.

As regards India, it said: "India began the final year of the Second Five-Year Plan, reasonably confident that the revised expenditure targets of about five-sixths of the original proposals would be implemented. Because of reverses in the agricultural sector, however, the national income increased by only 5.2 per cent during the first three years of the Plan, and the sharp upward revision of the estimated annual population growth of 1.9 per cent indicate that per capita incomes probably did not increase during the period.

"Substantially higher production of foodgrains has been obtained in the past two years because of favourable weather and some acceleration of schemes such as minor irrigation and seed farms. Only about five-sixths of the planned expansion of irrigation is expected to be achieved, however, and the availability of fertilizers has fallen far short of the demand."

Referring to India's draft Third Plan, it said that a major factor influencing the proposals was the upward revision in the estimated rate of population increase and "it is significant that the draft Plan provides for an increase in the number of family planning centres from 1,800 to 8,200." Exports, including cotton, tea, jute, coffee, tobacco and oilseeds, would be stepped up. The targets included food production of 100 to 105 million tons compared with the figure of 110 million tons, recommended by a survey team of the Ford Foundation.

It added that a review of post-War experience in less developed countries suggested that the chief hindrances to agricultural development might not always have been the overall shortage of Government financial resources or the inadequacy of the share of these resources devoted to agriculture. In many cases, agricultural programmes in less developed countries had not led to the results hoped for, because: (1) the Government did not have the administrative and field organization needed to make their policies and programmes effective at the farm level; and (2) a great many of the farmers had no particular incentives to increase their production because of the local economic and institutional conditions with which they were faced.

Stressing the need for enlisting the cooperation of farmers in food production plans, it stated that "farmers like other entrepreneurs, are not likely to make additional efforts unless they expect to benefit by doing so. In many less developed countries, however, the conditions of marketing, land tenure and farm credit are such as to give the farmers little incentive to expand their marketable production, or may even largely preclude any substantial development. Measures to ameliorate these conditions are often essential if the projects of investment are to yield anything approaching their potential return."

C. Research Rocket Fired By USA: A new and powerful research rocket was successfully fired by USA in its first test on September 19.

It carried aloft a pay-load for 1,200 miles to probe the inner Van Allen Radiation Belt.

Towards the end of its high arching flight, the rocket ejected the pay-load down into the Pacific Ocean some 1,200 miles from the launching site at Point Arguello in California.

The heart of the 83.6-lb. capsule, carried atop its 62-ft. Argo D-8 rocket, was a sensitive nuclear emulsion stack to record activity in the mysterious and hazardous lower Van Allen Belt girdling the Equator.

Scientists interpreting "tracks" left in the emulsion by striking atomic particles expect to get a much clearer picture of the Belt's make-up and activity.

The capsule was being returned by ship to San Diego and would be flown from there to the Goddard Space Centre of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) near Washington where the emulsion would be developed and analyzed. A NASA spokesman said that the developing process alone would take two weeks. Interpretation of strikes to determine the number, velocity, distribution, angle and direction of particles would take considerably longer.

This was the first NASA experiment launched from the US west coast. The experiment, called the Nuclear Emulsion Recovery Vehicle (NERV), also carried mould spores that scientists would examine for mutations when the data pack was opened. The number of mutations could give some clue as to how hazardous the radiation in the Van Allen Belt would be for human space travellers. The pack also contained an instrument to count micrometeor hits.

[The two Van Allen Belts, extending from about 500 miles above the Earth to many thousands of miles into space, were discovered by satellite and space probe experiments in 1958 by Dr. James A. Van Allen of Iowa University.]

D. USA Launches "Magnetic Brain" Satellite: The United States on October 4 placed in orbit a "magnetic brain" satellite designed as the forerunner of a world-wide military communication system.

The satellite Courier I-B—is a 61-inch, 500-lb. sphere packed with 5 magnetic tape recorders, transmission equipment and solar cells for transforming the Sun's energy into electricity. It is designed to send and receive simultaneously 68,000 words per minute.

An earlier attempt to place a Courier satellite in orbit failed on August 18, when the carrier rocket exploded 2-1|2 minutes after launching.

The Secretary of the US Army, Mr. Wilbur Brucker, sent a one-minute congratulatory message aboard the Courier, which was beamed to ground stations on its first circuit around the Earth.

President D. D. Eisenhower sent a message from Washington to New York via Courier I-B, to the Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter.

The Courier was orbiting the Earth at an altitude of between 438 miles and 469 miles and was completing one orbit in an hour and 45 minutes.

E. USA Launches "Discoverer XV": The United States on September 13 launched the Discoverer XV satellite from Vandenberg Air Force missile base in another attempt to recover the satellite's capsule.

The capsule, weighing 300 lbs, which was ejected over the Pacific on September 15, was sighted off Christmas Island, more than a 1,000 miles from the spot, in the neighbourhood of Hawaii, where it was expected to come down.

It was announced the following day (September 16) that the capsule had disappeared in rough seas.

G. World Industrial Growth: The United Nations publication, "Patterns of Industrial Growth," released on September 6 said that although the distribution of world industrial output had undergone profound changes between 1938 and 1958, there had been no material changes in the industrial output of Asia and Latin America.

It said that the most significant shift was in North America (USA and Canada) which accounted for 47 per cent of the world's industrial output in 1958, compared to 39 per cent 20 years earlier.

Europe's share of the world industrial output had diminished over the 20-year period from 46 per cent to 38 per cent of the total.

It said, however, that Asia's share of the volume of mining and manufacturing activity in the world remained at about 7 per cent over the 20-year period, while Latin America's had risen by one per cent to about 5 per cent.

It noted that while North America assumed the leadership in industrial output, it had done so with a "relatively much smaller" share of the world industrial employment.

While its share of the world industrial output had gone up from 39 per cent to 47 per cent, the number of its workers increased from 17 per cent of the world total in 1938 to only 23 per cent in 1953, the last year for which such statistics were available.

European employment levels had remained in direct proportion to that continent's industrial output level. Its share of the world's workers dropped from 46 per cent in 1938 to 43 per cent in 1953.

The report added: "The productivity of industrial labour in Latin America and Asia was not only markedly below the world average in 1938, but also lagged behind the rise in this average between 1938 and 1953.

"In Latin America, the productivity of industrial labour was three-fifths of the world average in 1938 and one-half in 1953.

"The corresponding figures for Asia were one-fourth and one-fifth of the world average."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

H. World's Population: According to the United Nations Demographic Year-Book published at UN Headquarters on August 28, there are about 2,900,000,000 people in the world. Some 48,000,000 persons are added every year.

The Year-Book made the following points:

Africa is the most prolific continent, with a birth-rate of 45 per thousand. As a region, South-East Asia and tropical and southern Africa go one better—46 per thousand.

At the other end of the scale, Europe's birth-rate is only 19 per thousand. The Isle of Man is at the bottom of the scale with only 12.1 followed by Sweden with 14.2.

Japan, whose pre-War birth-rate was among the highest, now has one of the lowest—18 per thousand.

More than half the world's inhabitants live in four countries—China (660 million), India (403 million), the Soviet Union (209 million) and the United States (178 million).

Britain ranks tenth in size of population, after Japan, Pakistan, Indonesia, Brazil and West Germany. All these countries have more than 50 million people each.

Children born in Norway, Sweden and Holland have the greatest expectancy of life. Girls born in those countries can expect to live upto 74 or more and boys 71.

India remains at the bottom of the scale with a life expectancy of 32. But it is one of the few areas where men live longer than women.

Guinea has the highest death rate—40 per thousand.

People are tending to get married younger in industrialized countries and older in others. The world average is 24 for women and 27 for men. Albania, Egypt, the Fiji Islands, Costa Rica and Honduras have the youngest brides and French Guiana, Macao and the West Indies the oldest.

The figures show that the "baby boom" which followed World War II reached its peak in 1946 and 1947.

A chart of birth-rates by age groups since 1949 in 10 countries shows that fertility rates for women aged 20 to 24 increased in Australia, England and Wales, West Germany, Jamaica and the United States. The rate decreased in Hungary, Yugoslavia, Israel and Japan and remained steady in France.

A table of illegitimacy rates in 55 sovereign countries shows that 60 per cent of children were born to unmarried mothers in El Salvador, the Dominican Republic, Honduras, the West Indies, Guatemala and Panama and less than one per cent in Albania and the United Arab Republic.

I. Increase In World Rice Exports: According to the latest Rice Bulletin issued by the Commonwealth Economic Committee in London, exports of rice so far recorded in 1960 have shown a substantial increase over 1959, the main expansion being in consignments from Burma, USA and the Republic of Viet-Nam.

On the import side, India, Ceylon and Indonesia had each made large purchases, but Japan had reduced her imports of rice.

The Report said: "The export prices showed a sharp rise during early August, following the reports of substantial purchases; prices in Cambodia also rose in July, but the market in Burma was quiet. Quotations for US rice showed little movement up to the end of July."

The Report's revised estimate of production of paddy in Ceylon was given as 712,000 tons, compared with 738,000 tons in 1959. The lower out-turn was mainly due to a fall of 60,000 acres in the area harvested.

Dealing with exports, it said: "There was a marked fall in rice exports from Burma in May, reflecting the shortage of supplies. Nevertheless, total shipments during January-May at 1,103,000 tons, were about 460,000 tons greater than in the corresponding period of 1959.

"Almost every important market has taken considerably more, especially those countries with which Burma has Government-to-Government contracts; Indonesia and India have been the largest outlets so far this year, with Ceylon in third place, while Pakistan and Japan also took increased amounts."

Shipments of rice from China, as reported by importing countries, appeared more substantial than believed earlier. Excluding consignments to the Soviet Union, 164,800 tons of Chinese rice were shipped during the first quarter of the year, principally to Ceylon, Poland, Malaya and Hong Kong.

A. Activities Of KMT Stragglers: Kuomintang stragglers with their headquarters at Kenglap on the Mekong river and a 3,000-metre air-strip near Palliao down the river, were reported to have been stepping up their activities in the south-eastern sector of Kenglung State.

Planes have been landing at the air-strip regularly twice a week, bringing supplies, ammunition and clothing for the KMT and taking away consignments of opium. Sometimes they would drop supplies on the air-strip.

During the 'caretaker' regime of Gen. Ne Win priority was given to the task of dealing with insurgents rather than with the KMT and they had made the most of this respite to recruit about 5,000 Kachins, Lawas, Lahus, Ekaws and Chinese from Kokang State to work for them.

Most of the recruits were 15 to 16 years old and had been coerced or tempted with money to work for the KMT.

The KMT had imposed a reign of terror over the inhabitants living in the border area. Lahus who had loyally co-operated with the Government troops had been sought out and tortured or killed.

CEYLON

A. Mr. J. Cyrankiewicz's Visit: The Polish Prime Minister, Mr. Jozef Cyrankiewicz, accompanied by his wife, paid a goodwill visit to Ceylon from September 27 to October 1. A warm reception was accorded to them during their brief stay.

A Joint Statement issued at the conclusion of their visit on October 1, by Mr. Cyrankiewicz and Ceylon's Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, said that the two leaders were satisfied that relations between Ceylon and Poland had been developing to the benefit of both nations.

The Statement said that there were possibilities for substantial expansion, both of trade and of scientific and technical co-operation and expressed the intention to strengthen further Ceylon-Polish economic relations.

Both the Prime Ministers expressed their conviction that China should finally find her rightful place in United Nations and extended their full support to the peoples "struggling for liberation from colonial oppression" and welcomed the emergence of a number of independent States in Africa.

They considered it necessary for all countries to increase their efforts for safeguarding peace and solving the most urgent problem of the present time, namely, universal disarmament.

Later in the day (October 1) Mr. Cyrankiewicz told a news conference in Colombo that Poland had the greatest admiration for the policies of the Ceylon Government which were based on understanding and on the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence between nations, irrespective of their ideologies.

He added that Mrs. Bandaranaike had accepted an invitation to visit Poland at a date to be fixed later.

B. Nationalization Of Insurance: The Government recently announced the drafting of legislation to control insurance business pending its nationalization.

The draft legislation provided for the creation of a Statutory Corporation to take over and run any life insurance company in the interim period.

The Corporation, known as the Ceylon Life Insurance Corporation, would have a chairman appointed by the Finance Minister.

The proposed legislation absolved the Corporation of the liability to meet claims arising out of any life policy issued by any insurance company thus controlled.

As regards compensation, the draft Bill stated: "An insurer shall be entitled to compensation at the rate of Re. 1 for each unit of Rs. 5,000 or part thereof of the aggregate sum received by such insurer for 1958 by way of premia for policies for each month of the period during which his business is vested in the Corporation."

After the take-over, every insurance company would have to deposit all securities and documents of title pertaining to any assets in the Central Bank of Ceylon.

CHINA

A. U Nu's Visit: The Burmese Prime Minister, U Nu, as head of a Government delegation, visited Peking from September 28 to October 4.

Accompanying him were a military delegation, a trade delegation, a cultural delegation, a sports delegation and a Press delegation. Also present in Peking during the period was the Chief of Staff of the Burmese armed forces, Gen. Ne Win, who as Prime Minister had formerly signed the Sino-Burmese Agreement on the Boundary question, (see page 3151).

During their visit the Burmese guests were received by the Chairman of the Communist Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung and the Chairman of the Chinese People's Republic, Mr. Liu Shao-chi.

State Banquet:

The Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, gave a banquet in honour of the guests on September 28.

On the occasion, he said that with the signing of the Sino-Burmese Boundary Treaty and the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Non-Aggression, "a majestic edifice of friendship between the two countries would finally be brought to completion." He was happy to be able to celebrate its inauguration together with U Nu and Gen. Ne Win who had made positive contributions to the building of this edifice.

U Nu, in his reply, stated that the practice and adherence to the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence would eliminate suspicion, fear and misunderstanding and that the attainment of Sino-Burmese boundary accord was a clear example of peaceful co-existence.

He admired the work of the members of the Joint Boundary Commission which had accomplished the demarcation of the border within a short period and praised the goodwill and co-operation extended by China for the successful conclusion of the boundary settlement.

The Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, declared that contrary to the Western critics' allegation that China was war-like, People's China was the most peace-loving nation, always striving for peace and friendship among nations. Some Western Powers, feared the recognition of China and the signing of a Friendship Treaty between China and other nations. These nations, he said, should discard fear and suspicion and develop the desire for peace instead.

He called 1960 the "year of Sino-Burmese friendship," because it had started with the signing of the Sino-Burmese Treaty of Friendship and the Boundary Agreement in January, 1960 and said that now the two countries would sign the final Boundary Agreement.

On October 1, the Burmese delegations attended the National Day parade staged in Tien An Men Square in Peking to commemorate the 11th anniversary of the inauguration of the People's Republic of China.

On behalf of the Burmese people, they conveyed fraternal greetings to the Chinese people, congratulated them on their achievements since the inauguration of the People's Republic and wished them further successes and victories in the stupendous task of national reconstruction.

Sino-Burmese Boundary Treaty Signed:

The same day (October 1) at a ceremony held in the Great Hall of the People in Peking, U Nu, on behalf of the Government of the Union of Burma, and Mr. Chou En-lai, on behalf of the Government of the People's Republic of China, signed the Sino-Burmese Boundary Treaty.

The signing of this Treaty finally settled the question of the boundary between the two countries.

The Burmese Minister of Justice, U Maung, the Kachin Minister, Sama Duwa Sinwa Nawng, Gen. Ne Win, Brigadier Aung Gyi, and the Foreign Office Permanent Secretary, Mr. James Barrington, were among those present on the Burmese side.

President Liu Shao-chi, Marshal Chu Teh and Marshal Chen Yi and all Vice-Premiers were present to witness the signing of the Treaty.

Speaking on the occasion, Mr. Chou En-lai said that the Treaty "has opened up a new chapter in the history of Sino-Burmese friendly relations, set a good example of peaceful co-existence among Asian countries on the basis of the Five Principles and provided a brilliant model for all countries in the world for settling international disputes by peaceful means."

U Nu said that he was moved by his visit to China and his meeting with Chinese leaders and the signing of a Boundary Treaty which "will have a positive significance for the rest of the world."

He added: "This significance is derived from the fact that your country and mine have been able to solve at last the long-standing problem existing for over a thousand years between the two nations, and this solution has been arrived at by the two countries to their mutual satisfaction, freely, amicably and harmoniously.

"If we carefully ponder over the Five Principles, we shall find in the context of the present world situation that they are Principles which should be observed and practised by every country in the world."

The following is the text of the Treaty:

"The Chairman of the People's Republic of China and the President of the Union of Burma;

"Being of the agreed opinion that the long outstanding question of the boundary between the two countries is a question inherited from history, that since the two countries successively won independence, the traditional friendly and good-neighbourly relations between the two countries have undergone a new development, and the fact that the Prime Ministers of the two countries jointly initiated in 1954 the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence among nations with different social systems as principles guiding relations between the two countries, has all the more greatly promoted the friendly relations between the two countries and has created conditions for the settlement of the question of the boundary between the two countries;

"Noting with satisfaction that the Government of the People's Republic of China and the successive Governments of the Union of Burma, conducting friendly consultation and showing mutual understanding and accommodation in accordance with the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence, have overcome various difficulties, and have eventually reached a successful and overall settlement of the question of the boundary between the two countries; and

"Firmly believing that the formal delimitation of the entire boundary between the two countries and its emergence as a boundary of peace and friendship not only represent a milestone in the further development of the friendly relations between China and Burma, but also constitute an important contribution to the safeguarding of Asian and world peace;

"Have resolved for this purpose to conclude the present Treaty on the basis of the agreement on the question of the boundary between the two countries signed by Premier Chou En-lai and Prime Minister Ne Win on January 28, 1960 and appointed their respective plenipotentiaries as follows:

"Chou En-lai, Premier of the State Council, for the Chairman of the People's Republic of China, and

"U Nu, Prime Minister, for the President of the Union of Burma,

"Who, having mutually examined their full powers and found them in good and due form, have agreed upon the following:

"Article I: In accordance with the principle of respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity and in the spirit of friendship and mutual accommodation, the Union of Burma agrees to return to China the areas of Hpimaw, Gawlum and Kangfang (measuring about 153 square kilometres, 59 square miles) which belongs to China; and the People's Republic of China agrees to delimit the section of the boundary from the junction the Nam Hpa and the Nam Ting rivers to the junction of the Nam Hka and the Nam Yung rivers in accordance with the Notes exchanged between the Chinese and the British Governments on June 18, 1941, with the exception of the adjustments provided for in Articles II and III of the present Treaty.

"Article II: In view of the relations of equality and friendship between China and Burma, the two parties decide to abrogate the 'perpetual lease' by Burma of the Meng-Mao triangular area (Namwan assigned tract) which belongs to China. Taking into account the practical needs of the Burmese side, the Chinese side agrees to turn over this area (measuring about 220 square kilometres, 85 square miles) to Burma to become part of the territory of the Union of Burma. In exchange, and having regard for the historical ties and the integrity of the tribes, the Burmese side agrees to turn over to China to become part of Chinese territory the areas (measuring about 189 square kilometres, 73 square miles) under the jurisdiction of the Panhung and Panlao tribes, which belong to Burma according to the provision in the Notes exchanged between the Chinese and the British Governments on June 18, 1941.

"Article III: For the convenience of administration by each side and having regard for the intra-tribal relationship and production and livelihood needs of the local inhabitants, the two parties agree to make fair and reasonable adjustments to a small section of the boundary line as defined in the Notes exchanged between the Chinese and the British Governments on June 18, 1941, by including in China Yawng Hok and Lungnai villages and including in Burma Umhpa, Pan Kung, Pan Nawng and Pan Wai villages, so that these boundary-line-intersected villages will no longer be intersected by the boundary line.

"Article IV: The Chinese Government, in line with its consistent policy of opposing foreign prerogatives and respecting the sovereignty of other countries, renounces China's right of participation in mining enterprises at Lufang in Burma as provided in the Notes exchanged between the Chinese and the British Governments on June 18, 1941.

"Article V: The contracting parties agree that the section of the boundary from the high conical peak to the western extremity of the Sino-Burmese boundary, with the exception of the areas of Hpimaw, Gawlum and Kangfang, shall be fixed along the traditional customary line, i.e., from the high conical peak northwards along the water-shed betwen the Taping, the Shweli and the Nu rivers and the section of the Tulung (Taron) River above western Chingdam Village on the one hand and the Nmai Hka River on the other to a point on the south bank of the Tulung (Taron) River west of western Chingdam Village, thence across the Tulung (Taron) River and then further along the water-shed between the section of the Tulung (Taron) River above western Chingdam Village and the Tsayul (Zayul) River on the one hand and all the upper tributaries of the Irrawaddy River excluding the section of the Tulung (Taron) River above western Chingdam Village on the other, to the western extremity of the Sino-Burmese boundary.

"Article VI: The contracting parties affirm that the two sections of the boundary from the high conical peak to the junction of the Nam Hpa and the Nam Ting rivers and from the junction of the Nam Hka and the Nam Yung rivers to the south-eastern extremity of the Sino-Burmese boundary at the junction of the Nam La and the Lanchang (Mekong) rivers were already delimited in the past and require no change, the boundary being as delineated in the maps attached to the present Treaty.

"Article VII: In accordance with the provisions of Articles I and V of the present Treaty, the alignment of the section of the boundary line from the high conical peak to the western extremity of the Sino-Burmese boundary shall be as follows:

"(1) From the high conical peak (Mu-Lang Pum, Manang Pum) the line runs northwards, then south-eastwards and then north-eastwards along the water-shed between the Taping River (Ta Ying Chiang), the Lung Chuan Chiang (Shweli) and the Nu (Salween) River on the one hand and the Nmai Hka River on the other, passing through Shuei Cheng (Machyi Chet) Pass, Panwa Pass, Tasamin Shan, Hpare (Yemawlaunggu Hkyet) Pass and Chitsu (Lagwi) Pass to the source of the Chu-I Ta Ho (Chu-Iho Ta Ho);

"(2) From the source of the Chu-I Ta Ho (Chu-Iho Ta Ho) the line runs northwestwards along the Chu-I Ta Ho (Chu-Iho Ta Ho) to its junction with its tributary flowing in from the north, thence northwards along this tributary to a point on the water-shed between the tributaries of the Hpimaw (Htang-kyam Kyaung) River and its tributary, (Moku Kyaung) River and the Wang Ke River on the one hand and the Chu-I Ta Ho (Chu-Iho Ta Ho), on the other, thence westwards along this water-shed, passing through Ma Chu Lo Waddy (2423 metres, 7950 feet), thence northwards till it crosses the Hpimaw (Htang-kyam Kyaung) River west of Hpimaw Village; thence northwards along the ridge, passing through Luksang Bum and crossing the Gan (Kang Hao) River to reach the Wu Chung (Wasok Kyaung) River; thence westwards along the Wu Chung (Wasok Kyaung) River to its junction with the Hsiao Chiang (Ngawchang Hka) River, thence northwards up the Hsiao Chiang (Ngawchang Hka) River to its junction with the Ta Hpawte (Hpawate Kyaung) River. Thence the line runs north of Kangfang Village generally eastwards and then south-eastwards along the water-shed between the Hsiao Hpawte (Hpawshi Kyaung) River and the Wu Chung (Wasok Kyaung) River on the one hand and the Ta Hpawte (Hpawte Kyaung) River on the other, to a point on the water-shed between the Nu (Salween) and the Nmai Hka rivers;

"(3) From the above-mentioned point on the water-shed between the Nu (Salween) and the Nmai Hka rivers, the line runs generally by northwards along the water-shed betwen the Nu (Salween) River and the section of the Tulung (Taron) River above western Chingdam Village on the one hand and the Nmai Hka River on the other, passing through Kia Ngo Tu (Sajyang) Pass, Sala Pass, Ming Ke (Nahke) Pass, Ni Chi Ku (Gi Gi Thara) Pass, Kawch Thara Pass, Jongit L'ka and Maguchi Pass; thence the line continues to run northwards and then generally westwards, passing the Ugh Alang L'ka, Mawa L'ka, Pang Tang Shan (Pumtang Razi), Lonlang L'ka, Hkora Razi to Tusehpong Razi;

"(4) From Tusehpong Razi, the line runs generally north-westwards along the ridge, passing through height 2892 metres and height 2140.3 metres, to a point on the south bank of the Tulung (Taron) River west of western Chingdam Village. Thence it crosses the Tulung (Taron) River to its junction with its tributary on its northern bank, and thence north-westwards along the ridge to Kundam Razi (Lungawng Hpong);

"(5) From Kundam Razi (Lung Awng Hpong) the line runs generally northwards and north-westwards along the water-shed between the section of the Tulung (Taron) River above Western Chingdam village on the one hand, and the upper tributaries of the Irrawaddy River (excluding the section of the Tulung above western Chingdam village) on the other passing through Thala Pass, Sungya (Amansan) L'Ka to Yulang Pass;

"(6) From Yulang Pass the line runs generally south-westwards along the water-shed between the Tsayul (Zayul)

River on the one hand and the upper tributaries of the Irrawaddy River on the other, passing through Gamlang L'Ka to the western extremity of the Burmese-Chinese Boundary.

"In accordance with the provisions of Articles I, II, III and VI of the present Treaty, the alignment of the section of the boundary line from the High Conical Peak to the south-eastern extremity of the Burmese-Chinese boundary shall be as follows:

"(1) From the High Conical Peak, the line runs generally south-westwards along the water-shed between the upper tributaries of the Taping River, the Mong Ka Hka and the upper tributaries of the Ta Pa Chiang (Tabak Hka) Rivers on the one hand and the lower tributaries of the Nmai Hka River on the other, passing through Ta Ko Kou (Lunghkyen Kyet) and thence north-westwards to Hsiao Chueh Pass (Tabak-Hku Hkyet);

"(2) From Hsiao Chueh Pass (Tabak-Hku Hkyet) the line runs down the Ta Pa Chiang (Tabak Hka), the Mong Ka Hka and up the Shin Tzu (Pankoi Hka) River (the upper stretch of which is known as the Hkatong Hka River) to its source;

"(3) From the source of the Shih Tzu (Paknoi Hka) River the line runs south-westwards and then westwards along the water-shed between the Mong Lai Hka on the one hand and the Pajao Hka, the Ma Li Ka River and the Nan Shan (Namsang Hka) River on the other to the source of the Laisa Stream;

"(4) From the source of the Laisa stream, the line runs down the Laisa stream and up the Mu Lei Chiang (Molechanug) and the Gayang Hka (Cheyang Hka), passing through Ma Po Tzu (A-Law-Hkyet), and then runs southwards down the Nan Pen Chiang (Nampaung Hka) to its junction with the Taping River, thence eastwards up the Taping river to the point where the Taping river meets a small ridge west of the junction of the Kuli Hka Stream with the Taping river;

"(5) From the point where the Taping river meets the above-mentioned small ridge, the line runs along the water-shed between the Kuli Hka stream, the Husa (Namsa Hka) River and the tributaries of the Namwan River on the one hand and the tributaries of the Taping River west of the Kuli Hka Stream on the other, up to Pang Chien Shan (Pan Teng Shan);

"(6) From Pang Chien Shan (Pan Teng Shan), the line runs southwards to join the Kindit Hka, then down the Kindit Hka and the Nam Wa Hka (Pang Ling River) to a point on the south bank of the Nam Wa Hka (Pang Ling River) south-east Man Yung Hai Village and north of Nawang Sa Village thence in a straight line south-westwards and then it runs down the course of the Nam Sah (Manting Hka) River as at the time when the boundary was demarcated in the past to its junction with the Namwan River, thence down the course of the Namwan River as it was at that time to its junction with the course of the Shweli River as it was at that time;

"(7) From the junction of the course of the Namwan River and the Shweli River as at the time when the boundary was demarcated in the past to the junction of the Shweli and the Wanting (Nam Yang) Rivers, the location of the line shall be as delineated on the maps attached to the present Treaty. Thence the line runs up the course of the Wanting (Nam Yang) River as at the time when the boundary was demarcated in the past and the Weishang Hka, then turns north-westwards along a tributary of the Nam Che Hka (Nam Hse) River to its junction with the Nam Che Hka (Nam Hse) River, thence eastwards up the Nam Che Hka (Nam Hse) River, passing through Ching Shu Pass, and thence along the Monglon Hka and the original course of Mong Ko (Nam Ko) River as at the time when the boundary was demarcated in the past, thence up the Nam Hkai and the Nam Pang Wa Rivers, passing through a pass, and then along the Man Hsing (Nam Hpawn) River (whose upper stretch is known as the Nam Tep (Nam Lep River) to its junction with the Nu (Salween) River, thence eastwards up the Nu (Salween) River to its junction with the Ti Kai Kou (Nan Men) Stream;

"(8) From the junction of the Nu (Salween) River with the Ti Kai Kou (Nan Men) Stream, the line runs southwards along the Ti Kai Kou (Nan Men) Stream, then southwards along the water-shed between the Meng Peng Ho the upper stretch of the Nam Peng River on the one hand and the tributaries of the Nu (Salween) River on the other up to Pao Lou Shan;

"(9) From Pao Lou Shan, the line runs south-eastwards along the Wayao Kou Stream, the ridge south of the Mai Ti (Ma Ti Ho) River, the Pan Chiao Ho and the Hsiao Lu Chang (Hsin Chai Kou) Stream up to the source of the Hsiao Lu Chang (Hsin Chai Kou) Stream. From the source of the above stream to the junction of the Nam Hpa and the Nam Ting Rivers, the location of the line shall be as delineated on the maps attached to the present Treaty. The line then runs eastwards for about four kilometres (about three miles) up the Nam Ting River and thence south-eastwards along the north-west slope of Kummuta Shan (Loi Hseng) to the top of Kummuta Shan (Loi Hseng);

"(10) From the top of Kummuta Shan (Loi Hseng) the line runs south-eastwards along a tributary of the Kung Meng Ho (Nam Loi Hsa) River to its junction with another tributary flowing in from the south-east: thence the latter tributary to a point north-west of Maklawt (Ma Law) Village. Thence, the line runs in a straight line to a point south-west of Maklawt (Ma Law) Village, and again in a straight line crosses a tributary of the Yun Hsing (Nam Tap) River to Shien Jen Shan, located east of the junction of the above-mentioned tributary with another tributary of the Yun Hsing (Nam Tap) River, thence along the water-shed between the above two tributaries of the Yun Hsing (Nam Tap) River to the source of the one to the west and then turn westwards and south-west along the Mong Ling Shan ridge, up to the top of Mong Ling Shan. Thence it runs eastwards and south-eastwards along the Nam Pan River to its junction with a tributary north-east of Yakaw Chai (Ya Kou Sai) Village, which flows in from the south-west: thence in a south-westerly direction up that tributary to a point north-east of Yakaw Chai (Ya Kou Sai Village, from where it turns southwards passing through a point east of Yakaw Chai (Ya Kou Sai) Village, and crosses a tributary of the Nam Pan River south of Yakaw Chai (Ya Kou Sai) Village, thence westwards to the source of the Nam It River a little east of Chao Pao (Taklyet No) Village. Thence the line runs southwards along the Nam It and the Nam Mu Rivers, and then turns eastwards along the Nam Kunglong and the Chawk Hkrak Rivers to the north-east source of the Chawk Hkrak River;

"(11) From the north-east source of the Chawk Hkrak River, the line runs southwards and eastwards along the water-shed between the upper tributaries of the Nam Kunglong River on the one hand and the southern tributaries of the Chawk Hkrak River and the Nan Tin (Nam Htung) River on the other, to a point on the west side of Umhpa Village. Thence it runs eastwards passing a point 100 metres north of Umhpa Village, and then eastwards up to the source of a small river, on the above-mentioned water-shed, then along the ridge eastwards to the source of a tributary of the Mongtum (Nam Tum) River (the upper stretch of which is called the Tatung River), which it follows in an easterly and north-easterly direction to its junction with another tributary of the Mongtum (Nam Tum) River following it from the south-east; thence it follows this tributary to its source on the water-shed between the Mongtum (Nam Tung and the Lung Ta Hsiao Ho (Nam Lawng) Rivers. It then crosses the water-shed in an easterly direction to the source of the Lung Ta Hsiao Ho (Nam Lawng) River which it follows to its junction with its tributary flowing in from the north, thence in northerly direction along the above-mentioned tributary passing through a point on the Kanpinau ridge, thence generally eastwards along a valley crossing the junction of two sub-tributaries of a tributary of the Lung Ta Hsiao Ho (Nam Lawng) River then north-eastwards to the water-shed between the Mongtum (Nam Tum) River on the one hand, and the Nam Ma River on the other, until it reaches height 1941.8 metres (6370 feet). Thence the line runs eastward, then southwards and then north-westwards along the water-shed between the Mongtum (Nam Tum), the La Meng (Nam Meng Ho) the He (Hei Ho), the Ku Hsing Ho (Nam Hka Lam) and the Nam Hka Hkao (Nam Hsiang) Rivers on the one hand and the Nam Ma River on the other, up to a point on this water-shed north-west of La Law Village;

"(12) From the point on the above-mentioned water-shed north-west of La Law Village the line runs down the nearest tributary of the Nam Hka Hkao River and thence down the Nam Hka Hkao River to its junction with a tributary flowing in from the south-west. Thence the line runs generally south-westwards up that tributary to its source, which is north-east of and nearest to height 2180 metres (7152 feet), thence it crosses the ridge at point 150 metres (492 feet) south-east of the above-mentioned height and then turns southwards to the source of the nearest tributary of the Nam Lung (Nam Sak) River, rising at the above-mentioned height. Thence it runs along this tributary to its junction with the Nam Lung (Nam Sak) River, from where it proceeds along the Nam Lung (Nam Sak), the Nam Hsa and the Nam Hka River to the junction of the Nam Hka and the Nam Yung Rivers, and thence up the Nam Yung River to its source;

"(13) From the source of the Nam Yung River the line runs in south-easterly direction to the water-shed between the Na-Wu (Nam Wong) and the Nam Pai (Nam Hpe) Rivers: thence generally eastwards along the above-mentioned water-shed and then eastwards along the Na Wu (Nam Wong) River, which it follows to its junction with the Nan Lai (Nam Lai) River, thence along the water-shed between the Na Wu (Nam Wong) and the Nan Lai (Nam Lai) Rivers to the Ang Lang Shan (Loi Ang Lawng) ridge; thence northwards along the ridge to the top of Ang Lang Shan (Loi Ang Lawng), thence generally eastwards along the ridge, crosses the Nam Tung Chik (Nam Tonghkek) River and then follows the water-shed between the tributaries on the west bank of the Nam Lei (Nam Lwe) River at the north of the La Ting (Hwe-Kye-Tai) River and the Nan La Hoa tributary of the (Nam Ma) River on the one hand and the tributaries of the west bank of the Nan Lei (Nam Lwe) River at the south of the La Ting (Hwe-Kye-Tai) River on the other, up to the top of Pang Shun Shan (Loi Pang Shun);

"(14) From the top of Pang Shun (Loi Pan Shun) the line runs generally eastwards along the La Ting (Hwe-Kye-Tai) River, the Nam Lei (Nam Lwe) River, the course of the Nan Lo (Nam Lwa) Stream as at the time when the boundary was demarcated in the past, and the Nan Wo (Nambok) River to the source of the Nam Wo (Nambok) River at Nan Wo Kai Nan Shan (Loi Kwainang);

"(15) From the source of the Nan Wo (Nambok) River at Nan Wo Kai Nai Shan (Loi Kwainang) the line runs generally eastwards along the water-shed between the Nan La (Nam Lak) a tributary of the Nam Lei (Nam Lwe) River, the Nan Pai (Nam Hpe) and the Nan Hsi (Nam Haw) Rivers on the one hand and the Nan Ping (Nam Hpen) the Nan Mau (Nam Mawng) and the Nan Hsi Pang

(Nam Hsi Pang) Rivers on the other, up to San Min Po Loi (Hsammong);

"(16) From San Min Po (Loi Hsammong) the line runs in a general north-easterly direction to a point on the west bank of the Nam Lam River. Thence it descends the Nam Lam River to the foot of Chiu Na Shan (Kyu Nak) on the south bank of the Nam Lam River and then runs in a general south-easterly direction passing through Hue Ling Lang (Hwe Mawk-Hkio), La Ti (La Tip), Nan Meng Hao (Nam-Mong Hau) to Mai-Niu Tung (Mai Niu-Tawng); thence the line runs in a general north-easterly direction passing through Lung Man Tang (Long-Man-Tang) to the Hui La (Hwe-La) Stream, which it follows northwards to its junction with the Nam Lam River. Thence the line runs eastwards and southwards along the Nam Lam, the Nan Chih (Nam Se) rivers and the Nam Chla (Hwe Sak) Stream, to Lei Len Ti Fa Shan (Loi Len Ti Tpa). The line then follows the Nam Mot (Nan Mai), the Nan Tung (Nam Tung) and the Nam Ta rivers to Hsing Kang Lei Shan (Loi Makhin-Kawng);

"(17) From Hsing Kang Lei Shan (Loi Makhin-Kawng) the line runs eastwards along the water-shed between the Nam Nga River and its upper tributaries on the one hand and the Nam Loi River (including its tributary the Nam He River) on the other, to the top of Kwang Pien Nei Shan (Kwang Peknoi);

"(18) From the top of Kwang Pien Nei Shan (Kwang Peknoi) the line runs generally north-eastwards along the Hue Le (Nam Luk) River and the course of the Nam Nga River as at the time when the boundary was demarcated in the past, to the junction of the Nam Nga and the Lanchang (Mekong) rivers; thence down the Lanchang (Mekong) River up to the south-eastern extremity of the Sino-Burmese boundary line at the junction of the Nam La and the Lanchang (Mekong) rivers.

"The alignment of the entire boundary line between the two countries described in this Article and the location of the temporary boundary marks erected by both sides during a joint survey are shown on the 1/250,000 maps indicating the entire boundary and on the 1/50,000 maps of certain areas, which are attached to the present Treaty.

"Article VIII; The contracting parties agree that wherever the boundary follows a river, the mid-stream line shall be the boundary in the case of an unnavigable river, and the middle line of the main navigational channel (the deepest water-course) shall be the boundary in the case of a navigable river. In case the boundary river changes its course, the boundary line between the two countries shall remain unchanged in the absence of other agreements between the two sides.

"Article IX; The contracting parties agree that:

"(1) Upon the coming into force of the present Treaty, the Meng-Mao triangular area to be turned over to Burma under Article II of the present Treaty shall become territory of the Union of Burma;

"(2) The area of Hpimaw, Gawlum and Kangfang to be returned to China under Article I of the present Treaty and the areas under the jurisdiction of the Panhung and Panlao tribes to be turned over to China under Article II shall be handed over by the Burmese Government to the Chinese Government within four months after the present Treaty comes into force;

"(3) The areas to be adjusted under Article III of the present Treaty shall be handed over respectively by the government of one contracting party to that of the other within four months after the present Treaty comes into force.

"Article X: After the signing of the present Treaty, the Sino-Burmese Joint Boundary Committee constituted in pursuance of the Agreement between the two parties on the question of the boundary between the two countries of January 28, 1960, shall continue to carry out necessary surveys of the boundary line between the two countries, to set up new boundary markers and to examine, repair and remould old boundary markers, and shall then draft a Protocol setting forth in detail the alignment of the entire boundary line and the location of all the boundary markers, with detailed maps attached showing the boundary line and the location of the boundary markers. The above-mentioned Protocol, upon being concluded by the governments of the two countries, shall become an annexe to the present Treaty and the detailed maps shall replace the maps attached to the present Treaty.

"Upon the conclusion of the above-mentioned Protocol, the tasks of the Sino-Burmese Joint Boundary Committee shall be terminated, and the agreement between the two parties on the question of the boundary between the two countries of January 28, 1960 shall cease to be in force.

"Article XI: The contracting parties agree that any dispute concerning the boundary, which may arise after the formal delimitation of the boundary between the two countries shall be settled by the two sides through friendly consultations.

"Article XII: The present Treaty is subject to ratification and the Instruments of Ratification will be exchanged in Rangoon as soon as possible.

"The present Treaty shall come into force on the day of the exchange of the Instruments of Ratification.

"Upon the coming into force of the present Treaty, all past treaties, exchanged notes and other documents relating to the boundary between the two countries shall be no longer in force, except as otherwise provided in Article X of the present Treaty with regard to the agreement between the two parties on the question of the boundary between the two countries of January 28, 1960."

Joint Communique:

A joint communique issued on October 4 at the end of U Nu's visit stressed that following the conclusion of the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Non-Aggression and the Boundary Treaty, the relations between the two countries had entered a new stage.

The communique noted "with deep satisfaction that, with the conclusion of the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Non-Aggression and the Boundary Treaty between the two countries, the edifice symbolic of Sino-Burmese friendship has been successfully built up through the joint efforts of the two peoples under the guidance of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence jointly initiated by the two countries and in the spirit of mutual understanding and accommodation. The friendly relations of the two countries have thereby entered a new stage.

"The two Premiers are firmly convinced that this happy development in the relations between the Union of Burma and the People's Republic of China is not only in the interest of the two countries, but also promotes the cause of world peace and friendly relations among nations with different social systems, and that it constitutes a lasting monument to the vitality of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence.

"Prime Minister U Nu and Premier Chou En-lai re-affirmed the solemn determination of their two countries to safeguard, consolidate and expand this edifice of Sino-Burmese friendship, and to that end, to maintain closer contact and promote further expansion of economic and cultural co-operation between them in accordance with the principles of equality and mutual benefit and of non-interference in each others' internal affairs.

"Prime Minister U Nu and Premier Chou En-lai also had a frank and friendly exchange of views on the general international situation. They took note that the present development of the international situation is more then ever favourable to the cause of opposing colonialism; the majority of the countries of Asia and Africa have recently emerged from their former colonial or semi-colonial status and are struggling for a new life of independence, dignity, progress and prosperity for their peoples. The two Premiers expressed sympathy and support for this struggle and agreed that the newly independent nations should have the right freely to choose their own political and economic systems and their own ways of life, free from any outside interference.

"The two Premiers are convinced that the imperative need of the world today is the maintenance and safeguarding of international peace and security and the promotion of good-neighbourly and friendly relations among nations regardless of differences in their political and social systems. It is their profound belief that this objective can be achieved on the basis of respect for and observance of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence. The application of these Principles calls for constant and active endeavours to settle all outstanding international problems, especially those which constitute the main source of world tensions, in the spirit of friendly negotiation, mutual understanding and accommodation.

"The sincere application of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the policy of friendly negotiation would make for the relaxation of international tensions and thus pave the way for the attainment of general disarmament and an enduring peace. The two Premiers stressed once again the firm resolution of their two Governments to continue their efforts to enlarge the area of peace and friendship through the sincere application of these principles in their relations with other nations.

"In this context, Prime Minister U Nu re-affirmed his conviction that the restoration of the rightful place of the People's Republic of China in United Nations will not only strengthen this world Organization, but also contribute in a large measure to the reduction of tensions and the preservation of peace in Asia and the world at large and to the promotion of international co-operation.

"On behalf of the Government of the Union of Burma, Prime Minister U Nu formally invited Premier Chou En-lai to pay a friendly visit to the Union of Burma to participate in the National Day celebrations of the Union of Burma on January 4, 1961 and to exchange with him the Instruments of Ratification of the Sino-Burmese Boundary Treaty on that auspicious occasion. Premier Chou En-lai accepted the invitation with much pleasure."

FORMOSA

A. Publisher Jailed For Sedition: A special military court in Taipeh on October 8 sentenced Lei Chen, publisher of Free China, a fortnightly magazine, to ten years' rigorous imprisonment for sedition.

He was also given two seven-year sentences for having "knowingly provided cover for a communist agent" and for "spreading propaganda for the communists through his magazine."

The military prosecutor, Yulg Ching-wen, had filed a 10,000-word indictment of Lei Chen who had organized the first Opposition political party in Formosa, and two of his associates.

The indictment said: "Lei Chen provided a cover for communist spy Liu Tsu and repeatedly disseminated false news to cause unrest.

"His ultimate purpose is the overthrow of the Government by means of writing favourable material for the communists."

He was further accused of printing articles which "spread a feeling of pessimism and despair with the purpose of undermining the peoples' anti-Communist spirit."

Some of this articles, it continued, claimed "distrust between officers of the rank and file so as to undermine the morale of the troops and openly advocated US interference in Chinese internal affairs."

It charged that his writings questioned Kuomintang ability to return to the mainland and said that the magazine reported "it would be hopeless to have democracy in China" without another revolution. This was apparently incitement to open revolt.

It said that the magazine accountant, Liu Tsu-ying and a businessman known as Ma Tsu-su "are communist spies in subversive activities in co-operation with Lei Chen."

It added that Lei Chen was receiving instructions from communist agents and that Liu Tsu-yui had admitted to being a spy and had told Lei Chen about it on May 16, 1960.

Lei Chen claimed that his magazine was devoted to championing the cause of democracy and freedom and could not be possibly of any help to the communists.

INDIA

SUMMARY: Indo-Pakistan Talks On Use Of Eastern River Waters; DLF Loan; Wheat Purchase From USA; Trade Agreement With Poland; Wealth Inquiry Committee Set Up; University Education In Third Plan; Credit For Cultivators; Banks' Overseas Business During 1959; Crude Oil Production; Foreign Trade Survey.

A. Indo-Pakistan Talks On Use Of Eastern River Waters: Talks between experts of India and Pakistan on exchange of data relating to the use of water resources of the eastern rivers began on October 1 in Dacca, capital of East Pakistan.

According to an official source, data relating to the Ganges-Kobadak and the Khulna multi-purpose projects in Pakistan and the Farakka Barrage Scheme in West Bengal were exchanged.

A joint communique issued at the conclusion of the talks on October 3 acknowledged the exchange of information, called for the expeditious collection of further material and agreed to hold another meeting at an unspecified date, the venue being tentatively fixed at Calcutta.

In addition to salient data on the Ganges, Kobadak and Khulna multi-purpose projects of Pakistan and India's Ganga Barrage scheme at Farakka, the information exchanged at the Conference included gauge readings and discharge data of the Ganges at Farakka in India and at the Hardinge Bridge in Pakistan. Gauge readings at Rajshani and Goalondo in Pakistan and some supplementary data on the Teesta projects of the two countries were also exchanged.

B. DLF Loan To Trombay Fertilizer Plant: In a Press release in Washington on October 14, the United States Government announced that it would finance the entire cost of the Trombay fertilizer plant, estimated at Rs. 27.6 crores.

The foreign exchange component of Rs. 14.3 crores would come from the US Development Loan Fund (DLF), while the rupee cost of the plant would be met by a loan of approximately Rs. 13.3 crores from the PL 480 counterpart funds.

It was expected that the Trombay factory would go into full-scale operation during 1962 or early 1963. The loan brings total US aid to India to Rs. 1,727 crores.

The Development Loan Fund (DLF) noted that the Indian Government had also announced that US Government assistance would be welcome in financing private investment in fertilizer plants in India. In reply, DLF indicated that although no commitments could be made in advance of receipt of specific proposals, it would give sympathetic attention to loan applications in the fertilizer field.

The Agreements were signed by Mr. N. C. Sen Gupta, Joint Secretary to the Finance Ministry, on behalf of the Government of India, Mr. David Blickenstaff, Resident Representative of the UN Technical Assistance Board, and Mr. V. K. R. Menon, Director of the India Branch of the International Labour Office, on behalf of the International Labour Organization, the executing agency for the project.

The Institutes would be modelled, although on a reduced scale, on the Central Labour Institute in Bombay, which had been set up to provide facilities for research on the human factors involved in rapid industrial development, and for education and training of persons drawn from Government service and employers' and workers' organizations in the most suitable techniques for investigating and controlling the mental and physical stresses which might be responsible for accidents, diseases, discomfort and diminished productivity.

Each Institute would comprise a museum of industrial health, welfare and safety, an industrial hygiene laboratory; a library and information centre and a training centre.

Training research programmes would be related to the worker in his environment, to physiological factors of work, method study, productivity and supervisory skills.

The UN Special Fund would contribute over a period of three years, a total of approximately Rs. 16,28,000. The rupee costs to be incurred by the Government for land, buildings, furniture, local staff and local facilities for experts would be Rs. 56,67,000.

F. Wealth Inquiry Committee Set Up: The Planning Commission announced in New Delhi on October 14 the personnel of a nine-member Committee which would ascertain the extent of concentration of wealth and means of production in the country.

The Committee, headed by Prof. P. C. Mahalanobis, Honorary Statistical Adviser to the Government, included Dr. V. K. R. V. Rao, Director of the Institute of Economic Growth; Dr. P. S. Lokanathan, Director-General of the National Council of Applied Economic Research (NCAER); Dr. B. N. Ganguli, Director of the Delhi School of Economics; Mr. Vishnu Sahay, Secretary in the Planning Commission; Mr. D. L. Mazumdar, Secretary in the Department of Company Law Administration; Dr. B. K. Madan, Executive Director of the Reserve Bank; Mr. B. N. Datar, Adviser in the Labour and Employment Ministry and Mr. P. C. Mathew, Director of the Central Statistical Organization (Member-Secretary).

It would ascertain the extent to which the operation of the economic system had resulted in the concentration of wealth and means of production, study recent trends in the distribution of income and wealth and review changes in the levels of living during the First and current Plans.

It was stated that the Committee's inquiry would be at the expert level. Its primary object was "to ascertain such statistical and economic data as may be gathered at present, to identify the gaps in the existing information and to suggest steps for removing these deficiencies."

G. University Education In Third Plan: The Secretary of the University Grants Commission (UGC), Mr. Samuel Mathai said in Bhopal on September 27 that the UGC had fixed a total outlay of Rs. 75 crores for the expansion of university education in the country during the Third Five-Year Plan.

Of this amount, the Commission proposed to allot Rs. 40 lakhs to each university and Rs. 2.2 lakhs to each affiliated college for implementing their respective expansion schemes during the Third Plan.

Regarding the demand from different

States for establishing new universities, Mr. Mathai said that the Commission was of the view that there should not be any haste in opening new universities in the country.

The expansion of university education should be generally through affiliated colleges because it would be "cheaper" and also "more effective." New universities, he said, should only be opened when the existing universities had reached a saturation point in respect of affiliation of colleges.

He added that the demand for new universities should not be made under the influence of "political and private pressures".

The UGC, he said, was likely to make available about Rs. 2.5 crores for the expansion of the three universities of Saugor, Jabalpur and Vikram in Madhya Pradesh during the Third Plan period.

H. Credit For Cultivators: A Press Note issued by the Government of India on October 7 said that all classes of cultivators, including landless tenants, would be provided with adequate credit on the basis of their production requirements and repaying capacity.

This decision had been taken by the Central Ministry of Community Development and Co-operation on the recommendations of the Committee on Co-operative Credit, under the chairmanship of Mr. V. L. Mehta, as approved by the National Development Council.

The decision had been communicated to the State Governments.

Other decisions taken by the Central Government related to the pattern of organization of village co-operative societies, State partnership in the share capital of primary agricultural credit societies, outright grants to primary societies and central banks for providing special "bad debt reserves" and grants to primary societies for managerial expenses.

The co-operatives should be organized, as a general rule, on the basis of the village community as a primary unit. Where the villages were too small, a number of villages, with a total population of up to 3,000 and situated at a distance of not more than three to four miles from the headquarters village, might be grouped together in the interests of viability.

The viability of a co-operative society should be determined on the basis of its capacity to bring into the co-operative fold all rural families and to implement effectively the village agricultural production plans. Its ability to link credit with production and marketing, as also to supervise the use of credit, undertaking distribution and supply and to attract local savings to the maximum possible extent as share capital and as deposits, were also to be taken into consideration.

The State might participate in the share capital of a primary agricultural society, provided that 60 per cent of its members agreed to such participation and the central bank to which the society was affiliated supported the proposal.

While the maximum contribution made by the State to the share capital of a primary society should be limited ordinarily to Rs. 5,000 in the case of large villages, backward areas and selected areas coming under irrigation or large-scale reclamation for the first time, the State's contribution could be up to a maximum of Rs. 10,000.

The State's share capital, however, should not exceed the contribution made by the members of the society and, as a normal rule, should be indirect, i.e. through the apex and central banks.

The policy to be pursued by the State Government should ensure that there was no rigidity in regard to the organization and the size of co-operative societies and in the matter of State contribution to share capital, duration of partnership and the manner in which the share capital should be retired.

Outright grants to primary societies and central banks would be credited to the "special bad debt reserves," which would be in addition to the normal bad debt reserves credited with profits and which would be drawn according to the rules framed for the purpose.

Co-operative societies which were revitalized and which actually undertook various functions of service co-operatives, namely, disbursement of credit supply, of fertilizers, insecticides, seeds, implements etc., and arranged for the marketing of members' produce, would get a management grant to the maximum of Rs. 900 spread over a period of three to five years.

I. Banks' Overseas Business During 1959: A review of the business of Indian banks abroad, published in a Reserve Bank of India bulletin issued in Bombay on October 6 showed that the overseas business of Indian banks during 1959 had recorded a significant improvement over 1958. This development, according to the review, was in tune with the general expansion in banking activity abroad.

The review was made by the Division of Banking Research of the Economic Department of the Reserve Bank of India.

The number of Indian banks (23) as well as their offices operating abroad (100) remained unchanged in 1959, unlike in the previous years. Countries in which Indian banks had made progress included Pakistan, UK, Malaya, Singapore, British East Africa and Hong Kong. In Burma and Ceylon, however, the business of Indian banks suffered a minor setback.

A notable feature of the Indian banks' business abroad generally was the continuation of the trend in 1958 towards repatriation of funds to India.

Total liabilities of the foreign offices of Indian banks in 1959 rose by Rs. 12.9 crores to Rs. 109.1 crores, compared with an increase of Rs. 3.6 crores in 1958.

Mainly due to the rise in deposits which accounted for Rs. 10.2 crores against Rs. 5 crores in 1958, there was a substantial rise in bank credit of Rs. 8.8 crores to Rs. 53.3 crores against an increase of about only Re. 1 crore in 1958. The largest expansion in bank credit was registered in Malaya.

During 1959, as a whole, there was a net outflow of funds from India to Rs. 3.5 crores in contrast to the net inflow of funds in 1958. This was because, whereas in 1958 foreign banks operating in India liquidated a fairly sizable portion of their overseas assets, the reverse trend was in evidence in 1959; also, there was a comparatively larger decline in their liabilities in 1959.

J. Crude Oil Production By 1961: The Oil and Natural Gas Commission, which concluded its three-day meeting in Dehra Dun on October 15 under the chairmanship of the Central Minister for Mines and Oil, Mr. K. D. Malaviya decided to start production of crude oil by the third quarter of 1961.

This, however, would depend on the Railways providing adequate transport for the anticipated production of 1,500 tons of oil per day.

The Commission examined the arrangements for starting the trial production of oil at Cambay and Ankaleshwar and approved contracts for supply of essential machinery from the Soviet Union. It also decided to make efforts to have drilling and other production equipment manufactured indigenously to save foreign exchange.

It further decided to increase the search for oil in areas around Cambay, Ankaleshwar, Ahmedabad and Kutch regions.

It also proposed to start a technical training school at Cambay from 1961 in consultation with the Gujerat Government to prepare personnel for the lower categories. It considered the question of providing amenities and revising pay scales for workers and expected to finalize its decision soon.

A regional office of the Commission would be set up at Baroda to control production and research in the Cambay oil fields.

L. Foreign Trade Survey: The President of the Indian Council of Foreign Trade, Mr. Murari Vaidya told the Council in Bombay on October 13 that India's trade with the United Kingdom and certain Commonwealth countries like Australia, Ceylon, Singapore, Hong Kong and Kenya, had declined in the last three years to the extent of five to eight per cent.

He urged the Central Government to take up the matter with UK to see that the position was restored as soon as possible. He noted that the country's trade with the Communist bloc, USA and West Germany had increased during the same period.

In the case of USA and West Germany, India's imports had gone up considerably on account of purchases for developmental requirements. The three-man team sent by the World Bank to India recently had stressed the need for advanced countries to assist the course of development in the developing economies "by removing the kind of barriers which restrict the export opportunities of developing countries." He thought that USA and West Germany could be persuaded by the Central Government to follow an enlightened trade policy.

The apparently favourable balance of trade with the Communist countries based on bilateral Agreements, he said, only meant a series of barters adjusting India's exports to those countries directly against Indian imports from them. The currencies of those countries were not internationally convertible. Therefore, India's trade with those countries could never help India to improve her balance of payments or to build her external balances. A favourable balance of trade with the free countries of the world, on the other hand, meant an accretion to India's foreign balances.

Any expansion of trade with the communist countries, entirely routed through the State Trading Corporation, could not directly help India in building up her foreign exchange resources. There had been instances where the additional exports of India's traditional commodities to some of the communist countries through the STC had resulted in a diminution of her trade with free countries and lowering of the international prices of those commodities, because communist countries had dumped India's exported goods in her regular markets abroad at lower prices.

While not suggesting that India should not develop her trade with communist countries, he urged that the Central Government should exercise caution and care.

Among the measures suggested by him to promote exports were: the introduction of a system of foreign exchange retention on the model of that in Japan, permitting exporters to utilize a part of their exchange earnings for imports without restriction; greater collaboration and co-operation between manufacturers and exporters and barter by Indian private agencies permitting without restriction export of non-traditional items in return for import of articles required for State projects.

M. Development In Tribal Areas —Committee's Report: In a report released in New Delhi on October 16 by a Committee appointed to study the working of 43 special multi-purpose tribal blocks, it was stated that "there is a new sense of integration with India as a whole and a growing awareness among the tribals of their status as citizens of a great country."

The five-member Committee, headed by Dr. Verrier Elwin said: "Suspicion of the outside world, doubts about the intentions of Government and the tendency to shrink within themselves in fear of the outsider have disappeared or are disappearing rapidly among the tribes."

It concluded that the present experiment of selecting some specially backward tribal areas for all-sided improvement had been sufficiently successful to justifying its extension.

The development in the tribal areas was going to take a long time and some special assistance would have to be given for the special tribal block areas for a period of 15 to 20 years.

The new blocks, it said, should not be confined to the Scheduled and Tribal Areas, but should cover areas wherever there was a tribal population of 55 per cent of the total, anywhere in India, provided the over-all coverage for each block was not more than 25,000 individuals in an area of 200 sq. miles. The entire tribal area, should go forward, not piece-meal, but together. A much greater attention should be paid to real priorities such as agriculture, health and communications. It would be better to spread the resources over a wider area than to concentrate them on pockets which might be wrongly selected.

It added: "At the same time much more attention should be paid to such fundamental problems as ownership of land, amendment of the local forest rules, the revival of tribal self-government, relief of indebtedness and the correct approach to the people."

About the problems of land and agriculture, it said that the aim should be to ensure that every tribal man had at least 2½ acres of wet or five acres of dry land which he could cultivate. In the establishment of colonies or in any scheme of settlement, this should be regarded as the absolute minimum. For the improvement of agriculture in the more hilly areas, it said that research in agronomy and sociology must go hand in hand. The important thing was to recognize that tribal agriculture was both a way of life and an aspect of culture.

Turning to the problem of the forests, it felt that forest protection would only be really effective when there was a mutual sense of trust and even affection between the forest staff and the tribal people. For this, it suggested a public relations campaign and said that small exactions, irritations and unnecessary restrictions should be removed.

In predominantly tribal areas, the forests must be managed not basically for profit or for conservation, but for furthering tribal interests.

The opening up of a tribal area by a carefully planned system of communications was emphasized. In tribal areas, it said that the first priority should be given to the construction of roads which had utility for marketing of produce. It was more important to make roads linking the interior of the hills with the plains than to join remote villages in the interior with one another.

Discussing the health service in tribal areas, it observed that the inadequate medical facilities were due to the unwillingness of medical personnel to serve in remote places. To meet this situation, there should be a certain period of service in a tribal area for all doctors as a condition of promotion, crossing the efficiency bar or for being sent for higher services in India or abroad.

In regard to education, it said that the preparation of text-books in the local language with illustrations which would be familiar to the children and adapted to the local background, should be given high priority everywhere. There was a need for artists and photographers to prepare suitable books of local scenes and places which would decorate the schools and make them more familiar.

It was of the opinion that cottage industries should be related to local economy and should, as far as possible, be promoted by the local tribal people themselves. It was also advisable, to use local people as teachers wherever possible. Too many expensive machines should not be introduced at present.

It estimated that a sum of Rs. 30 crores might be required for covering all the tribal areas with the special blocks, assuming that 300 such blocks would be required. This would be in addition to the contribution by the Ministry of Community Development.

ISRAEL

A. Mapam Party's Policy On Arab Refugees: A Calcutta newspaper, The Statesman, carried the following despatch on October 7 from its West Asia Correspondent on Israel's Mapam Party's policy:

"Last week-end Israel observed the Day of Atonement, as part of which Radio Israel went off the air for 28 hours. Somewhat earlier, one of the country's political parties had indicated that Israel, in addition to ancient wrongs, had also something contemporary to atone for—its treatment of the Palestine refugees within and without its borders.

"The Mapam Party, an extreme Left-wing socialist component of Mr. David Ben-Gurion's present Cabinet, suggested that Israel should offer to accept some of the refugees now in Arab countries as a contribution to the peaceful settlement of the Palestine problem. This stand is considerably nearer the numerous UN resolutions asking for unconditional repatriation than the official Israeli policy, which envisages only very limited repatriation to unify separated families.

"Mapam also asked the Israeli Government to give better treatment to the nearly 200,000 Arabs still living in Israel. For the fact is that though Israel is a democracy, her citizens of Jewish race and religion live under normal civil law, while those of the Arab race, Muslim or Christian, are governed by martial law which restricts their movements to certain areas. Mapam spoke of this as 'a policy of discrimination against the Arab minority'.

"That one of Israel's recognized parties participating in the Government should courageously speak up for the Arab refugees is a welcome sign that, for all the strength and self-confidence Israel shows, the still small voice of conscience has not been silenced. There is, however, very little chance of the Mapam suggestions being accepted.

"If it seems surprising that a Government should observe a religious festival by so drastic a step as the silencing of its radio station, it has to be remembered that in addition to being socialist, Israel is also a State created by people of one religion, Judaism, for people of that religion. The observance of Judaic prescriptions is bound to be strict, as is seen by the absence of all public transport for 24 hours every week on the day of rest."

NEPAL

A. Aid Agreements With India: Under two Agreements signed in Khatmandu on October 8, Nepal received from India aid equivalent to Rs. 26,50,000.

One Agreement related to the development of Nepal's first university — the Tribhuvan University — started in 1959, for which India would provide assistance to the extent of Rs. 20,00,000.

The other Agreement related to the establishment of the National Archives at Khatmandu, for which the balance of the aid would be utilized.

The aid to Tribhuvan University would be in addition to the teaching personnel made available by India to the University under the Colombo Plan, at the request of Nepal. At present, six Indian professors and 14 lecturers in various subjects were working in the University. In addition, seven professors and two lecturers would join shortly.

Including the aid of Rs. 26,50,000 covered by the latest Agreements and the aid of

Rs. 91,87,500 covered by the five Agreements signed on August 31, 1960, the programmes so far approved for Indian aid to Nepal during Nepal's First Five-Year Plan totalled Rs. 12.965 crores. India had already agreed to support Nepal's Second Five-Year Plan to the extent of Rs. 18 crores, including the carry-over from the First Plan period.

The two Agreements were signed on behalf of Nepal, by the Finance Secretary, Mr. R. P. Joshi, and, on behalf of India, by the Director of the Indian Aid Mission at Khatmandu, Mr. D. R. Kohli.

B. Demarcation Of Sino-Nepalese Border—Agreement Reached: The Nepalese Foreign Office announced in Khatmandu on October 9 that the joint Sino-Nepalese Boundary Commission, meeting in the Nepalese capital since August, 1960, had agreed to send out joint teams for the demarcation of the frontier between the two countries.

The decision, characterized as "unanimous", was reached at the two meetings of the Commission held on September 27 and October 7.

The Foreign Office announcement said that in the discussions, which were held in a friendly atmosphere, "both sides reached unanimous agreement to send out joint teams in accordance with the Boundary Agreement".

Although the announcement did not categorically say so, it was obvious from the reference to the Boundary Agreement, signed in Peking in March, 1960 that the object of the teams would be to survey the border, particularly those areas on which the maps exchanged by the two Governments at the time of the signing of the Agreement were at variance but the discrepancies had now been resolved.

The principles governing the formal demarcation on the ground of the frontier had been agreed to by the two sides.

The announcement added that details of the joint teams to be despatched to the border would be studied further by the experts of two countries and a joint body set up by the Boundary Commission.

Earlier, on October 7, the Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told a news conference in Khatmandu that the Sino-Nepalese Boundary Commission was "working satisfactorily" and a "peaceful settlement" of the border problems could be expected shortly.

He added that all outstanding problems had been settled but one or two remained. These, he said, would be settled "in a day or two" and an announcement would be made in due course.

C. Ban On Entry Of Tibetans: The Nepali Home Minister, Mr. S. P. Upadhyaya, told newsmen in Khatmandu on October 7 that about 200 Tibetans reported to be proceeding on a pilgrimage to Muktinath on the Tibet-Nepal border had been stopped by the Nepalese police at Pokhra in north-west Nepal.

He said that the Pokhra police were not satisfied with the replies given by the Tibetans and since their movements were considered suspicious they had not been permitted to go north.

While some Tibetans said that they wanted to visit Muktinath on a pilgrimage, others said that they planned to settle there with their relatives.

He said that the Nepal Government had no objection in permitting Tibetans to go on pilgrimage but, inquiries made at Muktinath revealed that the Tibetans had no relatives there.

He added that while these Tibetans carried sufficient money in Indian currency, they pretended to be hungry and, although they spoke Hindustani and Nepali perfectly, refused to reply to questions put by the police, on the plea that they did not know any language except Tibetan. A ban against entry of such "doubtful" Tibetans was therefore imposed. Consequently, about 500 Tibetans were stranded at Raxaul and an equal number was reported to be stranded at the border towns of Narkatiaganj, Thori and Nautunwa.

An officer in charge of the Tibetan pilgrims at Raxaul, however, said that the Tibetans belonged to Dalai Lama's Tibetan army and had been working in road-building camps in Sikkim. He added that the Tibetans, who were now on vacation, wanted to go on a pilgrimage to Nepal.

A. Officials Of Rhee "Regime" Sentenced: The Seoul District Court on October 8 sentenced to death a former police chief for ordering the police to fire on student demonstrators during the April, 1960 revolt, but who had shown leniency towards other key officials of the Syngman Rhee regime.

The judge, Mr. J. T. Chang, overrode prosecution demands that nine of the 48 defendants in the post-revolutionary trials be sentenced to death and pronounced surprisingly mild sentences against most of the top Rhee-regime officials and his political hoodlums.

Dr. Rhee's Home Minister, Mr. Hongjinki, who had controlled the police, received a nine-month term. Another high police official of the overthrown regime, Mr. Paik Manq, was given a life sentence.

Twenty-five political hoodlums accused of terrorism on university students drew prison terms ranging from 10 months to five years.

On October 11 the House of Representatives decided to amend the Constitution to enable the courts to impose heavier penalties on former pro-Rhee officials.

Later in the day (October 11) about 10,000 persons demonstrated outside the Assembly to demand heavier punishment for former officials.

The police said that the crowd was made up of high school students and demonstrators from the association of the bereaved families of the April, 1960 revolution.

About 50 students broke into the hall and occupied the Speaker's platform. Members of the House and guards made an unsuccessful attempt to stop the students, who withdrew from the chamber after shouting their demands for heavier penalties for 20 minutes. The Speaker, Mr. Sang Hoon Kwak, called off the session and said that he would confer with representatives of the demonstrators.

Some of the demonstrators had earlier held an overnight sit-down demonstration in front of the residence of the Prime Minister, Mr. John Chang. They had demanded the resignation of his Cabinet for failing to punish the former officials of the Rhee regime more heavily.

MONGOLIA (Outer)

A. Mr. Sekou Toure's Visit: President Sekou Toure of Guinea paid a State visit to the Mongolian capital, Ulan Bator from September 9 to 11.

Welcoming him at the airport, the President of the Presidium of the Great People's Hural, Mr. J. Sambu, said that Mr. Toure's visit to Mongolia would be conducive to the further development of the friendly relations between the two countries based on the Bandung Principles and would make a valuable contribution to the defence and consolidation of world peace.

Speaking at a State banquet in honour of Mr. Toure, Mr. Sambu said that independent States were emerging one after another in Africa, but the colonialists did not want to see African countries become free. To continue their rule in these countries, he said, the colonialists resorted to all kinds of schemes including armed aggression.

He said that the Mongolian people had a high opinion of the contribution made by the Guinean people to the consolidation of the unity of the African people "in the struggle to liberate this continent from the colonial rule of the imperialists."

Addressing a Mongol-Guinean Friendship rally in Ulan Bator, Mr. Toure pointed out that a struggle against imperialism had been launched in Africa in recent years and the independence won by African countries was not only the outcome of this struggle of the African people but also of the struggle for national independence waged by the people of America, Asia and the world over. An important task confronting the African people now, he said, was to eliminate the state of backwardness, build up their fatherland and improve the life of the people.

Cultural Co-operation Agreement And Joint Communique:

Representatives of the Mongolian Government and the Guinea delegation signed on September 10 an Agreement on Cultural Co-operation between the two countries along with a joint communique at the conclusion of Mr. Toure's visit.

The communique, which noted the identity of the two parties' views on the questions discussed and stressed their resolution to strengthen friendship between the people of the two countries and to support in every way the national liberation movement of the colonial and dependent nations.

Mr. Toure stated that the Cultural Co-operation Agreement opened a broad avenue for the exchange of cultural delegations and materials of Mongolia and Guinea.

He praised the achievements of the Mongolian people in economic and cultural fields and said that they were a good example for the African people.

B. Soviet Assistance For Third Five-Year Plan: The Prime Minister, Mr. Y. Tsedenbal, and the Soviet Premier, Mr. N. Khruschev, signed in Moscow on September 9 an Agreement providing for Soviet economic and technical assistance to the Mongolian People's Republic for its Third Five-Year Plan (1961-65).

According to a communique issued on the occasion, the Soviet Union would provide Mongolia with technical assistance for building 15 industrial enterprises, including oil extractive and forest industries, as well as for constructing high voltage transmission lines and city power grids.

The Soviet Union would further supply a considerable number of tractors, harvester combines and other agricultural machinery, motor vehicles, pedigree livestock and building materials.

USSR would send experts and workers to Mongolia for rendering assistance in technical know-how and would receive Mongolian specialists for practical training at Soviet enterprises.

The Soviet Union also granted Mongolia a new long-term loan of 615 million roubles on easy terms to pay for Soviet deliveries and other forms of technical assistance. It likewise complied with the request of the Mongolian Government for deferment of the payment of 245 million roubles on account of part of the earlier loans to be repaid in 1961-65.

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: F-M Ayub Khan On Kashmir Issue; US Loan; Agricultural University For West Pakistan; University Degrees Ordinance; Television Station To Be Built.

A. F-M Ayub Khan On Kashmir Issue: Addressing a public meeting in Muzaffarabad, capital of "Azad Kashmir", on October 6, the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, said that Pakistan could not trust India until the Kashmir issue was settled.

He said that the Pakistan Army, as the defender of the country, could never afford to leave the Kashmir issue unsolved for an indefinite period.

He added: "Our communication, our rivers and even the cease-fire line in Kashmir, one and all, are sufficient factors to indicate that our neck is in the grip of others. Those who are entrusted with the defence of Pakistan can never remain indifferent to this state of affairs".

Other sections of the population in Pakistan, he said, were also equally anxious to see an early solution of the Kashmir problem, but as far as the Army was concerned, it could never allow the problem to remain unsettled for long.

He warned India that if she did not resolve her disputes with Pakistan, she was bound to face a catastrophe and once India was involved in some troubles, Pakistan would also be engulfed in them. It was in the interests of both countries that the Kashmir issue was settled as possible.

He said that he desired a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir issue. Crores of rupees were being spent both in India and Pakistan on defence which they could ill afford. The sooner Indian leaders realized the gravity of the situation, the better it would be for all concerned.

He referred to what he described as "the struggle being waged in Indian Kashmir" and said that "Kashmir patriots" would never be satisfied until they achieve their rights of freedom. Everyone in Pakistan, wanted to do something for the people of Kashmir and be of some help to them because they were pained at their suffering and misery. He said: "We are very anxious to see that the people of India-occupied Kashmir should also benefit by the blessings of freedom enjoyed by the people of India and Pakistan".

He again referred to the Kashmir issue on October 8 while addressing a rally of ex-soldiers at Rawalkot and said that Pakistan would never accept a solution of the Kashmir issue on the basis of the cease-fire line as "conceived by some people in India".

He added: "Some people in India think that as the Kashmir issue has been hanging fire for 13 years, people will forget it and Pakistan will accept a solution such as India wishes. That is far from the truth."

Mr. J. Nehru's Views:

In a television interview in New York on October 8, the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru declared that any attempt to upset the status quo in Kashmir would result in opening Pandora's Box with all its undesirable consequences.

He was replying to an American correspondent who had asked whether, now that the Indus canal waters issue had been settled, efforts would be made to settle the Kashmir issue.

Mr. Nehru said he was glad that the canal waters issue had been settled. But, so far as Kashmir was concerned, "it stands on a completely different footing." According to us, the trouble was that Pakistan had invaded part of our territory and was sitting there. According to them, it was different.

He said that in the 12 years since the cease-fire in Kashmir, many important things had happened "on our side in Kashmir. Two general elections have been held which are very important. An Assembly with very considerable powers functions there. It makes laws and does everything that Parliament does except with regard to some all-India subjects which only the Central Parliament can deal with."

He added: "It is part of our Constitution that we cannot touch Kashmir without the consent of Kashmir's elected Assembly.

"It is comparatively difficult to live in an unrealistic atmosphere and talk about things which have no relation to the present moment. That moment key-board it is like re-opening 'Pandora's Box'. Things will come out all over, upset things everywhere and lead to migrations and so on."

B. US Loan For Purchasing Raw Cotton-Processing Equipment: The First Vice-President of the US Export-Import Bank in Washington, Mr. Tom Kellefer, said on October 11 that $ 6,400,000 had been credited to Pakistan for the purchase of raw cotton-processing equipment.

Delivery of the machinery was expected to be completed by 1962, which would meet Pakistan's current needs as to the type and numbers of cotton-processing machines.

C. Agricultural University For West Pakistan—Nine-Man Committee Appointed: A nine-man Committee with Dr. Raziuddin Siddiqi, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Sind, as Chairman, was appointed on October 7 by the Government to draw up a detailed scheme for the proposed West Pakistan Agricultural University.

The following are the terms of reference of the Committee:

(1) To determine the requirements of staff, equipment, buildings, and other facilities needed for the Agricultural University, immediately and on a long-term basis;

(2) To assess the cost of the whole scheme on a yearly basis, giving both the internal and external expenditures; and

(3) To lay down a phased programme of implementation of the scheme and development of the University.

D. Promulgation Of University Degree (Duration Of Course) Ordinance: The President, F-M Mohamed Ayub Khan, promulgated on October 12 the University Degrees (Duration of Course) Ordinance, 1960. It provided for extension of the duration of courses for the B.A., B.Sc., and B. Com. degrees from two years to three years.

The Ordinance gave effect to the recommendation of the Education Commission, which had recommended the extension of the duration of the courses for the Bachelor's degree from two to three years as a measure to improve the standard of higher education.

The Ordinance applied to the whole of Pakistan, and took effect from July 1, 1960.

decided to establish a television station in Pakistan for this purpose.

As a first step towards the implementation of this recommendation, the Ministry of Education had secured the services of two eminent experts from UNESCO and Australia, to prepare a detailed scheme. The experts had already begun work on the project.

F. Khan Abdul Qaiyum Khan Sentenced: Khan Abdul Qaiyum Khan, a former Chief Minister of the North-West Frontier Province and Minister in the Central Cabinet before the military take-over, was found guilty by a Military Court in Rawalpindi on October 13 and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment.

He was charged with acting in a manner prejudicial to good order and public safety and calculated to create despondency among the public.

There were many other allegations of misconduct and misrule against him in respect of his activities while holding different public offices.

G. Nawab Of Dir Deposed: The Minister for External Affairs, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, announced in Rawalpindi on October 8 that the Nawab of Dir, Shah Jehan Khan, had been deposed and put under arrest for making secret attempts to take selfish advantage of the external aggression on Pakistan's border. The Nawab is 70 years old.

One of the Nawab's sons, the Khan of Jandul, was also arrested.

The following is the text of Mr. Manzoor Qadir's statement:

"The Nawab of Dir and the Khan of Jandul have been arrested. The decision to do so was taken after a careful appraisal of the many accusations of double dealing that were brought against the mby the people and the leaders of the tribal area while they were engaged in their heroic efforts to repel the recent Afghan aggression.

"It was reported from time to time that the Khan of Jandul and his father, the Nawab of Dir, while outwardly joining with the other chiefs and leaders with whom they had long standing enmities of their own, were making secret attempts to take selfish advantage of the fact that those who were busy in repelling external aggression had become more vulnerable internally.

"These attempts did not succeed because their own people turned down these overtures with contempt.

"The people of Dir had been agitating for a long time against the tyrannical rule of the Nawab.

"In 1953 they rose in rebellion against him which he put down after a great deal of bloodshed. They have been holding jirgas (tribal assemblies) and sending petitions to the Government of Pakistan demanding that they, as citizens of Pakistan, had every right to be protected against the barbaric practices to which they were subjected.

"The Nawab looked upon the State as his personal property and administered it as such. There were no schools. While he had a veterinary surgeon to look after his dogs, he did not have a single doctor to look after his people.

"The Government of Pakistan so far had contented itself by merely giving advice to the Nawab and impressing upon him the need for providing some basic facilities for his people. He, however, had paid no heed. It has now been decided to accept the repeated demand of the people of Dir and to depose the Nawab. He will be succeeded by one of his sons."

Dir is a small State in the northern belt of West Pakistan with an area of 3,000 square miles. The population according to the 1951 census was 148,000 and the revenue Rs. 5,75,000.

It lies to the north of the Bajaur area in Malakand Agency which was recently the scene of alleged Afghan incursions.

New Ruler Appointed:

The Commissioner of Peshawar Division, Nawabjada Sher Afzal Khan, who is also responsible for the administration of tribal areas, told newsmen on October 11 that Prince Mohammed Shah Khusro, the third son of the Nawab of Dir, had taken over the administration of Dir State on October 9.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

A. Five-Power Resolution In UN General Assembly On Renewal Of Contacts Between Mr. D. Eisenhower And Mr. N. Khruschev: India, Indonesia, United Arab Republic, Ghana and Yugoslavia submitted a resolution on September 30 in the UN General Assembly calling on the US President, Mr. D. D. Eisenhower, and the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, to renew their contacts which had been interrupted earlier.

The resolution was finalized at a meeting of the leaders of the five countries at President Tito's (Yugoslavia) residence on September 29.

The five leaders addressed a joint letter on the resolution to the President of the General Assembly, Mr. Frederick Boland, Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Khruschev.

Submitting the five-Power resolution to the General Assembly on September 30, President Sukarno (Indonesia) urged that it be adopted unanimously as soon as possible.

Taking the floor of the Assembly for the first time, Mr. Nehru (India) called on the member-States to support the resolution.

The five-Power resolution read:

"The General Assembly, deeply concerned with the recent deterioration in international relations which threatens the world with grave consequences;

"Aware of the great expectancy of the world that this Assembly will assist in helping to prepare the way for the lessening of international tensions;

"Conscious of the grave and urgent responsibility that rests on UN to initiate helpful efforts;

"Requests, as a first and urgent step, that the President of USA and the Prime Minister of USSR renew their contacts interrupted recently, so that their declared willingness to find solutions of the outstanding problems by negotiations may be progressively implemented."

President D. D. Eisenhower's Reaction:

In a statement on October 2 President D. D. Eisenhower said that he had decided against an immediate meeting with Mr. Khruschev. He said that Soviet actions gave no reason to believe that such a meeting would help in solving the various issues.

He also sent a reply to the letter from the leaders of the five nations which had moved the resolution on renewal of contacts between him and Mr. Khruschev.

He said that he would not like to take part in any meeting which, in the present circumstances, might convey misleading impressions. If the Soviet Union seriously desired a reduction in tensions, she could readily pave the way for useful negotiations by actions in United Nations and elsewhere.

He added that the Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter, would always be available to discuss any concrete measures. If exploratory discussions revealed that the Soviet Union was prepared to return to the path of peaceful negotiations, he would be personally prepared to meet and negotiate with the representatives of the Soviet Government and with the Heads of other Government delegations.

He added: "I have at no time utilized any threats whatsoever with reference to any international question. This is, I am sure you will agree, a matter of historical record.

"On the other hand, the Soviet Union, far from following a comparable policy of restraint, appears to have undertaken with deliberate intent a policy of increasing tensions throughout the world and in particular of damaging relations with USA.

"Instead of avoiding threats of the use of force, the Soviet Government has threatened rocket retaliation against many members of UN, including USA on the pretext of contrived and imaginary intentions on the part of these countries. While these threats have necessarily only strengthened our resolve to maintain our readiness to deter and, if necessary, to resist any aggression, they have nevertheless caused uneasiness throughout the world.

"The Soviet Government has refused any thought of an impartial international body to investigate the shooting down on July 1 of an aircraft of the US Air Force, and is still holding incommunicado two members of its crew.

"The chief problems in the world today are not due to differences between the Soviet Union and the United States alone and therefore, are not possible of solution on a bilateral basis.

"The questions which are disrupting the world at the present time are of immediate and vital importance to other nations as well.

"The importance of these matters is such as to go beyond personal or official relations between any two individuals to impede their solution and I have many times personally pledged myself, regardless of every kind of personal consideration, to meet with anyone at any time if there is any serious promise of productive results.

"I would not wish to participate in a mere gesture which, in present circumstances, might convey a thoroughly misleading and unfortunate impression to the peoples of the world."

Mr. N. Khruschev's Reaction:

Mr. N. Khruschev also sent a reply to the letter of the leaders of the five countries which had sponsored the resolution calling for renewal of contacts between him and Mr. D. Eisenhower.

He said that Mr. Eisenhower must apologize for the flight of the American U-2 spy-plane before there could be any meeting between them. Aggressive acts like the U-2 flight, he said, showed that USA had no intention of solving problems which divided the two countries.

He said that he was ready to open negotiations with USA if the US Government had the courage to condemn the acts which had led to the deterioration in the relations between them.

Referring to Mr. Eisenhower's stand that he would meet the Soviet Prime Minister if exploratory talks revealed that the Soviet Union was prepared to return to the path of peaceful negotiation; he said that any attempt by the US Government to place preliminary conditions on any contact with the Soviet Union would only prove that USA had no serious intentions of finding a solution to the present problems by negotiation.

He recalled what had happened after it was agreed to call a 'Summit' Conference and said that at that time the Soviet Government had expected fruitful results at the end of the Conference.

USA, he said, "literally threw itself, on the eve of the Summit meeting, into the path of perfidy". The best example of this could be seen in the aggressive acts committed by USA, particularly the violation of Soviet frontiers by the American U-2 spy-plane.

He added that the US Government—and President Eisenhower personally—did not intend to abandon this aggressive policy and were still pursuing it.

This policy represented an unprecedented violation of the very foundations of international law and of the sacred principles of respect of national sovereignty. The US Government had done nothing to compensate the Soviet Union for this flagrant violation of sovereignty.

By this attitude, the US Government had placed itself in such a position that it appeared difficult for it to undertake sincere negotiations with USSR.

He added that the US attitude also showed the US Government's lack of consideration for other nations' desires to make their own contribution to lessening the tension between the Great Powers.

But, he added, although the relations between the Soviet Union and USA might be tense, "they can be improved if the leading statesmen rise above personal questions and are guided by the great responsibility for the destiny of the world which weighs upon them".

He said: "The Soviet Government is deeply convinced that the present bad state of relations between the Soviet Union and USA can disappear, but an unequivocal examination of the deterioration of these relations is necessary. That examination must recognize that the present situation is due to the unprecedented acts of treachery committed by the US Government, which has chosen to carry out provocative gestures of aggression against the Soviet Union."

Speaking at a reception held by the Bulgarian delegation to the UN Assembly on October 3, Mr. Khruschev expressed the hope that he would meet the next President of the United States.

He also said that he wanted another 'Summit' Conference, and added that the time would come for it in the near future.

When asked if he would prefer a bilateral conference between the Soviet Union and the United States rather than a four-Power summit, he replied: "It is not a question of quantity, but of quality."

Australian Amendment To Resolution:

The Australian Prime Minister, Mr. R. G. Menzies, moved an amendment to the five-Power resolution on October 5.

He said that a bid by five unaligned Powers for renewed contacts between USA and Soviet leaders would put the world problem "out of perspective."

Instead, he said that the Assembly should encourage the resumption of four-Power—Britain, France, USA and the Soviet Union—summit talks.

He asked: "Is Great Britain, a nation with such a magnificent contribution in our own time to freedom and self-government, to be omitted from summit talks? Is France, whose place in the history, indeed the revolutionary history of individual liberty, is clear, to be omitted?"

He said he felt that a meeting of the four leaders—he underlined the "four"—at the summit could make, if approached in a true spirit of co-operation and genuine desire for peace, "a very fine beginning". But, such a meeting could not be arranged quickly or without preparation.

He added: "We shall have to feel our way forward, and a way may be found. But it will not be found in the next few days, and I doubt if it can be found by trying to rush at it."

He then launched an attack on communist leaders and said that any communist leader who criticized colonialism as if it were a characteristic ailment of Western Powers committed a flagrant act of hypocrisy because the world's biggest colonial Power at present was the Soviet Union.

Referring to "neutralist" Powers, he said that "neutralism" was a high sounding, but vague, term and he found it impossible to believe some of the greatest leaders of the so-called "neutralist" countries considered themselves neutral in the big conflicts of ideas.

Mr. Nehru went out of the chamber when Mr. Menzies was half-way through his speech and he was not present in the Assembly when Mr. Menzies made references to India's policy of non-alignment.

Mr. Nehru's Reply To Mr. R. Menzies:

Mr. Nehru took the floor of the Assembly on October 5 to speak in support of the five-Power resolution.

He said that if nothing was done now to arrest the process of deterioration, it would become even more difficult at a later stage to improve the world situation.

Mr. Nehru, who dealt at length with the Australian amendment calling for a four-Power 'Summit' Conference, said: "Three or four days ago it did not seem to be reasonably possible that any member of this Assembly could object to that resolution.

"It was simple and straightforward. There was nothing in it against this person or that person or this group or that group, but it represented a desire, a strong desire, a passionate desire, to get things moving, a desire that the Assembly should not sit by helplessly watching, paralyzed.

"Therefore, it was with considerable surprise that I received the next day or the day after, this paper containing the amendment on behalf of Australia.

"It seemed to me quite patent that it had nothing to do by way of amendment. It was not an amendment. The distinguished Prime Minister of Australia in his speech made it quite clear that it is not an amendment, although he may call it so. It may come as a separate resolution.

"Even so, of course, if it was so considered, I would have much to say about it and against it but anyhow it might have been considered separately. Not being used to the normal working of this Assembly, I could not understand what meaning lay behind this so-called amendment.

"I have had the greatest respect for the Prime Minister of Australia, more especially for his keen mind and ability. I wondered if that keen mind and ability had not tried to cover up with a jumble of words something which had no meaning at all or a wrong meaning. So I was particularly keen and anxious to listen to the distinguished Prime Minister of Australia and thought perhaps he might throw some light on this aspect of the question which I had failed to understand.

"The more I listened the more I realized that there was no substantive idea at all in this amendment but some idea of just a dislike of what the five-Power resolution had to suggest.

"He may dislike it. He said clearly that he dissented with the last paragraph of that resolution, a very simple paragraph, a very innocuous one, nevertheless, a paragraph with very considerable meaning. In fact, the whole resolution led up to that. The rest is merely a preamble.

"Therefore he dissented from the very basis of this resolution. He said that the effect of this resolution, if carried, would be undesirable. I wondered if I had understood him rightly or if I had made some mistake in regard to what he said. Why, I ask the distinguished Prime Minister, why from any point of view, why from any approach possibly should the passing of this resolution be undesirable? I am quite unable to understand his reasoning.

"It must be undesirable from some point of view of which I am not aware. It must be undesirable from some point of view which has nothing to do with this resolution. That is the conclusion I have arrived at.

"Now I would put to this distinguished Assembly — I say so with respect and without meaning any offence—this is rather a trivial way of dealing with this not only important, but vital question of the world conflict and how to avoid it. Is it right to treat it in this trivial way and call it an amendment to this resolution? I do submit, although these are simple words, we are discussing here very important matters affecting the world.

"The distinguished Prime Minister of Australia in his argument talked about a conference. Why does this resolution suggest a meeting or a conference? First of all, I would beg of him to read our resolution again and again, because he has failed to understand it. It is not necessarily a conference or a meeting. It suggests the renewal of contacts.

"Then again, he said why should the two people meet? Why should not the four meet? Why dismiss UK and France? Why omit them from some talks? Why all this, he asked. Nobody is dismissing or pushing out anybody or suggesting it.

"He has missed the point of the resolution and considered it as some kind of, what shall I say, secret motive behind this. I regret that any such idea should have gone abroad.

"The resolution was put forward in all good faith for purposes named in it. To suspect it of some device to push out somebody or not to pay adequate respect to some country is not fair. The Prime Minister of Australia, I greatly regret, has done very little justice to himself in proposing this amendment or making the speech he did.

"I am sure that the Assembly will look on this matter not from a superficial point of view which the Prime Minister of Australia put forward, but consider it from the basic point of view which is of the highest importance to this Assembly and the world.

"Let us look at this amendment (Australian) which I think is not an amendment. Its wording is interesting. In the preamble, the second paragraph, it says: 'Recalling the conference between the President of USA, the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, the President of the French Republic and the Prime Minister of UK, was arranged to take place in Paris on May 17, 1960, in order that these four leaders should examine matters of particular and major concern for their four nations.'

"Note the words 'in order that those four leaders should examine matters of particular and major concern for their four nations'. It was a private matter between the four nations according to the Prime Minister of Australia. What has this Assembly got to do with this?

"Then, later on in this amendment, it says: 'Believing that much benefit for the world could arise from a co-operative meeting of Heads of Government of these four nations in relation to those problems which particularly concern them'.

"This is a very extraordinary idea to put before this Assembly. These matters, these so-called summit meetings, and the rest are private concerns of the four eminent dignitaries, Heads of State or Prime Ministers of these four countries. Where does this Assembly come in? Where do all of us who happen to be in outer darkness come in? The Prime Minister of Australia then said we had fallen into a trap —we, the sponsors of the resolution falling into some communist trap—which was aimed at describing the world as being divided up between two great protagonists, ignoring the rest.

"Whatever the Communist technique may be or may not be in regard to these matters, I am not aware. I am not particularly concerned with these techniques, but it seems to me that the Prime Minister of Australia's technique is obvious, that is, here are these four Great Powers whom we respect, of course, whom we honour. Leave it to them. What business has this Assembly to deal with these matters? This kind of thing cannot, should not, must not, be accepted.

"When we suggested that these two distinguished Heads of States should renew contacts, it was no idea that they should discuss the affairs of the world and finalize them. I personally would not agree to any finalization of these matters by two Powers or four Powers or 10 Powers. Only this Assembly should finalize it.

"But it is true that in dealing with these tremendous questions, it is convenient and desirable for matters to be discussed in small groups and more particularly in a question like disarmament by some of the countries which have most to disarm. Most of the people sitting here have nothing to disarm or practically nothing, so that the two Powers or four Powers or committees or commissions may consider these matters quietly, not always making speeches at each other, as one does in this Assembly, but from a constructive point of view. That is all right, but remembering always that in a matter of this magnitude no group of Powers, however big, can dispose of the destiny of the world.

"That appears to be the idea behind the mind of the Prime Minister of Australia and because he had that idea, he was naturally, quite rightly, somewhat irritated that only two Powers should do so.

"Well, it is not my intention that any two Powers or four or six or more should do so. Therefore, I should like to disabuse him of this wrong notion that he has got in his mind.

"The distinguished Prime Minister said, and I was happy to hear it, that he prayed daily for the avoidance of armed conflict. I earnestly hope that his prayers will have effect, that all our prayers will have effect; but even the prayers require some action and we meet here not merely to pray, although prayer is good, but for action to give a lead to the world, to induce the people, to request the people, to urge the people, to act in a particular way and sometimes to push the people to act in a paricular way. This is the only thing we can do.

"This great country, USA, is engaged in an important election and it is not convenient for them to enter into these basic talks.

"That is true, but even so, if nothing is done now to arrest the process of deterioration, then it will become more difficult even at a later stage to have those talks.

"That is a fact to be borne in mind. Therefore, we suggest that this small but highly important step might be taken as an urgent step, namely the renewal of contacts.

"Let us consider what the effect would be if the advice of the Prime Minister of Australia was followed. It would mean that this renewal of contacts would not take place.

"A negative view prevails that we should wait for some future occasion, which obviously is a fairly distant occasion, for some kind of a 'Summit' Conference, but this Assembly realizes that it cannot be held for the next few months and therefore we should wait and spend our time presumably in a daily prayer that war should be avoided. I do submit that this position is not only completely untenable, but it verges on absurdity and I am surprised that a man of high ability, the Prime Minister of Australia, should put this forward.

"There is, I feel—I hope I am wrong—some of this 'cold war' approach in the so-called amendment of the Prime Minister of Australia. I am anxious, therefore, that the resolution which the five nations have sponsored should be passed unanimously, if not unanimously, near-unanimously.

"Not to pass it would be a dangerous thing from the point of view of the objectives we have, for which UN stands, from the point of view of creating some kind of disengagement, some kind of detente in this matter, the beginning of it, not solutions which may well come later, some little movement in the right direction.

"It would be dangerous, it would be harmful, it would be wholly unjustifiable, to oppose it. I still hope that the Prime Minister of Australia will realize his amendment is not what he apparently imagines it to be and that it is a harmful amendment and it shows certain lack of care as to what should happen or should not happen."

Taking the floor at the outset of the special debate, the Foreign Minister of UAR, Mr. Mahmoud Fawzi, told the Assembly that the sponsors of the five-Power resolution had revised their draft in the interests of unanimity.

He read a revised version of the operative paragraph, which stated that the Assembly "expresses the hope that as a first step" President Eisenhower and Mr. Khruschev should renew contacts.

In its original form, the draft would have had the Assembly "request as a first step", that the two leaders make such contacts.

Observers said that the revision was intended to "soften" the impact of the draft, in the face of reservations from some quarters over a formula by which the Assembly would "request" the Heads of sovereign States to take "urgent action".

Mr. Nehru, who moved the five-Power resolution in the Assembly on September 30 welcomed the change proposed by Dr. Fawzi as a "happier way of putting forward the idea which the resolution has".

President Kwame Nkrumah (Ghana) appealed to "my good friend," Mr. R. Menzies, to withdraw the amendment, which, he said, had missed the point of the five-Power resolution.

He declared: "In any case, the Australian amendment is not an amendment, it is a new resolution which would only bedevil the issue before us."

He said that the original draft was produced as a result of "great consultations and consideration" among a number of Heads of Government and States."

He added: "We saw fit to introduce it not only because there has been a deterioration in international relations, but also because we think that President Eisenhower and Mr Khruschev have special responsibilities in lessening tensions.

"We all know there has been a chain of events leading to the present world tension. It is not necessary for the Assembly to inquire into the reasons for this and no good will come out of apportioning blame or praise.

"Whether we like it not, the key to war and peace lies in the hands of the Governments of USA and the Soviet Union. But the balance of world moral strength lies within the very walls of this Assembly."

Mr. Nehru Withdraws Resolution:

On October 6, Mr. Nehru took the floor to announce the withdrawal of the five-Power resolution.

Giving reasons for the withdrawal, he said that the changes made by the Assembly in the resolution had robbed it of what he called "the sense of urgency and the passionate feeling" which it had sought to express.

Instead of expressing the hope that these two leaders should renew contacts, he alleged that the document in its amended form urged renewed contacts between USA and the Soviet Union.

He said that these changes "take away from the main purpose underlying the resolution". By saying that USA and USSR should renew contacts, the resolution was not true to fact because there had been no break in contacts, diplomatic, official or otherwise.

He added: "The resolution as it now stands lacks the passion, the energy and the dynamism which we thought the situation required," and said that the sponsors of the five-Power resolution no longer wished to be associated with such a resolution.

The withdrawal of the resolution came after more than three hours of debate and followed the adoption of an Argentine move to delete from the resolution any reference to the "President of USA" and the "Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR".

ASIAN RECORDER

November 12—18, 1960

Regd. No. D-727

Vol. VI, No. 46

CHINA

A. Mr. Ferhat Abbas' Visit: The Prime Minister of the "Provisional Government" of the Republic of Algeria, Mr. Ferhat Abbas, paid a visit to China from September 29 to October 6, at the invitation of the Chinese Government.

During his stay in Peking, he attended the celebrations of the 11th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China.

His packed programme in Peking included State and public receptions and talks with Chinese leaders. He also met the Chairman of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, Mr Mao Tse-tung.

A joint communique was signed in Peking on October 5 by the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai and Mr. Abbas on their talks.

The following is the text of the communique:

"The talks concerned the following questions: the conditions of the struggle in Algeria and the further development of the relations of friendship and co-operation between China and Algeria, the situation in Asia and Africa and the present international situation. The two parties reached, to their satisfaction, an identity of views.

"The two parties hold that all the obstacles and menaces to world peace are brought about by the fact that imperialism continues to pursue its policies of aggression and war, never ceases to multiply its interventions against the national independence movement in the colonies and semi-colonies, while stepping up its bloody suppressions and carrying on aggressive wars such as in Algeria.

"In consequence, the two parties consider that a resolute struggle against the imperialist policies of aggression and war and for liberty and peace constitutes, for all the peoples, an urgent and primary political task which calls for their unity. They recognize that to this struggle the national liberation movements in the colonial and semi-colonial countries and the action of the peoples of the world for democracy and social progress are an important contribution.

"The two parties note with pleasure that the movements of the peoples of the world against imperialism are developing in ever greater depth and on an ever broader scale. They express the firm belief that the peoples, so long as they persist in their struggle and form a broad anti-imperialist united front, will certainly be able to defeat imperialism and colonialism, win and safeguard their national independence and ensure world peace.

"The two parties note with satisfaction that the national liberation movement is forging ahead vigorously in the world and that, in particular, the struggles of the peoples on the African continent to win and safeguard national independence and to oppose imperialism and colonialism have converged into an irresistible torrent. They extended warm greetings to the many African countries which have won independence. They warmly greet the daily strengthening of the friendship and solidarity of the Asian and African peoples in their common struggle. They wish an early victory to the struggle for national independence waged by those peoples who are still under colonial rule. The two parties solemnly declare their resolute support to the peoples of the Congo and Cuba, the colonial and semi-colonial peoples and also the peoples of other countries in their just struggles to win and safeguard national independence. The two parties sternly condemn the Governments of the NATO countries, principally that of the United States, which support the French Government in carrying on its colonial repression and war of aggression in Algeria. They appeal to all the peoples of the world and particularly to the Governments and peoples of the Asian and African countries to adopt effective measures to give resolute support to the peoples in their just struggle to safeguard and win national independence and to resolutely stop these criminal activities of intervention and aggression.

"During the talks, the Chinese side praised the Algerian people's heroic struggle for national independence waged under the leadership of the 'Provisional Government' of the Republic of Algeria and the National Liberation Front. It expressed stern opposition to and condemnation of the colonial war and criminal acts of aggression against Algeria carried on by French imperialism with the support of US imperialism. The Chinese Government re-iterated its firm stand of rendering unfailing assistance and support to the just struggle of the Algerian people. It supports the Algerian people persisting in and re-inforcing their armed struggle, who, in their fight for national independence, do not exclude negotiations conducted on the basis of equality, which will serve to expose the fraud of the enemy. The Chinese Government firmly believes that the valiant Algerian people, persisting in their struggle supported by all the peoples of the world, will certainly be able to defeat all the aggressors, completely and thoroughly liberate their territory and win the final victory in their national liberation struggle.

"The Algerian side expressed admiration for the series of tremendous efforts and contributions made unswervingly by the Chinese Government and people for the defence of world peace, realization of general disarmament and the prohibition of nuclear weapons, initiation and implementation of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the strengthening of solidarity and co-operation among Asian and African countries, as well as their unshakable just stand in opposing the imperialist policies of war and aggression and supporting the struggle of the peoples in the colonial and semi-colonial countries for national independence and that of the peoples of all countries for peace, democracy and social progress. It expressed full support for the Chinese people's just struggle to liberate their own territory of Taiwan.

"The two parties pointed out with pleasure that the relations of friendship and co-operation between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Algeria based on the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence are being continuously strengthened. The two parties further studied various ways for promoting the relations of friendship and co-operation between the two countries. The Government of the People's Republic of China welcomes the early establishment of a representative organ by the 'Provisional Government' of the Republic of Algeria in the capital of the People's Republic of China. Both parties have the same conviction that the profound friendship between China and Algeria and between their peoples, forged in their common struggle against imperialism, will certainly be further consolidated and developed."

B. Diplomatic Relations With Cuba: It was officially announced in Peking on September 29 that China and Cuba had decided to establish diplomatic relations.

The announcement said: "In view of the fact that both the Government of the Chinese People's Republic and the Revolutionary Government of the Cuban Republic have agreed to establish diplomatic relations between them, the two Governments have decided to exchange diplomatic representatives of ambassadorial rank within the shortest possible time, so as to develop the relations of friendship and co-operation already existing between the two fraternal peoples."

In a message of greetings to the Cuban Premier, Dr Fidel Castro on the occasion, the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, said: "In our common struggle against US imperialism, we have always supported and encouraged each other. The victories of the Chinese revolution and the Cuban revolution have broken down the artificial barriers created long ago by US imperialism between Cuba and China and between China and other Latin American countries, bringing our relations to a new stage of development.

"The Chinese Government and the Chinese people will extend every possible support and assistance to the Cuban people who are struggling for independence and freedom."

SUMMARY: Official Language Bill Passed In Assam; DLF Loan; Official Document On Portuguese Rule In Goa; Sub-Committee's Report On National Service Scheme; Food Prices; Price-Page Schedule For Newspapers.

A. Official Language Bill Passed In Assam: The Assam Legislative Assembly, on October 24, passed the Official Language Bill, making Assamese the sole official language of the State with provision for the use of different languages at the district level.

The Bill laid down that "English shall also continue to be in use at the Secretariat and in offices till replaced by Hindi".

In regard to district administration, the Bill said: "English shall be the language in the hill districts unless changed by the district councils, and Bengali shall be the language in Cachar unless changed by the Mahakuma Parishad (village panchayat bodies) and municipal bodies in their respective jurisdictions."

The passing of the Bill was marked by a hartal and demonstration in Shillong. The hartal was called by the Khasi-Jaintia Hills district unit of the All-Party Hill Leaders' Conference in protest against Assamese being declared the official language. About 20,000 tribals and Bengalis marched in procession through the streets of Shillong sounding a war-drum in protest against the Bill. All along the two-mile route of the procession, they chanted slogans proclaiming that they would not rest until they obtained a separate State.

In the Assembly, Congress members from Cachar and the hill districts withdrew from the House before it began detailed consideration of the Bill.

Speaking on behalf of Cachar Congress members, Mr. Ranendra Mohan Das of Karimganj, said they were unhappy that the Congress Assembly Party did not permit them to speak and vote on the Bill freely, though certain amendments to it as approved by the party, were likely to be adopted by a majority vote contrary to the desire and interests of the Cachar people.

Refering to the 1951 census figures and the States' Re-organization Commission's recommendations, he remarked that Assamese leaders, by their adamant stand to make Assamese the sole official language, could satisfy neither Cachar nor the hill people, and were therefore, sowing the seeds of disintegration.

The Assam Agriculture Minister, Mr. Moinul Haq Choudhury, who left the House after the question-hour, did not turn up again during the day's proceedings. Mr. Choudhury, who hailed from Cachar, had already submitted his resignation from the Cabinet.

Before leaving the House. Mr. W. A. Sangma, who recently resigned as Tribal Affairs Minister over the language issue, said that it was a "memorable day" when Assam Valley leaders were going to enact legislation which all non-Assamese people opposed. It would have far-reaching consequences and the partition of Assam was now inevitable.

He added that the hill people would now carry on their movement for a separate hill State, as they were convinced that it was the only solution to their problems.

Replying to the debate on the main provisions of the Bill, the Chief Minister, Mr. B. P. Chaliha, said that the members present had to convince those who had withdrawn from the House that by this Bill they would do no wrong to anybody in the State.

He said: "It is our least intention to impose Assamese on those who do not want it."

He made this statement while accepting a Congress Party amendment seeking to convert the Bill from a bilingual into a unilingual one.

Originally it was intended that Assamese and Hindi should be the State's official languages, on the basis of the formula suggested by the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, during his stay in Shillong from October 6 to 8. But the formula was not accepted by the hill leaders, who demanded that Hindi should be declared the official language.

Thereafter, on October 15, the Assam Pradesh Congress Committee adopted a resolution to the effect that Assamese "should be used for all or any official purposes in the State of Assam."

The resolution also said that Assamese and English (till replaced by Hindi) and thereafter Assamese and Hindi should be used for all official purposes in the Secretariat and offices of the heads of departments.

In regard to administration at district level, it said that "Assamese shall be the language in the valley districts, Bengali in Cachar and the language of their choice in the hill districts".

An amendment based on this resolution was accepted by the Assembly, and the Bill, as passed by the House on October 24, thus made Assamese the sole official language of the State.

The following is the sequence of events culminating in the passing of the Official Language Bill by the Assembly:

On October 7 it was known that the Assam Government, after prolonged deliberations with various political parties and linguistic groups, had decided to have two official languages — Assamese and Hindi,—with English continuing to be the official language until replaced by Hindi. It was also decided that a Bill to this effect should be introduced in the Assembly on October 10.

The Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, who arrived in Shillong the previous day (October 6), helped the Assamese leaders to reach this decision.

A joint meeting of the Congress Parliamentary Party and the Assam Pradesh Congress Executive held on October 7 generally approved of the proposal for two official languages.

The Council of Action of the Hill Leaders' Conference, however, did not agree to the proposal. They were of the opinion that if the present arrangement were to be changed, either English or Hindi should be made the official language. They were against Assamese being declared an official language with Hindi.

The Council of Action also directed the Minister for Tribal Affairs, Mr. N. W. A. Sangma to resign from the Cabinet. Mr. Sangma submitted his resignation to the Chief Minister, Mr. B. P. Chaliha, the same day (October 7).

Pandit G. B. Pant's News Conference:

Addressing a news conference in Shillong on October 8, the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, said that the bilingual formula was "better than the original from the point of view of all concerned" and would "meet the wishes of all the people."

He said that the formula had taken into account the hill leaders' demand to have Hindi as the official language. But he felt that "the hill leaders had taken a negative attitude by rejecting the formula" which sought to give Assamese also the status of official language along with Hindi.

In reply to another question on the attitude of the hill leaders' Action Council, he said that they did not want Assamese to be mentioned at all even as one of the State official languages. But the Bill to be brought forward was for the purpose of declaring Assamese as the official language and "their demand was one which no Chief Minister can possibly accept".

He said that the Assam Valley leadership had made a concession by giving up its earlier demand for making only Assamese the official language.

Official Resignations:

The Government of Assam, in a Gazette Extraordinary issued on October 10, notified the acceptance of the resignations submitted by the Tribal Affairs Minister, Mr W. A. Sangma (Garo Hills), the Tribal Affairs Parliamentary Secretary, Mr. Lalmawia (Mizo Hills), and by the Chief Parliamentary Secretary, Mr. A. Thanglura (Mizo) who had sent in his resignation in April, 1960 on other grounds.

Mr. Thanglura was the chairman of the Action Council of the hill leaders.

Language Bill Introduced:

The same day (October 10), the Chief Minister, Mr. B. P. Chaliha, introduced the Assam Official Language Bill in the Assembly.

The main features of the Bill were: Assamese and English, and when English was replaced by Hindi, Assamese and Hindi would be the official languages for the State of Assam; the language for the Brahmaputra Valley districts would be Assamese; the language for the district of Cachar would be Bengali at the district level; the district and regional councils of the autonomous hill districts would have the option to select the language for the area under their respective jurisdictions; the use of English shall continue for all official purposes of the Secretariat and heads of departments of the State Government; and the rights of various linguistic groups in respect of the medium of instruction, granting of aid to educational and cultural institutions, and rights to appointments in the Assam public services shall not be affected on the ground of language.

Introducing the Bill, Mr. Chaliha said that the relationship between Assamese and the tribal languages was historical. This relationship would "continue to play its historical role for all time to come."

He deprecated the suggestion for dismemberment of the State and appealed to the people to think in terms of "unity, harmony and strength."

Regarding the advantages to be derived by the tribal people by having Hindi as the official language, he said that for the hill people it would be a great relief and advantage. They would be freed to a large extent from the "compulsion of learning too many languages."

Before the Speaker, Mr. M. M. Chaudhury, put to vote Mr. Chaliha's motion for leave to introduce the Bill, nine of the 15 members from the hill districts, led by the former Tribal Affairs Minister, Mr. W. A. Sangma, walked out of the House.

After the introduction of the Bill, Mr. Chaliha, called upon the members to decide the matter in that session itself. This was necessary, he said because delay would not only be undesirable but also harmful to the State.

The Bill, which sought to make the language spoken by most of the people the official language, would bring the administration and the people closer. At a time when Assam was undertaking vast development work, he said that it was necessary that the people participated in it. If they did not follow the language of the administration, they would not be able to participate. It was, therefore, necessary to make the language they spoke the language of the administration also.

The Assembly agreed on October 18, to take up for consideration the Official Language Bill by 54 votes to 17.

Winding up the debate, the Chief Minister, Mr. Chaliha, said that the hard reality of the situation had to be faced—there was "no agreed solution" to the problem and that diversity of public opinion in the State was "fully reflected" in the House.

Yet a decision on the matter could no longer be delayed. The Bill was based on the formula of two languages at State level. This was no ideal formula and he maintained an open mind on the question.

The Government, he said, was giving thought to the amendments suggested by the Assam Pradesh Congress Committee (APCC) and others and would express its views when clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill was taken up.

He called upon members as representatives of the people to solve the issue in a spirit of accommodation and consideration, "leading the people to unity".

Three Cachar Congress members, Mrs. Jyotsna Chanda, Mr. Hem Chandra Chakravarty and Mr. Nanda Kishore Sinha, opposing the Bill in that form, pleaded for Bengali being given official status along with Assamese and Hindi.

Congress members from the Assam Valley as also Praja-Socialist and Communist members from the Opposition rejected the bilingual character of the Bill and said that Assamese should be the only official language.

Mr. Sangma, former Tribal Affairs Minister, while appreciating the feelings of the majority, said that the stage had now been reached when separation of the hills from Assam was the only course open to them and the sooner this was done the better it would be for all.

The Bill was passed by the Assembly on October 24.

Mr. Nehru's Views:

Addressing a news conference in New Delhi on October 21, the Prime Minister Mr. J. Nehru, said that the Central Government's view on the Assamese language was that it should be encouraged but it should not be forced down "the throats of people who are not Assamese".

He said that the Central Government had "strongly" advised the Assam Government at one stage that the consideration of the Assam Language Bill should be postponed and that it could be taken up when a large measure of agreement had been arrived at.

He added that the language controversy in Assam was very unfortunate. The approach to the language question on the part of some was narrow and ignored the feelings of others in the State.

B. DLF Loan: It was made known in Washington on October 19 that the US Government had approved a $25 million (Rs. 11.9 crores) loan to the Government of India for the import of capital equipment.

The loan came from the US Development Loan Fund (DLF) and would be used for procuring equipment to increase the productive capacity of small and medium-sized private industrial enterprises in the fields of metallurgy, electrical installations, machine tools, earth-moving equipment and chemicals. The loan is repayable in rupees.

The approval of a loan of this type marked a departure from the practice of DLF in recent months, during which it had given only project-type loans.

This would be the 22nd loan given to India by DLF and would bring the total amount of US economic assistance to India to $3,654 million (Rs. 1,739 crores).

C. Portuguese Rule In Goa—Official Document Published: In a 26-page document on Goa released in New Delhi on October 22, the Government of India challenged Portugal's refusal to give information on Goa to United Nations which every imperial Power was obliged to submit under the UN Charter.

Entitled "Goa and the Charter of UN", the document contained a strong indictment of Portuguese rule in Goa.

It stated that "Goa continues under colonial rule, while vast areas in the continents of Asia and Africa previously under colonial rule have achieved freedom."

It added: "There is no justification for discriminating between the aspirations and rights of one colonial people and another. In its aspiration for freedom and independence, all humanity is one and equal. If the former colonies of UK or USA have become independent, on what grounds can it be argued that Goa, Angola or Mozambique or any other dependent territory must not aspire to the destiny of Ghana or Nigeria?"

In spite of the new nomenclature of "provinces" given by Portugal to her colonies, it said that the colonial and dependent character of Goa in relation to Portugal continued.

It stated that in reply to repeated questions addressed to Portugal by the Secretary-General of UN on Goa, Portugal had in apparent simplicity replied to the effect that she did not administer territories which came under the category indicated by Article 73 of the UN Charter.

[Article 73 calls upon colonial countries to transmit specified information about their colonies "subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require."

The Portuguese delegate at United Nations, who argued that under his country's constitution the overseas territories governed by her were not colonies, had relied on this clause in the Article to justify his refusal to transmit the requisite information to the world body.]

The document said: "This statement indeed shamefacedly underlines the utter travesty of truth which the Government of Dr. Salazar has been led into in seeking to support their false and untenable position in relation to the colonies. The fact that United Kingdom, France and the Netherlands, whose cases were not unlike that of Portugal, had agreed to transmit to UN information relevant to Article 73 of the Charter, highlights Portugal's brazenness."

Quoting from important documents, it showed that any popular expression of opinion through representative organs was impossible in Goa, or for that matter, in the other Portuguese colonies where fundamental freedoms, as understood elsewhere in the democratic world, were non-existent.

Pointing out that Goa had only two members out of a total of 120 Deputies in the National Assembly which sat in Lisbon, it said that "while in Portugal, the representation is on a basis of 6 to 7 Deputies for every 50,000 inhabitants, Goa with a population of 6,30,000 is represented by two."

It drew attention to the constitutional discrimination between the people in Goa and "the Metropolitan Portuguese" and listed various political and administrative disabilities to which the Goans had been subjected.

Coming to cultural affinities of the people of Goa, Daman and Diu, with other Indians and to their Indian origin, it debunked the claim that they were formed of a fusion of Indian and Portuguese people of European stock as being a fantasy. In fact, in the official census figures for 1950, only 562 out of a population of 6,30,000 were classified as Eurasians and 517 as Europeans.

It said that "despite the 450 years of the so-called civilizing mission of the rulers of Portugal, the vast majority of Goans spoke Konkani, an Indian dialect common to the entire coast of West India from Bombay in the north to Mangalore in the south. Konkani was spoken by the Hindus, Christians and Muslims and it was a very small minority alone that spoke or understood Portuguese.

It added: "Strangely enough, the people who speak Portuguese are even less in percentage than those who speak English. Over the centuries, strong efforts have been made by the successive Viceroys and Governors-General of Goa to root out what were the Indian aspects of the life of the Goans. The use of the Indian language and Indian dress and the adoption of Indian customs were all forbidden.

"Even today, Konkani is unacceptable as an official language in the courts, administrative tribunals and in representations to the Governors-General. Paradoxically, however, there are 21,000 students in Marathi, Gujerati and English schools in these territories as against a bare 1,600 in the Portuguese Lyceum. Where then is the assimilation spoken of by the Portuguese?"

It also gave details of the nationalist movement in Goa, with particular reference to the satyagraha of 1955 and the liberation of the Portuguese enclaves of Dadra and Nagar Haveli.

Administrator Appointed:

On October 17, Mr. K. G. Badlani, an IAS officer, took over as administrator of the former Portuguese enclaves of Dadra and Nagar Haveli.

He would be responsible to the panchayat which had asked for the loan of the services of an experienced officer from the Government of India in order to implement its development and administrative programmes.

D. National Service Scheme—Sub-Committee's Report: The Sub-Committee of the working group of educationists, administrators and defence experts constituted by the Education Ministry to formulate a detailed programme of national service for boys and girls on the lines suggested by the National Service Committee, submitted its final report in New Delhi on October 18.

According to the report, the cost of the proposed Scheme, the feasibility of which was still under consideration, was estimated at Rs. 138 crores over a period of five years. Earlier estimates had placed the figure at Rs. 150 crores.

It estimated that recurring expenditure would come to Rs. 750 per annum, but taking into account the economic value of work done by a student under the programme, which might be about Rs. 150 per annum, the actual expenditure would be reduced to Rs. 600 per head per annum.

It envisaged that the number of eligible students for national service would come to about 2,67,330, which was expected to rise to 3,91,454 in 1965-66.

It said that it would be practical to phase the Scheme over a period of three or four years. Selection of students should be made according to age groups, the younger ones being taken up first,

CC0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

before the Scheme could cover all the eligible students.

It added that the duration of service should be at least nine months and the period might be divided into suitable terms with a small interval in between. The number of working days should be not less than 200. While labour and social service should be rendered for four hours every day, military training should be imparted for 1½ hours every alternate day. It said that for general education, three hours should be allotted every alternate day. Allocation of total time would thus be 800 hours for labour and social service, 150 hours for military training and 300 hours for general education.

The content of general education might be divided into three periods of 100 hours each. One such period should be devoted to the improvement of general knowledge, acquaintance with India's cultural heritage and programmes of social and economic planning. The second period should be utilized for improvement of communication skills in English and Indian languages. The third period should be allowed for reading prescribed books kept in a library and doing written work as a follow-up to lectures.

The Sub-Committee recommended that in addition to students passing higher secondary/pre-university stages, those passing the intermediate examination should also be covered by the National Service Scheme so that the Scheme might be uniformally enforced in the country.

It was of the view that no legislation might perhaps be necessary if the Scheme was considered as an extension of the secondary stage of education, as the State Boards of Secondary Education might have the necessary authority to enforce the regulation that no secondary education certificate would be given unless each boy or girl had rendered national service.

However, Central legislation would be possible under Article 23 of the Constitution which provides for the enlistment of citizens for public service, read with Entry 20 of the Concurrent List. If the main objective of the Scheme was defined to be educational, which fell within the State field, the only solution would be to have a resolution passed by State legislatures under Article 252 of the Constitution so as to enable Parliament to make the necessary law.

E. Food Prices: Official circles in New Delhi stated on October 22 that the food position in 1960 was better than it was at this time in 1959, though they believed that the total production in 1960 might be lower.

Not only was the wheat supply position now comfortable, but there had also been a significant and continuing decline in the price of rice even in this traditionally lean season.

These trends, it was stated, indicated that contrary to earlier indications, the trade did not expect any major setback in production, specially of the coming paddy crop.

In spite of the damage done to standing kharif crops by drought and flood, the all-India price index for rice had fallen in two months from 115.6 to 110. The index at this time in 1959 was 112.8.

Moreover, the fall in rice prices had been continuous, unlike in 1959 when, after an initial decline, prices rose in October. This was attributed to easier market supplies and brighter crop prospects.

Even in drought-affected Andhra Pradesh and Mysore, rice prices had not risen markedly. In flood-affected Orissa, prices which rose in August, had since the beginning of September tended to drop.

In UP, Bihar, Madhya Pradesh, West Bengal and Maharashtra, prices had either declined or shown steadiness.

In West Bengal and Bihar prices had gone down by Re 1 to Rs. 4 per maund in the last two months.

Wheat prices during 1960 had been lower than in 1959 in all the States except Bihar. In August and September, 1960 wheat prices, which had earlier registered some rise, showed a decline, unusual for that time of the year, in UP, Madhya Pradesh, Gujerat and Maharashtra.

Suspension of the levy in UP in August and the stoppage of procurement in Madhya Pradesh resulted in a considerable fall in prices in these States. In recent months, prices in several markets of UP and Madhya Pradesh had gone down by Re. 1 or more per maund. Moreover, arrivals of wheat in these States had shown considerable improvement, which was taken to indicate that a further fall in wheat prices was to be expected.

The general position with regard to wheat prices showed that during the three months August, September and October, there had been a decline in the index from 93.1 to 90. In the corresponding period during 1959 the index actually rose from 94.9 to 100.1.

The comfortable wheat position in 1960 was stated to be "in sympathy with the easing situation in regard to rice" as well as the expectation of large imports under the Indo-US PL 480 Agreement.

Agriculture Panel's Views:

The Planning Commission panel on agriculture, which met in New Delhi during the third week of October, came to the conclusion that the food targets indicated in the draft outline of the Third Five-Year Plan were reasonable and capable of achievement, but that the physical and financial resources provided for the purpose were inadequate.

The panel expressed the view that for the targets set there was need for additional financial allocation for agriculture in the Plan, besides help to farmers with proper implements, credit and a price incentive scheme.

Special attention had to be devoted to measures to increase the yield, particularly of coarse grains. It was pointed out that while the average yield of grains like rice and maize had gone up, there was little improvement in foodgrains.

The importance of price incentives for increased agricultural production and of ensuring that consumer goods required by the cultivators were available at reasonable prices were also emphasized.

The panel felt that timely and adequate supply of credit to cultivators, as well as improved seeds, fertilizers and iron and steel for agricultural implements played an important part in increasing output. The maximum possible allocation was urged for minor irrigation as the quickest means of increasing agricultural output.

It suggested that tractors of small horse-power which could be used on small holdings be manufactured in the country; the use of diesel engines for lift irrigation in areas without electric power be encouraged and diesel oil used for agricultural purposes be exempted from excise duty and sales tax.

It felt that there should be quality control over the agricultural implements and tools placed on the market.

An expert committee to study the magnitude of the problem of soil erosion and to suggest ways of dealing with it was also recommended.

It also suggested increased allocation for cattle development programmes and manufacture of dairy equipment in the country.

Discussing the programme for fisheries, it urged the development of fishing harbours and berthing facilities for fishing boats and the provision of refrigerated rail cars and insulated road trucks for the transport of fish over long distances.

F. Price-Page Schedule For Newspapers: The Government of India announced in a Gazette Extraordinary on October 24 an order enforcing a Price-Page Schedule for daily newspapers in the country from December 12, 1960.

The order would regulate the maximum number of pages to be printed by a newspaper for the price charged by it. To enable newspapers to make adjustments for varying the quota of news on different days, provision was made for additional pages up to six in a week.

The calculation of pages would be made over a 12-week period in order to facilitate adjustment of pages that might be necessary in relation to events.

The requirements of certain regional newspapers which were published only on six days in the week, of which one was a larger issue with a different price was also provided for.

In the case of the weekly edition of papers and also in regard to a specified number of special supplements during the year on important occasions, a larger number of pages was allowed.

In a Press Note issued the same day (October 24), the Government said that the order met to the maximum extent the current requirements of daily newspapers in the matter of pages.

After the Schedule had been in force for some time, it would be examined to see if any changes or modifications were needed in the light of experience gained and steps would be taken, if necessary, to extend the validity of the Act beyond September, 1961 when it was due to expire.

The maximum number of pages which a daily paper on six days in the week could give to its readers varied from six for a 3 nP. paper to 80 for a 20 nP. paper. Thus, a 16 nP. paper could give 64 plus 6 or 70 pages in six days and 14 pages on the seventh, which would be its weekly edition.

The order fulfilled one of the recommendations of the Press Commission in pursuance of which the Newspaper (Price and Page) Act was passed by Parliament in 1956. The Act provided that a Price-Page Schedule order would be made after consulting publishers of newspapers and associations of publishers.

According to the order, a daily newspaper on January 26 and August 15 every year and once every quarter could publish a supplement or special edition containing additional number of pages not exceeding six.

The Press Note said that two draft orders were issued on the subject on April 21 and August 21 inviting comments and suggestions. Replies were received from a number of daily newspapers as well as their associations. Discussions were also held with individual publishers and associations and the final order issued on October 24 had been made in the light of comments received.

G. Kerala Agrarian Relations Bill Passed: On October 15, the Kerala Legislative Assembly passed the Kerala Agrarian Relations Bill, as amended in accordance with the directions of the President.

The Bill was also one of those passed by the previous Assembly, but was returned by the President for reconsideration.

The Chief Minister, Mr. Pattom Thanu Pillai, who wound up the discussions, said that he was glad that the Communist Opposition members had promised their support in implementing the Bill. He described the Bill as an attempt to help the landless tenants, the landless workers and the poor tenants.

He said: "We want to bring about conditions in which no tenant will have any reason to complain that his interests are not taken care of by this Government."

Kerala Agriculturists' Debt Relief (Amendment) Bill Passed:

The Kerala Legislative Assembly on October 20 passed the Kerala Agriculturists' Debt Relief (Amendment) Bill as amended in the light of the recommendations of the President.

This was also one of the Bills passed by the previous Assembly, which was returned by the President for re-consideration.

Under the Bill, as passed by the dissolved Assembly, debts exceeding Rs. 15,000 due to banking companies were exempt from the provisions of the Act. The most important of the amendments now made reduced the exemption limit of debts due to banking companies from Rs. 15,000 to Rs. 1,500.

Mr. T. C. Narayanan Nambiar (Communist) who spoke during the consideration of the Bill, supported the amendments and said that the Bill as amended should be passed and Presidential assent obtained as soon as possible.

The Minister for Law and Revenue, Mr. K. Chandrasekharan, said that the Government would take all steps to avoid any delay in getting the President's assent.

INDONESIA

A. Parliament's Confidence Motion In President Sukarno: The Gotong Rojong Parliament on September 22 adopted a resolution expressing full confidence in President Sukarno's efforts to deal with world problems.

The resolution primarily related to the departure of Dr. Sukarno to attend the UN General Assembly.

The following is the text of the resolution.

"Considering that the doctrine of Panch Shila forms the basis for the implementation of an active and independent foreign policy as a contribution to the achievement of world peace;

"That the Political Manifesto, as the guiding principle for the State policy has determined the broad lines and directives for the implementation of the foreign policy;

"The results of the Asian-African Conference held in Bandung in 1955, as summarized in the Dasa Sila;

"United Nations is the world body which has the exclusive task of working for the realization and maintenance of world peace;

"Considering also that the international political situation is lately showing tensions in particular after the failure of the 'Summit' Conference in Paris in May, 1960;

"That imperialism and colonialism have always constituted the basic obstacle for the creation of a new world order of peace;

"That the visit of H. E. President Sukarno to United Nations forms a manifestation of the contribution of the Indonesian people;

"Has deemed it necessary to express its opinion on the departure of President Sukarno to United Nations and hereby

"Has resolved to approve of and to give full support to President Sukarno's decision to attend the UN General Assembly session and to deliver a speech before that body of UN;

"To express full confidence in President Sukarno both as Head of State and Leader of the Revolution in his policy in facing world problems and in his endeavours to promote the national interest including West Irian at the forum of United Nations;

"To share responsibility and to accept all consequences of the policy to be adopted by the President;

"To send off the President on his departure to UN with a prayer that he and his group may always enjoy the blessings and protection of God Almighty so that he and his party may come back to Indonesia hale and healthy; and

"To express the hope that a situation of peace and tranquillity will prevail in the Indonesian State and among the Indonesian people during the absence of their great Leader."

B. Directive To Publishers: The Government on October 13 ordered the Press of the Republic to fall in line with its policies. The order was issued in the form of a letter to publishers from the First Minister and acting President, Dr. A. Djuanda.

It said that President Sukarno's Political Manifesto (which contained the theories of "guided democracy", "guided economy" and "Indonesian socialism") was now the policy of the State.

It added that it was the duty of the Press to "support and defend" this policy and to become the means of dissemination of the Political Manifesto for fighting imperialism, colonialism, liberalism, federalism and separatism.

It was also the duty of the Press to defend Indonesia's "active and independent" foreign policy and not to support foreign Power blocs.

It added: "It is the duty of the Press to foster the belief of the Indonesian people in the bases, objectives, programme and leadership of the Indonesian revolution.

"It is the duty of the Press to assist in maintaining order and security and political tranquillity.

"It is the duty of the Press to strengthen the consciousness of the Indonesian identity by dissociating itself from articles and pictures of a sensational and immoral character.

"In articles criticizing the situation or iplementation of Government policy, the criticism should be constructive in character and should uphold the Political Manifesto."

A. Neanderthal Skeletons Discovered: It was announced in Washington on October 7 that US anthropologists had discovered three skeletons of pre-historic Neanderthal men and a burial site containing 26 other skeletons in a mountain cave in northern Iraq.

The cave, still used today by shepherds, is near Shanidar, a village 250 miles north of Baghdad.

The new discovery is of major importance because of the number of skeletons involved and because it affords scientists a population series of comparative study of these cave men who lived some 50,000 years ago.

The discovery, made in the Summer of 1960, was announced by the US National Science Foundation, which had supported the work with a grant.

The anthropologists also found samples of date palm pollen and wild wheat, indicating that the Neanderthal people had developed a primitive farm economy. They also found a primitive village, suggesting that the pre-historic people alternated between cave-dwelling in the Winter and village-living in the Summer.

JAPAN

A. Mr. Inejiro Asanuma Assassinated: The Socialist Party leader, Mr. Inerjiro Asanuma (63) was murdered on the afternoon of October 12 in Tokyo at an election rally by a youth named Tsuguya Yamaguchi, belonging to an ultra-nationalist organization.

The rally, sponsored by the Japanese Broadcasting Corporation, featured speeches by the Social Democratic Party leader, Mr. Hayato Ikeda, Mr. Suehiro Nishio, and Mr. Asanuma on the subject of fair elections.

Mr. Nishio had finished speaking and Mr. Asanuma had just begun when the chairman called for order to stop noise. At that point, Yamaguchi rushed towards the platform and stabbed Mr. Asanuma twice in the chest. Mr. Asanuma staggered a few steps from the platform, clutching his chest, and mumbled a few words, then fell flat on his face in a pool of blood. He was immediately driven to hospital in a police car, but when doctors tried to administer oxygen they found him dead.

The assassin, who was immediately arrested, later told the police that he formerly belonged to an ultra-nationalist organization called "Aikokuto." (Great Japan Patriotic Society) dedicated to the restoration of Japan's pre-War power and the establishment of an authoritarian type of society. Later, he left that organization to join the All-Asian Anti-Communist League.

He said that he had plotted the assassination for three days unaided and that Mr. Asanuma was a traitor trying to sell his country to the communists.

His assassination was the third attempt on a Japanese politician in recent months. In June, 1960 a Socialist member, Mr. Jotaro Kawakami, was stabbed by an ultra-nationalist thug while receiving petitions outside the Parliament building at the height of the anti-Security Treaty demonstrations. In July, 1960 the then Prime Minister, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, was repeatedly stabbed in the thigh.

Following the assassination, the Autonomy Minister and the Chairman of the National Public Security Commission, Mr. Iwao Yamazaki, formally tendered his resignation to the Premier, Mr. Ikeda, assuming responsibility for the incident.

The Director of National Police, Mr. Kashiwamuva and the Director of the Tokyo Metropolitan Police, Mr. Ogura, also resigned.

In a statement on the assassination, Mr. Ikeda declared that he had tried to adopt a conciliatory attitude since taking office, but he had resolved to "assume over-all leadership in politics so that the trend towards Japan's spiritual collapse can be halted".

He added that Mr. Asanuma's death had placed new obstacles in the path of Japanese democracy.

Mr. Asanuma was a key figure in the campaign against the Security Treaty with USA that led to the cancellation of Mr. Eisenhower's visit to Japan.

B. Agreement With Britain On War Claims: Representatives of the Governments of Japan and UK on October 7 in Tokyo signed an Agreement for the payment of £500,000 in settlement of British claims arising from the "China incident"—the period of fighting between China and Japan before the Pacific War began.

The claims arose from losses suffered between July 7, 1937 and December 8, 1941. The Agreement did not cover losses suffered during the Pacific War itself.

The signing of the Agreement marked the culmination of eight years of involved negotiations and was the first settlement of its kind concluded under the specific provisions of the San Francisco Peace Treaty stipulating Japan's obligations to foreign countries for claims arising before the Pacific War. Under Article 18 (a) of the Peace Treaty, Japan agreed to consider on their merits claims presented by the British Government for loss for damage to property or for personal injury or death which arose before the existence of a state of war.

British claims covering 439 cases originally amounted to about £1 million in accrued interest by 1960, while the Japanese Government expressed readiness to pay between £100,000 and £200,000 on the ground that there was insufficient evidence to substantiate British demands. The final compromise amount of £500,000 would be payable within three months.

TURKEY

A. Reformist Directive For Turkey's Future—Aims Of Military Committee: The National Unity Committee, the supreme military body, on September 10 published a Directive issued to the Government, on which plans for Turkey's future would be based.

Copies of the Directive were handed to the Press, together with another document entitled "Fundamental views of the National Unity Committee on problems facing the country."

The Directive said that the aim of the national unity movement was to create an "impartial and virtuous administration" based on the reforms of Kemal Ataturk, which would find "solutions to short-term problems and establish the basis of long-term problems."

It made no mention of the General Elections.

[The Committee will hand over power to the new Government by Autumn, 1961 at the latest.]

The Directive contained a number of general propositions of a reformist character. The State would be organized on the basis of "rational methods and democratic legal order" and radical steps would be taken to improve the functioning and control of all State institutions.

Other subjects included in the Directive were:

Education: Emphasis would be given to the campaign to improve national education, the aim of which would be to "meet the needs of the country in a way fitting the developments in the modern age."

Agriculture: Steps would be taken to establish private ownership of land and the distribution of land to land-less compatriots.

Defence: The armed forces would be swiftly re-organized in accordance with the demands of modern warfare.

Foreign Policy: Turkey desired to live at peace with her neighbours and would support the struggles of peoples wishing to be free.

The Ankara correspondent of The Times, London, on September 11 despatched the following report on the Directive:

"Observers here (Ankara) are struck by the relative moderation of the Committee's Directive, compared with the more radical statements by some younger members of the National Unity Committee in recent months.

"Though little is known of what goes on inside the 38-member Committee, there have been reliable reports in the past few days of a struggle between the moderate wings (led by Lieutenant-General Cemal Madanoglu) and the more radical faction (headed by Colonel Alparslan Turkes). Gen. Cemal Gursel, who is Head of State, President of the National Unity Committee and Prime Minister, is thought to tend towards the moderates."

B. Staff Colonel Turkes Resigns: Staff Colonel Alparslan Turkes, a member of the National Unity Committee, on September 22 resigned from the key post of Secretary-General in the Prime Minister's office, which he had held since the Revolution.

He was succeeded by Mr. Hilmi Incesulu, Secretary-General in the Ministry of the Interior.

In a statement to the Press, Col. Turkes said that his resignation was part of the normalization process whereby posts held by Army officers in the first days of the Revolution were being handed back to the civil administration.

He continues to be a member of the National Unity Committee.

Dr. Nureddin Khala, who had been the Syrian Premier for two months, was appointed Minister for Planning.

Most of the new appointments involved Syrian politicians, but did not alter the political balance between the two Regions. Five appointments were made necessary because of resignations over the previous 12 months.

B. Alleged Murder Of UAR Pilot In Jordan: The Middle East News Agency reported on October 8 that El Sherif Nasser, uncle of King Hussein of Jordan, had shot Fl-Lt. Adnan Madani of Syria after he had refused to sign a declaration to the effect that he was seeking political asylum in Jordan.

Madani landed in Jordan with his Russian-made MIG-17 fighter in the last week of September. A Jordan military spokesman said subsequently that he had sought political asylum and would address a news conference. On October 4, it was announced that he had committed suicide.

The Agency said that after being tortured under the supervision of El Sherif Nasser, "Madani was then handed over to another group of officers, who specialize in torture.

"After further torture, during which Madani kept up his resistance, El Sherif Nasser entered the room and seeing that Madani did not yield, drew his revolver, fired at Madani and walked out through another door".

Cairo Radio said that Madani had landed in Jordan territory for reasons which were outside his control.

It added that between September 29 and October 4, the UAR Embassy in Amman was denied access to Fl-Lt. Madani and was also refused a copy of the investigation report. A Jordanian medical report had clearly indicated that Fl-Lt. Madani had been subjected to torture before his death.

It added: "The purpose of his torture was to make him hold the news conference which the Jordan authorities announced in advance for their propaganda against UAR."

C. Suez Canal To be Widened And Deepened: A Press release from the UAR Embassy in New Delhi on September 29 gave details of the plan for widening and deepening the Suez Canal, which had just been completed. Work on the amended Eighth Project, as it is called, started in 1958.

The Chief Engineer of the Canal described the Project as the largest ever carried out for the improvement of the Canal since its digging 78 years ago.

The Project entailed the removal of 5,000,000 cubic metres of sand from above the surface of the water and clearing away 30,000,000 cubic metres of sand from the bed of the water-way.

The clearing of sand from the bed of the water-way had been carried out by three American companies at a cost of 180 milliems per cubic metre. The cost of this part of the Project amounted to about £(E)6,500,000.

The Suez Canal Company had previously carried out seven minor projects for the improvement of the Canal in 78 years at a total cost of £(E)20,500,000. It had also prepared a plan, the Eighth Project, for deepening the water-way to allow the passage of vessels of a draught of 36 feet and widening it from 1,200 metres to 1,500 metres to allow the passage of vessels with a tonnage of 38,000.

But, after nationalization of the water-way, the Company had found this plan to be deficient and amended it to allow the passage of vessels with a tonnage of 45,000.

The Chief Engineer of the Canal said that work on the first stage of the Nasser Plan, which aimed at making the water-way a two-way canal, had also started. The Nasser Plan was expected to be completed in 1963.

The first stage of the Plan would entail the removal of 6,000,000 cubic metres of sand from the surface and the clearing away of 69,000,000 cubic metres of sand from the bed of the Canal.

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. National Congress Of Viet-Nam Workers' Party: The third National Congress of the Viet-Nam Workers' Party met in Hanoi from September 5 to 10, with 576 delegates participating.

The Congress was opened by President Ho Chi Minh, who was later re-elected Chairman of the Party.

A major feature of the Congress was the presentation of the political report on behalf of the Central Committee of the Party by Mr. Then Le Duan.

The report spoke of the "continued domination of South Viet-Nam by US imperialism" and called for a concerted effort to "achieve a broad national unity embracing all national and democratic forces, all forces opposed to US imperialism and Ngo Dinh Diem (President of South Viet-Nam)." It said that the "achievement of re-unification of Viet-Nam was an immediate common goal."

It called for the socialist transformation of agriculture, commerce and industry. The First Five-Year Plan (1961-65), it said, anticipated that the total value of industrial output would increase by 148 per cent as compared with the increase in 1960 and the value of agricultural output by 61 per cent.

On foreign policy, it said that the Party and the Government would continue to strengthen the solidarity of the socialist camp headed by the Soviet Union. It called for strict implementation of the Geneva Agreements on Indo-China and supported the latest Soviet disarmament proposals and the Chinese suggestion for creating a nuclear arms-free zone in the Pacific. It added that North Viet-Nam wanted to pursue a policy of non-interference and mutual respect for the independence and sovereignty of other nations.

It said: "We welcome the present policy of peace and neutrality of the Kingdom of Cambodia and will further strengthen our friendly relations with Cambodia.

"We support the struggle of the Laotian people for the realization of a peaceful and neutral policy and national concord and we wish to establish lasting and stable friendly relations with the Kingdom of Laos.

"We are ready to establish friendly relations with all other countries on the basis of equality and mutual benefit."

On socialist ideology, it said: "Our Party aims at strengthening proletarian ideology on the basis of systematic education in Marxism-Leninism....and the continued elimination of feudalist and all other non-proletarian ideologies. That is the direction of the long-term ideological work within our Party. In performing our ideological work in different stages, we must base ourselves on the immediate political tasks, on the state of mind of Party cadres and members and on the requirements of revolution at each stage.

"In combination with ideological education and struggle, we must oppose the manifestation of dogmatism and give special attention to the prevention of any appearance of revisionism and regard it as the main danger to the present revolutionary movement. We must resolutely defend the political line and programme of the Party and defend and enhance the leading role of the Party."

Observers interpreted the Party's ideological programme as steering a cautious path between the Russian and the Chinese positions.

Delegations of communist parties from several countries attended the Congress. It was said that the ideological conflict between the Soviet Union and China was reflected in the speeches of the leaders of the delegations. While the leader of the Soviet delegation, Mr. N. Mukhitdinov, urged support for Mr. N. Khruschev's disarmament proposals, the Chinese delegation emphasized that the communists must not be deceived by the "zigzags of bourgeois tactics."

VIET-NAM (RVN)

A. UK-USSR Correspondence On US Military Advisers in Viet-Nam The Soviet Government on August 25 made public its exchange of correspondence with the United Kingdom concerning the status and number of US military advisers in the Republic of Viet-Nam.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesman said the same day (August 25) that a Note had been received from the Soviet Government on this subject on May 30. The contents of the Note were not made public.

The purpose of the Soviet Note, according to British sources, was to raise the question of the increase in the number of US military advisers stationed in South Viet-Nam. It proposed that Britain and Russia, as co-Chairmen of the Geneva Conference on Indo-China, should take action to limit the increase.

Such a suggestion, it was pointed out in London, ignored completely the existence of the International Truce Supervisory Commission for Viet-Nam which was set up specifically to deal with matters of this kind. In fact, the question of increasing the number of advisers had already been referred to the Commission by the Government of South Viet-Nam. In these circumstances, it would be obviously inappropriate to adopt the procedure suggested by the Soviet Government.

B. Mr. Ngo Dinh Diem On Subversive Activity: The President, Mr. Ngo Dinh Diem, in an address to the National Assembly in Saigon on October 3 said that the problem of "communist terrorism" in the Viet-Namese Republic was becoming more and more serious.

He said: "Internal subversive activity, is more intensive every day because of the infiltration of men and equipment across the frontier."

[The countries which share the frontier with South Viet-Nam are Laos, Cambodia and North Viet-Nam.]

Referring to the suggestion that military expenditure in the country could be reduced to the benefit of the economic sector, he said that this was a tactically dangerous idea when applied to countries such as Viet-Nam which was in direct contact with the communist world.

This remark was interpreted by observers as a reference to proposals that the emphasis of American aid should be shifted from military support towards agriculture and industry.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: UN General Assembly Postpones Question Of Chinese Representation—Question Of Independence For Colonies Placed On Agenda; IMF, IFC And World Bank Annual Meetings; Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Conference; IAEA General Conference; "Pioneer VI" Fails To Go Into Orbit.

A. UN General Assembly Postpones Question Of Chinese Representation: On September 28, the UN Steering Committee put off for another year the question of Chinese representation in UN.

The Committee turned down a Soviet proposal to include the question of China's representation on the UN Assembly's agenda.

It upheld by 12 votes to seven with one abstention, a US proposal that the Assembly decline for the duration of the session to admit any move to seat representatives of Peking and oust the Kuomintang Chinese.

The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, proposed that the Assembly reject the request of the Soviet Union for inclusion of the Chinese representation question.

He said that what USA objected to in the case of People's China was her record of flouting the Charter and holding it in contempt.

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. Valerian Zorin said that there was "an urgent need" to include this question in the agenda of the Assembly.

Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon) said that failure to consider this issue would leave 600 million people unrepresented at UN.

Sir Patrick Dean (Britain) said that substantive debate of this issue at this Assembly could produce no possible good "and it would be wrong to jeopardize what hopes there may be of positive achievements during the session".

Voting against the US draft resolution were Iraq, Ceylon, Bulgaria, the Soviet Union, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Sudan. Libya abstained.

Japan, Italy, Haiti, France, Costa Rica, China, Canada, Pakistan, Panama, Britain, USA and Venezuela voted for the resolution.

Mr. N. Khruschev addressed the General Assembly on October 1 on the issue of Chinese representation.

He told the Assembly that until Communist China took her "legitimate seat in United Nations, no conditions can be created for genuine negotiations and for the solution of the disarmament question."

He added: "Indeed, if an agreement was reached on disarmament, will such an agreement be valid without China? After all even if a Disarmament Agreement was negotiated, the United States would declare that it cannot be implemented because of China's non-participation, while it is the United States herself that is blocking in every possible way the participation of the Chinese People's Republic in United Nations."

He said that there could be no disarmament without China and there could not be "any normal work of United Nations without China."

The "provocative plans of creating two Chinas"—a nationalist regime and a communist one—were doomed to failure and said: "The sooner certain political leaders in the United States understand this, the better it will be for the cause of world peace."

He said: "This Organization is in need of such a great nation, such a great country as the Chinese People's Republic being represented in United Nations and taking an active part in its work."

It was the "legitimate right" of the Chinese communists to seize Taiwan (Formosa). If it had been left to the Soviet Government it would long ago have "cast to hell" Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the Taiwan Islands would long ago have belonged to the Chinese People's Republic.

The US delegate, Mr. J. Wadsworth, said that his country's attitude to the question of China was not based on any conflict between State systems or slogans. He denied that the American approach was negative.

He said that on the other hand, USA took into account the various actions of the Peking Government which had offended UN principles and the conscience of mankind. He described the Chinese Government as aggressive and unfit to be admitted to United Nations. The Chinese communists, he said, had made incursions into the territories of sovereign Asian countries.

The Indonesian delegate said that, as in the past, his country wanted the question of Chinese representation to be included in the agenda.

The entire Soviet delegation walked out as the Kuomintang delegate rose to reply to the charges made by Mr. Khruschev against the Kuomintang regime.

When the debate was resumed on October 6, Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon) recommended that in the case of China, the crimes of the past should not be allowed to dominate the present and future. As for the argument that this was a "controversial question," he noted that the items on Hungary and Tibet were also controversial but these were on the agenda.

The Chief delegates of Byelo-Russia, Poland, the Ukraine and Rumania advanced arguments in favour of communist China's admission to UN.

On October 8, the Cuban delegate supported inscription of the item on the Assembly's agenda, while Australia, USA and Philippines opposed it.

The Assembly was discussing a Steering Committee recommendation that no attempt be permitted for the duration of the session either to seat the Peking Government or to remove the Kuomintang regime.

Dr. Raul Roa (Cuba) pledged Cuba's vote against the Steering Committee's recommendation, and in favour of full discussion of the issue of Chinese representation.

Sir Garfield Berwick (Australia), said that he had felt obliged to intervene in the debate because of the "outburst last Saturday (October1) by the delegate of the Soviet Union".

He said: "I got the impression from the Soviet delegate that they might secede from this body unless something was done to admit communist China.

"How can this Assembly contemplate considering this question while under such a threat....this organ exists for the very purpose of denying success to threats of force of any kind. It is unthinkable that we would with self-respect yield to such pressure at this time".

The same day (October 8) USA won a diplomatic victory when the Assembly, by 42 votes to 34, with 22 abstentions, agreed to shelve for another year the question of Chinese representation in UN.

The margin was slimmer than expected in the closest vote on the issue in the 10 years that USA had successfully asked the Assembly to take no action on the demand to oust Kuomintang China and seat People's China.

Earlier the General Assembly voted down Russia's demand for a debate on the Chinese representation question. Voting was 38 to 34, with 26 abstentions.

Notable defectors from the Western alignment—headed by USA, Britain and France—in the voting were Burma, Ceylon, Cuba, Denmark, Ethiopia, Ireland, Nigeria, Norway, Senegal and Sweden.

The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, in a statement issued after the vote, said:

"The Assembly has decided for the 10th consecutive year not to place on its agenda the question of Chinese representation. It has again agreed not to consider proposals to unseat Kuomintang China and to seat People's China.

"This shows that the US policy to keep communist China out of UN, in the light of communist China's aggressive and war-like behaviour, continues to have the support of the majority of the world community. This is despite the heavy pressures put on many States to vote the other way.

"We welcome the fact that UN has rebuffed communist China's continued campaign to shoot her way into it."

Earlier, the Assembly rejected a Nepalese amendment seeking to reverse the Steering Committee's recommendation. Thirty-eight countries voted against it, with 26 abstentions. One member was absent.

India, Indonesia and Burma voted for the amendment.

The other nations which voted for it were: Albania, Bulgaria, Byelo-Russia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ethiopia, Finland, Ghana, Guinea, Hungary, Iraq, Ireland, Mali, Morocco, Nigeria, Norway, Poland, Rumania, Senegal, Sudan, Sweden, the Ukraine, USSR, United Arab Republic, the Yemen and Yugoslavia.

The nations which voted against it were: Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Kuomintang China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Salvador, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan, the Lebanon, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Spain, Thailand, Turkey, South Africa, the United Kingdom, USA, Uruguay and Venezuela.

The abstentions were: Austria, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo (Brazzaville), Cyprus, Dahomey, Malagasy, Gabon, Iceland, Israel, Ivory Coast, Laos, Libya, Madagascar, Niger, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Togo, Tunisia and Upper Volta. Thirty-four delegations voted that the question should be fully discussed in the General Assembly. Cuba, Mali, Nigeria, Senegal and Ethiopia voted this year for the question of People's Chinese membership being considered, in addition to those who had voted for the same proposal in 1959.

There were only 42 delegations, instead of 44 in 1959, supporting USA in her opposition to placing the question on the agenda. Malaya and Laos, which had voted in support of the US position in 1959, abstained this year.

In 1959, nine countries had abstained and this year the number increased to 22.

Cuba and Ethiopia abandoned their position of abstention to vote this year in favour of discussing the question. Nine of the African States of the French Community abstained, as also Cyprus. Mali was expected to vote in favour of discussion of China's admission, but Senegal's vote came as a surprise. Observers thought Senegal was trying not to create any new difficulties with Mali, and therefore voted as Mali did.

Among other African countries formerly French which abstained from the vote, some at least were known to be actually in favour of discussing the Chinese question. But their abstention during one of their first opportunities to vote at UN was thought to be a gesture of support to the US stand. Had they voted in favour of placing the Chinese question on the agenda, the required simple majority would have been won and the subject would have been fully discussed for the first time.

Speaking on a point of order after the President of the Assembly, Mr. F. H. Boland had suggested that the Assembly might go on to a vote, Mr. Krishna Menon (India) said that the Steering Committee's competence was limited to the procedural organization of the agenda.

In the present case it was taking a political decision, in which it was out of order. The Committee was a "creature of the Assembly" and it had no right to over-ride the Assembly. It was not empowered to say that a State should or should not be admitted. It was only entitled to say whether a question might or might not be included in the agenda.

Mr. Boland replied that he did not think it fair to give any ruling which would suggest that the procedure followed previously had been wrong. He proposed to proceed in accordance with what had been followed at previous sessions.

Indo-American Exchanges:

The proceedings became bitter when the US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, and Mr. Krishna Menon (India) clashed in what was described as the worst Indo-American exchange in the Assembly during the session.

What provoked Mr. Menon was apparently Mr. Wadsworth's advice to him to "study American history a bit more extensively" and the suggestion that "Mr. Menon may wish to re-write history."

Mr. Wadsworth was objecting to Mr. Menon's comparison in an earlier speech between the American revolution and the Chinese communist revolution.

Mr. Menon had asked Mr. Wadsworth to read the American Declaration of Independence and find out what it said about the right of people to overthrow a Government with which they were dissatisfied.

The United States, he asserted, "has at no time been an advocate of the concept of legitimacy, whether it was a question of the Austro-Hungarian Empire or Frederick Barbarosa."

He added: "Out of courtesy to my friend Mr. Wadsworth, I will not go into later conflicts which sought to establish the authority of Government over the whole of this continent and will only refer to purchases of Alaska, Florida, Louisiana and Rhode Island where there was no question of force by one side against the other.

"If you object to revolutionary Governments, then you simply argue against the whole idea of progress." He recalled that there were in the Assembly many States like those of Latin America which were the "products of revolution."

He said: "I was rather pained to hear Mr. Wadsworth of all people speaking of recoiling from this (idea of China's admission) because it came from a friendly country. My country is, friendly to his, but we have never excluded from our friendship adherence to facts. We have never construed friendship as meaning conformity. We have never meant by friendship exclusion of frankness where it is required."

He said that in this particular case there was no reflection on USA and he was only citing historical examples to show that they could not argue in the Assembly "that some country, some State or some Government is not admissible because its regime was established by revolution."

Mr. N. Khruschev's Comment:

The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Khruschev, in a statement issued from his Glen Cove residence on October 8 said that the close margin by which the question of communist China's membership in UN was defeated indicated that USA was not winning but losing the 'cold war.'

He said: "The most important thing is not the way that the voting turned out. It is not because we are so worried about China—if they expel us we would not cry over the matter — but we are taking part in these discussions because we want to expose the stand of those who oppose the admission of China.

"The time will come when all these obstacles that are being erected will tumble down like a house of cards."

Question Of Independence For Colonies Placed On Agenda:

On October 13, the General Assembly accepted a Soviet proposal that the question of independence for all colonial people be discussed at a plenary session of the Assembly without prior reference to the Political Committee.

But it rejected another Soviet proposal that the U-2 and RB-47 plane incidents be also discussed by the Assembly. Instead, the Assembly decided that this question should be referred to the Political Committee.

The vote on the first proposal — the issue of independence for all colonial peoples—came after an appeal by President Sekou Toure of Guinea to the East and West to drown their political, economic and other 'cold war' differences to vote for discussion of the item in a plenary session of the General Assembly.

He urged the Assembly to give unanimous approval to the recognition of independence for the colonial peoples by adopting the Soviet resolution.

He said: "In regard to so noble a problem no division is possible."

The Indian delegate, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, supported the Soviet proposal that the declaration granting independence to colonial countries be discussed in the Assembly.

He said that the time had come for a declaration of faith by the Assembly. India, he said, did not subscribe to the view that the matters referred to the Committees were not important. However, this particular item lent itself to discussion directly by the plenary session because it was in the nature of a general declaration not involving many details.

Earlier, on October 13, the General Assembly adjourned in uproar, while discussing the Soviet proposal to debate in plenary session Mr. Khruschev's draft declaration of independence for all colonial peoples.

The President of the Assembly, Mr. F. Boland, broke his gavel in a vain attempt to stop the Rumanian delegate, Mr. Eduard Mezincescu, from speaking.

The uproar ended when Mr. Boland, abruptly adjourned the Assembly, as Mr. Mezincescu shouted at the top of his voice: "I can only hope that the Irish people enjoy the same measure of freedom that the Rumanian people do."

Mr. Mezincescu had gone to the rostrum to protest against the US delegate, Mr. Francis Wilcox's statement that "there are a number of States in Eastern Europe which do not have complete independence."

There was also a scene involving Mr. Khruschev which occurred when a Philippines delegate, Senor Lorenzo Smumulong, made the charge that the countries of Eastern Europe had been deprived of their "civil and political rights and have been swallowed up by the Soviet Union."

Mr. Khruschev protested against the unequal attitude to representatives of countries present at the Assembly.

He asked why, when the Congolese delegate had spoken, the President had stopped him, saying that the Assembly was discussing procedure, and now that "this jerk, this stooge of American imperialism"—the Philippines delegate—was touching on non-procedural questions, the President was sympathizing and not stopping him.

He asked: "Is that justice?"

He said that it was impossible "in our time to cover up with prayers the nakedness of colonial plunder".

The nations on which the colonialists were trying to graft their civilization knew that such a grafting cost the lives of their brethren.

He added: "The mask should be resolutely torn off these colonialists and the real face of those who brought disease, poverty, famine and death to the enslaved countries should be exposed."

He said that if UN failed to adopt proposals aimed at the elimination of the colonial regime, the peoples of the colonial countries would have no alternative but to "take to arms".

He said: "If they are deprived of the right to independent existence, to the choice of political and social systems of their liking, to the building up of life on their land as they wish, they will win this right in the struggle.

"I have already said—and I repeat it again—the Soviet people are on the side of those who fight for their liberation from the colonial yoke for their freedom and independence".

He repeated his criticism of the UN Secretary-General Mr. Hammarskjoeld, declaring that in the Congo, he had done everything possible in favour of the colonialists. He claimed that Mr. Hammarskjoeld had disorganized by his actions the normal functioning of the legitimate Government and deprived it of the means of transportation and communication.

He added: "The imperialist colonialists have found Col. Joseph Mobutu, supplied him and other scum-traitors of the Congolese people with money and had bribed the army, so as to rely on it to continue colonial plunder.

"Relying on the will of their people and on the lawfully-elected Parliament, the Government of the Congo, headed by Mr. Lumumba, exerted all its efforts to defend independence and the integrity of the country."

He said that the final collapse of the "rotten colonial regime" was only a matter of time. He appealed to all States to agree on steps aimed at the elimination of colonial Governments "so that this natural and irreversible historic process should develop in conditions of the maintenance of peace and world security."

Addressing himself directly to the delegations of the new nations of Africa and Asia, he said that "the colonialists" pretended to be "magnanimous Christians" who even permitted themselves to condemn oppression and colonialism.

He declared: "All this was being done to win you to their side so that you, representatives of the countries which were colonial, should today support the colonialists themselves".

It was a bid by the colonialists for help "in their struggle for the preservation of the colonial system while in the countries which have won political independence they seek to create such conditions as to enable the colonialists to continue robbing the peoples of those countries by taking advantage of their backward economy."

He recalled that Mr. Harold Macmillan had "quite recently used all his eloquence to depict British benevolence towards colonial peoples".

He added: "But see what the British Press reports on the actual state of affairs in the colonies. Kenya, Rhodesia and other colonies are seething. The colonialists have had to send re-inforcements to Rhodesia. What are these re-inforcements? Is it, perhaps, bread, medicine, doctors and teachers that they are sending?

"No. it is not. It is troops, machine-guns, shells and ammunition that are being sent as re-inforcements. Send us more ammunition—that is what the colonialist benefactors demand".

He said: "Scores of people and nations have already shaken off the ignominious colonial yoke. The time has come for the complete and final liberation of all the peoples from colonial oppression. This question now has become especially urgent and acute.

"The General Assembly should be duly aware of the fact that if most urgent measures are not taken colonialism can still cause much suffering and take a heavy toll of millions of human lives and give rise to armed conflicts and wars, thus endangering peace and security not only in some areas of the globe but the world over."

He urged the delegates of the new nations to "remember that the destiny of your brothers of the African continent depends to a large extent upon you. It is with your hands that the colonialists want to do this dirty deed—to prevent the adoption of the declaration on the liberation of all the colonial peoples. It is with your hands that they want to go on tightening the noose around the necks of the colonial peoples, strangling those peoples.

"That is why the Soviet Government calls on you to express your will, to show that you can defend not only the interests of your people and your States but that, having won independence, you also remember those who are still suffering under colonial bondage".

He said that the discussion of the problem at plenary meetings of the Assembly with the participation of the Heads of Government and Foreign Ministers would "make it most authoritative and ensure the most favourable conditions for its successful solution within the frame-work of UN."

The British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore, who followed Mr. Khruschev to the rostrum, said his Government recognized that the Soviet item dealt with a subject of "great interest" to all member-States.

He declared: "The transition of colonial peoples to the status of sovereign independence is one of the most important developments in this period of history—one with which my Government is deeply and urgently concerned.

"Indeed, I can say there is probably no other Government represented here more concerned with this problem than the UK." For this reason, he said, Britain supported the idea of discussing the Soviet proposal, but she believed that the matter should first be discussed in committee and not immediately by a plenary session of the Assembly.

He said he hoped that the discussion proposed by the Soviet Union would be "responsible and constructive" and that the "vital principles involved will be discussed in a way which pays regard to the desire of all peoples of the world to achieve peace and prosperity and individual freedom.

"Unfortunately, an examination of the item submitted by the Soviet Union and the speech to which we have just listened must, I am afraid, dispel this hope."

He said it was obvious from the terms of that speech and the Soviet memorandum on the subject that "the Soviet Union is not interested in any examination of the true nature of this problem".

He added: "The memorandum is cast, I regret to say, in terms all too clearly designed for propaganda purposes. It contains no word of the constructive work of those Powers administering dependent territories in bringing stable independence to many new nations in Africa and Asia or of the various circumstances in the States concerned.

"By all means let us have a debate on this, but we believe the Assembly would be wise to allot this item first to a committee".

Mr. Dobrivoje Vidic (Yugoslavia) said that he felt a general discussion of the Soviet proposal in plenary sessions of the Assembly, instead of in the main Political Committee, would be "useful at the present juncture."

Mr. Vaclav David (Czechoslovakia) took a similar position.

Mr. Alex Quaison-Sackey (Ghana) also supported the Soviet proposal.

Speaking under the right of reply, Mr. Ormsby-Gore (UK) said that some of the speeches had indicated that perhaps he had not made Britain's position sufficiently clear.

Of course, Britain regarded the issue as a "very important matter", but he did not subscribe to the view that important matters were not referred to committees. If the Assembly decided in favour of discussion in the plenary session first, Britain would take part in the discussion and make constructive contributions to it.

The US delegate, Mr. Francis O. Wilcox said: "USA is against colonialism and we are against it wherever it occurs."

Referring to East European countries, he said that the conduct of the Rumanian and Soviet delegations was "a clear indication that the Soviet satellite system is the weakest spot in the Soviet anatomy. They have demonstrated once again this afternoon that they cannot stand to hear the truth."

"In recent years unfortunately, there has been no opportunity for the clearly expressed will of the people to assert itself. The Governments there are captive Governments, propped up in position by Soviet power. This is colonialism if ever I saw it."

The Assembly approved by show of hands the Soviet proposal that the question of independence of colonies be discussed in plenary session.

B. IMF, IFC And World Bank Annual Meetings: The annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) began in Washington on September 25. The meetings of the World Bank and the International Finance Corporation (IFC) began on September 26.

Finance Ministers, heads of central banks and other officials of the Fund's 68 member-States attended the meeting of IMF as well as the annual meetings of the World Bank and the International Finance Corporation.

IMF Annual Report:

The IMF in its annual Report said that trade was increasing, inflation was waning and depleted foreign exchange reserves were being built up.

[IMF was created in 1944 to establish stable relations between the currencies of nations in international trade].

The Report said that the financial year ended April, 1960 showed a continued upswing in world industrial activity and an increase in world trade.

Industrial production in 1959 was 10 per cent higher than in 1958, and the value of world trade had increased by 6 per cent in the same period.

It praised the Governments which had taken strong measures to fight inflation as production approached the limits of capacity.

It noted that the "freeing of trade from the shackles of the post-War period had led to increasing competition." This had made itself felt more and more in the pricing of goods and the promptness with which orders could be met.

It said: "Except in the first half of the 1950's, there was increasing evidence that countries in Europe and elsewhere, whose economies had been greatly disrupted by the War were regaining competitive strength in relation to USA. This tendency was overshadowed for a time, however, by the boom conditions and the special political and exchange difficulties of the years 1956 and 1957. As these difficulties were overcome, the Western European industrial countries and Japan were able to earn large payment surpluses."

The prices of some industrial raw materials had recovered part of the loss suffered in the 1957-58 recession, but foodstuff prices on the whole had tended to weaken even further.

It said that this downward trend presented serious problems for under-developed countries whose foreign exchange receipts, for the most part, came from the export of these products. But, it commented that in 1959 the less-developed countries had in fact increased their reserves for the first time since 1956.

It called on the two rival trading groups in Western Europe—the six-nation Common Market and the British-led seven-nation European Free Trade Association—to pay full attention "to the importance of reducing trade barriers to provide greater opportunities for an expansion of world trade, not only in industrial but also in primary products".

World Bank Annual Report:

The World Bank in its annual Report published on September 27 recorded several important events during the year: the cumulative total of Bank lending passed $5,000,000,000; the total reserves of the Bank grew to more than $500,000,000; the Bank's subscribed capital was more than doubled to $19,308,000,000; and good progress was made in bringing into being a new affiliate of the Bank, the International Development Association (IDA).

The Report expressed the opinion that 1960 marked the beginning of a period of change in international economic relationships, largely because of a heightened international awareness of the financial requirements of the less-developed countries of the world.

During the year, it said, steps were taken towards the establishment of IDA, which would have initial resources equivalent to $1,000 million and would be able to provide development finance to the less-developed areas of the world on terms more flexible than those of the Bank's own loans. It indicated the likelihood that IDA would be ready to begin operations in the Autumn of 1960.

An Agreement between India and Pakistan governing the use of the waters of the Indus basin was reported, as also the success in obtaining from friendly Governments offers of financial aid sufficient to meet the estimated costs of the public works necessary to carry out the Agreement.

Reference was also made to other actions taken to assist economic growth in India and Pakistan, partly by additional Bank lending and partly by efforts to educate world opinion in the problems of the sub-continent by means of a mission consisting of three internationally known bankers who visited India and Pakistan at the suggestion of the World Bank President, Mr. Eugene Black.

The year's lending totalled $659 million, the regional distribution being as follows:

Asia and the Middle East	$ 273 million
Africa ...	$ 183 million
Latin America ...	$ 134 million
Europe ...	$ 69 million

Transportation was the principal purpose of Bank-lending in 1959-60, accounting for $245 million. Included were an oil pipe-line for the new Sahara oil-field, a loan for the Suez Canal, another for the first road express-way in Japan and loans for transportation improvement in India, Pakistan and the Belgian Congo. Electric power loans were in second place at $208 million. Loans for industry aggregated $146 million, the largest being a loan of $66 million for iron-mining in Mauretania.

More was lent for agriculture than for some years past, the total being almost $60 million. African agriculture accounted for more than half the total.

The year was an active one for the technical assistance activities of the Bank, particularly in a new role, that of an Executing Agency for projects of the UN Special Fund. A survey of the electric power needs and potential of Argentina was completed for the Special Fund during the fiscal year and the Bank also accepted responsibility for executing the following Special Fund projects: the Niger River Dam survey for Nigeria, a study of Georgetown Harbour in British Guiana, a comprehensive survey of transportation needs in Argentina, a mineral survey in Surinam and a survey of siltation at the port of Bangkok in Thailand.

Membership of the Bank remained at 68 during the year.

Mr. D. H. Jawad's Address:

A protest over the reduction in petroleum prices was raised on September 27 before the annual assembly of IMF and the World Bank by Iraq's Finance Minister, Mr. Dirak Hashim Jawad.

He said that some of the leading developed countries modified their economic policies "without taking into consideration their effect on the economies of less-developed countries."

He added: "An outstanding example of this is the reduction in oil prices which had been decided upon without the least regard for the interests of the countries concerned."

He also asked that the World Bank reduce interest rates on loans to less-developed nations.

Mr. Morarji Desai:

The Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, told the joint meeting of the World Bank and IMF on September 27 that the problem of aid to under-developed countries had become more urgent, more dangerous and a good deal more complex than was the case at the end of the War.

Since the inception of the World Bank, requirements of the under-developed countries on the whole had changed substantially in character and aptitude.

He stressed the importance of the signing of the Canal Waters Treaty by Pakistan and India and said that it was the most outstanding achievement of the World Bank during 1960.

He made the following suggestions to increase international efforts in favour of the under-developed countries:

(1) There should be a sound scheme of economic aid for long-term development covering the entire economy; (2) There should be a general preparedness to commit aid in terms of economy as a whole; (3) A developing country ought to be put in a position to plan its future development sensibly by advance commitment of aid over a number of years; and (4) Lending countries should try to maximize the value of every allocation of aid they made by enabling the borrower to buy on competitive terms.

Mr. W. A. B. Iliff:

Addressing the meeting, the Vice-President of the World Bank, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff said that the Bank must stop depending mainly on US contributions.

He said that five years ago, the US contribution of $635,000,000 was larger than all other usable contributions from other member-States put together, but at present, the international character of the Bank's finances was entirely established.

He told the meeting that even without the US contribution, the Bank had more than $1,000,000,000 available for loans. More than half of the Bank's consolidated debt, which exceeded $2,000,000,000, was held outside USA. The Bank had borrowed money on the capital market in Belgium, Canada, West Germany, Holland, Switzerland and Britain as well as in USA. During the last three years, West Germany had been the major source for loans.

He drew special attention to the problems set by "new countries" which had recently acquired independence. The new countries presented a new source of problems to United Nations, to the World Bank and to other international agencies.

He said: "Collectively we have not yet managed to fashion an adequate response." He also referred to the borrowing problems which confronted newly independent nations with development programmes.

Once a country embarked on a development programme in earnest, that country could with great rapidity reach the point where its ability to borrow foreign capital on conventional terms was very limited in comparison with the amount it could effectively employ. That was certainly the case with India and Pakistan. It might already be the case with other countries also. If the tempo of progress in the under-developed world was not to be dangerously retarded, some other forms of development financing must be made available on a substantial scale.

He expressed satisfaction over the fact that IDA had begun financial operations. But, he said that the resources of the new organization were "very modest compared with the needs of the under-developed world."

He mentioned the efforts which had been made for some time by a group of Governments to provide large-scale developmental assistance to India. They were holding informal discussions with the Bank to exchange information about assistance programmes and intentions and to achieve some co-ordination of effort. A meeting had been held in Paris to give preliminary consideration to India's Third Five-Year Plan and to her estimation of the foreign exchange assistance which the Plan would require. Further meetings would probably be held next Spring.

A similar consortium would meet in Washington to review assistance to Pakistan in the light of Pakistan's development plans. A few other countries had approached the Bank with a view to holding meetings of the same sort.

He added, however, that the system of consortium was not "a device whose application can be made universal. The need is not just for finance, but for efficient and effective development programmes."

Mr. M. Shoaib:

The Pakistan Finance Minister, Mr. Mohammed Shoaib, expressed deep appreciation of the World Bank's role in settling the Indus canal waters question.

He said that the year just ended could be declared "highly successful on the strength of the Indus basin settlement alone. In fact, the Bank has registered progress in all its normal operations."

He asked whether the Bank had to continue its one per cent commission charge, with total reserves in excess of 500 million dollars. Foreign loans available to his country were not sufficiently long-term. He added: "We, therefore, hope that loans extended to us in the future will be on a more liberal basis, with respect to both interest rates and maturities."

He reported that in the past two years there had been a marked improvement in the economic climate in Pakistan and a marked revival of investor confidence. Inflationary pressures had been brought under control and a degree of internal financial stability had been achieved.

Mr. Selwyn Lloyd:

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, announced on September 28 that in the next few days, Britain would be paying a further £20,000,000 to IMF, leaving only about £30,000,000 outstanding.

In August, 1960, Britain repaid £25,000,000 to the Fund, and still had a useful addition to her reserves. He said that it was very unusual for sterling at this time of the year to be strong enough to allow such actions.

He warned against the possibility of "competitive deflation" unless both surplus and deficit countries took the necessary actions.

He said that a country with an excess of reserves could run a persistent and substantial overall deficit, but "a persistent and powerful one-way movement of reserves indicates a state of disequilibrium in international payments which requires corrective action."

The growth of reserves in many countries, he said, had taken the form not only of gold but also of an increase in the short-term liabilities of USA and UK.

He stated: "The size and persistence of this flow points to something in the nature of a fundamental disequilibrium which must ultimately be corrected in one way or another."

A country in persistent deficit would be bound sooner or later to take corrective action. Conversely, a continuous inflow of reserves into a country which already had enough internal and external resources would tend to produce an expansion of credit.

He added: "But if these pressures are not allowed to have their effect, there is a danger of countries trying to solve their payments problems by competitive deflation with all the world-wide stagnation and unemployment it would involve. We must not assume that it is a temporary problem which will solve itself."

Mr. R. Anderson:

The US Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Robert Anderson declared that 'the outlook for economic activity in this country is favourable, both for the near future and for many years ahead".

He also promised policies which would "maintain the dollar at its existing gold parity as a sound and reliable currency". Total output and income had advanced to all-time peaks, and businessmen could now make plans and calculate costs on the basis of a reasonably stable dollar.

Turning to the US balance of payments, he mentioned a very sharp increase in exports this year—but there was an overall payments deficit of something like $3,000,000. A reasonable equilibrium in the balance of payments had not been achieved. He said: "As we advance towards it, our aim is to merit continued confidence at home and abroad."

He added, however, that the economies and monetary policies of all nations were inter-dependent and USA hoped that the European Common Market and the European Free Trade Area and other countries and groups would pursue liberal and commercial policies regarding imports.

He suggested that industrial countries with large surpluses should consider reducing internal taxes on commodities imported from the less-developed countries.

Mr. M. Yamagiwa:

The Governor of the Bank of Japan and alternate Governor of Japan at the Fund's meeting, Mr. Mawamichi Yamagiwa spoke of the international practices of discrimination against Japan and said that such discriminatory treatment was discouraging to "our efforts towards freer trade and payments".

He hoped that the Fund would be able to advance the liberalization of trade and payments in its true sense through close co-operation and mutual collaboration with GATT "without falling to the ground between two stools by technical considerations of legal jurisdictions".

M W. Baumgartner:

The French Finance Minister, M. Wilfred Baumgartner, said that the monetary policy of members of IMF must "make allowance as far as possible for the world situation".

Monetary policy should not accentuate the divergent movements of capital now 'worrying' certain countries. The rising world resources were not presently an obstacle to economic expansion and social progress.

Mr. Robert L. Garner:

Speaking at the meeting of the International Finance Corporation (IFC) on September 29, Mr. Robert L. Garner, President of IFC, asked the member-States for authority to broaden the scope of aid to private enterprise in developing nations.

He said that the authority was necessary for the institution to carry out its purposes efficiently.

[IFC, as an affiliate of the Bank and the Fund, is the only international financial agency established solely for the purpose of stimulating economic growth by lending to productive private enterprise together with private capital investment.]

Mr. Garner's proposal would amend the IFC Charter to enable it to make capital stock purchases in private enterprises. Final action on the scheme was expected to be deferred for some months.

Mr. Per Jacobsson:

The Managing Director of IMF, Mr. Per Jacobsson, said that the world financial institution would continue to devote close attention to trade restrictions and resulting problems.

Speaking at the closing session of the meetings of the Fund and the World Bank, he also promised that world-wide commodity price fluctuations would be kept under study.

He said that he wished to give these assurances to the Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai who had earlier expressed his concern about the low prices India was receiving for exports of her commodities.

He also voiced confidence about exchange rates and about the avoidance of deflation. He attached great importance to the declarations by certain of the larger countries indicating that there was no intention to alter the existing exchange rates.

Looking back upon the period of post-War adjustments, he said: "It is not surprising that exchange rates have been subjected from time to time to a certain amount of buffeting; but I think we can now feel confident that in the new environment of greater price stability the present exchange structure will continue to gain in strength."

Speaking on the possibility of deflation, he said: "It seems to me that the present situation is characterized by greater stability in the level of prices, rather than by any apparent deflationary tendencies."

Election Of Officers:

On September 30, Mr. Sunthorn Hongladarom, Governor for Thailand on the World Bank, was elected Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Bank. Mr. Morarji Desai, Governor for India, was elected Vice-Chairman.

Both would hold office until the close of the next annual meetings in September, 1961.

In the past year, the chairmanship was held by Australia, with Pakistan and Mexico as joint Vice-Chairmen.

Mr. Luis Machado (Cuba) was re-elected Director of the World Bank.

He represents on the Bank's Board of Directors the interests of Costa Rica, Cuba, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru and Venezuela.

The Governors also decided to hold next year's conference in Vienna.

On the 13-nation Board of the Monetary Fund, Iceland, Argentina and Venezuela were elected to replace Finland, Chile and Mexico, respectively.

Morocco and Bolivia were elected to replace Malaya and Argentina on the Board of the World Bank, which also has 13 members.

At the election of Executive Directors of the Bank and IMF a change was made in the countries which automatically appointed Directors. Because of her increased quota, West Germany replaced Kuomintang China as one of the five countries which automatically had Directors on the Bank and the Fund. The list now comprised USA, UK, France, India and West Germany.

Mr. Morarji Desai's Address To National Press Club:

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club in Washington on September 27, Mr. Morarji Desai said that India required $1,000,000,000 annually in external aid during the next 10 years. After that she would be able to develop satisfactorily on her own.

He said that India had achieved enough momentum in her efforts at economic development to make this possible.

He added: "What happens to India and to the Indian experiment in planning for prosperity in freedom assumes a pivotal significance.

"There is no such thing as prosperity in isolation either for USA or for India. Without a growing and prospering Africa, or Latin America, or the rest of Asia, the development of India cannot be sustained for long.

"For it is only as our neighbours and partners in poverty all over the world that we can expand our markets and supplement our own resources by much needed imports."

He said that during the first ten years of planned development in India, national income as a whole and agricultural production had increased by about 40 per cent, at a compound rate of about 3.5 per cent per year.

The rate of population growth of about two per cent annually had offset to a considerable degree the 3.5 per cent increase in gross income and for this reason the Indian Government had set a target of five per cent increase in gross income yearly as the basic objective of the Third Five-Cear Plan which would begin in April, 1961.

He said that the strategy of development in India was to increase savings even more and strengthen exports in relation to imports over the next decade. At the end of this period, he predicted that the country would be able to "develop satisfactorily on her own without any extraordinary form of external assistance."

He said: "Whether we shall succeed or not will depend largely on our own efforts; and here I can only say that we know the measure of our problems and the stakes involved and we are determined to do our best. But, in part, our success will also depend on the availability of external assistance in the interim period."

He added: "It is not for me to say why USA or any other country should help India to the extent necessary.

"A beginning has already been made in setting India on her feet—by the generosity of her friends and even more by the toil and the sweat of her own people. A strengthening of the effort already begun, with a clear will and reason, is all that we need. And I have every hope that this need will not remain unrecognized."

C. Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Conference: The Commonwealth Finance Ministers began their annual Conference in London on September 20. It was presided over by the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd. Representatives of 11 Commonwealth countries, including the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, took part in the Conference.

Normally, discussions at the Conference covered sterling area balance of payments and general world trade. But this year's Conference also discussed the Commonwealth's attitude to a possible closer association between the two rival trade groups in Europe—the six-nation European Common Market (ECM) or the "Inner Six" and the European Free Trade Association (EFTA) of what are known as the "Outer Seven".

Addressing the opening session on September 20, the Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai asked the Conference to consider whether there might be some way of easing the balance of payments position of developing countries through some kind of joint operation by the industrially advanced countries.

It was reported that Mr. Desai's suggestion for international co-operation in aiding countries like India which had launched big economic development schemes and consequently required large imports of capital goods, had evoked keen interest in the Conference.

After a review of the economic situation, the Conference took up the discussion of the problem of economic split in Europe between the "Inner Six" and the "Outer Seven."

The main speaker on the subject was the Lord Privy Seal, Mr. Edward Heath, who looked after foreign affairs in the British House of Commons with special responsibilities for European affairs.

His speech was directed specifically to exploring the likely attitudes and susceptibilities of the Commonwealth countries to a hypothetical reconciliation between the "Six" and the "Seven". He was understood to have explained that no actual negotiations were taking place to bring the "Six" and "Seven" together but that only certain studies were being made, particularly after Mr. H. Macmillan's meeting with the West German Chancellor, Dr. Adenauer in August, 1960.

The Finance Minister of New Zealand, Mr. A. H. Nordmeyer reflecting the Australian attitude, also strongly reacted against any integration of the "Six" and "Seven", which would affect New Zealand's food exports to Britain or Europe.

The Indian reaction expressed by Mr. Desai was that India would have to consider how her exports of primary products would be affected when something more concrete emerged.

In the absence of any firm proposals for an integration of the "Six" and "Seven", particularly on the questions of likely tariffs and quantitative restrictions or how the African territories associated with the "Six" or Britain would be fitted in, it was difficult to take any definite attitudes.

At the end of the discussion, it was decided that the Commonwealth Governments would continue the exploration of their respective positions in the light of future development, but nothing concrete was expected to arise for some months.

Mr. Edward Heath re-affirmed the UK Government's view that in any kind of negotiations between the six-nation Common Market and the "Outer Seven" European Free Trade Association, the effect on the Commonwealth should be the first of the four points to be considered.

He said that any negotiations must be looked at (1) in relation to their effect on the Commonwealth; (2) in relation to Britain's own agriculture; (3) in relation to the "Outer Seven" of which Britain was a member; and (4) in the light of the position with regard to political institutions. It was made clear that any negotiations that might take place would be governed by the four points—unchanged since set forth by Mr. Lloyd, then Foreign Secretary, in a parliamentary speech in July, 1960.

The New Zealand Finance Minister, Mr. A. H. Nordmeyer, was of the view that the position would have to be looked at more closely from his country's point of view. Commonwealth preferences (the mutual trading concessions made by members of the Commonwealth family), he said, were very important to New Zealand and to all of them and he would like to think about the answers to the kind of questions that had been posed.

In his summing up of the discussion, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd said that the change of the terms of trade in favour of highly industrialized countries was not welcomed by UK which did not want to see a diminution in the purchasing power of overseas markets. The question, he said, was how the trend could be corrected.

On the subject of "hot money" (short-term money attracted to countries with a high rate of interest) he said he found it hard to say how much of the reserves was "hot money" that would go out again and how much would stay because sterling was strong.

Aid To African Countries:

The Conference, which ended on September 21, announced a special Plan to assist African countries.

Conference sources said that Canada gave the plan a good start with a promise of $10,500,000 (about Rs. 5.25 crores) spread over three years beginning in April, 1961, to go largely towards technical assistance.

The Plan, called the Special Commonwealth African Assistance Plan (SCAAP) would be of particular importance to African nations in the Commonwealth which had recently attained or were approaching independence.

Communique:

The following communique was issued at the conclusion of the Conference:

"The Commonwealth Economic Consultative Council met at Ministerial level on September 20 and 21 for one of their periodic discussions of economic and financial matters.

"The Council first reviewed the world economic situation and the outlook for the sterling area. Reports were given by individual Ministers on the prospects for the economies of their countries.

"The Council discussed the economic problems in relation to Commonwealth trade and investment arising from the creation of the European Economic Community and the European Free Trade Association.

"United Kingdom Ministers expressed their concern at the possibility of growing economic division in Europe. They gave an account of the recent discussions in which they had been engaged, making clear that no negotiations between the two groups had yet begun.

"They stated, however, that the United Kingdom Government would be prepared to examine and discuss economic unity in Western Europe. It was accepted that in any negotiations that took place, the essential interests of Commonwealth countries would be safeguarded and full account taken of the continuing importance of intra-Commonwealth trade.

"The Council was informed of the progress of the plan for setting up the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development as a successor to the Organization for European Economic Co-operation.

"The Council had a general discussion on development questions and took note of the views expressed on behalf of a number of Commonwealth Governments in regard to the nature of development assistance required.

"As requested by the Commonwealth Prime Ministers in their communique on May 13, 1960 the Council examined the question of co-operative action among members of the Commonwealth in assisting Commonwealth countries (including dependent territories) in Africa.

"They noted that Commonwealth countries, along with others, were already providing aid bilaterally and were also making substantial resources available through existing international organizations. In order to focus attention on this effort and to help further in meeting the very great need for assistance in raising the standards of life in the less-developed Commonwealth countries in Africa, the Council proposed to initiate a Special Commonwealth African Assistance Plan (SCAAP).

"It was expected that most Commonwealth countries would provide assistance mainly in the form of technical assistance of various kinds, including the provision of experts, training facilities or equipment or of the sharing of experience gained in dealing with development problems.

"Assistance would be given bilaterally and by increased support of existing international organizations and contact would be maintained with those organizations and with other Governments which were active in this field. The Council agreed that it would review annually the progress made.

"The Commonwealth Prime Ministers had also asked the Council to consider the question of exchanges between Commonwealth countries of persons with specialized skills and experience.

"The Council decided that the best way to foster such exchanges would be for Commonwealth Governments to improve bilateral arrangements between them by all means in their power and that appropriate arrangements should be devised, where they did not already exist, for the filling of executive as well as advisory posts of a technical and specialized nature in Commonwealth countries which had recently achieved independence."

Mr. Morarji Desai's Comment:

The Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai told newsmen in London on September 23 that the climate in UK for aid to India's Five-Year Plans was "quite good".

On India's efforts to increase her exports, he said that export promotion was difficult when so many countries were competing. He added: "We are varying our methods and we hope our exports will increase."

India, he said, could help African countries with technical assistance and personnel under the special Commonwealth Plan to assist African countries. But she had no money to lend, nor foreign exchange to offer.

A despatch from London to The Times of India, Bombay on September 22 said:

"The two-day meeting of the Commonwealth Finance Ministers has ended in sharp and embarrassing disagreement over new British moves for a link with the European Common Market.

"The British Government very much wanted the other Commonwealth Governments to endorse publicly the need for a new initiative by UK to end the present economic division in Western Europe.

"This led to a last-minute 'blow-up' over the wording of the final communique. An angry Canadian official later commented: 'The British tried to make the Finance Ministers sign a blank cheque and they just weren't willing to do it.'

"The trouble arose over an innocuous-looking, but misleading phrase in the draft communique which stated that the Finance Ministers of the Commonwealth 'recognized the need' for Britain to explore the possibilities of closer association with Western Europe. The Canadian Finance Minister demanded its deletion since it clearly ran counter to the views expressed by some of the Commonwealth delegations.

"The Finance Ministers of Australia, New Zealand, India, Malaya and Ceylon also felt that it did not correctly represent the views they had expressed on the subject. Some of them had cautioned Britain that if the Commonwealth preference system was going to be watered down to facilitate the United Kingdom's entry into the European Common Market in one form or another, it might eventually weaken the whole concept of the Commonwealth.

"The Canadian, Australian and New Zealand Ministers expressed themselves with such vehemence that some British officials reacted with considerable irritation as though a formidable, new obstacle had been placed in the way of a rapprochement between the UK and the European Common Market Powers.

"But in the end, the offending phrase was deleted and the communique merely noted that the Finance Ministers had 'recognized the importance of political and economic unity in Western Europe.'

"Similarly, the Ministers neatly bypassed the question of further economic aid to Africa by merely agreeing upon what some of them later described as a paper plan for 'special Commonwealth African assistance.'

"The so-called Special Commonwealth African Assistance Plan (SCAAP) is not intended to raise capital or even attempt to co-ordinate the existing Commonwealth aid programmes in Africa. It will merely serve as an agenda item for an annual review of the African aid situation and generally help co-ordinate ideas when the Commonwealth Finance Ministers meet from time to time."

D. IAEA General Conference: The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) which began its fourth General Conference in Vienna on September 20, elected Prof. Gueorgui Nadjakov (Bulgaria) as its President.

The heads of delegations from India and seven other countries were elected Vice-Presidents, while Ghana was unanimously elected as a new member of the Agency.

On September 21, the Conference ratified the Credentials Committee's decision not to unseat the Formosan delegation or to discuss China's candidature.

It also ratified the Committee's decision not to discuss the Hungarian delegation's credentials.

Both decisions were in response to US motions tabled in the Credentials Committee. The vote against examining Hungary's credentials did not prevent the Hungarian delegation's sitting at the Conference.

On September 21, USA offered to place four of her reactors under the safeguards inspection system which was discussed at the Conference.

Mr John McCone, Chairman of the US Atomic Energy Commission and the chief US delegate to the Conference, made this offer as USA and France gave their views on the most pressing question at the Conference: the adoption of a nuclear safety manual for handling fissionable material and the setting up of an inspection and control system to guarantee peaceful uses of materials supplied by the Agency.

He lent full US support to the control system drawn up by the Agency's Board of Governors and submitted to the plenary assembly for approval.

He announced that if the system was approved, USA would offer for inspection four reactors—two for research, located in Brookhaven, (New York), the test reactor at the Argonne National Laboratory, near Chicago, and a nuclear plant being built at Piqua (Ohio). USA also offered the Agency $50,000 worth of special nuclear material for possible use in a new research reactor under construction in Finland.

He said that his country had offered the same amount to the Agency at the previous Conference.

He read to the 71 delegates at the Conference a message from President Eisenhower, which said: "In three short years the Agency has become the prime international organization in the nuclear field. I can see it as a unique forum where technical skills and resources are pooled for the benefit of mankind."

He then outlined his country's recommendations for 1961, which included technical assistance from the Agency to countries with atomic facilities in operation or in a well advanced stage of planning, support of research everywhere, improved exchanges of unclassified information, exchange of mature scientists and engineers and specialized training courses in health physics.

He stressed the problem of safe and proper disposal of radio-active wastes and said: "We must not engage in practices which will contaminate our lands, our fresh water, rivers and seas."

Indian Proposal:

The Indian delegation, led by Dr. H. J. Bhabha attempted on September 26 to reconcile the views of the Western and Eastern Powers on the proposed system of safeguards against military use of fissionable materials provided by IAEA.

The delegation was seeking a compromise solution to the question of international control and inspection.

The Soviet Union and other Eastern countries had opposed the draft on safeguards submitted to the Agency's administrative and Legal Commission by the Board of Governors.

The Western Powers, the Philippines, Pakistan and several Latin American countries stressed the urgent need for such safeguards.

India opposed the draft insofar as she felt it contained a threat of interference in the internal affairs of under-developed countries, which, in her view were the only countries which might request the Agency to provide them with technical aid, fissionable materials and atomic research installations which they would need.

The Indian Ambassador to Austria, Mr. Arthur Lall, who was also the Deputy leader of the Indian delegation to the IAEA Conference, on September 27 asked certain Western delegations whether they would accept a compromise solution to this problem. However, the result of the move did not appear to be very encouraging.

The Soviet permanent delegate to the Agency, Mr. V. Molotov, in a speech on September 28 gave a more favourable welcome to the Indian proposal which called for inspection by the Agency only after deliveries of fissionable material such as plutonium and enriched uranium 235 which may be used in the production of nuclear weapons.

Another Indian proposal said that IAEA control should be carried out only on deliveries to States which already possessed industrial installations for the production of nuclear arms.

Circles close to the Western delegations said that they were against the Indian proposals because, if adopted, they would make it impossible to universalize IAEA control of all contracts on atomic material and installations deliveries.

Safeguards System:

On September 28, the Administrative and Legal Committee of the Conference approved a set of safeguards worked out by the Agency and submitted for approval by the Board of Governors.

The vote was 43 in favour, 14 against, with five abstentions.

Voting had been preceded by heated discussion during which the representatives of India, the Soviet Union, the Eastern European countries and the United Arab Republic had severely criticized the safeguards standards and practices under discussion.

The Indian delegate, Dr. H. J. Bhabha, had introduced another draft resolution submitted jointly by Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, India and Indonesia, suggesting a radically loosened form of safeguards. This draft was not voted on after the safeguards submitted by the Board of Governors had been approved. A motion by Dr. Bhabha that his resolution be voted on first was defeated with 18 votes in favour, 39 against and five abstentions.

Dr. Bhabha pointed out that the resolution moved by him on behalf of India and the other four countries spoke for 800 million people—"the overwhelming majority of the people concerned".

He said that the draft safeguards submitted by the Board were sponsored by 15 countries, including USA and Britain, which did not represent as many people. He added: "I suppose the sponsors of the Board's safeguards system may be able to muster up a majority, but if you vote against our resolution, you will be doing the Agency a disservice".

The Committee also approved by 46 votes to eight, with eight abstentions, an amendment submitted by Austria, Sweden and Switzerland, which accepted the principles set down in the Board of Governors' safeguards but stressed the importance which these countries attached to the principles of non-discrimination in applying the inspection procedures called for in the draft.

The safeguards system consisted of two main parts:

(1) Health and safety measures; and
(2) Prevention of misuse for military purposes of fissionable material supplied by the Agency.

It also provided for the appointment of Inspectors, whose task would be to control research and power reactors built with Agency support.

The system further laid down that countries receiving Agency help should submit to an audit of their plutonium stocks—a by-product of the nuclear process.

Practically, the system was based on the system already in use under various bilateral agreements such as those signed by USA with 44 different countries.

On September 30, the Conference adopted by a large majority the safeguards system.

Voting on the resolution, as presented by the Administrative and Legal Committee was 40 in favour, 17 against, with two abstentions.

After the voting, the Indian delegation challenged the result, claiming that they themselves had counted and noted 18 votes against the resolution. The vote was then repeated by roll-call which ended with 43 in favour, 19 against and two abstentions.

On October 1, the Conference rejected a move by Poland to pass a resolution on the question of complete and general disarmament and on an atomic weapons test ban by a vote of 41 to 16, with three abstentions.

The Conference adopted, after a long debate, a resolution proposed by five Western countries, stating that the adoption of a resolution on these problems, as proposed by Poland, was not desirable since they "are still being actively studied in a more appropriate manner in other international meetings."

Among those supporting the Western resolution were India, Indonesia, Burma, the United Arab Republic, Ghana, Morocco, Afghanistan and Colombia.

The Conference, by a unanimous vote, accepted the new African States of Senegal and Mali, bringing its membership to 75. Representatives of France, USA, the Soviet Union, India, Tunisia, Portugal and Ghana spoke in support of their candidature before the vote was taken.

Conference Ends:

The Conference ended on October 1.

A survey of the decisions taken by the Conference showed that it had done a good deal of constructive work, mainly in the field of technical decisions.

It adopted a code of guarantees, including a system of inspection designed to ensure that raw material and equipment supplies to various countries by IAEA would be used for peaceful purposes only. The final text drawn up on this question was elastic enough to allow considerable leeway for its application by the IAEA Board of Governors.

Ten member-States announced their willingness to accept the IAEA system of guarantees and inspection for certain nuclear installations. They said that the system could also be applied to the bilateral agreements they had reached on nuclear supplies.

The Conference called for greater representation of Africa on the IAEA Council of Governors, and voted a resolution to this effect presented by Ethiopia, Ghana, Iraq, Morocco, UAR, Tunisia and the Union of South Africa.

Election Of Office-Bearers:

On September 30, the General Conference elected Argentina, Iraq, El Salvador, Thailand and West Germany as new members of the IAEA Council of Governors.

Fifty-four votes were cast for Iraq as representative of Africa and the Middle East and 49 for Thailand to represent East Asia and the Pacific area.

[The Council of Governors comprises 33 members, five of whom (Britain, Canada, France, the Soviet Union and USA) are permanent members. Another 8 are chosen annually by the Council and 10 are elected by the General Conference for a two-year term. Five elected members are replaced every year.]

On October 3, Mr. Allan Douglas McKnight, Executive Commissioner of the Australian Atomic Energy Commission, was unanimously elected Chairman of the IAEA Board of Governors.

Prof. Gueorgui Nadjakov (Bulgaria), and Dr. Carlos Graef Fernandez (Mexico) were elected Vice-Chairmen.

The Board also appointed a Scientific Advisory Committee whose members were: Dr. Homi J. Bhabha, Chairman of the Indian Atomic Energy Commission; Sir John Cockcroft, (Britain), Prof. Vasily S. Emelyanov (Russia), Dr. Bertrand Goldschmied (France), Prof. W. B. Lewis (Canada), Dr. I. I. Rabi (United States) and Mr. Ikjoblor Luis Cintra Do Prado (Brazil).

E. British Labour Party Support Unilateral Nuclear Disarmament: The annual Conference of the British Labour Party, which began at Scarborough on October 5 rejected the defence policy of its leader, Mr. Hugh Gaitskell and voted for unilateral renunciation of nuclear weapons.

But, Mr. Gaitskell delivered a blunt warning that he and the Labour members he led in Parliament would fight the decision by all the means in their power.

He said: "There are some of us who will fight and fight again to save the Party they love. They will fight and fight and fight again to bring back sanity and honesty and dignity so that our Party with its great past may retain its glory and greatness."

He made it clear that choosing or disposing of the leader of the Party was not the business of the Conference but of the Parliamentary Labour Party.

He added: "I would not wish for one day to remain a leader who had lost the confidence of his colleagues—in Parliament".

There was a noisy scene with cries of "Shame" when he suggested that the issue at stake was possibly not defence at all but his own leadership of the party.

He said: "There are ways of getting rid of a man you do not agree with, but it would be wrong to get rid of a man by supporting a policy you do not wholeheartedly believe in".

Condemning the proposal that Britain should "go it alone" in unilaterally renouncing nuclear defence, he said: "What sort of people do you think we are? Do you think we can simply accept a decision of this kind and become, overnight, pacifists, neutralists and fellow-travellers?"

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

His main line of argument was that there remained a wide area of agreement between the unilateralists—the partisans of unilateral disarmament for Britain—and other opponents inside the Labour Party.

He listed a series of points on which, he said they agreed, including the need for general disarmament, military disengagement in Central Europe, participation of People's China in disarmament talks and a ban on Britain's resumption of nuclear tests.

He added: "But, if you are a unilateralist on principle, you are driven to become a neutralist. You are driven to become one of those who wish us to withdraw from NATO".

He declared that the unilateralists must follow the "cowardly and hypocritical course of saying: 'We do not want the nuclear weapons, but, for God's sake, Americans protect us'".

At the end of his dramatic speech, his supporters sang "For he's a jolly good fellow". But it did not save the official policy—pledging loyalty to NATO based on an American nuclear deterrent—from defeat. The huge block votes of the trade unions—based on their membership figures—ensured that.

First, voting was on a motion by the Amalgamated Engineering Union, demanding "the unilateral renunciation of the testing, manufacture, stock-piling and basing of all nuclear weapons". This was carried by 3,303,000 votes against 2,896,000.

Then came a resolution sponsored by Mr. Gaitskell's biggest adversary, Mr. Frank Cousins, the trade union leader, which rejected any defence policy based on the threat of the use of strategic or tactical nuclear weapons. It was carried by 3,282,000 votes against 3,239,000—a majority of only 43,000.

A pro-Gaitskell resolution from the Woodworkers' Union endorsing official policy was defeated by 3,331,000 votes against 2,999,000.

Finally, the Executive's own resolution asking for endorsement of its policy was defeated by 3,339,000 votes against 3,042,000.

There was no voting on another resolution opposing nuclear arming of West Germany, which was sent back to the Executive for further consideration.

Mr. Gaitskell's hard-hitting oration left the Conference convinced that he had no intention of knuckling under to the unilateralists or playing into their hands by any panic decision to resign his post as leader. His uncompromising words foreshadowed something like open war between the Parliamentary Party and the non-Parliamentary unilateralists, led by Mr. Cousins.

His official policy was supported by all but a few of the 250 Labour members of Parliament. It also had the backing of the Party's National Executive Committee and the General Council of the Trade Union Congress.

Issue Of Nationalization:

On October 6, Mr. Gaitskell scored a tactical victory on the question of nationalization.

By 4,153,000 votes to 2,310,000, the Conference recognized as a valuable statement of aims his proposal to water down the concept of wholesale nationalization as embodied in Clause 4 of the Party's Constitution.

[Clause 4 of the Constitution calls for the common ownership of the means of production, distribution and exchange.]

The vote was on a motion to refer the matter back to the Party's National Executive for further consideration. This would have meant rejection of Mr. Gaitskell's proposal.

After the Party's defeat in the general parliamentary elections in October, 1959, Mr. Gaitskell had tried to get Clause 4 changed. He contended that it created a false image of the Party by suggesting that it wanted to nationalize everything. But his proposal had met with such a storm of opposition, not only from the Left but the Right-wing of the Party, that the National Executive had dropped it.

In the debate on October 6, Mr. Gaitskell said that with nationalization one had to proceed gradually.

He added: "We must think in terms of a programme of extending public ownership that seems relevant to the electorate for the very simple reason that if it does not, they won't elect you to power".

Mr. Cousins said: "It has been said you cannot have socialism simply on the basis of nationalization. But the truth is that you cannot have it without".

Mr. R. Crossman Elected Chairman Of National Executive:

On October 5, Mr. Richard Crossman (52), a prominent Labour member of Parliament, author and journalist, was elected Chairman of the Labour Party's National Executive Committee.

Mr. Harold Wilson, the Opposition's chief spokesman on economic matters, was elected Vice-Chairman.

F. Atom-Powered Aircraft-Carrier Launched In USA: According to the US Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, USA's first atom-powered aircraft carrier, Enterprise, launched at Newport (Virginia) on September 24 would be the most versatile of all weapons systems.

In an address on the launching of the Enterprise, Admiral Burke said that the vessel's eight nuclear reactors would enable it to cruise 20 times around the world at high speed without refuelling.

He declared that the Enterprise was the largest ship "ever built, of any kind, by any nation" and that it would carry the "most powerful nuclear plant ever constructed anywhere in the world".

He added that a full squadron of planes could be operated from the new carrier—more than what could be handled by the Forrestal class of carriers.

He said that the new carrier could carry "the fight to the enemy, project our military power across the sea and help to preserve our vital sea lifelines which join our efforts with the rest of the free world".

The carrier would have a new controlled aircraft landing system, the latest radar and a system of electronic computers that would enable the ship's commander to co-ordinate all of the vessel's complex activities at high speed and efficiency.

The vessel is 1,100 feet long, with a displacement of 75,000 tons and cost about $435,000,000.

G. "Pioneer VI" Fails To Go Into Lunar Orbit: The United States on September 25 failed in an attempt to put a Pioneer VI satellite into orbit round the Moon.

The US National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) announced in Washington the failure of the Moon-probe a little over an hour after the Atlas-Able carrier-rocket was launched from Cape Canaveral (Florida).

NASA said that the failure was due to the malfunctioning of one of the upper stages of the carrier-rocket.

Unlike the Russian Lunik III, which took rough television pictures of the far side of the Moon in October, 1959, the new US instrument-packed 387-lb. satellite carried no picture-scanning device. But it was planned to go much closer to the moon and an orbit varying from 1,400 to 2,500 miles above the lunar surface was hoped for. Achieving lunar orbit, would depend largely on the hydrazine reverse thrust engine which had never been tested in flight before.

Pioneer VI was mounted atop a three-stage Atlas-Able rocket combination weighing over 260,000 lbs. It was made of an aluminium alloy and from its surface jutted four solar cell paddle-wheels to power its batteries for radio transmissions.

The principal objectives of launching Pioneer VI were to make a more thorough investigation of the environment between the Earth and the Moon and to develop a technology for controlling and steering a space-craft from the Earth.

H. Heavy Nuclear Particles Discovered: The Soviet news agency, Tass, reported on September 27 that a group of scientists from the Joint Nuclear Research Institute at Drubna, near Moscow, had obtained for the first time heavy particles of xi-minus hyperons by using their powerful proton synchrotron.

Headed by Mr. Wang Kang Chang (China), the group of specialists included the Soviet scientists, Mr. Mikhail Solovyev and Mr. Yevgeniya Kladnitskaya, Mr. Ting Ta Chao (China), Mr. Kim Hi In (Korea), Mr. Nguyen Din Ty (Viet-Nam DR) and Mr. Alexandr Mihul (Rumania).

They studied 102,000 photographs of traces of nuclear reactions and the results of the experiments were processed by means of an electronic computing machine.

The xi-minus hyperons—heavy, negatively-charged nuclear particles—are formed on the collision of high energy particles if at least one of them is a nucleon (proton or neutron).

They were detected in cosmic radiation for the first time by British scientists eight years ago.

ASIAN RECORDER

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 47

BURMA

A. Joint Oil Venture: The acquisition by the Burmese Government of the majority interest in the Burma Oil Company (1954) Limited was formalized on October 25. (For background please see page 3579).

The following are the salient points of the Agreement, signed by representatives of the Government and the Burma Oil Company (1954) Ltd. under which the State-acquired 51 per cent interest in the Joint Oil Venture (JOV):

The Government agreed not to exercise for a period of 15 years its right under the JOV Agreement of 1954 to acquire from the oil companies further shares in the issued capital of the BOC (1954) Limited;

To intensify the search for new sources of oil in Burma, between K250 and K300 lakhs would be spent yearly in 1961, 1962 and 1963;

The terms and conditions of service of the Burmese staff at present employed would remain unchanged;

The London office of the Burma Oil Company (Burma Trading) Limited would continue as agents of the Company for certain purposes under a new Agreement for ten years;

Further, the Company would continue a policy of accelerated Burmanization.

The Burmese and British partners, declared their intention to conduct the affairs of the Company in such a way that a reasonable return on the shareholders' investment would be earned.

It was the 'caretaker' regime, headed by General Ne Win, which initiated the proposal that the Government should acquire 51 per cent of the shares in the BOC (1954) Limited. The Pyidaungsu Government pursued the matter further and the new Agreement was supplemental to and modified in certain respects the 1954 JOV Agreement.

B. Rice Agreement With China: It was officially announced in Rangoon on October 24 that under an Agreement signed with China, China would buy from Burma 300,000 to 400,000 long tons of rice (1961 crop).

The Agreement was the outcome of talks between the Chinese trade mission, headed by the Vice-Minister for Foreign Trade, Mr. Lei Jen-ming, which arrived in Rangoon on October 15, and the Burmese Trade Development Minister, U Thwin and senior officials of the State Agricultural Marketing Board.

A communique issued after the signing of the Agreement did not mention the price China would pay for the rice, but it was believed to be £33 per ton.

Burma would import from China in 1961 such commodities as she required and China was able to supply so as to balance the trade between the two countries.

A. Bill On Schools' Take-over Passed: The House of Representatives on October 28 passed an official Bill vesting in the Government control and management of over 2,000 Government-aided schools.

Voting on the Bill was 63 in favour and 17 against.

The chief opponents of the Bill were representatives of the Catholic community which ran a large number of private schools with State aid, the United National Party, the Federal Party and the former Prime Minister, Mr. Wijeyananda Dahanayake.

The opposition, including Left-wing parties, combined to press for the inclusion of schools run on the plantations within the purview of the Bill, but an amendment suggesting this was rejected by 53 votes to 33.

The only opposition dissenting voice was that of Mr. K. M. P. Rajaratne, representing the extremist Sinhalese National Liberation Front. He said that as schools on the plantations were largely used by children for State-less Indian-origin workers, their inclusion in the take-over would affect the solution of the problem of citizenship of these workers.

The Education Minister, Mr. Badiruddin Mahmud, said that he would see if State schools could be specifically mentioned in the next piece of legislation on the take-over he proposed to bring before the House in January, 1961. In the meanwhile, he said he would be glad to receive deputations of trade unions on the matter and convey their views to the Cabinet.

Earlier, on October 23, a deputation of Catholic bishops led by the Archbishop of Colombo, the Most Reverend Dr. Thomas Cooray, met the Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike regarding the Bill.

Mrs. Bandaranaike was reported to have assured the bishops that full provision would be made for religious instruction in all schools under the proposed national system of education.

At the same time, she expressed regret that her Government could not meet the demand of the bishops to retain the schools run by them under the church management, except as provided for in the Bill.

The Bill excluded from its purview over 900 schools on the tea and rubber estates and voluntary institutions such as schools for the deaf and the blind.

B. The Times Of Ceylon On Take-Over: Immediately below this cross-head on page 3580 there was a printing error. The paragraph as corrected should read as follows:

"The Times of Ceylon said in a leading article on September 22 that the statements which Mr. F. R. D. Bandaranaike had made at his London news conference were 'necessary to give an act of brusque intolerance a democratic veneer, especially considering the errand on which he has gone to Britain.' This is a reference to the possibility that Mr. Bandaranaike may try to raise a loan for Ceylon in Britain."

The error is sincerely regretted.

CHINA

A. Aid Agreements With North Korea: Representatives of the Governments of China and North Korea in Peking on October 13 signed Agreements on the granting of loans by China to North Korea and on Chinese supply of equipment and technical aid.

The Agreements were signed after talks between the visiting Korean Government economic delegation and the Chinese Government on the "further strengthening of mutual economic aid and co-operation" between the two countries.

The Vice-Premier, Mr. Li Hsien-nien, signed the Agreements for China and the North Korean Vice-Premier, Mr. Li Joo Yun, signed for his country.

The Premier Mr. Chou En-lai, and the Vice-Premier Mr. Ho Lung, were present at the signing ceremony.

Under the two Agreements, the Chinese Government would between 1961 and 1964, grant a long-term loan of 420 million roubles to the Government of the Korean Democratic People's Republic (North Korea) and would help the latter to build industrial plants for the manufacture of rubber tyres and radio communications equipment and a number of light industry enterprises producing consumer goods. China would also provide North Korea with cotton textile equipment and radio equipment.

An official statement issued on the talks said:

"The success of the talks between the Government economic delegations of China and Korea is an indication of further development and consolidation of the unbreakable and lofty friendship between the peoples of the two countries, which is cemented in blood. It is a new contribution by the Governments and the people of the two countries to the great unity and strength of the socialist camp headed by the Soviet Union."

B. Panchen Lama Condemns Inscription Of Tibet On UN Agenda: The acting Chairman of the Preparatory Committee for the Autonomous Region of Tibet, the Panchen Lama, said at Nanchang in Central China on October 22 that the inscription of the Tibet question on the UN

General Assembly agenda was an "imperialist plot for interference in China's internal affairs."

He said: "Tibet has put an end to the old dark age once and for all. It has entered a new age of brightness, happiness and prosperous development.

"But, unwilling to acknowledge their shameful defeat, the imperialist and foreign reactionaries, under the manipulation of US imperialism, have gone so far as to include a so-called 'Tibet question' in the agenda of the UN General Assembly in a conspiracy to interfere again in the internal affairs of our country.

"Here we give a solemn warning to the imperialists, who are aggressive by nature, that all their conspiracies are like lifting a rock merely to crush their own feet. We will not be affected in any way.

"Tibet forever belongs to the People's Republic of China. All arrangements made and measures taken in regard to Tibet by our country and our Government are our internal affairs in which no foreign intervention can be tolerated."

He said that under the leadership of the Communist Party and its Chairman, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, "the people of various nationalities in our country have established entirely new relations in the common cause of building the socialist Motherland—relations of close, fraternal unity, mutual help and co-operation to ensure their common development and progress. We must at all times guard the unity of the Motherland and the unity among the people of various fraternal nationalities as we guard our own lives."

He added: "Tibet is an integral part of the territory of our country."

He said that after the victory of the struggle to put down the rebellion in Tibet, "a momentous movement for democratic reform had quickly developed throughout the Region at the urgent request of the working people in Tibet.

"The cruellest, darkest, most reactionary and brutal feudal serf system in Tibet has been eliminated. The million former serfs have been liberated, received land, houses, draught animals and farm implements and live as their own masters.

"The success of the democratic reform has greatly increased the class consciousness of the working people and their enthusiasm in production. After the completion of land distribution last year, a mass movement to increase farm production began and spread to large rural areas. More than 90 per cent of the peasant households have joined mutual-aid teams. The methods of cultivation have been improved."

This year, he declared, Tibet had garnered the biggest harvest in her history.

He said: "All this shows that only under the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party, through democratic reform and by firmly taking the road of socialism are the Tibetan people able to free themselves completely from the wretched position of poverty and backwardness and win a fine and happy, new life."

GUINEA

A. Aid Agreement With USA: The New York Times reported on October 31 that USA and the African Republic of Guinea had signed a technical and economic aid Agreement one month ago, but it had not been announced at Guinea's request.

It said that the Agreement had been signed in Conakry (Guinea) on September 30, after a year of difficult negotiations.

Guinea, at first, had refused to accept the US Congress' stipulation that recipients of US aid had to account for the way it was spent. Finally, however, the Guinean President, Mr. Sekou Toure, agreed to the condition.

The exact total value of the aid was not revealed, but the US International Co-operation Administration had reportedly granted 150 scholarships to Guinean students and negotiated a million-dollar loan to provide Guinea with American surplus powdered milk and other food supplies.

Guinea already had commercial ties with the communist bloc and had received $35 million worth of credits from the Soviet Union and $25 million from China.

US Pledge Of Financial Help: A communique setting forth a US pledge of financial aid for Iran was issued in Tehran on October 16 on the conclusion of the week-long negotiations in Tehran between Iranian Government officials and the American Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, Mr. Martin.

The communique said that USA firmly intended to help Iran face "certain financial obligations arising from her second Five-Year Economic Development Plan" and would study ways of favouring the application of the Third Five-Year Plan, due to start late in 1962.

Mr. Martin arrived in Tehran after the Iranian Government had promised the International Monetary Fund (IMF) that it would apply a policy of economic austerity to deal with its balance of payments deficit.

In exchange for this promise, IMF granted Iran a stabilization credit of $35,000,000 and recommended that USA extend a credit of $80,000,000 to Iran between now and 1962 to help the Third Five-Year Plan.

JAPAN

A. Government's Policy Statement: In his first policy statement to the Diet since his nomination as Prime Minister on July 18, 1960, Mr. Hayato Ikeda, on October 22 strongly committed his Government to the US Mutual Security Treaty and to close co-operation with the 'free world', more particularly with the nations of Western Europe.

He said that the recent trend which had appeared in Japan in advocacy of neutralism, had ignored the fact that "Japan's national strength has an enormous bearing upon the East-West power balance" and had also failed to realise that "our country considers its co-operation with free countries as the primary basis of national prosperity and economic development."

He added that Japan had been able to maintain peace and security with the smallest defence costs in the world. Her economy had "achieved a phenomenal expansion of 17 per cent" during the last fiscal year and was endowed with a "surprisingly deep-rooted power for growth", while prices in Japan had shown the highest degree of stability in the world.

He promised to formulate a comprehensive financial and economic policy anticipating an annual growth of 9 per cent on the average during the next three years, which would lead the country onwards to a doubled annual income in 10 years. Technological education would be expanded and Japan would start creating techniques of her own. Primary industries would be developed and modernized, living standards would rise and the social security system would be replenished.

The Foreign Minister, Mr. Zentaro Kosaka, told the Diet in a foreign policy statement that Japan could not take a neutral stand but would co-operate with the 'free nations.'

A. Budget For 1961: According to information available on October 14, the Lebanese Cabinet had approved the draft Budget for 1961 to be debated in the Chamber of Deputies.

Income and expenditure were balanced at £(Lebanese)267,500,000, an increase of £L45,200,000 over 1960.

A higher revenue was foreseen from customs dues, and from direct and indirect taxes, enough to make up for the increased expenditure and for an anticipated fall in miscellaneous revenue, which included Government revenue from pipe-line fees.

Under the Budget, direct taxation would rise from £L58,200,000 to £L78,800,000, customs dues from £L77,200,000 to £L100,000,000 and other indirect taxes from £L39,700,000 to £L50,900,00.

Revenue from oil transit would decrease from £L23,700,000 to £L13,200,000.

PAKISTAN

A. Aid For Second Five-Year Plan—Five-Nation Conference In Washington: Five major capital-exporting nations — Britain, Canada, West Germany, Japan and USA—met at the World Bank Headquarters in Washington on October 6 to discuss the possibilities of helping Pakistan to achieve the goals of her $4,000,000,000 Second Five-Year Plan.

As the two-day Conference opened, World Bank officials said that there was general recognition that Pakistan must be aided in reaching the "take-off" stage for sustained, self-generating growth as soon as possible.

Pakistan launched her Second Five-Year Plan on July 1, 1960 and the meeting in Washington was called to undertake a preliminary discussion of financial aid to that country.

Besides the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the French and Italian Governments sent observers to the Conference.

The World Bank in a statement said it was not expected that any definite conclusions regarding external assistance for the Plan would be reached at the Conference.

Mr. M. Shoaib's Address To Far East-America Council of Commerce And Industry:

The Pakistan Finance Minister, Mr. Mohammad Shoaib, in an address to the Far East-America Council of Commerce and Industry in New York on October 5 said that his country had established a climate favourable to foreign investment and urged American businessmen to explore the opportunities there.

He said: "We are anxious that private foreign investment contribute to the economic development of Pakistan."

He said that there had been a marked expansion in investment activity in the past two years "as the result of the rebirth of confidence in the future of our economy".

He added: "The rate of industrial growth in Pakistan compares favourably with the achievement of many other developing countries. The credit for this extraordinary achievement goes largely to private enterprise".

Pakistan valued such investment not only for the capital, but also for the technical know-how and managerial skill which it brought and which the country still greatly needed.

He declared: "Any investment made by American private enterprise in my country will not only have the benefit of substantial tax concessions, but will also enjoy the right to remit profits freely and to repatriate the invested capital."

He said that Pakistan would continue to emphasize maximum self-help in her economic development, because she believed this was essential to earn the support of her friends.

"But", he added, "we cannot progress with the vital task of economic development without a full measure of financial assistance from our allies, particularly the United States."

The Pakistan Ambassador to USA, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, earlier told the Council that at the core of the Five-Year Plan was the minimum demand that Pakistan's economy should grow at a rate faster than the population.

He said: "Our strategic objective is to catapult Pakistan into the 'take-off stage' for sustained, self-generating growth as speedily as possible so that we will no longer have to depend on foreign aid for survival as a free nation."

He said that by attaining self-generating growth, Pakistan would substantially bolster the concept of free enterprise in Asia.

He added: "Indeed, by under-scoring reliance on private initiative and sensible fiscal policies, Pakistan has literally become the largest show-case of private enterprise in the under-developed Afro-Asian world.

"This is in sharp contrast to the discouragement of private enterprise elsewhere in this region by Government controls and doctrinnaire philosophies."

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: UN General Assembly Rejects Soviet Proposal For Disarmament Debate In Plenary Sessions; UN Pledging Conference; British Conservative Party's Annual Conference; East-West Youth Congress; Nigeria Becomes Independent.

A. Disarmament Debate In Plenary Sessions—UN General Assembly Rejects Soviet Proposal: On October 11, the UN General Assembly rejected by 54 votes to 13 with 31 abstentions a Soviet proposal to have disarmament debates in the plenary sessions instead of in the Political Committee.

By 62 votes to 12 with 24 abstentions, the Assembly accepted the proposal that disarmament debates should take place in the First Committee (the Political Committee) of the Assembly as usual.

Presenting his proposal that the question of disarmament should be discussed in the plenary session of the General Assembly, the Soviet Prime Minister, Nikita Khruschev, said:

"Under present conditions, the disarmament problem is the most cardinal one; the ensuring of durable peace depends on its solution. No other question, no matter how important, can be compared with this question, on which depends whether there will be another world war or not. War can be excluded only if agreement on disarmament is reached between States and only if disarmament is carried out under the strictest international control so that no State can secretly revive armament and threaten other States again.

"The basic duty of United Nations is to ensure peace and to reach agreement on disarmament and destruction of armaments under strict international control is one of the basic problems of the cause of safeguarding peace. All of us should realize it well, for the destinies of peace and the peoples are at stake.

"The road now suggested by the General Committee has already been tried for many years. So many years have been spent on the disarmament problem in various commissions and committees, but how much has been done in these committees for the practical solution of this problem?

"Little, very little, one might even say that nothing has been done at all. Therefore, the Soviet Government hopes that all States will, at last, realize the responsibility devolving on them and the importance of the disarmament problem and discuss this problem at the plenary session of the General Assembly.

"If the disarmament problem is to be put off as it has been done so far, there is a danger that events will be developing in the same direction as was the case in the time of the League of Nations before World War II. This was described with great conviction at the present session by the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Nehru. There is a danger of United Nations moving in the same rut in which the cart of the League of Nations was dragging along in matters of disarmament.

"Therefore we must exert special efforts to pull out the wheels from this deep rut and to take the way which would ensure agreement on disarmament.

"It is difficult to convince people who long for peace and, consequently, for solution of all questions ensuring peace that the General Assembly has no time to discuss such an important issue as that of general and complete disarmament. You will remember how much time was spent on discussing the question whether it was worth while to keep the Chiang Kai-shek puppet in United Nations, although it is crystal clear to all sober-minded people that the legitimate rights of People's China, whose Government represents all Chinese people, should have been restored long ago.

"Now, in view of the Presidential election campaign (in the United States) such a situation has taken shape in USA when the Government of that country is apparently unwilling to assume any new and important commitments. Yet without the constructive participation of USA no agreement on disarmament can be reached at the General Assembly.

"An emergency session of the General Assembly could be convened some time in March or April, 1961 and a proposal could be addressed to all the States that they send the Heads of State or Government to lead their delegations.

"I would like to repeat that it would be desirable to call this session in Europe, for instance in Geneva, since the majority of the UN member-countries geographically gravitate to Europe. This session also could be held in Moscow or Leningrad. In that case we for our part would do everything to create appropriate conditions for the normal work of the General Assembly's session and for all delegates who would come to this session.

"If for some reason it will be impossible to discuss the disarmament problem in its full volume and to reach agreement at this session, at least on the main principles, in such a case the Soviet Government deems it necessary to convene an extraordinary session of the UN General Assembly with only one item on its agenda—general and complete disarmament.

"I call upon you, delegates, fully to realize the responsibility resting with UN in settling such an important problem as disarmament. The peoples of the whole world expect UN to pave the way, at long last, to the solution of such an urgent and vital task as general and complete disarmament."

Western delegates opposed Mr. Khruschev's plan for an emergency session of the UN General Assembly in Geneva, Moscow or Leningrad, in March or April, 1961.

The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, said that the Soviet idea was intended to turn what should be a serious discussion into a "table-thumping spectacle."

He said that USA had been ready ever since June 27, when the Geneva disarmament talks broke up, to resume negotiations, and added: "We are ready to go back today, elections or no elections."

He added: "There is no magic in a plenary session. There is no magic in a special session of the General Assembly. There is only the question of the will and desire of the parties to negotiate honestly and equitably in the interests of the lives of us all. That will and desire will be truly tested not in speeches from this rostrum, but in real negotiations.

"There had been a further opportunity this past Summer when the Disarmament Commission was convened. Then, the Soviet Union had threatened not to take part in the Commission's work.

"Now, Mr Khruschev wants a plenary discussion. There is only one conclusion to be drawn. When there is an opportunity to make speeches and propose grandiose schemes, the Soviet Union is for it. But when there is an opportunity to negotiate in detail, the Soviet Union walks away from it.

"USA was ready to return to the 10-member Geneva Committee despite the Soviet walk-out from that body. We are ready. Let the Soviet Union respond".

USA he said, had always recognized the deep and proper concern of all UN members "in this important subject."

Fifteen years ago, USA, then the sole possessor of atomic power, had offered to turn it over to international control, only to have the idea rejected by the Soviet Union, "with such tragic consequences."

He said that USA was ready to discuss the question of disarmament now.

The Soviet proposal that disarmament be debated in a plenary meeting of the UN General Assembly was also opposed by the British delegate, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore.

He emphasized that this important and complicated subject should be fully discussed in the First Committee (Political Committee) and the result of the deliberations then brought forward to a plenary session.

He told the Assembly that it was ridiculous to suggest—as Mr. Khruschev had done—that discussing the disarmament question in committee would be downgrading its importance. This was an entirely new conception of UN committee work. "It is quite alien to the Assembly, and the United Kingdom entirely rejects it."

While agreeing with Mr. Khruschev that disarmament was now "the question of questions" at this Assembly, he said it did not follow that the best way of handling it was at a full plenary meeting with Heads of Government in attendance.

He added: "I can say there is probably no other Government represented here more concerned with this problem than the United Kingdom." For this reason, Britain supported the idea of discussing the Soviet proposal, but she believed that the matter should first be discussed in committee.

The Canadian External Affairs Minister, Mr. Howard Green, said that his country was anxious to carry out a thorough study of the disarmament question.

However, he said that for the moment the problem was to start up the whole machinery of negotiations once more, either through resuming the disarmament negotiations which had been broken off, or by beginning other discussions within a different frame-work.

He said that the atmosphere of the Political Committee was more propitious for preliminary debates and serious exchanges of views than the General Assembly, which was adapted to a whole series of speeches.

He added that the 10-Nation Disarmament Committee which had met in Geneva had made serious progress. He deplored the fact that the Soviet Union had walked out of this Conference at the very moment when the West was preparing to submit new proposals. He re-iterated the earlier Canadian suggestion that the Disarmament Committee should resume its work again under a "neutral" chairman.

Delegates of Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland, Albania and the Ukraine supported the Soviet proposal.

Ghana's Resident Representative Mr. Alex Quaison-Sackey, said he would abstain when the question of debating disarmament in the plenary Assembly was put to a vote.

He said: "We have been constrained to come to this forum to speak on behalf of millions of peoples hoping against hope that this Assembly would pave the way for talks on general and complete disarmament.

"But now the very forum where disarmament should be discussed has assumed gigantic proportions."

He said he would not object to the disarmament discussion taking place in committee first. His only wish was that the talks started.

Replying to the debate on his proposal, Mr. Khruschev noted the views of Western spokesmen that the Soviet Union wanted to raise the question of disarmament at a plenary session of the Assembly for propaganda purposes. But, he said, they themselves were past-masters at propagating their views.

He said: "To us there is no argument on this question; we want to discuss this question in the forum where it would be possible to find an early solution of this burning problem.

"You may ask me: Why do we insist on discussion of this problem at a plenary session of the General Assembly and refuse to go to the Committee? The explanation is very simple. We had been in the Committee before. Begging your pardon for the rough comparison; we know this stable well enough. We know well what it smells of and we have attained no results in the Committee."

Referring to the Five-Nation Disarmament Committee in which were represented USA, UK, the Soviet Union, Canada and France, he said that discussions in the Committee had dragged on with no tangible result.

He added: "America had her best representative in the Five-Nation Committee—Mr. Harold Stassen. But, finally he walked out from this Committee, or rather he was compelled to walk out because he disagreed with the position which was imposed on him in defending the view-point of the former US Secretary of State, Mr. J. F. Dulles.

"We saw that the only thing they were doing seriously in the Committee was drinking tea or coffee, as their preference might be.

"We still have some patience left and still have the last hope that perhaps the General Assembly at its plenary meetings would help to reach agreement on disarmament and would finally safeguard mankind from war. I repeat, gentlemen, if war does break out, it will break out all over the planet. Many do not conceive what a future war would be. I have a concrete idea of such a war. The Soviet Union is not afraid of war! If war is imposed upon us, we shall fight for our country and we shall triumph, cost what it may.

"But it must be borne in mind that there will be untold losses in such a war and you, sitting here, will be responsible. It is true, what can we expect from some of those sitting here. History will not forgive them! I emphasize: We deem it necessary to discuss the problem of disarmament at the General Assembly, at its plenary meetings.

"You regard the struggle for disarmament as propaganda, but as regards the permanent questions of Hungary and Tibet, as Comrade Rapacki, Poland's Foreign Minister, aptly said here, do you sow the seeds of peace and mutual understanding? No, you seize upon questions with which you want to put countries at loggerheads.

"You will not intimidate us, the people of the socialist world! Ours is a prospering economy, our technology is on the upgrade, ours is a closely-knit people. You want to impose on us competition in the arms race? This we do not want, but we are not afraid of it. We shall beat you! In our country, rockets are produced on assembly line basis. Recently I visited a plant and saw rockets coming from it as sausages from an automatic machine. Rocket after rocket is coming off our factory lines.

"Some gentlemen will start chattering now that Khruschev is threatening someone. No, Khruschev is not threatening, but making a realistic prediction. If you fail to understand realities, if you fail to create conditions for agreement on disarmament, things will become more complicated because if there is no disarmament, this means that there will be an arms race. And any arms race will in the final run lead to a military show-down. If war starts, many of those who are sitting here will be found missing.

"So far, not all peoples of Asia and Africa who recently cast off the colonial yoke are yet aware of their strength and still follow in the wake of their former colonialist hangmen. Today this is so, but tomorrow it will not be true; this will not continue, the peoples will rise, muster their strength and want to be the real masters of the situation. Remember, gentlemen, this will happen in the near future.

"It is your right to vote for a debate on this issue in the First Committee. We have nothing against the First Committee, nothing. I do not even know where it is better and where it is worse; would it be better in the First Committee or the Assembly. But we saw that we had once tried it out in the First Committee and nothing came out of it. Therefore, for the happiness of the peoples we would like to discuss this question at a plenary meeting of the General Assembly.

"If you drive us again into the same Committee, we reserve the right to take part in the proceedings of the Committee or not to take part. If we see that this Committee is a screen to fool the people, that lip service is paid to disarmament while in fact nothing is done as was the case in the past, we shall quit this Committee. We shall not provide a screen, we shall not fool the working people of the whole world.

"The Canadian, US and UK representatives have spoken here. They presented themselves, so to speak, as righteous men. They are the colonialists who are wealthy because the colonies are poor, because the colonialists plundered the colonies. And here they pretend to be 'saints'. But honest persons see the real faces of these representatives.

"Yes, we walked out of the Five-Nation Committee. Why did we walk out? Because you, gentlemen, transformed this Committee into a stable. You have introduced in it such an evil smell that an honest person couldn't breathe in it and we walked out. We need fresh air as honest men and loyal sons of our toiling people. We walked out and shall not go there.

"If disarmament is discussed in the First Committee, we shall at first take part in this business. We shall see how discussion will be organized there.

"Perhaps it will be necessary to take a decision to broaden the 10-Nation Committee. Incidentally, we have suggested such a Committee of representatives of 15 States. We are ready to participate in this Committee on the condition that representatives of neutral countries are introduced into it as we have suggested.

"This Committee will be able to work successfully if the General Assembly decides that all countries must assume an obligation to disarm, to destroy armaments under international control.

"What international control is necessary? I repeat, if a decision is taken on general and complete disarmament, on the destruction of armaments, we shall accept any control. Select the most zealous of those who detest communism and socialism, we shall believe even them and let them draft control proposals. The more penetrating and extensive international control over disarmament will be, the better it will fulfil the hopes of the peoples that no country could secretly rearm and threaten any of her neighbours with another war.

"We are not afraid of control, but control over disarmament, control when a decision on disarmament has been taken. Hence, disarmament must be effected under control.

"And what did Mr. Macmillan suggest from this rostrum? When talking with me he said: 'Mr. Khruschev, you are in a hurry, such a matter cannot be settled rapidly.' He said: 'Let us meet, set up a Political Committee; let us set up a Scientific Committee.'

"And this Scientific Committee will decide the best way to kill the flea—whether to pull out its legs or wrench off its head? This, of course, is a 'scientific problem', gentlemen, but only to those who do not want disarmament. This is why I told Mr. Macmillan: 'You want to entice us into dark and airless labyrinths inhabited only by bats which are afraid of light. You want us to participate there in elaborating scientific problems on the ways to reach disarmament. And they say that this would take five or ten years.'

"Should we wait five or ten years, then we can say definitely that we shall not reach agreement on disarmament?

"At the present time actually only three States have nuclear weapons and a fourth has already started atomic tests, but I am convinced that in five or ten years there will be several dozen such States. And then it will be even more difficult to reach agreement.

"Already now, rockets and missiles, can be delivered to any point on the globe and incidentally we can land our spaceships at any point. And what will it be five or ten years hence? Gentlemen, you must imagine this in practical terms. Therefore, if you really want peace,—and not all who are present here want it, but the majority probably does and it is this majority that I am addressing—raise your voice in favour of disarmament and you will have the gratitude of mankind. But if you follow the representatives of imperialist, monopoly capitalists who have spoken here, if you follow the military North Atlantic bloc, the people will curse you; they will curse you because they have entrusted you with the holy of holies—peace—and you have deceived the hope of the peoples, you have failed to reach agreement on disarmament and led humanity into war."

After the vote on the Soviet proposal, Mr. Khruschev told newsmen: "Evidently, we will now have to compete in the manufacture of arms.

"USA can certainly celebrate a victory—they have put off once again a decision on disarmament and raised the possibility of war.

"This is not a victory for the forces of peace, but a victory for the forces of war, and every honest man will be very discouraged by this. Evidently, USA, Britain, France and Canada don't want disarmament, and certain other countries have not yet come to an understanding of the possible consequences that this can lead to. This is certainly very sad."

Speaking to a different set of newsmen outside his Park Avenue headquarters, he said that the Soviet Union would continue to struggle unremittingly for peace and added that he hoped all the people would wake up before it was too late.

Told that the picture he drew was a sombre one and asked if he saw any ray of hope, he replied: "Not at this Assembly."

Mr. N. Khruschev Tables New Resolution On Disarmament:

The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev on October 13 tabled a resolution in the General Assembly on disarmament. He proposed that an international control organization to ensure disarmament should be set up within UN, with the participation of all member-States.

Introducing the resolution, he said that it was indispensable to change the present structure of United Nations in regard to the Secretary-General's post, to include representatives of the communist, Western and neutral groups. He also called for a change in the set-up of the Security Council.

He said that if there were delays, the Soviet Union would refuse to take part in the work of the Political Committee and the Disarmament Committee.

The following are the main points of the Soviet resolution:

(1) Disarmament should include the liquidation of all armed forces and all armaments, the dismantling of all foreign bases, a ban on nuclear, chemical and bacteriological weapons, as well as on rockets, the destruction of all means of transporting these weapons and a halt to all spending for military purposes;

(2) Disarmament should be carried out in pre-determined stages, and its application to nuclear and conventional weapons should be so balanced that no State or group of States would be able to draw military advantages from the measures, and the security of all States would be assured;

(3) It should be executed from beginning to end under international control. The volume of the control must be proportional to the volume and the nature of the measures to be carried out during each stage;

(4) An international control organization should be established within UN with the participation of all the members;

(5) An international police force to which UN members should be obliged to furnish troops on demand from their vestigial police forces, should maintain international order.

In order to assure the judicious use of the international police force, and exclude the possibility of its use in the interests of a particular State or group of States, it would be essential to modify the structure of the Secretariat and the Security Council of UN so that three groups of States—Socialist, Western and neutralist—were represented on both on an equal footing.

Britain-USA-Italy Resolution On Disarmament:

On October 14, Britain, USA and Italy proposed six guiding principles of disarmament in a draft resolution circulated to the General Assembly.

Britain separately circulated a draft resolution calling for the convening of a meeting of experts to "examine means of verifying measures of disarmament".

The six guiding principles were:

(1) Disarmament should be carried out progressively with measures to be completed as rapidly as possible within specified periods of time;

(2) Transition from one stage to the next should be initiated when the measures in the preceding stage had been satisfactorily implemented, provided that effective verification was continuing and that any additional verification arrangements required for measures in the next stage had been agreed and were ready to operate effectively;

(3) Nuclear and conventional measures of disarmament must be so balanced that no country or group of countries would obtain, at any stage, a significant military advantage and that equal security for all would be maintained and thus international confidence progressively increased;

(4) Compliance with all disarmament obligations must be effectively verified throughout by an international disarmament organization within the frame-work of UN to ensure that compliance with these obligations was verified from their entry into force; such verification should include capability to ascertain not only that reductions of armed forces and armaments in agreed amounts took place, but also that retained armed forces and armaments did not exceed agreed levels at any stage;

(5) Provisions in respect of international control and verification should form an integral part of any Agreement on disarmament;

(6) General and complete disarmament must start with those measures which were capable of early implementation under effective international control and are compatible with the third principle.

The resolution urged that negotiations should be "resumed as soon as possible on the basis of this resolution."

The British resolution on the convening of a meeting of experts recommended that "technical experts—scientific, military and administrative—be appointed with the minimum of delay."

This technical group should be instructed to submit a progress report to the UN Disarmament Commission within six months. The Commission consists of all the 99 members of UN.

The report should be on the system of inspection and control—their capabilities and limitations—which would be effective and fair to all concerned in relation to the seven specific disarmament measures.

East German Memorandum On Disarmament:

In a memorandum submitted to the General Assembly, the Government of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) said: "The solution of the question of disarmament is the most important task at present confronting all peoples and all Governments. It would prevent the possibility of new wars and make peace secure for all time.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

"Two world wars have had their origins on German soil. This lays upon the German people and the Governments of the two German States the responsibility of making particularly great efforts to make peace secure and to prevent a war. The Potsdam Agreement, agreed upon by the Soviet Union, USA, Britain and France, imposed the pledge to extirpate militarism and revanchism, so that other peoples shall never again be threatened from Germany.

"The Government of the German Democratic Republic is guided by the principle that a suitable contribution of the German States must be that they begin without delay with general and complete disarmament in Germany.

"In view of the total militarization and atomic armament which is going on in West Germany, it is urgently necessary to swiftly carry out disarmament measures in Germany. The West German Federal Government is crudely infringing the principle laid down by the States of the anti-Hitler coalition at the end of the Second World War for the formation of a new demilitarized and peace-loving Germany. It refuses to recognise the results of the Second World War. It makes territorial claims on many European countries and rejects the policy of peaceful co-existence.

"The Hitlerite Generals who are once again in command in West Germany have presented a memorandum containing a programme for the all-in re-militarization of West Germany. This programme calls for the forcible recruitment of the entire male population capable of bearing arms, the unlimited equipment of the Wehrmacht with nuclear and rocket weapons and the most modern jet planes, a powerful navy unlimited in tonnage and armament, and finally the moving forward of the Wehrmacht, and the extension of its communications in the member-States of NATO far outside the frontiers of the Federal Republic. The Generals' memorandum, which was drafted and published with the full agreement of the West German Government, proves that they are taking a course towards rocket and atomic warfare. This armament policy is accompanied by a steadily increasing campaign of hatred propaganda on the part of the revanchist organizations in West Germany. Ministers of the West German Government are speakers at all important rallies in this hatred campaign and thus show that revanchism has become State policy in West Germany. Atomic armament and revanchism, however, are completely contrary not only to the Potsdam Agreement and the UN Charter, but also to the unconditional surrender which was signed by the Supreme Command of the Hitlerite Wehrmacht, to which belong the Generals who today form the Leadership Staff of the West German Wehrmacht.

"The comprehensive armament measures of the West German Federal Government and the increasing war propaganda, have created in West Germany a potential war focus which can become extremely dangerous. This focus of war threatens the peace of the German people, the peace of the peoples of Europe and the peace of the world.

"In the interests of the maintenance of peace, the speediest disarmament measures are therefore necessary in Germany. Such measures would make possible the neutrality of the two German States and thus prevent the outbreak of wars in Europe. General and complete disarmament would correspond particularly well with the national interests of the German people. Even the beginning of the first practical measures for disarmament would remove the main obstacles which at present prevent an understanding between the two German States on their re-unification."

The memorandum contained a three-stage plan of disarmament in Germany.

Under it, both German States should renounce the use of force against each other and against third parties, in declarations valid in international law.

Both German States should agree on an arms "stop" and renounce atomic armament.

A Peace Treaty should be concluded with both German States and West Berlin should be converted into a demilitarized Free City.

Mr. Khruschev Leaves For Home:

Mr. Khruschev left New York for home on the night of October 13 in a Soviet airliner.

Before leaving, he repeated his proposal for a change in the structure of UN and said that the Soviet Union would not agree to disarmament unless there was assurance that the necessary international police force was in reliable hands.

In a statement, he expressed satisfaction over the General Assembly's approval of the Soviet proposal for a full discussion of the colonial question in plenary session of the Assembly.

He added that if the delegates had shown the same determination in regard to the disarmament programme and awareness of the danger of nuclear war, UN would have taken an important step towards disarmament. He, however, said that the climate was such as to inspire a hope that major problems would be solved.

He said: "I have received many letters and telegrams from Americans. In these letters and telegrams, as well as during personal meetings, Americans have assured me of their good feelings towards our people and our country and I sincerely responded to them.

"Of course, there were vicious people, so-called picketers—hired individuals. But I am well aware of the fact that these dregs of society do not represent the American people.

"I believe that the cool relations between our two countries have arisen as a result of reckless actions on the part of the authorities of USA, which have directed two aeroplanes over the territories of the Soviet Union, but this will be overcome.

"A time will come when the peoples and the Governments of our countries will live not only in peace but in friendship."

Mr. J. Nehru On Television:

The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru was interviewed in New York on October 8 by all major television net-works in USA on matters of current interest.

Answering questions, he welcomed the proposal made the previous day (October 7) by the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev for a top-level special session of the UN General Assembly early in 1961 to discuss disarmament.

He said he was convinced that Mr. Khruschev wanted disarmament, which, he said, was an urgent issue.

He urged diffusion of the UN Secretary-General's powers by the appointment of Deputy Secretaries-General or something of the kind.

He indicated that he would have been satisfied even with a casual gesture in response to the non-aligned Powers' resolution, which was subsequently withdrawn, urging renewal of contacts between President Eisenhower and Mr. Khruschev.

He deplored the rather crude 'cold war' pressures that he found in UN and said that it would be a good thing if at important international talks, non-aligned Powers were also represented.

He said that India would back any proposal for setting forth a principle that all remaining colonies in the world were entitled to independence. The practical measures to give effect to it might take one, two or three years. That was a matter of detail.

He said, however, that the application of the word "colonialism" to the Soviet Union was not correct.

He said on disarmament: "We have had discussions on disarmament through officials for a long time. That did not get us very far. To break the deadlock, it is desirable for the Heads of Government to meet. Any proposal to postpone its consideration or to adopt any policy which automatically put it off would be viewed with great suspicion. If it is possible, it will be a good thing to have a special session of the General Assembly, or of the Disarmament Commission, which is the same thing.

"I am quite convinced that Mr. Khruschev wants disarmament. He does not want war. He wants disarmament, whatever his reasons may be. I think it is correct to say that he has a feeling of frustration that this matter does not go forward. Some people are obstructing it."

To a question whether he was convinced that the Western Powers wanted disarmament, he replied: "Yes, but—how shall I put it?—they want it, and yet there is suspicion and fear of it; their wanting a thing and yet not knowing how to do it without getting entangled in difficulties. At the back of all this is fear and suspicion."

He predicted that the concept of nation-States would become outmoded and said that because of developments in technology and space travel, "if we survive and there are no wars, the nation-State will go out of date".

He called for steps to be taken now to remove the "rigid conditions and huge barriers" in East-West relations in order to pave the way for a resumption of top-level talks between the two blocs. He added: "It is not really difficult to go further if the mental approach is good."

Asked about the reported ideological dispute between Moscow and Peking over the possibility of war between the capitalist and communist countries, he said: "My sympathies are obviously against those who view war as being inevitable. If it is inevitable, then that inevitability leads to another inevitable thing, that is, complete disaster. If so, what exactly does one work for? Life becomes pointless."

He was asked about "Soviet colonialism in Cuba" and replied that he did not know exactly what was happening in Cuba, except that the Soviet Union, no doubt, would like to increase her influence there. But the Soviet Union was not going to profit economically from Cuba.

He said: "Broadly speaking, their economic structure is such that they cannot profit in that way. Political profit they may gain in the larger context of the 'cold war'. That is possible. You might say that in some East European countries they gain some economic profit too; even so, it is not in the normal way of exploitation by colonial countries.

"You will be completely right in saying (there is Soviet) desire to pull these countries into its own political sphere. That would be correct."

Asked about Western colonialism, he said that the political phase of empire was over, but the economic part still continued in many ways. But it was an obviously receding thing. Even so there were still Portuguese colonies in Africa where one might as well be living in the 17th century. There colonialism was in its worst form.

On the Congo, he said that UN had to deal with some legal entity there. "The only legal thing there is the Parliament. This Parliament appointed the President and the Prime Minister. If a third party comes and tries to stage a coup d'etat I do not see how UN can deal with him, look at him or have anything to do with him.

"It should be the function of UN to deal with Parliament, however bad it is. Its decision may not be a very happy one, but that can be the only right course.

"If odd elements are brought together by persuasion, by pressure, they will fall apart to-morrow if something else happens. Therefore, till a new election is held—and you can certainly have new elections—the present Parliament must be encouraged to meet and bring pressure on its own leaders to come to terms or do something."

He added: "It is an absurd situation when one hears suddenly of some university or high school students being asked to form a Government. That is quite unique in history."

An alternative to acting through Parliament in Congo, he said, would be for UN "itself to be the governing power for the time being and become a trustee. That will be a dangerous thing. Certainly no African country, even the most conservative, will put up with that.

"UN may be an advisory power, but the only present legal basis is the constitution which was made by Belgium. General Elections were held and Parliament was formed. Let new elections take place, let Parliament change its leaders. But meanwhile I do not see any other way." He emphasized that Parliament could not be by-passed.

He said: "Katanga is represented in the Central Parliament and the matter should be dealt with there. Any attitude UN can take other than that of dealing with the Central Parliament would be wrong, because UN has gone there at the request of the Central Government, not Katanga."

He confirmed that it was due to public feeling in India against Chinese aggression that this year India had decided not to sponsor but only support, any move for seating People's China.

He said India was convinced that it was necessary from the world's point of view and from UN's point of view that People's China should represent China at UN. He did not see how questions like disarmament or any really major problem could be solved without China coming in.

However, it was true that "owing to the border incidents there has been a good deal of resentment in Indian popular sentiment. Popular sentiment does not say 'do not have People's Government in United Nations.' But it does say 'why should you always be the first person to say this. You can support it when it comes, certainly, but you need not put your nose out too much."

He left New York on October 9 by air for home via London and Bonn.

He told newsmen in London on October 10 that the previous week's referendum in South Africa on the formation of a Republic had had a far-reaching effect on the Commonwealth. Presumably this aspect would be considered at the next Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference.

He expressed the view that conditions in Africa would make it difficult to continue the policy of apartheid there.

He was asked about the five-Power resolution calling for renewal of contacts between the US President and the Soviet Prime Minister and said that no one had asked for a meeting between the two. The words used were "to renew contacts". The main purpose of the resolution was not a meeting between the two statesmen, but to secure a relaxation of the very rigid attitude that had been taken up so that at some future time the two Governments could deal with each other in a normal way. Otherwise, the whole question of disarmament would be held up.

Answering another question, he said he was sure that the vote would be in favour of admitting the Chinese People's Republic next time the question of Chinese representation came up before UN.

On October 10, Mr. Nehru had an hour's talk at the airport in Bonn with the West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer.

Dr. Adenauer described the talks, which were held at his suggestion, as really good and perhaps also fruitful.

A little while later, Mr. Nehru told newsmen at the airport that the subject of his talks with Dr. Adenauer, namely peace, involved disarmament. He said: "It involves nothing being done which injures peace or which adds to the existing tensions between nations".

He returned to New Delhi on October 11.

Multi-Power Resolution On Easing Tensions Adopted:

The UN General Assembly on October 17 unanimously adopted the resolution moved by India and 27 other countries, calling on States to endeavour their utmost to ease tensions and promote world peace.

Both the Soviet Union and USA supported the resolution.

The Israeli delegate, Mr. Michael Comay, announced earlier that his offer of sponsorship had been spurned.

He blamed this on "political expediency". Among the sponsors were six Arab members, which do not recognize Israel.

The leader of the Indian delegation, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, in his speech introducing the resolution declared that in spite of the crisis of confidence, UN had survived. It was now for its members to assist it towards greater strength through tolerance and co-operation.

He said that he had no desire to apportion blame or responsibility for what had happened in the past, but wanted positive support from all members for the resolution so that the world should know that irrespective of all differences the world Organization was united in its aims of harmony, tolerance and the creation of machinery for strengthening its own functions.

When the resolution was introduced in the morning session it was co-sponsored by 19 nations.

Later, it was announced that Guinea, Somalia, Sudan, Libya, the Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Yemen were among the nine new co-sponsors.

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Valerian Zorin promised his country's support for the draft.

He said that the Soviet delegation valued the sponsors' efforts to "discharge the tensions in international relations".

The Soviet Union, he said, was a "consistent champion of reducing international tensions". She had always advocated constructive negotiations for the solution of international questions.

She had submitted concrete proposals and made every effort to achieve the convening of a 'Summit' Conference. Unfortunately, this had been wrecked by the "provocative actions of USA."

He urged the Political Committee to proceed without delay to consideration of Mr. Khruschev's proposal for general and complete disarmament, "the adoption of which would indeed break the deadlock in the negotiations of this most important question of our time".

He repeated the Soviet demand that UN should give no State or group of States "a privileged position to the detriment of other countries' interests and rights". To that end, Mr. Khruschev had suggested that the Secretary-General be supplanted by a veto-bearing executive triumvirate representing East, West and neutral groups.

He said that the draft resolution was a step in the right direction.

He added: "The unanimous approval of this resolution will create the premises which are necessary for the Committees and the General Assembly to take practical decisions on most important international problems on whose realization depends the maintenance and consolidation of universal peace".

The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, said that the Charter of UN obliged member-States to refrain both from the use of force and the threat to use it in their international relations.

He called for the early resumption of disarmament negotiations, and said that USA was ready for it at any time.

He expressed regret that the Soviet delegate had tried to turn "this initiative for peace into another move for 'cold war' propaganda by USSR".

He said that he would continue to support the initiative and would refrain from replying to Mr. Zorin in kind, in the belief that "our example may help".

Mr. Z. A. Bhutto (Pakistan) said that international tensions were aggravated when there was a dispute between any two Powers. Peace was indivisible and lasting peace could only be achieved if the causes of friction were removed in all theatres of the world, not just in those theatres in which the Great Powers were concerned.

Ninety-one of the 99 delegations were present when the voting took place.

B. Tibet, Hungary And Algeria Placed On Agenda Of UN General Assembly: Referring to a proposal by Malaya and Thailand to include in the UN General Assembly's agenda an item on China's action in Tibet, the Soviet delegate to UN, Mr. Valerian Zorin, said in the UN Steering Committee on September 22 that charges of suppression of the Tibetan people were fabricated and what had occurred in Tibet was a reactionary mutiny.

He urged that the Steering Committee reject the proposal.

After hearing other members, the Committee, however, voted by 11 in favour, four aganist and five abstentions, to inscribe the item on the Assembly agenda.

Sir Patrick Dean (Britain) said that the question continued to be a matter of grave concern to the British Government.

There had also been reports of "continued, violent and cruel suppression." It must be a matter of regret that the Chinese Government had not responded to the Assembly's resolution last year.

The US delegate, Mr. James Wadsworth, said that in recent years the moral influence of the Assembly had been increasingly brought to bear in cases where human rights were denied. Tibet was "one of the most grievous examples of this denial and one where the Assembly must bring in its influence."

Mr. Jotisi Devakul (Thailand) said that he was co-sponsoring the request for another Assembly debate on Tibet because the situation in that country was "getting worse."

Dato Nik Ahmed Kamil (Malaya) outlined the events leading up to the debate at the last Assembly session. The Tibetan question, he declared, represented "an unmistakable case of large-scale and systematic violation of fundamental human rights of the Tibetan people."

The situation remained a source of grave concern. The recent findings of the Legal Inquiry Committee on Tibet of the International Commission of Jurists, gave rise to the inescapable conclusion that systematic oppressive measures were still being continued.

He said that it was morally and humanly impossible for UN to "remain impotent" and turn the other way when the fate of a people was at stake.

On October 10, the Assembly placed the items of the situation in Tibet, Hungary and Algeria on its agenda.

C. UN Pledging Conference: The Pledging Conference of United Nations met in New York on October 13.

Mr. El Mehdi Ben Aboud (Morocco) was elected President of the Conference.

In all more than $80,000,000 was pledged by 40 Governments at the Conference. This included $40,000,000 offered by USA on a 40 per cent matching basis. This meant that other countries must pledge $60,000,000 if the full US pledge was to be paid.

Israel opened the pledges with an offer of $64,000 for the UN Technical Assistance Programme in 1961 and $70,000 to the Special Fund for helping under-developed areas.

Monaco pledged a total of $3,125 to the two funds.

Other pledges included:

Pakistan—$129,998 to the Special Fund and $170,000 for Technical Assistance; India—$1,700,000 and $750,000; Austria—$260,000 and $17,000; United Kingdom—$5,000,000 and $3,000,000; West Germany—a total of $5,300,000 for the two programmes; Canada—$2,350,000 and $2,150,000; France—$5,292,000 and $9,170,000 new francs; Soviet Union—4,000,000 and 8,000,000 roubles; Burma—$20,000 and $40,000; China — $20,000 to each programme; Sudan—$30,000 and $32,000; Japan—150 per cent more than pledged in 1959, with the exact amounts and breakdown to be announced later; Australia—$600,000 to the Technical Programme; Indonesia—1,125,000 rupiahs and 2,250,000 rupiahs; Morocco—$30,000 and $15,000; Lebanon—$30,476 and $20,317; Ceylon—$10,000 and $25,000; Laos—$20,000 each; Turkey—2,000,000 Turkish pounds and 2,400,000 Turkish pounds.

In announcing India's pledge, Mr. C. S. Jha said that his country's contribution ($1,700,000 to the Special Fund and $750,000 for Technical Assistance) might appear to be rather small, but viewed against the background of India's own insatiable needs for her great programmes and plans for economic development, it could be regarded as a substantial contribution.

He added that India greatly appreciated the work done under both these programmes.

Earlier, the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, said that the General Assembly's goal of $100,000,000 to aid under-developed countries was too modest.

He asked the member-States to heed the proposal of the Netherlands Foreign Minister, Mr. J.M.A.H. Luns, for a goal of $125,000,000.

D. British Conservative Party's Annual Conference: The annual Conference of the British Conservative Party opened at Scarborough on October 12.

The Conference unanimously approved a motion which said that Britain's contribution to the nuclear power of the West should not be diminished.

The Defence Secretary, Mr. Harold Watkinson, told the Conference that Britain intended to maintain her nuclear weapons for this purpose.

He said that if Britain abandoned them, it would be harder, not easier, to help maintain peace. Britain would have to take shelter behind USA and her voice would be of little significance.

He said: "Conservatives feel just as deeply about a nuclear war as those who parade their consciences in public. But by abandoning nuclear weapons Britain could not avoid the effects of a nuclear war, or influence any other nation in her policy towards such weapons".

He said that the problem was how best to keep the peace until disarmament could be attained. The Labour Party, saddled with continuing internal strife, had nothing to offer the nation but a policy of doubt and disunity in defence.

He added: "What is dangerous about last week's events in Scarborough (Labour Party's annual Conference) is the utter irrelevance of so much of the argument to the real facts of defence. To reject the responsibilities which we bear as the world's third nuclear Power would be to weaken the joint efforts without any gain in other directions.

"We intend to maintain both a tactical and strategic nuclear capacity as our independent contribution to the nuclear strength of the West.

"For the future, our plans are made to continue an independent nuclear contribution throughout the 1960s. These plans take account of recent advances in missile technology, which means that in a few years, we shall be too much in the missile front-line to rely on a fixed-site deterrent.

"Our further plans are now in preparation. Let us hope that progress in disarmament may yet make them unnecessary".

The British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Iain Macleod, said that the British Government was prepared to challenge the Prime Minister of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, Sir Roy Welensky, on the issue of Federation in Central Africa.

Sir Roy Welensky had rejected the Monckton Commission's right to make any recommendations on the dissolution of the Federation or secession of the component territories.

Mr. Macleod said that the British Cabinet was ready to discuss the secession proposal and other recommendations in the Monckton Commission's report with the five Governments concerned in the Federal Review Conference which they hoped to convene in a few weeks.

This was said to be in direct contradiction to the attitude taken by Sir Roy Welensky.

Declaring that the big question posed in Africa was whether legitimate rights could be protected and legitimate aspirations fulfilled, he said: "The answer we give is yes and the answer Lord Monckton's Commission gives is yes."

He gave the pledge that Britain would carry out her duty to all the peoples concerned in the Rhodesia-Nyasaland territories vigorously, steadfastly and without fear.

He said that the Government's duty in Africa was four-fold: The first was to all peoples who lived in these territories, so that they might strive to build a society in which men should have their full rights, politically, educationally and socially, because they were citizens and not because they were members of any particular race, community, religion, or tribe. Secondly, they had a special duty to those of their own blood who had made their homes in these territories and had made a contribution to the past. They also had a special duty to those who served abroad and in particular, to those in the Overseas Civil Service. Finally, they owed a duty and held a responsibility to the native minorities in the Federation—a fact which was often forgotten. There were warrior, pastoral, primitive and advanced tribes often crowded together in one territory. Many of them might be helpless if Britain's protecting hand was withdrawn too soon.

The Lord Privy Seal, Mr. Edward Heath, in his address to the Conference on October 13 said that the events of the past 15 years had posed for Britain the problem of her relationship—as a nation and as a member of the Commonwealth—with the other countries of Europe.

In his view, this was one of the most important problems still to be settled in the post-War world.

He said: "If we are part of the vigorously expanding and united Western Europe, our power to help the Commonwealth politically, economically and militarily can be maintained. If we are outside, however, there is the risk that our economic position relatively, and perhaps absolutely, will decline; our power to help the Commonwealth would then decrease. This is why there has been general agreement that for us to become isolated economically from this dynamic group in Europe would be harmful to the Commonwealth's real interest."

The Conference then passed a resolution urging the Government to take positive steps to bring "Inner Six" and "Outer Seven" (the two trading blocs in Europe) into closer economic co-operation.

In a pre-vote debate, several delegates accused the Government of temporizing and proposed Britain's immediate entry into the European Common Market, which comprises France, Italy, West Germany, Netherlands, Belgium and Luxemburg.

[Britain is a member of the looser-knit European Free Trade Area comprising Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, Austria and Portugal.]

Earl Home's Address:

The British Foreign Secretary, Earl Home, told the Conference on October 13 that peace was the great aim of British foreign policy.

He said: "People will go to the limits to gain peace—to the limits and not beyond. We may be a nation of shopkeepers, but on the national counter, freedom has never been, and never will be, for sale."

As far as national defence and security were concerned, people had their values right. They knew the lesson of history was that weakness invited the aggressor. So long as the world was a dangerous place, people would not allow the British Government deliberately to arm its forces with weapons inferior to those possessed by potential enemies.

He said: "People know full well the risks in the nuclear age. They prefer to live with those risks rather than bow down before an alien's foot."

He said they could not afford an economic division of Europe which would almost certainly lead to its political division.

Regarding the value of the association with USA he commented: "Wherever USA and the United Kingdom can act together, we double the impact of our policies upon the future of the 'free world'." American presence in Europe was a decisive factor in keeping the peace of the world. Britain's foreign policy must give vitality to every aspect of her strength.

He said that he wanted to discuss a fallacy which he believed to be "current and common". It was that Britain should look on her relations with Russia in terms of short-term policies alternating rapidly between toughness and conciliation.

He added: "That is wrong for one reason. Communist strategy is constant. Their aim is to overthrow the way of life which free men have chosen for themselves and to substitute their own. Their tactics are to undermine, to harry, to probe weaknesses everywhere and if necessary, backing up their probes with power."

In directing their efforts to the Congo, he said that the Russians had been utterly careless of the future of Africans and intended only to extend their influence into the new continent.

He added: "I am glad to say that, for the time being, they have been thwarted in that ambition, but it will need great vigilance to prevent them renewing that effort. So long as the communists act on the doctrine of Stalin, with force as a legitimate instrument of foreign policy, then communism must be militarily contained. We must be constant and determined in defence of the principles in which we believe and give ground nowhere."

He contended that two conditions should govern disarmament. The first was that a balance must be kept so that neither East nor West had an advantage over the other and there must be a balance in both nuclear and conventional weapons. Secondly, there must be inspection.

He said: "The Russians do not like the word 'inspection', but there should be verification to see that actual disarmament does take place.

"We must get back into conference. In spite of setbacks, we must persevere in disarmament. Today, we are keeping the peace by a balance of terror, because that is what life is. We must work towards keeping the peace by reason, because that is what life ought to be."

He emphasized that United Nations was no more and no less than what its authors chose to make it. They must, first of all, prevent the Russians from paralyzing it, and must buttress its authority in any way that was open.

He said: "If United Nations is to fulfil its true role in the world as an international Organization to keep the peace, it must give justice not only to small but also to large nations, which carry a great responsibility in the world."

Resolution On Foreign Policy:

The Conference then passed a resolution on foreign policy.

The resolution said: "This Conference, in endorsing the policy of the Government in the field of foreign affairs, recognizes the vital importance to peace of the closest co-operation in the relationship between the British Commonwealth and the Western allies, and applauds with pride the leadership shown by the Prime Minister, Mr. Macmillan, in his efforts to secure relief of world tensions by just and peaceful negotiation."

The Conference also accepted an addendum to the resolution, which stated: "And supports the Government in its realistic efforts to ensure maintenance of international law and order through the United Nations Organization."

Mr. H. Macmillan's Address:

The British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, in his address to the Conference on October 15, set forth Britain's policy towards the Soviet bloc.

He said: "We should be absolutely firm. We should not surrender. But we should try to damp down controversy.

"Nobody can doubt our earnest and honest desire for peace. But by peace we do not mean surrender to force; we mean peace with justice.

"We should try to encourage in every way we can a general amelioration of relations or, in the current cliche, a reduction of tensions.

"I believe that it is not only in the interests of Great Britain and the West, but in the interests of the world as a whole. For, after all, however far away it may be, we must look to the end.

"And how will the struggle end? It can end in only one of two ways. The first way, force, is no direct solution in the modern nuclear world. It does not end argument except in the sense that it ends the people who are arguing. It ends in mutual destruction.

"The second way is by negotiation leading, perhaps, to a gradual transformation of the situation. Given peace and time, we must believe in our ultimate success. For we believe that our way of life is better materially, morally and spiritually, and that, with peace and growing contacts between the two concepts, the faith that we hold must triumph.

"Mr. Khruschev thinks his way of life is better and that, given peaceful co-existence—perhaps of his own definition—it is bound to succeed without war. Mr. Mao Tse-tung and Mr. Chou En-lai do not agree with this view. They think it can be resolved by armed conflict. I lean, myself, towards the Russian as opposed to the Chinese view, but if we only think negotiation, peaceful co-existence and lowering of tensions feasible and right, how can we make progress? I must confess that the collapse of the May 'Summit' Conference was a grievous disappointment to me. I had worked hard enough for it, and it was a tragedy to see this dream melt away in an afternoon.

"Of course, the situation has substantially worsened since May. It would be foolish to deny it. It has been worsened by a new outburst of controversy, and by the use of the UN Assembly for propaganda purposes. It has worsened because negotiations have, in fact, been broken off. Nevertheless, our purpose must be to try to get back to the mood of last Spring. Negotiations on Germany and Berlin will have to be resumed."

Referring to the talks he had with Mr. Khruschev, he said: "I told him that the problems of Berlin and Germany must be handled in a way that does justice to the reasonable desires of the German people through negotiation and not by force. It is a potentially dangerous problem from the point of view of East and West alike. If we can have a 'Summit' for this as well as other purposes, and if my two partners, the Presidents of the United States and of France, agree, I am all for it. I have said so both privately and publicly. Indeed, all three Western Powers said it in their Joint Statement in Paris last May."

On disarmament, he said that progress had been disappointingly slow. He added: "The trouble is that discussions never get to grips. Plan succeeds plan, committee follows committee, but these conferences never seem able to cut the cackle and get to the rockets and whenever a Committee starts to go fairly well so far, the Russians have walked out of it. Our position is clear and simple. We do not want just to argue about disarmament. We want the nations to disarm. The broad problem of disarmament is discussed year by year by the Assembly in committee. That is right, for the whole body of United Nations has a continuing interest in this problem, which affects them all. But this discussion by nearly a hundred nations can only be in the most general terms.

"I think we must distinguish between principles and practical details. Principles can and ought to, be discussed and agreed in a group representing diverse interests and areas of the world. But when it comes to practical methods, these must be examined by people who know something about the arms in question, and how effective control of them can be achieved. Such a group must be small, efficient and experienced.

"The Soviets appeared either to reject or not to understand my proposal, but I will continue to do my best to make it clear to them. At any rate, I feel sure that if we are to make progress on disarmament, practical discussions of technical details must go hand-in-hand with broad discussions of principles.

"The Russians say they want general agreement on disarmament and that only after that agreement has been reached will they discuss control. They accuse us of saying that we want control but no disarmament. Of course, that is not our position. We want simultaneous disarmament and control, the two to go together at all stages. I do not despair. Surely disarmament, if it can be achieved, must be of equal interest to the Russian people as to us.

"In spite of the disappointments that we have had and the failure up to now to persuade the Soviets to accept our sincere proposals, we shall persevere."

Speaking of changes at home and abroad, he said: "The older ones among us have seen in our life-time startling changes. These changes are continuing at a tremendous pace. We have seen the Empire being transformed into a Commonwealth of free and independent nations. I cannot tell you how moving it was to me and how helpful, to find in United Nations so many leaders of Commonwealth countries and to profit by their experience and friendship.

"In Africa, British initiative has brought with it all the civilizing influences. In addition to establishing peace and order, it has developed industry, agriculture, transport and power. In certain areas—notably Kenya and the Rhodesias—many British people have settled. They have made these countries their permanent home and they have done so with the encouragement of successive British Governments. We have, therefore, obligations not merely of interest but of honour.

"But the very success of the pioneers has brought with it corresponding problems. With education and development there has grown new ambition and new political consciousness among the African people. We have, therefore, in the words of the resolution you carried on October 12, to see that in the march to self-government and legitimate rights are protected as well as legitimate aspirations fulfilled."

Referring to the Monckton Commission's report, he said: "The purpose of the Monckton Commission was to help us not to destroy, but to confirm and develop, the federal association between the three territories of Central Africa.

"The remarkable and outstanding feature of the report is the nearly unanimous acceptance of the need for such a federation and the tragedy that would be involved in its collapse.

"Not enough attention has been given to what is the main feature of the Monckton Commission report. The Government, therefore, will approach the review with the earnest hope that the Conference will find an agreed basis for continuance of a federal structure and with determination to carry out to the full our responsibilities and our pledges towards men of all races."

Discussing the neutral countries, he said that they were neutral "in the sense of not wishing to be involved in a clash between the Great Powers. They have an important part to play in the world and we have an important duty towards them. Yet, of course, by a strange paradox, this neutrality would be gravely threatened if it were not for the power of the West.

"I ask myself: how far would it be possible to sustain a neutral position in the world if it were not for NATO, S-EATO, CENTO and, above all, the Western determination and authority. Had NATO (which I was glad to have the chance of defending in the UN Assembly) not come into being, or were it now to be abandoned by USA, Canada, Britain, or France, what would be left of freedom and national independence?"

He added: "All developed countries have a moral obligation towards their less fortunate neighbours. Britain has a special duty, which she is manfully performing. It is a duty to Commonwealth countries which, although now independent, still require investment of money and men on a massive scale. Indeed, one of our main concerns in the management of our own economy is to guide it so as to be able to carry out these duties."

[The Monckton Commission's report published on October 11 said that the Rhodesian Federation "cannot in our view be maintained in its present form". The report has caused controversy with its suggestion that the British Government should declare its intention of permitting any of the Federation's territories to secede under certain conditions in the future. These territories are the Protectorates of Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and the self-governing colony of Southern Rhodesia.]

E. East-West Youth Congress: The following details of the East-West Youth Congress held in Copenhagen in the Summer of 1960, were released by UNESCO on October 7:

"About 450 young persons from Eastern and Western countries recently had a chance of exchanging opinions on the problems of East-West understanding during a fortnight's stay in Denmark, where they attended a Congress sponsored by the World Friendship Federation. There were delegates from India, Pakistan, Indonesia, Japan, Laos, the Arab countries and Africa south of the Sahara, USA and Canada, and many European countries, including Yugoslavia and Hungary.

"Prominent among European groups taking part were the members of the French 'Friends of UNESCO' clubs from 23 towns all over France. Their trip was organized by the French National Commission for UNESCO which, with National Commissions in Spain and Federal Germany, drew up a special pre-Congress programme for the young delegates.

"For the first 10 days the participants, whose ages ranged from 16 to 24 years, lived in the homes of Danish families in and around Copenhagen where they were able to get to know something about every-day life in the host country. During this period, they divided up into groups studying various aspects of Danish life: architecture, arts and crafts, agriculture, education, politics, industry, social welfare, etc.

"At the Congress itself, held during the last three days of their stay, participants were able to compare and comment on their impressions and experiences. Each morning they listened to lectures by speakers who were authorities on various aspects of East-West relations. They also heard reports prepared by study groups on the results of their investigations during the first ten days.

"Discussions revealed many misconceptions held about everyday life in each other's countries. The Japanese delegates, for instance, recounted the statement they had read that in Japan the rickshaw was the usual means of transport. In fact, they explained, this had not been true for the past 40 years and many Japanese today have never seen a rickshaw, except in a museum.

"On the last day of the Congress, the delegates spoke of educational problems in their own countries and made suggestions on how understanding between the East and West might be improved through exchanges of films, radio and TV programmes, publications and by the improvement of school text-books."

F. Training Of Spacemen For First Space Flight: The Vice-President of the Soviet Academy of Medical Sciences, Mr. Vladimir Timakov, told a news correspondent in Moscow on September 28 that "there are no more problems connected with space flights that cannot be solved by contemporary science."

Giving details of the training of future space travellers, he said that space flights could be controlled and there would be two sets of all instruments and three or even four important sets of apparatus.

A space flight candidate, he said, would be slightly below average height and slim because of limited space in the sealed cabin and because every ounce was important in space.

The space candidates' working programme covered about a month, during which he would study botany, medicine and electronics, geography and radio.

Special instruments would indicate how he felt at a temperature of 100 degrees below zero at an altitude of about 165,000 feet while wearing a special space suit.

Mr. Timakov believed that jet plane pilots made the best candidates, because extremely high demands, would be made on the candidates' nervous system and pills had been developed by Soviet chemists which were very effective against any irregularities of the nervous system.

Certain hours of each day during the working programme would be given over to sports, such as weight-lifting, volley-ball, gymnastic, swimming and tennis.

The candidate would also study the most important instruments to be installed in the space-ship. He would have an excellently developed muscular system, quick reaction, will-power and endurance and would be able to accustom himself "to most complicated conditions and be able to take quick decisions".

G. Nigeria Becomes Independent: Nigeria, the most populous country in the African continent, became independent on October 1 at a ceremony in the Federal capital, Lagos, when the Union Jack was lowered and the Nigerian green and white flag was raised.

Preceding the raising of the Nigerian flag, there was a spectacular tattoo attended by Princess Alexandra who represented her cousin, Queen Elizabeth II. She handed over to the Nigerian Federal Prime Minister, Alhaji Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, documents establishing the sovereignty of the newly independent State of Nigeria.

A message from Queen Elizabeth said:

"As you assume the heavy responsibility of independence, I send my good wishes for a great and noble future. It is with special pleasure that I welcome you to our Commonwealth family of nations.

"I am confident Nigeria will play a worthy part in the councils of the nations, and remaining true to the high ideals of friendship and co-operation which are so manifest today and will make a positive contribution to the peace and prosperity of mankind."

In her own speech on handing the documents to Alhaji Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, Princess Alexandra said that it was a source of great satisfaction to the people of Britain that they had contributed to the cultural and material progress which had brought Nigeria to nationhood.

Alhaji Sir Abubakar, after accepting the constitutional instruments from the Princess, said: "This great country of Nigeria, which has now emerged without bitterness or bloodshed, finds that she must at once be ready to deal with grave international issues".

It had originally seemed, he said, that Nigeria would move with quiet dignity to her place on the world stage, but "recent events have changed the scene beyond recognition so that we find ourselves today being tested to the utmost.

"We are called upon immediately to show that our claims to responsible self-government are well-founded and having been accepted as an independent State, we must at once play an active part in maintaining the peace of the world and in preserving civilization. I promise you we shall not fail for want of determination."

He added: "We come to this task better equipped than many. For this I pay tribute to the manner in which successive British Governments have gradually transferred the burden of responsibility to our shoulders.

"The assistance and unfailing encouragement which we have received from each Secretary of State for the Colonies and his intense personal interest in our development has immeasurably lightened that burden.

"All our friends in the Colonial Office must today be proud of their handiwork and in the knowledge that they have helped lay the foundations of lasting friendship between our two nations."

Viscount Head then presented his credentials to Sir Abubakar as Britain's first Commissioner to Nigeria.

He was the first envoy of any nation to make this gesture of recognition.

Sir James Robertson was sworn-in as Governor-General of Nigeria.

Sir James had held this post for five years and the Nigerian Government had asked him to stay on for several weeks until Dr Namdi Azikiwe took over.

First Cabinet:

It was announced in Lagos on October 1 that the Prime Minister of the Federation had taken over the new portfolio of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations in Nigeria's first Cabinet.

Alhaji Sir Abubakar made four major changes in his Cabinet. The former Minister of Lagos Affairs, Alhaji Muhammadu Ribadu, became Minister of Defence, while the former Minister of Pensions, Malam Musa Yaradu, took over the portfolio of Lagos Affairs.

The new additions to the Cabinet were: Mr. Jaja Wachuku, a 42-year-old Irish-trained lawyer and the first Nigerian Speaker in the Federal Parliament, who became Minister of Economic Development and Dr. T. O. Elias, another lawyer who was a research Fellow and lecturer at the Institute of Commonwealth Studies at Oxford University, who became Attorney-General and Minister of Justice.

Messages:

President Dwight D. Eisenhower of USA in a message congratulated independent Nigeria and said he was "confident that in the years to come Nigeria and the United States would stand as one in safeguarding the greatest of all bonds between them —their common belief in a free and democratic way of life."

The message said: "We in the United States have watched with sympathy and admiration the progress of the people of Nigeria toward the historic and welcome event which is the result of fruitful co-operation between the people of Nigeria and the Government and people of the United Kingdom."

It added that the "friendship which has marked the relations of our two countries" promised that "the United States stands ready to work with the people of Nigeria to reach the goals we all share of self-enlightenment and material well-being."

The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru welcomed the emergence of Nigeria as a sovereign independent nation as "indeed a happy day for Nigeria, for Africa and for the world".

In a message to the Nigerian Broadcasting Corporation on the occasion of Nigeria's Independence Day, Mr. Nehru said: "There is nothing more exciting today in the world than the emergence of independent nations in Africa."

In a separate message of greetings to Sir Abubakar Tafawa, he said: "We are confident that the bonds of friendship between India and Nigeria will be strengthened in the coming years and that the Federation of Nigeria will be able to contribute appreciably towards the promotion of world peace."

Constitutional Provisions:

Britain agreed on October 27, 1958, to grant full independence to Nigeria on October 1, 1960.

The announcement was made in London at the conclusion of a month-long Nigerian Constitutional Conference, where Nigerian leaders had worked out the future of their country with the co-operation of the British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Alan Lennox-Boyd.

The final communique issued in London on October 27, 1958 at the end of the Conference embodied a summary of the main items in the Conference's Report.

Notable features of the Report were the Conference's agreement on the following points:

(1) Safeguards for fundamental human rights should be entrenched in Nigeria's Constitution for Independence;

(2) Qualifications and disqualifications for Nigerian citizenship should be included in the Constitution, which should also prohibit deportation or exclusion from the country of any Nigerian citizen;

(3) After Independence, amendment of the entrenched provisions of the Federal Constitution should require at least a two-thirds majority of all members in each House of the Federal Legislature and the concurrence of each House in at least two of the self-governing Regions. Corresponding rules and safeguards should apply to entrenched provisions of regional Constitutions;

(4) The appointment, dismissal and discipline of judges in Native and Customary Courts should be divorced, as far as possible, from political and executive control;

(5) After Independence, there should be no regional representation in countries other than the United Kingdom;

(6) The Southern Cameroons would be welcome to join the Federation on a basis of equality with the other regions if they wished.

Special provisions were agreed for two minority areas.

In certain prescribed emergencies, the Federal Legislature was empowered to make laws for the peace, order and good government of any Region even if in normal circumstances, such legislation would be ultra vires the Federation.

The Report said that the Federal Prime Minister and the Regional Premiers endorsed the Secretary of State's statement that (a) in the Conference's task "everyone had made concessions, and there was no question of any person or party emerging as victor"; (b) throughout the talks the Conference had been conscious of all the dangers confronting the 'free world' today and recognized that there would be "mutual advantage to Britain and Nigeria in co-operating in the field of defence"; and (c) they had reached unanimous agreement on the facilities and help which each country would render the other after Independence on October 1, 1960.

Background:

Within the Nigerian Federation, two of the three Regions—the Eastern and Western—already had achieved internal self-government and the third, the Northern Region, achieved the same status in March, 1959.

With a total area of 373,000 square miles and a population of 35,000,000, the Federation of Nigeria is about four times as large as the United Kingdom, about one-eighth the size of the continental United States, or somewhat larger than Pakistan. The people are distributed among many tribes or tribal groups distinguished by customs, traditions and languages. The largest of these are the Hausa and Fulani, who inhabit the Northern Region, the Yoruba of the Western Region and the Ibos of the Eastern Region. There is considerable diversity even within these main language groups.

It was not until 1914 that the tiny British colony of Lagos, occupied in 1861 to stop slave exports from Nigeria and various Protectorates and spheres of commercial influence opened up by British traders and missionaries, were brought together under a single administration responsible to the United Kingdom. Representative parliamentary government in Nigeria stemmed from the small Lagos colony's Legislative Council of 1861. Subsequent constitutional developments were directed towards widening the competence of representative institutions and the closer association of Nigerians with the shaping of Government policy and the direction of executive action. These developments led by stages to the introduction, in 1946, of a Constitution which provided for a Central Legislature representing the whole territory and for Regional Councils for the Northern, Eastern and Western groups of provinces. The balance between authority at the Centre and in the Regions had been worked out in a series of constitutional conferences since 1946.

A quasi-federal Constitution, which increased regional autonomy, was introduced in 1951 after consultations at village, district, provincial, divisional, regional and territorial levels. The final recommendations were those of the Territorial Conference, consisting of 53 members of whom all but three were Nigerians.

By 1953 it became clear that the constitutional frame-work was too closely knit to allow the Regions to work together effectively. At a Conference in London in 1953, which was continued in Lagos in 1954, the representatives of the majority and principal minority Nigerian political parties were brought together, under the chairmanship of the UK Secretary of State for the Colonies, to consider further constitutional changes. The new Constitution for the country—known henceforth as the Federation of Nigeria—which came into force in October, 1954, increased regional autonomy and in particular, brought the Eastern and Western Regions closer to self-government.

At the 1954 Conference, it was agreed to review the working of the Constitution at a Conference to be held in 1956. This Conference, in fact, took place in 1957 and its most important immediate decision was the granting of internal self-government to the Eastern and Western Regions. The office of Prime Minister of the Federation was also established as a result of agreement reached at the 1957 Conference.

Nigeria's main political parties draw their strength largely from the Region in which they are organized. In the Northern Region, the Northern People's Congress (NPC) supports the Government in office and is led by the Sardauna of Sokoto, the Premier and Minister of Local Government. The United Middle Belt Congress and the Northern Elements Progressive Union are the most prominent among the Opposition parties. In the Western Region, the Action Group led by the Premier, Chief Awolowo, is the majority Party and the National Council of Nigeria and the Cameroons (NCNC) leads the Opposition. The NCNC is the majority Party in the Eastern House of the Assembly and its leader, Dr. Azikiwe, is the Premier. The Action Group leads the Opposition.

AFGHANISTAN

A. King Zahir Shah Visits UAR And Yugoslavia: King Mohammad Zahir Shah arrived in Cairo on October 22 on a 10-day State visit to the United Arab Republic.

He was welcomed at the airport by President G. A. Nasser.

On October 23 King Zahir Shah had his first talks with Col. Nasser.

After their meeting, UAR officials said that the two leaders reviewed the international situation and discussed problems in which their two countries were interested.

On October 25, King Zahir Shah and Col. Nasser attended a popular rally of the National Union at Cairo University.

In a speech on the occasion, Col. Nasser referred to the common bonds between Egypt and Afghanistan and said: "Our countries meet along the path of positive neutrality and non-alignment."

King Zahir Shah arrived in Damascus, capital of the Syrian Region, on October 26.

The following day (October 27) he visited Alexandria (in the Egyptian Region).

Joint Statement:

A Joint Statement issued by Col. Nasser and King Zahir Shah on October 31 said that both countries adhered to the law and spirit of the UN Charter and the resolutions of the Bandung Conference.

They said they believed that the only way to solve international problems was to create an atmosphere of good understanding and to conduct peaceful negotiations.

They also called for the independence of Algeria.

The Statement said that Col. Nasser had accepted an invitation to visit Afghanistan.

In Yugoslavia:

King Zahir Shah left Cairo on October 31 for Belgrade on a State visit to Yugoslavia. He was welcomed at the airport by President Josip Broz Tito.

Official talks between the two leaders began on November 1. They were reported to have discussed the role of uncommitted nations in reducing world tensions.

They also discussed the possibility of further development of political, economic and cultural relations between Yugoslavia and Afghanistan.

On November 4, King Zahir Shah went round one of the biggest factories in Yugoslavia producing electrical equipment.

The following day, he toured Slovenia.

On November 6, he arrived on Brioni Island to continue his talks with President Tito and other Yugoslav leaders.

On November 7, President Josip Broz Tito gave a farewell reception in honour of King Zahir Shah at Brioni, his Summer residence.

On the occasion, King Zahir Shah said that his talks with President Tito and other Yugoslav leaders had made it clear that the two Governments had identical views on most of the international questions, such as the safeguarding and strengthening of peace, elimination of world tensions, disarmament, the struggle against colonialism and the exploitation of under-developed countries.

King Zahir Shah and his party left Yugoslavia for home on November 7.

Communique:

A joint communique issued by King Zahir Shah and President Tito on November 7 at the end of their talks called for the quickest possible elimination of all traces of colonialism.

It expressed grave concern at the situation in Congo and at the continuance of the war in Algeria. The people of Algeria, it said, should be given the right of self-determination.

The two Heads of State also stressed the urgency of the acceptance of the principles of peaceful co-existence between countries with different ideologies.

They said that uncommitted nations could play an important and useful role in this respect.

The communique emphasized the need for disarmament and for economic aid to under-developed countries.

CHINA

A. Mr. Chou En-lai On World Situation: The BBC on November 3 presented a television interview in which the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, covered a wide range of foreign relations in his replies to questions put by a British journalist, Mr. Felix Green.

All questions were submitted in advance and the answers prepared and read.

One of the issues covered was the Sino-Indian border dispute. The following is the text of the question and the answer:

Question: Have you any comments you wish to make about the border dispute between China and India and the present discussions that are going on between the two countries?

Mr. Chou En-lai: "China has undelimited boundaries with many neighbouring countries in South-East Asia. This is a question inherited from history. The Chinese Government has always held that in accordance with the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence, settlements fair and reasonable to both sides should be sought through friendly consultations in a spirit of mutual understanding and mutual accommodation and that, pending an overall settlement of the boundary questions, the status quo should be maintained and not altered by one-sided action, let alone by force.

"The boundary questions between China and Burma and between China and Nepal could be and were settled precisely because both sides adopted such an attitude. If the Indian Government had taken a similar attitude, the boundary question between China and India could have been settled. But it is regrettable that the Indian Government not only wants to hold on to a big piece of territory which belongs to China, but has brought up territorial demands against China. What is more, Indian troops provoked armed clashes on the border. At the same time, an anti-China campaign was launched by forces in India who tried to use disputes with foreign countries for political aims at home. All this has brought about tensions between China and India for a while.

"In order to see various ways to a reasonable settlement of the boundary question, I went to Delhi in April, 1960 to meet Prime Minister Nehru. In spite of very great efforts on our part, the Indian side failed to respond accordingly. At present, Chinese and Indian officials are holding meetings. I hope they will achieve positive results.

"The traditional friendship of the 1,000 million people of China and India is a profound one. We are confident that the Indian people, like the Chinese people, hope that the boundary question between the two countries will be speedily settled. With continued sincerity and confidence as before, the Chinese Government will go on working tirelessly for a fair and reasonable settlement of the Sino-Indian boundary question."

In reply to another question, Mr. Chou En-lai said that relations between USA and China would not improve while the question of Formosa (Taiwan) remained unsolved.

Asked if any arrangements could be made between USA and China on which China would be prepared to compromise, he said: "There is only one way to settle this question. The US Government must agree to withdraw all its armed forces from Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits".

Asked if he thought there was any basis for Westerners believing that Russia was becoming apprehensive of China's ever-growing power as a world force, he said: "The socialist countries cannot possibly be apprehensive of each other. Their common interest is to help and support each other for a common upsurge in their national economy and continuously raise the material and cultural standards of their own peoples.

"The solidarity among all the countries of the socialist camp is unbreakable. What is more, the solidarity between the two great countries, China and the Soviet Union, is the bulwark of the defence of world peace. This solidarity is what the Western world fears most".

On Sino-British relations, he said: "The Chinese Government has always been willing to improve its relations with Britain and has made many efforts for this.

"To promote Sino-British relations is not only in the common interest of the two peoples, but would also help to safeguard world peace.

"In recent years, however, Sino-British

relations have not improved as they should have. This is because the British Government, while on the one hand recognizes the Government of the People's Republic of China as the only one which can represent China, on the other hand trails behind the United States in supporting the Chiang Kai-shek clique in United Nations.

"If this obstacle is removed, Sino-British relations will improve at once and trade and cultural exchanges between the two countries will also develop".

He said that China's rightful seat in United Nations was being usurped by USA "controlling United Nations and forcibly keeping there the Chiang Kai-shek clique".

He added that the fact that the seat was occupied by Chiang Kai-shek meant that the People's Republic of China's 650,000,000 population were being deprived of their legitimate right to be represented in UN.

He said: "United Nations must expel the Chiang Kai-shek clique and restore China's legitimate rights. Otherwise it will be impossible for China to have anything to do with the United States".

Asked about the future of Sino-Japanese relations, he replied: "This will depend on what attitude the Japanese Government adopts towards China.

"We are willing to look for a peaceful relationship in accordance with the Five Principles, provided the new Japanese Government no longer pursues a policy of hostility towards China, as did the Kishi Government and no longer obstructs and sabotages normal relations."

But the Japanese Cabinet, he said, still "sticks to the Japanese-United States Treaty of Alliance aimed at aggression against the Soviet Union and China."

He added: "In case any imperialist countries delude themselves into thinking that there is a chance to start a military adventure, I would like to re-affirm that the socialist camp is one integral whole. Provocation against one socialist country is provocation against China. In that event we would not sit idly by".

B. Official View Of War And Revolution: The Communist Party's theoretical mazazine, Red Flag, on October 31 published an article commenting on the fourth volume of the works of the Party's Chairman, Mr. Mao Tse-tung (see page 3592).

The article was signed by the magazine's Editorial Department, generally considered close to the Central Committee and was headed: "Basic conclusions on the experience of the victory in the Chinese people's revolution."

It said: "Marxist-Leninists have always considered that revolution cannot be imported or exported. To think the opposite is totally erroneous. No Marxist-Leninist Party favours socialist countries spreading revolution by starting a war."

It added that the Yugoslav revisionist clique "calumniated socialist countries by saying that the latter wanted to have recourse to war. These are simply absurdities destined to serve imperialism".

It said that the development of the revolutionary forces in various countries, including the creation of People's China, was the basic factor which had prevented imperialism from unleashing a new war and safeguarded world peace "by increasing the strength of the socialist camp led by the Soviet Union".

It added that the "socialist revolution cannot triumph simultaneously in all countries.... The people of the different countries will gain victory progressively and separately according to their own efforts and revolutionary preparations".

There were two distinct and successive stages in a revolution: (1) When the proletariat seized the State machinery by force by destroying the military apparatus of the bourgeoisie as in the Chinese revolution; and (2) When, after having assumed power, the proletariat engaged in building socialism through peaceful means.

Quoting Lenin and Mao, the magazine repeatedly insisted on the fact that revolutions in various countries must base support on the political aspirations peculiar to these countries in relation with the specific conditions existing in them.

It emphasized that the Chinese revolution constituted "the continuation of the (Soviet) October revolution" and would likewise be victorious as a result of the destruction of the military and bureaucratic machinery of the bourgeois State.

It said that strengthening of the socialist camp and development of the world people's revolutionary movement provided "a greater safeguard for world peace. It is absurd to say that world peace and world revolution are incompatible".

C. Land Reform In Tibet: Peking Radio on November 2 reported the successful completion of a land reform programme which, it said, had been launched 20 months ago in Tibet and announced new measures aimed at "raising the political consciousness" of Tibetan peasants.

It said that the land reforms had been introduced in March, 1959 after a rebellion by "upper strata Tibetans and reactionaries" had been smashed.

It added that the reform was now complete.

Consequently, the Committee responsible for the "Autonomous Region of Tibet" had decided to issue land titles to eligible categories of the Tibetan people.

It had also decided to pay for purchases of "surplus means of production" from serf-owners and their agents who had not taken part in the rebellion.

It believed that the decision would play an important part in "raising the peasants' political consciousness" and strengthening their initiative in agricultural production.

The measures were expected to lead to expanding mutual aid and co-operative movements in Tibet.

INDIA

SUMMARY: P-SP Executive Meeting; World Bank Loan; Trade Agreement With Czechoslovakia; LIC Annual Report For 1959; National Co-operative Farming Board To Be Set Up; States' Education Ministers' Conference; States' Governors' Conference.

A. P-SP Executive Meeting—Resolutions On Punjab, Tibet And Sino-Indian Border Dispute: The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party (P-SP) concluded its four-day session in New Delhi on October 31. The Chairman of the Party, Mr. Asoka Mehta, presided.

On the opening day (October 28), the National Executive adopted a resolution expressing its deep concern at the law and order situation in Punjab and called upon the Congress High Command to dismiss forthwith the "discredited and undesirable" Ministry headed by Mr. Pratap Singh Kairon.

The resolution said that it was extremely unfortunate that the border State was ruled by a clique, headed by the Chief Minister, which had reduced civil liberties to a "mockery" and whose contempt for all canons of democratic rule and public morality was matched only by its "all-consuming lust for pelf and power."

It regretted that this clique should have received "continuous protection" from both the Central Government and the Congress High Command against "serious complaints by individuals, demonstrations by the public, charge-sheets by members of the ruling party and last but not least, the strictures by the highest judicial tribunal in the land."

It said that all this only proved the extent to which "the powers-that-be are willing to go to protect their henchmen."

It added: "In the Punjab of today, decent elements in public life, having despaired of fair play and justice, have either retired or grown despondent and the possibility of suppressed discontent of the people assuming undesirable forms cannot be ruled out. In the atmosphere now prevailing, the only elements that can be expected to prosper would be essentially anti-social, anti-democratic and anti-national, whatever their masks and professions in public."

In conclusion, the Executive appealed "to democratic and patriotic people of Punjab not to give up their resistance to the Kairon Ministry. The Executive further considers it its duty to urge upon the Congress High Command not to sustain the discredited and undesirable Ministry in Punjab."

It also adopted a resolution urging bifurcation of double-member constituencies and decided to start preparations for the next General Elections by initially selecting 600 Assembly and 100 Parliamentary constituencies for intensive work.

"Intensive work" in the 600 Assembly and 100 Parliamentary constituencies would be reviewed after three months. A fresh batch of constituencies would be selected thereafter.

The party contested the last General Elections in 1,200 Assembly and 150 Parliamentary constituencies.

On October 29, the Executive discussed the Punjabi Suba movement.

Although no formal resolution was adopted, it was announced that the Executive felt that owing to the "suppression" of the Akali agitation an "explosive situation" was developing in Punjab.

The consensus of opinion in the Executive was strongly in favour of positive steps on the part of the Government to break the dangerous impasse, if need be by a meeting between the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, and Master Tara Singh. Attempts to suppress the movement, on the other hand, would only strengthen it.

Explaining his party's position on the issue, Mr. Asoka Mehta told newsmen that the P-SP supported the demand for a Punjabi Suba in principle, since this very principle had been uniformly conceded elsewhere in India. It was wrong to oppose the demand merely because its acceptance might place a particular community in a majority.

At the same time, it was for the Akalis to carry the people with them on this question. Any use of places of worship for political purposes would also be wrong.

Resolutions On Tibet And Sino-Indian Border Dispute:

The same day (October 29), the Executive adopted two resolutions—one on the Sino-Indian border dispute and the other on the proposed discussion of the Tibetan question by UN.

The resolution on the border dispute said: "The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party notes with surprise Prime Minister Nehru's characterization in United Nations of Chinese aggression on Indian soil as a 'controversy'. The cause of peace can never be served by such a compromising statement.

"The Executive is concerned over the suggestion made in some quarters that a ranking Asian statesman will soon be visiting New Delhi to mediate in the conflict between China and India, and that the mediation is likely to be on the basis of surrendering territories occupied by the Chinese in Ladakh in return for Chinese acceptance of the MacMahon Line.

"While the Executive welcomes any mediation that will lead to vacation of Chinese aggression in India, it would remind the Government of India that the people of India can never acquiesce in surrender of any of our territories for an agreement of doubtful value and devoid of honour to the country."

The following is the text of the resolution on the Tibetan issue:

"The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party welcomes the resolution on Tibet introduced in the General Assembly of United Nations by Malaya and Thailand. Violation of human rights and suppression of national freedom of the people of Tibet are obvious to all.

"The Executive is confident that United Nations, which has recently been strengthened by the admission of a number of nations that have just shaken off the shackles of colonialism will rally to the support of the people of Tibet.

"The Executive hopes that the Government of India will respond to public opinion in the country and support the resolution.

"The Government has recently clarified, in clear terms, its understanding of the status of Tibet before the Chinese overran the country. The wholly autonomous character of Tibet in the past and the inflexible opposition to Chinese rule today that the Tibetans have shown must inexorably determine India's policy.

"The Executive is happy that United Nations unanimously voted in favour of the early extinction of colonialism. The Executive expects our representatives to vote on the resolution on Tibet in a manner consistent with the stand against colonialism."

Acharya J. B. Kripalani Resigns:

On October 30, the National Executive accepted Acharya J. B. Kripalani's resignation from the Party with "great reluctance" and on the "promise" that it would "continue to receive his blessings and guidance".

A Press release issued by the Executive at the end of the day's deliberations said:

"The Executive had the benefit of the presence of Mr. Kripalani as well as of Dr. Prafulla Chandra Ghosh, senior leader of the party. The Executive unanimously requested Mr. Kripalani to withdraw his resignation. The Executive further appealed to Mr. Kripalani to bring his suggestions before the next meeting of the General Council or, if need be, of the Conference of the party.

"Mr. Kripalani reciprocated the warmth of feeling, but pointed out that he had remained in the party for a number of years, in spite of his persistent desire to resign from it, because he knew that the party had a splendid set of workers who against heavy odds had been working for the people. He has always been anxious to help and strengthen the party, but he finds himself increasingly out of tune with not just the policies of one party, but of all the political parties in the country.

"He hopes and earnestly desires that the P-SP will strive to make itself a party capable of meeting the gathering dangers to the country. He feels somewhat suffocated by being inside the party. He would not like to make himself responsible for the decisions of the party taken from time to time. He has long wanted his freedom and he would be able to help the party more from outside than by being in it.

"Mr. Kripalani assured the Executive that he would be available not only for consultations, but even for attending meetings of the Executive in future, if invited to do so and would be happy to help the party in whatever way possible in the coming months and years. The Executive with great reluctance had to accept the resignation of Mr. Kripalani. However, it is heartened by his promise that it will continue to receive his blessings and guidance."

B. World Bank Loan To ICICI: The Chairman of the Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation of India Ltd. (ICICI), Mr. G. L. Mehta, said in Bombay on October 28 that the World Bank had approved a loan equivalent to $20 million (about Rs. 10 crores) to the Corporation.

He said that, as in the case of the two earlier loans of $10 million each given by the Bank to the Corporation, the new loan would be used to meet the foreign exchange requirements of projects financed by ICICI.

He added that the $20 million in foreign exchange made available to ICICI through the first two World Bank loans had now been virtually exhausted and the Corporation had to obtain more foreign exchange if it was to continue its loan operations at the expected rate. The proceeds of the new $20 million loan would help the Corporation to meet the foreign exchange requirements of its borrowers for the next two years.

The Bank's loan was for a term of 10 years which might be extended to 14 years by agreement between the Bank and ICICI in respect of individual projects for which a longer period was appropriate. Interest would be applied to each portion of the loan at the Bank's current rate when such a portion was committed for one of ICICI's projects. Amortization of the loan would begin on November 1, 1963.

C. Trade Agreement With Yugoslavia: It was announced in Belgrade on October 25 that India and Yugoslavia had signed a Trade Agreement.

The Agreement was expected to step up trade between the two countries by 20 per cent in 1961.

An announcement on the Agreement said that a wider range of items was likely to be exchanged between India and Yugoslavia.

India's exports to Yugoslavia would include textiles, jute manufactures, leather goods, engineering products, textile machinery, sewing machines, cycles, films, iron and manganese ore and vegetable oils.

Exports to India from Yugoslavia would mainly consist of capital goods, chemicals, railway equipment, cables and a variety of engineering products.

D. Trade And Payments Agreement With Czechoslovakia: The Czech news agency Ceteka announced in Prague on November 3 that a three-year Trade and Payments Agreement between Czechoslovakia and India had been signed.

In addition, a Protocol on goods exchanged between the two countries for 1961 was also agreed upon. It provided for a 40 per cent increase in trade in comparison to 1960.

According to the Agreement, Czechoslovakia would deliver plants, machines, industrial equipment and consumer goods.

India would deliver iron and manganese ores, hides, spices, textiles, jute products and cocoa fibres.

The Agreement was signed for India by the Secretary in the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, Mr K. R. F. Khilnani, and Czechoslovakia's Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade, Mr F. Hamouz.

E. US Credit To Build Paper And Board Mill: The US Government announced on October 25 a credit of Rs. 20,000,000 (approximately $4,300,000) in favour of Seshasayee Paper and Board Co., Ltd., in Madras State.

The loan would be channelled through the US Export-Import Bank and would be used to help finance the construction of a paper mill at Erode.

The mill would use both bamboo and bagasse in its processes and its location at Erode would be near the sources of those raw materials. Plant equipment would include two paper-making machines with bleaching and other facilities.

The annual output was estimated at 20,000 tons of printing, writing and wrapping papers.

F. Soviet Union To Design Atomic Reactors: The Chairman of the Indian Atomic Energy Commission, Dr. H. J. Bhabha, told newsmen in Ottawa on November 5 that the Soviet Union had agreed to design natural uranium and fast breeder power stations for India.

Dr. Bhabha was in Ottawa to discuss the question of wider co-operation between Canada and India in the field of research and design of atomic plants.

He said that in purchasing uranium abroad, India was prepared to give a guarantee that it would be used only for peaceful purposes. She would, however, not accept inspection and controls which might tend to widen the gap between industrialized and under-developed countries.

He expressed the opinion that South-East Asia would also depend some day on nuclear power for fuel. In 10 years it would probably be cheaper to use nuclear power than conventional fuel.

G. Indian Oil Company To Purchase Russian Oil: It was made known in Bombay on November 5 that the Government-owned Indian Oil Company (IOC) planned to import one million tons (about 30 crore gallons) of petroleum products every year from the Soviet Union within three years.

A Press Note issued by IOC said that the Soviet Union had agreed to sell the petroleum products to India at the lowest world prices prevailing at the time of sale.

To begin with, IOC would import superior kerosene, jet fuel and high-speed diesel oil. It was originally announced that IOC would import only 300,000 tons of petroleum products annually for the next four years. It was now planned to import over 300,000 tons in the first year and to increase the pace of import to one million tons per annum within three years.

The purchases would involve no foreign exchange and all payments would be made to the Soviet Union in Indian rupees only.

H. LIC Report For 1959: The annual Report for 1959 of the Life Insurance Corporation released in Bombay on November 2 revealed a 25 per cent rise in the new business and a slight drop in the expense ratio.

It also showed a reduction in the renewal expense ratio from 15.46 per cent in 1958 to 12.92 per cent in 1959. The ratio of expenses to the total premium income dropped from 29.2 per cent to 28.7 per cent.

The Report, which had been adopted and submitted to the Government showed a 16 per cent increase in the business in force over the 1958 figure.

The total life business soared from Rs. 1,682 crores to Rs. 1,964 crores, covering seven million policies. The Corporation's total new business in 1959 amounted to Rs. 429 crores as against Rs. 345 crores in 1958, recording an increase of 25 per cent. The number of policies also showed an increase of 41 per cent over the 1957 figure.

Foreign business also showed a remarkable rise from Rs. 5.62 crores to Rs. 9.47 crores.

The overall sum assured per policy in India rose from Rs. 3,627 to Rs. 3,747. Outside India, the figure rose from Rs. 10,409 to Rs. 11,969.

The pattern, as related to different classes of insurance, showed a change. The Whole Life policies, which formed 7.98 per cent of the total business in 1958, rose to 8.47 per cent in 1959. Children's policies rose from 5.08 per cent to 6.99 per cent.

The Report noted that life insurance was becoming popular. Salary savings schemes were also becoming more popular, the Corporation having issued thereunder 84,776 policies assuring a sum of Rs. 21.89 crores in 1959 as against 52,738 policies assuring a sum of Rs. 13.93 crores in 1958.

The life fund increased from Rs. 447.90 crores to Rs. 495.25 crores and the premium income from Rs. 73.03 crores to Rs. 84.46 crores.

During 1959, claims inclusive of bonus additions amounted to Rs. 28.14 crores as against Rs. 25.05 crores for 1958.

Out of the investments in India in stock exchange securities to the tune of Rs. 393.28 crores, investments in the public sector, comprising Central and State Governments, a major portion of the approved securities, and shares in Government companies, amounted to Rs. 311.80 crores or 78.2 per cent of the total as against Rs. 288.12 crores or 76.1 per cent in 1958.

Investments in the private sector in debentures, shares of joint stock companies and approved securities amounted to Rs. 85.68 crores or 21.8 per cent of the total investments in India.

I. National Co-operative Farming Board Set Up: It was announced on November 6, that the Government of India had constituted a National Co-operative Farming Advisory Board with the Central Minister of Community Development and Co-operation, Mr. S. K. Dey, as Chairman.

The 24-member Board included the Deputy Minister of Community Development and Co-operation, Mr. B. S. Murthy, four Ministers from the States, four members of Parliament, five non-officials connected with co-operative farming, an executive member, an agricultural economist and one representative each of the Reserve Bank of India, the Planning Commission, the Ministry of Finance, the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Co-operation. The Additional Co-operation Commissioner would be the Secretary of the Board.

An official announcement said that the Board had been entrusted with the task of planning and promoting the programme of co-operative farming on a voluntary basis. It would review the progress and suggest modifications, if necessary. It would examine the question of securing people's participation in the programme and suggest arrangements for education and training of personnel required for implementing the schemes.

The terms of reference of the Board included organization of studies and schemes of research relating to co-operative farming, technical supervision and guidance and recommendations regarding financial assistance.

The Board would also co-ordinate inter-State activities and assist the State Governments and State Boards in formulating their scheme.

It would have an Executive Committee to review the programme of co-operative farming and ensure effective supervision and guidance. The Executive Committee would consist of eight members with the Deputy Minister of Community Development and Co-operation, Mr. B. S. Murthy, as Chairman.

J. Bhilai Rolling Mill Goes Into Production: The rail and structural mill of the Bhilai Steel Plant went into production on October 27 with its formal inauguration by the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru.

It was the third of the four rolling mills and one of the largest and heaviest units of the Bhilai works and took one year to complete.

As Mr. Nehru switched on a button fitted to his desk on the rostrum, the first consignment of beams manufactured at the project started moving out on railway wagons.

The mill had an annual production capacity of 365,000 tons. It would produce rails, both broad and metre gauge, components of railway sleepers and heavy structurals like beams, girders and angles. The mill incorporated advanced Soviet technological processes and methods of production.

With the completion of the rail and structural mill, the construction phase of the Bhilai Steel Plant reached its closing chapter. The last of the four rolling mills would be commissioned in January, 1961.

K. States' Education Ministers' Conference: The two-day States' Education Ministers' Conference began in New Delhi on November 4.

Inaugurating the Conference, the Central Education Minister, Dr. K. L. Shrimali, said: "The educational development of our country is a field of great opportunities and challenges, opportunities afforded by our democratic system of government and challenges thrown up by the tasks of national reconstruction."

He said that the Second Five-Year Plan, now drawing to a close, had marked a step forward in the expansion of educational facilities. Sixty per cent of the children in the age group 6-11, 22.6 per cent in the age group 11-14 and 12 per cent in the secondary stage were in school. In terms of numbers, these represented a very substantial increase during the Plan period.

He said that the work done already had only highlighted what was to be done in the immediate future.

He added that the Conference had assumed special importance since it was meeting at a time when the Third Plan was being finalized. The need for co-ordinated effort through mutual consultation became all the more urgent when the financial resources available for educational development were limited. It was necessary that a social climate should be created in the country so that the whole society became education-conscious and all persons made sacrifices for the education of the younger generation.

He said: "What we lack in financial terms has to be made up by efficient and effective organization, creative thinking leading to improved and dynamic practices in schools and educational administration and, above all, whole-hearted co-operation, interest and support from the community."

Listing the important measures needed for the success of the programme of compulsory primary education, he said that there should be a sustained campaign for educating public opinion so that parents might send their children, and particularly daughters, to school. During the Second Plan, effective enrolment drives had been organized by the States of Bihar, Orissa and Rajasthan.

Another important measure was assistance to poor and needy parents by the provision of school uniforms, text books and school meals for children.

He added that the Central Education Ministry was making a careful study of this problem and would soon propose suitable measures to produce inexpensive and durable text books through private enterprise, if possible, and through Government agencies, if necessary.

The third and most important part of the programme was the recruitment of teachers. He said that in order to attract the right kind of teachers and keep them contented, it was of utmost importance that every effort should be made to improve their conditions of service. It was gratifying to note that most of the States had been able to agree to the Central Ministry's suggestion that the minimum basic salary of a trained and untrained teacher should be Rs. 50 and Rs. 40 per month, respectively. He appealed to the States to find ways and means to extend dearness allowance benefits to all teachers to the same extent as in the case of Government servants.

Report On Women's Education:

The first Report of the National Council for Women's Education was presented to the Conference on November 4.

The Report, covering the period September, 1959 to October, 1960, outlined the special programme drawn up for the expansion and improvement of education of girls and women. A Sub-Committee of the Council drew up a comprehensive programme for making available increased facilities such as quarters for women teachers, scholarships and stipends for girls and women teachers, village allowance to teachers in rural areas, condensed courses for training women teachers and free tuition to certain categories of girls and free or subsidized transport.

It stated that the Central Education Ministry had proposed the following schemes during the Third Five-Year Plan on the estimated outlay of Rs. 17 crores:

(1) Special programmes for expansion of girls' education and training of women teachers at the elementary stage—outlay Rs. 11 crores;

(2) Special programme for expansion of girls' education at the secondary stage —outlay Rs. 5 crores;

(3) Establishment of a National Institute for the higher education and training of women—outlay Rs. 1 crore;

(4) Scheme to provide financial assistance for putting up buildings for setting up industrial training centres—outlay Rs. 58-80,000.

Besides the estimated allocation of Rs. 17 crores, the University Grants Commission had, subject to availability of funds, decided to earmark Rs. 2 crores for the construction of hostels for girls in colleges. The Central Social Welfare Board had also set apart Rs. 3 crores for condensed educational courses for adult women. In view of the reduced scale of special programmes, the Report stated that it would not be possible to take adequate measures for overcoming the difficulties relating to women and girls' education unless their specific needs were duly taken into account in the general programme.

Recommendations:

On November 5, the Conference recommended that the programme of compulsory primary education, improving the pay-scales of school-teachers, promoting national consciousness among students and the propagation of Hindi should be speeded up.

It agreed that top priority should be given to implement the constitutional directive on primary education and that there should be a school within accessible distance from the home of every child by the end of the Third Five-Year Plan.

It decided to appoint an expert committee to examine the question of stimulating national consciousness among students and to make appropriate recommendations.

It also recommended that the triple-benefit scheme of provident fund-cum-insurance-cum-pension on the pattern adopted in Madras State should be introduced for primary teachers in all States and that the children of all primary teachers should receive free education in schools.

Reviewing the programme of primary education during the Third Plan period, it recommended that every State should enact a comprehensive and up-to-date law for the enforcement of compulsory primary education. The Delhi Primary Education Act, 1960, might be taken as a basis for consideration in this respect. Efforts should also be made to extend amenities and inducements such as free books, writing material and mid-day meals to needy students.

Lack of funds should not be allowed to impede the implementation of the programme and necessary financial assistance would be given to the States to meet any short-fall.

It also recommended that the State Governments should take steps to open schools in all villages. Special attention should be paid to increase the enrolment of girls and the children of backward communities. To achieve this end, the resources of the community should be mobilized fully.

Adequate funds for the special programme in the expansion of girls' education should be made available to the States and the programme should be included in the Centrally-sponsored sector with arrangements for grant-in-aid to State Governments on a 100 per cent basis outside the ceiling that might be fixed at the State level.

L. States' Governors' Conference: At the annual Conference of the States' Governors which began in New Delhi on November 8, the economic situation in the country and the Third Five-Year Plan constituted the major topics of discussion.

In his inaugural address, the President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, appealed for national unity in the context of the recent events in Assam and Punjab. He urged that the present linguistic controversies would disappear if a broader view was taken of these problems.

He referred to the law and order situation in Punjab and Assam and expressed the hope that this would improve. He underlined the importance of popular confidence in the administration and morale of the services.

Turning to economic matters, he referred to the unemployment situation in the country and stressed the need for promoting the economic development of the border areas.

Mr. J. Nehru's Address:

On November 9, the Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru, reported to the Conference a steady build-up of India's armed forces along the northern border.

In his 75-minute review of the international situation, he said that further encroachments by the Chinese had stopped and it could now be said with reasonable hope that there would be no further incursions in the future.

He said that the progress of the defence build-up and the new net-work of communications was satisfactory. Some of the projects were even ahead of schedule.

To a question whether there would be piece-meal settlement of India's border dispute with China or there would be an over-all solution as India desired, he made it plain that the dispute could not admit of any piece-meal settlement nor could it be treated piece-meal.

He said that it was a vital question as Indian territory was involved and as such there could be no piece-meal settlement.

He deplored the recent remarks of the Chinese Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai, charging India with intransigence and said that these remarks were utterly unwarranted. In this context, he referred to the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev's secret speech to the World Communist Parties at Bucharest where he had charged the Chinese communists with turning "friends into enemies" by their conduct, particularly towards India.

Mr. Nehru ridiculed reports which suggested that the Burmese Premier, U Nu, was coming to India to mediate in the India-China border dispute. It was unfair to interpret the visit so. He said that U Nu was a good friend and that he was coming here to meet a friend.

He referred to the talks going on between Indian and Chinese officials in Rangoon on the border question and said that India was prepared to negotiate on the question and that she was not itching for a fight.

He added that despite certain difficulties, India's relations with Pakistan were definitely improving.

At the request of Dr. Prasad, the Punjab Governor, Mr. N. V. Gadgil, gave his assessment of the situation in Punjab vis-a-vis the Akali agitation for a Punjabi Suba.

He emphasized that the Punjab Government would be firm and that there was no question of holding talks with anyone on the Punjabi Suba. There would be no further division of Punjab.

He said that law and order would be maintained in the State with the utmost moderation under the circumstances and suggestions on the implementation of the Regional Formula considered.

He reported that the Government's recent announcement on its language policy had caused confusion in the Akali ranks where there had been a split. Out of a total of 21,000 Akalis in jail, over 14,000 had been released on their either tendering apologies or declaring that they were dissociating themselves from the agitation. There were now only 6,000 Akalis in jail.

He said that the State Government was ready to meet any situation created by the advertised fast of the Akali leader, Sant Fateh Singh. According to his information, it was being undertaken because Master Tara Singh had refused to go on fast himself.

He told the Conference that there was no question of allowing anyone to see Master Tara Singh in jail. He said that the Akali leader's detention order had been upheld by an Advisory Board consisting of one High Court Judge and two retired District Judges. He disclosed that the findings of the judicial inquiry into the Bhatinda Jail firings would be submitted soon.

He added that while combating the Akali agitation and maintaining law and order, the Punjab Government was also trying to solve the language issue. It had declared that there would be a thorough implementation of the Regional Formula, including the language provisions in it. He pointed out that the Ordinance on the use at district level of Punjabi in Gurmukhi script and Hindi in Devanagri had to be delayed because the Centre's sanction had not been received. Immediately after the sanction, the Ordinance would be issued. He said that the Government had been compelled to meet the Akali challenge, which had created tension among the Hindus and Sikhs.

The Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, spoke on the general law-and-order situation and asked the Governors to take a greater interest in the problems of linguistic minorities in the States so that they were given a fair deal. He expressed his satisfaction at the overall law-and-order situation.

Both Mr. Nehru and Pandit Pant emphasized the need for a catholic outlook on the language question. To win their confidence, the minorities had to be treated generously. They asked the Governors to use their influence with the State Governments to see that full justice was done.

There was no proposal at the Conference to amend the Constitution to vest the Governors with special powers in respect of the minorities. There appeared to be general agreement that the Governors' influence with the State Governments could ensure fair action by the Governments for this.

The Assam Governor, Gen. S. M. Shrinagesh, gave an appraisal of the situation in Assam and said that while the situation there had improved, tension was still prevailing. He attributed this to the language trouble.

He said it was his impression that the people of the hills wanted a separate State and that they were dissatisfied with the language formula. He added that the situation in the Naga areas was steadily improving after the decision to create Nagaland.

He indicated that the Chief Minister, Mr. B. P. Chaliha, was trying to get the Official Language Bill, recently passed by the State Assembly, suitably amended so that a broad agreement on the language question could emerge. That was why the Governor's assent to the Bill had been delayed.

M. Jammu And Kashmir National Conference: The 22nd annual session of the Jammu and Kashmir National Conference began in Baramula on October 8.

The Kashmir Prime Minister, Bakshi Ghulam Mohammed, called on Pakistan to vacate, without further delay, the aggression she had committed against Kashmir in 1947 and reciprocate the "magnificent gesture of our country" in signing the Indus Canal Waters Treaty.

Presiding over the Conference, he characterized the Treaty as a "happy development towards more friendly relations between the two countries."

On the Chinese threat from the north, he said that it was an unhappy development and called for maximum vigilance on the part of the people. He said that any attempt to disturb the solidarity of the people would directly assist the enemy by weakening the will of the people to resist new dangers.

Referring to the proposal for a Vishal Himachal, he said that it was a sinister suggestion made by reactionary elements in Jammu Province for merging Jammu and Kashmir with Himachal Pradesh. He asserted that the suggestions for a Kashmir plebiscite and Vishal Himachal, emanating from two different sources, bore a striking resemblance to each other because, in his view, both would result ultimately in disrupting the territorial integrity of the State. He announced the Conference's firm opposition to both and declared that to uphold the principle of unity and integrity of the State and to preserve communal harmony, the people of the State would not consider any sacrifice too great.

Praising the country's foreign policy of non-alignment pursued "under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Nehru," he said that it had yielded positive results. That was reflected in the growing awareness among the Asian nations of the need to keep themselves aloof from military alliances and Power blocs.

He said that Kashmir's accession to India was a logical sequence of the people's advance towards secularism and democracy and a vital decision to that effect had been taken by the people after mature consideration. He said that the Constituent Assembly was convened to give the verdict of the people's representatives on fundamental issues and to frustrate the attempts of interested parties to perpetuate uncertainty and instability.

He added: "The unity of the people of Jammu, Kashmir and Ladakh has been the sheet-anchor of our policies and any attempt to break this unity is considered by us as a challenge to the basic objectives for which we have consistently fought."

He was highly critical of the Democratic National Conference which, he said, was gathering round itself opportunistic and disgruntled elements under the guise of forming an Opposition party. He said that though it had been in existence for three years, the party had failed to gain the people's support due to lack of a positive programme. He accused its leaders of resorting to cheap and misleading slogans with a view to creating confusion among the people. These underhand means, he said, had caused the defection of several prominent leaders from the party.

He said that the National Conference had to be revitalized and new blood infused in it. He stressed the need to tone up the administration so that the implementation of the Third Five-Year Plan would be smooth and quick. He wanted the party to prepare itself for the next General Elections and stressed the need for unity in its ranks for the purpose. He particularly mentioned youth and women among the sections to be activized and brought into the organization in larger numbers. He added that labour must also pull its weight in the affairs of the National Conference.

Resolution On Third Plan:

On October 9, the Conference adopted a resolution expressing support for the economic policies envisaged in the State's Third Five-Year Plan.

The resolution said that undivided attention would have to be paid to reorganizing the rural economy in the State on which the majority of the people subsisted at present.

This called for not only positive measures for increasing the agricultural production by further expansion of irrigation facilities and application of scientific cultivation, but more concerted efforts to extend the scope of agricultural operations to cure the State's agrarian economy of its heavy incidence on land.

It urged that the immense power potential of the State should be systematically harnessed.

While recognizing the role of the Government in initiating various programmes, it felt that the success of these efforts would largely depend upon the effective response that these programmes could evoke among the people.

It also urged the Planning Commission to show particular understanding and sympathy of the special problems facing the State and to extend all possible help.

Working Committee Personnel:

On October 17, the President of the National Conference, Bakshi Ghulam Mohammed, announced the personnel of the 15-member Working Committee of the Party.

They are: Bakshi Ghulam Mohammed (President), Bakshi Abdul Rashid (General-Secretary), Mr. Baghat Chajuram, Mr. Shamlal Saraf, Mr. Amarnath Sharma, Mohammad Ayub Khan, Sardar Kulbir Singh, Kunwar Sagar Singh, Abdul Gani Goni, Ghulam Mohammad Rajpuri, Mr. Shamsuddin, Mr. Ghulam Nabi, Sogami Kushak Bakula, Master Ghulam Ahmed and Master Hemraj Jandial.

N. Chief Of Air Staff Passes Away: The Chief of Staff of the Indian Air Force, Air-Marshal S. Mukherjee, died in Tokyo on November 8 due to accidental choking of the wind-pipe by a piece of meat.

Air-Marshal Mukherjee had arrived in Tokyo aboard Air-India's Boeing, Annapurna, on a proving flight in preparation for the inauguration of India's jet service early in 1961.

He was the first Indian officer to take over command of the IAF on April 1, 1954.

INDONESIA

A. Contracts For Oil Concessions: The Government on November 1 published a Bill turning over the entire oil industry to State companies or contractors nominated by the Government.

The Bill, called the Oil and Natural Gas Bill, stipulated that "oil and natural gas extraction can be conducted only by the State."

A written explanation of the Bill said that the present oil concessions which were based on Netherlands Indies mining laws, were no longer valid "because those rights and authorizations—as stated in the Indonesian Republic's political manifesto—are no longer in conformity with Indonesian thinking".

It said that exploration, refining, transportation and sale of oil must also be conducted solely by Government firms.

But, the Minister for Basic Industries and Mines may appoint another party as contractor for a State company if the work cannot yet be done by that State company.

"In the formulation of an agreement between a State company and a contractor, the State company must hold firmly to the guidance and directives of the Minister.... Mining concessions based on Dutch mining laws held by foreign oil companies are against the Indonesian constitution.

"It will be impossible for foreign companies to get mining concessions in Indonesia any longer. Only State companies will be allowed control of mining areas in Indonesia, and even their rights will be much different from rights under old concessions.

"However, because oil exploitation requires capital and experts, within these regulations foreign companies will be given a chance to work in Indonesia as contractors for State companies under satisfactory conditions."

The Standard Vacuum, Caltex and Shell companies control extensive oil-fields in Sumatra and Borneo.

LAOS

A. Premier's Pact With Pathet Lao: Peking Radio reported on November 2 that a Committee for the "unification" of Laos had been formed through negotiations between the Prime Minister, Prince Souvanna Phouma and the Pathet Lao leader, Prince Souphanouvong.

The Committee was formed on October 31 and the two leaders were elected honorary Chairmen.

The Radio said that an appeal had been issued by the Committee in which it "called upon the Laotian people to oppose foreign intervention".

The appeal said that "it would oppose foreign intervention and the activities of the rebels (Gen. Phoumi Nosavan's group) so that the Laotian people could strive for the country's unity and thorough national harmony." It also charged the rebels of trying to split the country.

It was officially announced on November 4 in Vientiane that Prince Souvanna Phouma and Prince Souphanouvong had jointly formed a new party to forge "peace, neutrality, concord and unity".

The party, which called itself "the organization for the construction of peace, neutrality, concord and unity," had a 39-man Central Committee, including members of the Pathet Lao movement and politicians known for their progressive leanings. The former President of the National Assembly, Mr. Phong Phongsavan, became President of the Party.

In a broadcast on its policy statement, it said that its programme was to unite Laotian patriots against foreign interference and disintegration of the country by supporters of the ousted "strong man" Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, to strengthen the unity of the Kingdom in neutrality, and to uphold religion, the monarchy and the Constitution.

Meanwhile, the Rightist rebels, led by Gen. Nosavan, ignoring the cease-fire call of October 1 (see pages 3599 and 3600) continued to hold out at Savannakhet.

LEBANON

A. Arab Petroleum Congress: The second Arab Petroleum Congress opened in Beirut on October 17. About 500 delegates from several countries attended.

The Lebanese Minister of Economy, Mr. Suleiman el Ali, was elected Chairman of the Congress.

Addressing the opening session, Mr. Ali said that the purpose of the Congress was to create an atmosphere of co-operation between the participating countries and the oil companies, so that oil might become a source of prosperity instead of a cause of trouble.

The Head of the Petroleum Section of the Arab League, Mr. Mohammad Salman, said that the relations between the oil companies and the Arab peoples should be based on economic justice so that the Arabs received their proper share of wealth, while the companies maintained a reasonable profit.

He told the Congress that the Arabs would insist on being consulted about the price of oil. He criticized the Western oil companies for cutting the price of crude oil without consulting the Arab Governments and asked them to take note of the bitterness of Arab public opinion towards the attitude of defiance displayed by them.

The day's meeting was described as stormy, with the Soviet Union defending her entry into the commercial oil market and Saudi Arabia accusing American companies of defrauding her of her rightful revenues.

On October 20, the Saudi Arabian delegate, Sheikh Abdullah Tariki, alleged that ARAMCO had caused his country to lose $5,500,000,000 over the last seven years.

He charged US oil companies operating in the Middle East with concealing from the Arab Governments information which "would enable the Arab countries to defeat US manoeuvrings over price".

Replying, the ARAMCO delegate, Mr. R. I. Brougham, bluntly called this figure "pure invention" and the charges against his company "absolutely without foundation."

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Evangilor Gurov, then took the floor to switch the argument back to the Soviet oil issue, and in a half-hour speech defended Soviet commercial policy and attacked the monopolist companies.

He started by claiming that his country had in the past been a big supplier of oil to Western Europe, and had provided 14.3 per cent of their imports in 1930-33, and at one point 19 per cent. In 1956-59 the percentage had been 4.4. From these figures, he said, it was clear that there was no question of Soviet dumping.

He added: "All we are doing is resuming our legitimate place among exporting countries".

He declared that the Soviet Union had only lost her position because of war and industrial reconstruction, and now she had returned to the market. The Arab countries had no reason for disquiet as world consumption was constantly rising.

On the charge that Soviet oil was sold at below world prices, he claimed that there were in fact no world prices except for those arbitrarily fixed by the eight great international companies. Outside these, he said, there were many smaller companies which sold at a different price. But the fact that the eight controlled 88 per cent of daily production outside USA and the Soviet bloc countries enabled them to alter prices at their leisure and unchallenged.

The Soviet Union, he said, did not want to destroy the world free market in oil, but wanted only to sell at the best legitimate price. As for the Western companies operating in Arab countries, he said, they made fabulous profits from oil which did not belong to them. The present 50-50 sharing arrangement which the oil-bearing countries wanted changed was "unjust", and constituted "a grave obstacle to the economic evolution of the Arab countries."

The Saudi Arabian delegate, Sheikh Abdullah Tariki, on October 19 suggested that international oil companies changed their methods of calculating transportation costs. He said that these methods had "unjustly penalized" Middle East Governments by more than $2,500,000,000 during the past six years.

The crux of his argument was that oil companies at present equalized the price of Venezuelan and Middle East oil on the basis of its delivery at New York.

He said: "This system is not realistic, as the New York market accounts for only 8 per cent of Middle East production, whereas Western Europe accounts for 55 per cent. It is much more logical and realistic to make London the point of equalization since Britain is the largest consumer of petroleum in Western Europe."

In his paper on the prices of crude oil and petroleum products, he demanded that producing-countries should have a say in fixing prices.

He also suggested that producing-companies should become independent of parent companies by buying up their shares and setting up headquarters in producing-countries. He said that his demand was based on the fact that producing and parent companies in Saudi Arabia were making profits which she was not sharing.

A Press communique from the British Petroleum (BP) Company informed the Arab Oil Congress on October 21 that BP was ready to reach understanding with oil-producing States about any future change in oil prices.

Observers believed that the communique indicated that BP was taking a different attitude than other international oil companies, which seemed to be following a wait-and-see policy on the price-change question.

A BP spokesman told newsmen: "My Company's view-point is that there can be and should be continual and close exchange of information between our Company's management and the representatives of the Government.

"We are convinced that rapid and confidential exchanges would be necessary when the time came for any upward or downward price-change."

Resolution On Price-Cuts:

Heads of Arab delegations informed the final session of the Congress on October 22 of a joint resolution they had adopted on oil company price-cuts and other matters of common interest.

The resolution was adopted at a closed-door meeting of the chief delegates from all participating Arab Governments and the three oil-producing territories of Qatar, Bahrein and Kuwait.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The preamble to the resolution expressed the renewed determination of the Arab Governments to develop the Arab oil industry for the maximum increase of the national revenue of Arab countries.

It said that the delegation leaders had agreed on the following four points:

(1) The Congress supported the Arab countries' demands and their efforts to improve the terms of petroleum concessions. It expressed the hope that the oil companies would respond favourably to such a request in order to ensure fruitful co-operation between them and the Governments in the common interest of the companies, the Governments and the consumers;

(2) The Congress condemned the oil companies' decision to reduce the price of crude oil and its derivatives without the consent of Governments of the Arab oil-producing countries;

The Congress supported the position of these Governments in their refusal to accept such a reduction;

(3) The Congress recommended to the Governments of Arab countries that they re-double their efforts to encourage technical and legal education in every way so that their countrymen would be able to take part in the activities of the Oil Congress;

(4) The Congress decided that henceforth it would meet once a year in October. The next Congress, which would be the third, would meet in Cairo.

The first and most important resolution passed at the session announced that the Arab Governments would call for a change in the present contracts.

This warning was issued directly and indirectly several times during the session of the Congress.

The American legal adviser to the Saudi Arabian Government, Mr. Frank Hendrix, said that legally, the Arab countries could not be held indefinitely to the clauses of their agreements with the Western oil companies.

This was regarded as a warning that Saudi Arabia at least would be prepared to cancel the old oil concessions granted originally by King Abdel Aziz Ibn Saud 30 years ago.

Sheikh Abdullah Tariki (Saudi Arabia) referring to the enormous profits made by the Western oil companies in the past, said that they would not be made to return any of their ill-gotten gains, but that the major oil companies should give up their affiliated or associated companies. The latter should be turned into independent producing-companies, conducting their operations in the interests of both the stock-holders and the Arab countries.

He added that the oil companies should be controlled by a Board of Directors made up of representatives of the stock-holders and the Arab countries concerned, and should have their headquarters in the Arab country where their oil deposits were located.

Communique:

A communique issued at the end of the Congress on October 22 said that the delegates supported the attitude of the Governments of oil-producing countries in refusing to recognize recent reductions in prices by international oil companies.

It resolved to support the Arab Governments' demands and efforts aimed at improving terms of oil concessions.

It expressed the hope that the oil companies would respond to these demands to secure continuance of fruitful co-operation in the interests of Governments, companies and consumers.

It denounced the companies for reducing prices of crude oil and petroleum products without the approval of the Governments of the Arab producing-countries.

The following are extracts from a news despatch from Beirut published in The Times, London, on October 23:

"A preface to the resolutions emphasized the importance to the Arab producer-countries of a consolidated petroleum policy. In spite of remarks in the closing speeches about the Congress opening the door of mutual understanding between the companies and the host Governments, the meetings do not seem to have accomplished much in the direction of closing what Dr. Mohammed Salman, Secretary-General of the Congress, referred to as the 'gap of discord'.

"Some delegates are of the opinion that the Congress was an opportunity lost; this, they believe, was due mainly to poor tactics on the part of the Arab oil nationalists, headed by Sheikh Abdullah Tariki, Director of the Saudi Arabian Petroleum Affairs Department. He erred, they think, in propagandizing for a wider Arab audience by introducing the allegation that in the past seven years the principal companies had made five and a half billion dollars extra profit which they had concealed from the Arab Governments so that they would escape the provisions of the 50-50 profit-sharing Agreement.

"The companies' answer was to describe Sheikh Tariki's charge as a mirage, to emphasize that profits are set in the market place according to supply and demand, and to offer to provide—as presumably they have been doing for years—all the evidence needed to refute a contention based on fiction and respective computation of an assumed selling price formula.

"It is doubtful whether this reasoned refutation was any more acceptable to the Arabs than were Sheikh Tariki's charges, to the companies, and in the irritation stirred up by the exchange, there was less chance of fruitful discussions in hotel suites if not in the Congress hall. The companies' representatives seem divided, however, on how far Sheikh Tariki believed in his allegations. Is he a fanatic or is he intelligent and crafty? The answer to this question is important in the evolution of the companies' relationships with the Governments.

"What emerged most clearly from the Congress was the insistence of those Governments on higher revenues (these will total this year about £500,000,000, roughly a seven-fold-increase over the past decade) and on extended co-partnership with the companies, which, Sheikh Tariki suggested, should sever direct financial ties with the parent concerns in USA and Britain. Coupled with this is a demand for consultations with the Governments before the companies alter posted prices —though the climate of the Congress was not such as to foster any hope that the Governments would ever actually agree to anything except increases.

"The Arabs are now obviously looking towards the Organization of Petrol Exporting Countries (OPEC) formed in Baghdad in September, 1960 with the aim of introducing pro-rationing.

"Sheikh Tariki said in an interview that he hoped it would start functioning 'within a few months'. While there is general agreement that it is a sensible move, such information as was circulating privately among delegates during the Congress indicated Arab reservations on the precise identity of views between its members—especially if they are subject to real strain —and particularly on the real aims of the Venezuelans, who are reliably said to be irked by sales of Middle East crude oil in markets geographically more accessible to them.

"In this connexion, the Arabs gave no signs of being really convinced—though this again may have been tactical—of the fact that the posted rates were cut and further reductions are expected, because the prices which the companies have been obtaining over the past few years had been comparatively so low that payments handed over to the producer-countries under the 50-50 arrangement have been artificially high.

"Indications of a general agreement were discernible, however, on the validity of the host Government's request for being taken into policy decisions, especially those concerning the parent companies, which one Arab delegate described privately as being like Gods, looking down from their remote Board-rooms in New York and London. A more imaginative approach may, however, be needed if the companies are to succeed in identifying themselves sufficiently with local interests to cut the feet from under the nationalist extremists.

"To judge from this Congress, the companies' patience will need to be of no less magnitude than the Middle East oil reserves and liable certainly to a much higher rate of utilization."

NEPAL

A. King Mahendra Visits Britain: King Mahendra and Queen Ratna arrived in London on October 17 on a three-day State visit to Britain. This was the first State visit a monarch of Nepal had ever made to Britain.

They were welcomed in London by Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, the Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, and members of his Cabinet. Also present to greet the Royal guests were Princess Margaret, her husband, Mr. Anthony Armstrong-Jones, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duchess of Kent and Princess Alexandra.

The party drove in state through gaily-decorated streets, while a Royal salute of 41 guns was fired from Hyde Park and the Tower of London.

During the afternoon of October 17, King Mahendra laid a wreath on the grave of the Unknown Warrior in Westminster Abbey.

Later, the King and Queen went to St. James' Palace, where in the Throne Room they received an address of welcome from the citizens of London.

The address said: "We are proud of the close association which has existed for many years between our countries both in peace and during the unhappy periods of war. The hopes of our people for enduring peace are, we know, sincerely shared by Your Majesties and your subjects.

"In a shrinking world where nearly all problems are of common concern and neither East nor West can prosper in isolation, the people of London, in offering their respectful good wishes for the continued health and well-being of your Majesties and of all the members of your Royal family, would also express their sincere hope that the years of your Majesty's reign may continue to be attended by peace, prosperity and happiness not only among your own people but throughout the peoples of the world."

The King also received an address from the City of Westminster.

State Banquet:

In the evening (October 17), the King and Queen were guests of Queen Elizabeth at a State banquet in Buckingham Palace.

Queen Elizabeth, in a toast to King Mahendra said: "It is nearly 200 years since people from this country first had the pleasure of seeing the legendary beauty of Nepal. Travellers came back with glowing stories of great mountains and fertile valleys and of the charm of your people.

"Every succeeding generation of travellers, mountaineers and those who have gone out to work together with your people on particular projects has succumbed to the magic of Nepal.

"In our earliest contacts with Nepal, we quickly learned to respect your martial spirit and prowess at arms. We have never changed that opinion and for more than a hundred years, soldiers from Nepal have fought side by side with men from this country in tight corners all over the world, and in the two Great Wars we have all learned to be thankful for the steadfast courage of the Gurkhas. We are very proud and happy to have this special association with Nepal."

Queen Elizabeth paid tribute to the great strides Nepal had made under King Mahendra's rule, both in her institutions and in the development of her resources.

She said: "I am gratified that in deciding on Nepal's future Constitution, Your Majesty's Government chose to call on British experience and advice. We are particularly pleased that your son, the Crown Prince, is at school here at the moment.

"Both my grandfather and his father before him enjoyed the hospitality of Nepal in earlier years. But I am very happy that the privilege to be the first British monarch to enter your capital should fall to me."

She hoped that the present occasion "will serve to remind all people that we stand together in peace and that our traditional friendship is as true and strong as ever."

In his reply, King Mahendra said of the Queen's forthcoming visit: "How ardently we in Nepal are looking forward to it!" Saying that it was most appropriate that the Crown Prince should have his education in Britain, he declared: "It has also given us great satisfaction that Your Majesty's Government has made it possible for our students to receive higher education here. This has definitely proved to be of great assistance to us in the national development of our country.

"We share, too, a love of independence and of the right to shape our own lives. We have, with the advice of a British expert, successfully established parliamentary democracy in Nepal. We have also warmly welcomed the help of your Government in the economic development of our country."

He then presented Queen Elizabeth with a gold-and-silver model of the Temple of Pashupatinath. His gift to the Duke was two table-lamps. Prince Charles received a kukri and a gold ink-stand and Princess Anne a gold ink-stand and a silver box.

An announcement on October 17 from the War Office in London said: "The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve the promotion to the rank of Field-Marshal of His Majesty Mahendra Bir Bikram Shah Deva, Maharajadhiraja of Nepal, an honorary General in the British Army, with effect from October 17, 1960."

The same day (October 17), at Buckingham Palace, Queen Elizabeth presented King Mahendra with a Field-Marshal's baton. The King in turn invested the Duke of Edinburgh with the order of Ojaswi Rajanya.

The King and Queen of Nepal drove in State on the morning of October 18 from Buckingham Palace to the Guild Hall to receive the traditional welcome given by the Lord Mayor and the Corporation of London to visiting dignitaries.

Welcoming the Royal couple, the Lord Mayor said that no ally could have given help more unstintedly during the First and Second World Wars.

He added that the qualities of the Gurkhas could be measured by the 10 Victoria Crosses which they had gained between 1939 and 1945.

The King in his reply described London as a fortress for that freedom which both nations so dearly loved and defended side by side.

He said: "We in Nepal have arrived at a stage where your aid and co-operation in our future expansion would be useful. We must come still closer together for the betterment of both our countries."

He then presented a gift to the City of London, of a model of a Nepalese temple near Khatmandu, beautifully worked in gold filigree and inlaid with turquoises and pearls.

On October 19, the last day of their State visit, the Royal visitors were guests of Queen Elizabeth at a gala performance at the Royal Opera House.

The same day (October 19), Queen Elizabeth, accompanied by King Mahendra, reviewed a contingent of Gurkhas, who still form part of the British Army, in the gardens of Buckingham Palace.

There were 100 Gurkhas and about the same number of retired British officers of the Gurkha Brigade.

Britain is allowed to recruit a total of 10,400 Gurkhas under a special Treaty with Nepal. They are stationed in the Far East, mostly in Malaya.

King Mahendra later visited the Vickers-Armstrong aircraft works at Weybridge (Surrey) to see the assembly of the Vanguard and the new VC 10 airliners.

Queen Ratna fulfilled her first public engagement of the State visit when she visited a hospital for mothers and babies at Woolwich (South-East London).

In Scotland:

The King and Queen arrived in Glasgow on October 22 on a private visit to Scotland.

They were welcomed by the Mayor of Glasgow and the Secretary for Scotland, and later had lunch with the Mayor and members of the Glasgow Corporation.

To commemorate the Nepalese Royal visit to Edinburgh, King Mahendra on October 26 planted a Himalayan paper birch tree in the grounds of the Scottish Capital's Royal Botanical Gardens.

The same evening (October 26), the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, Mr. J. Greig Dunbar, entertained the King and Queen to a dinner in the City Chambers before the Royal party left for Manchester by special train.

At Oxford:

The King and Queen of Nepal visited the colleges and institutions at Oxford on October 28.

The Royal visitors were met on arrival by the Pro-Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University and other University heads in their traditional dress.

When the King visited a special exhibition of Public Domain Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar at the Bodleian Library, he was presented with a book on Indian painting and music.

He also visited an exhibition of Nepalese and Tibetan art, said to be one of the finest ever organized in Britain.

On October 30, the King and Queen accompanied by Queen Elizabeth visited the Gurkha contingent at their camp at Knook.

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the Foreign Press Association in London on October 31, King Mahendra re-affirmed his country's policy of maintaining friendly relations with all nations.

The people of Nepal supported world peace and wished to remain aloof from Power blocs.

He later visited the Royal Geographical Society where he was presented with a new map of the Everest region.

The following day (November 2), the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan and Lady Dorothy Macmillan, entertained King Mahendra and Queen Ratna to luncheon.

Earlier, Queen Ratna spent an hour at Commonwealth Guide headquarters. There she received the Princess Royal, President of the Girl Guides Association.

The same evening (November 2), their last day in Britain, the King and Queen were present at the formation of the British-Nepal Society at the Dorchester Hotel. Forty Nepalese students, calling themselves Yetis (after the "Abominable Snowman"), are the founder-members of the Society.

The King and Queen arrived in Calcutta on November 7 on their way home.

NIGERIA

A. Admission To GATT: It was made known in Geneva on October 18 that Nigeria had been admitted as a contracting party to the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT).

The admission, at the request of Great Britain, made Nigeria the 38th member of GATT.

B. Admission To United Nations: The UN General Assembly on October 7 unanimously admitted the newly-independent African State of Nigeria as the 99th member of United Nations.

The candidacy of Nigeria had been unanimously approved by the Security Council earlier in the day.

Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, the Nigerian Prime Minister, said that his country would never align itself "as a matter of routine with any of the Power blocs".

He told the Assembly that it was Nigeria's desire "to remain on friendly terms with all nations and to participate actively in the work of UN."

Congratulating Nigeria, Britain and UN on the liberation of Nigeria and her admission to UN, the Indian delegate, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, said that this was a time not for mere sentimental expression, but for affirmation of the principle that "there are no people anywhere in the world who are not fit to govern themselves."

Speaking on behalf of India, Nepal and Burma, he said: "UN can point to territories (in Africa which have attained independence) as witnesses of the success of its gospel and also as justification for the demand that it must make upon other colonial countries."

He added: "At the end of the year, perhaps, others also will join until on the great continent—which has now become so significant in the history of development of peoples—there alone will remain empires of Portugal and South Africa dominating over other people."

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: "Revolution's" Anniversary Celebrations; USSR-Pakistan Talks On Oil Prospecting; Governors' Conference; Cabinet Change.

A. "Revolution's" Anniversary Celebrations: Pakistan celebrated the second anniversary of the "revolution" on October 27 with subdued enthusiasm because of the cyclone tragedy in East Pakistan.

The Pakistan flag was hoisted atop private and public buildings throughout the country, but there were no illuminations. The decision to abandon the programme of illumination was taken by the Government in sympathy with the victims of the cyclone.

The highlight of the celebrations in Rawalpindi, the seat of the Central Government, was the investiture ceremony held at the President's house at which F-M Mohammad Ayub Khan decorated the recipients of State awards for gallantry, national service and pride of performance.

A similar investiture was held at the Governor's House in Lahore where the Governor, Mir Mohammad Khan, decorated the recipients of the national awards.

Functions arranged by private organizations throughout the country to celebrate the day included public meetings, mushairas, concerts, games and sports.

There were also rallies and march-pasts by boy-scouts, girl-guides and students in all important towns and cities. In Karachi, over 8,000 boys and girls marched in procession to the tomb of Mr. Mohammad Ali Jinnah, founder of Pakistan, to pay homage.

F-M Ayub Khan's Broadcast:

Broadcasting to the country on the eve of the "revolution" anniversary on October 26, F-M Ayub Khan described the Kashmir problem as a "time-bomb never very far removed from flash-point".

The following is the text of his broadcast:

"Today I would like you to join me in an earnest endeavour to look ahead instead of cuddling merely on the past. This process of looking ahead need be conducted by gazing into the crystal of material progress alone.

"This is only one—though quite an important aspect of life. To comprehend life in its total richness, we must find in it a larger, a nobler, and a more abiding purpose and direction. Without this higher purpose and direction, all material progress and prosperity is like a heap of gold buried under a dung-hill or like rain on rocks where it stands and stagnates and does not fertilize.

"Luckily, this purpose and direction of life is available to us in clear and unambiguous terms in the ideology of Islam. This term—the ideology of Islam—has often been used and abused to cover personal and political ambitions and inadequacies, and, it has, in consequence, developed the meaning of an insincere platitude, but in the context of our national affair today there absolutely is no need for us to seek the cover of any false slogans to project or justify our motives nor actions.

"Since the day of Revolution two years ago, our cards have constantly been on the table and the implications of what we have done or propose to do are not concealed. So it should be possible for us now to talk of higher objectives of life more purposefully and with a greater spirit of detachment.

"Speaking in this context our first objective is to re-integrate our society and base it on the ideology of Islam—which, in fact, was the foremost purpose which justified the very creation of Pakistan. In order to be able to get to the starting point of this re-integration, we have to liberate our minds from two types of inhibitions. One type is born of modern education, which under the circumstances of slavery rendered everything native, including religion, as something which is not quite fashionable. The second type is the product of inflexible dogma, which has driven the spirit of religion into a black hole of prejudice, superstition and suffocation. Paradoxically, both these so-called educated and uneducated classes meet at one common platform, the platform of religious ignorance.

"As Millat-e-Wusta (people of the middle path), it should be our task to break both these extremes by promoting a sense of free inquiry, which, when tampered with honesty of purpose and genuine fear of God, will enable us to order our individual and collective actions on the true principles of Islam, take lessons from the past and find ways and means for resolving our problems in the circumstances of today. One of the main teachings of the Quran is that life is a process of progressive creation and each generation, guided but unhampered by the work of its predecessors, must be permitted to solve its own problems.

"Remember that change is the key-note of life. Nature wants man to change or perish. Iqbal, who is one of the most enlightened interpreters of the spirit of Islam in the modern age, has truly said that the ultimate spiritual basis of all life is external and reveals itself in variety and change. A society must possess external principles to regulate its collective life, because the external gives us a foothold in the world of perpetual change. But external principles, when they are understood to exclude all possibilities of change which according to the Quran is one of the greatest sights of God, tend to immobilize what is essentially mobile in its nature. The failure of the West in political and spiritual fields illustrates the loss of its grip on external values. The weakening of the vigour of Islam during the last many centuries illustrates the effect of immobility.

"For the first time in the history of Islam, the President has provided an occasion to a solid mass of 90 million Muslims to participate in the great responsibility of blending their faith with their day-to-day affairs of life. In the past, even when there were Muslim rulers, the broad masses never had a chance to take part in ordering the shape of their affairs. Now this great opportunity which we have got is both a privilege and a responsibility. To fulfil this, we have to place before us a neat goal, which is to get out of the social, political and economic stagnation bequeathed to us by our past, and to match our material progress with our moral and spiritual advancement.

"This can only happen if we identify the beauty of Islam and practise its social objectives, have a system of education as we are trying to evolve and create such social, cultural and economic institutions that we can understand and work and which are capable of bringing about a long spell of stability and steady progress. And above all, we have to be Pakistanis and take pride in Pakistan. The achievements of these goals are both a national and individual responsibility.

"In fact, the national endeavour will depend entirely on the extent of each individual contribution. You cannot draw from a bank more than what you deposit in it. The meaning of this is that you cannot expect from the country more than what contributions you have made in building it up.

"So there is need for each one of us to become better individuals and have the fullest sense of responsibility and realization of obligations towards Pakistan.

"Apart from acquiring the usual educational and technical training, what is equally or even more important for us is to become morally and spiritually religious. Our religiosity today extends to personal and material attitudes alone. So long as the norms are observed, the substance and the spirit do not seem to matter. This is the negation of the goodness and fullness of life.

"What we all of us require to develop are a correct sense of patriotism and an honest attitude of responsibility towards man and society. Before going to sleep every night, let each one of us put to himself or herself a simple question.

"What have we done today to make Pakistan strong? In fact I would like to see this slogan displayed in every household and office and to continuously remind us of our duty towards the country.

"A straight answer to this question will depend on how much forward or backward the nation is going to move the next morning. What you and I are required to do is by no means a superhuman task. All that we have to do is simply to link up and integrate the distances and diversities of our nation. To bring in correct, realistic, free and positive thinking, to carry out correctly and honestly the tasks allotted to us thus leading to more and more production in every sphere of endeavour. To desist from malpractices and if possible, stop others from indulging in them, imbibe truth, sincerity, firmness and to set standards of morality and decorum which befit the conduct of those who claim to be the followers of the great religion of Islam. Given these personal attributes, there is no doubt that the nation will, Inshalla (God willing), soon rise to giddy pinnacles of power and glory.

"As you know, the future shape of our Constitution is now under the consideration of an able and high-powered Commission. In the meantime, I hope you have examined the philosophy behind the system of 'Basic Democracies.' One of the fundamental functions of this system is to bring about an effective fusion of official and non-official agencies at different tiers of 'Basic Democracies.'

"In this context a question is often asked as to what happens if there is difference of opinion between the official and non-official elements. Will these controversial issues be decided on the strength of votes? The answer to that is this:— Must we always decide the matters by counting of votes? Can't we adopt the sensible alternative of going by the consensus of opinion for the common good instead of creating hard and fast cleavages in our ranks based on majorities and minorities? I believe that instead of blind-foldedly following the pattern of the West we should try to run our representative institutions based on the concept of consensus of opinion.

"If we can do that, and I don't see any reason why we should not, because the whole of our past social, historical and religious traditions is based on that, then we might do away with the curse of party system. This may sound unorthodox and novel. But if we can bring it about, I have no doubt that our future generations will certainly bless us for leaving them a legacy of practical courage and realism.

"Now a word about Kashmir. Recently we have heard the Kashmir problem being likened to a Pandora's Box and fears expressed that if it is touched and the status quo changed, all sorts of weird consequences will follow.

"I for one do not agree that it is a Pandora's Box. It will be more correct to call it a time-bomb—never very far removed from the flash-point—and unless the intention is to make it explode through lack of foresight and statesmanship, the answer is to de-fuse it as quickly as possible and that cannot be done without touching it. The fact of the matter is that apart from vitiating the relations between India and Pakistan, the problem of Kashmir is also sapping the vitals of India first and then Pakistan. If it goes on like this, it will inevitably aggravate the problem.

"A weak India will be no solace or strength to Pakistan. And how strong can India be when she has taken upon herself to have twice the army she needs despite the threat from the north, incurring about Rs. 150 crores of additional expenditure a year. I leave it to you to decide. So when I talk about solving this problem, I mean just as well by India as by Pakistan and the people of Kashmir. It is my faith that this problem shall be solved one day. My prayer and effort is that it should be solved peacefully.

"To sum up, I beg of you my dear countrymen and women, to dedicate this day to three solemn pledges:

"One—Every night ask yourselves the question what you have done for Pakistan today and see that the answer is befitting the station of your life;

"Two—In the ideological bank of Pakistan, pool all the resources of your head and heart and soul so that we are not found wanting in the role for which destiny has given us the chance; and;

"Three—In the monetary banks of Pakistan, put all your savings and profits so that the gigantic development projects which are being planned proceed smoothly and enable us to leave a richer, happier and easier life for the generations to come. God bless us. Pakistan Zindabad."

B. USSR-Pakistan Talks On Oil Prospecting: Exploratory talks between the Soviet Union and Pakistan on collaboration in prospecting for oil and minerals began in Karachi on September 10.

A four-man Soviet engineering team, headed by Mr. Semen Bourdetchev, which arrived in Karachi on September 10, met Pakistan officials headed by the Director of the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation, Mr. S. M. Yusuf.

The Industries Minister, Mr. Abdul Kasem Khan, told newsmen in Chittagong on October 12 that the proposed Oil Agreement between Pakistan and the Soviet Union would not involve any financial obligations as far as practicable.

He gave a broad feature of the oil talks between Pakistan and the Soviet Union wherein the Pakistan Government had agreed to give approval to Soviet technicians to explore mineral resources, particularly oil. The Russians, he said, had offered the same deal to Pakistan as they did to India in order to build an oil refinery.

He said: "Pakistan is anxious to build her own industries to save her valuable foreign exchange and with this object alone, we have agreed to enter into a deal with Soviet Russia who have assured us that they would successfully strike oil."

He added that the Russians had indicated that they could find oil even in commercial quantities.

Referring to the Agreement, he said that it would provide healthy competition among the mineral experts of both the Soviet Union and the Western world in their bid to find oil.

C. Import Of Textile Machinery —Agreement With Japan: An Agreement was concluded between Pakistani officials and a visiting Japanese textile machinery mission in Rawalpindi on October 21 for the purchase of Japanese textile machinery worth about Rs. 100 million.

With the successful conclusion of these talks which had opened on October 19, the second phase of the negotiations began on October 23 in Karachi for fixing the price of the machinery to be imported by Pakistan.

The Japanese mission disclosed in Lahore on October 23 that under the Agreement, their country would export 3,000 power looms and about 3,50,000 spindles.

Speaking at a reception given by the President of the Pakistan Textile Mills Association in Lahore, the leader of the delegation, Mr. Fumikhiko Saki, assured the Pakistani industrialists and businessmen of their co-operation in business relations. He said Japan would surely see that good machinery was supplied to Pakistan and better results were achieved.

Earlier, welcoming the delegation, the President of the Pakistan Textile Mills Association, Mian Allah Baksh, said that Pakistan had now changed over from the manufacture of coarse cloth to the medium varieties. He said that the country desired to switch over to the manufacture of fine varieties and give opportunity for ample choice to its domestic consumers and boost up her exports.

He hoped that the Japanese Government, industrialists and businessmen would co-operate with Pakistan and supply the best available machinery under the Agreement.

E. Cabinet Approves Master Plan Of New Capital: The Presidential Cabinet on October 26 approved the master plan of the new Federal Capital, Islamabad, at a special meeting in Rawalpindi under the chairmanship of the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan.

F-M Ayub Khan, while accepting the plan, expressed appreciation of the work done by the Capital Commission.

The five-year programme for construction of Islamabad on the Potwar site—nine miles north of Rawalpindi—was estimated to cost Rs. 247 million. It was based on the assumption that Rs. 200 million would be provided by the Government under the Second Five-Year Plan. The balance of expenditure would be met either by the private sector or the special programme of departments of the Central and the two Provincial Governments.

The targets fixed by the Capital Development Authority under its first Five-Year Plan included construction of Secretariat blocks for 9,000 Central Government employees, building of the Presidential Palace, Supreme Court and Parliament in the administrative sector, 7,200 houses for accommodation of approximately 33,000 persons would also be built. Out of these, 6,500 houses would be for families of Central Government employees.

Two hundred acres of land had been earmarked for a diplomatic enclave and an area of 60 acres for the establishment of light industries.

With the submission of the master plan, the work of the Capital Commission ended.

The Commission headed by Maj.-Gen. Yahya Khan completed work on the schedule given by the Government. Now the Capital Development Authority would take over from the Capital Commission. The Authority is also headed by Maj.-Gen. Yahya Khan, Chief of the General Staff of the Army.

F. Governors' Conference: A two-day Governors' Conference began in Lahore on October 24. It was presided over by the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan and was attended by Cabinet members, the Governors of East and West Pakistan, the Chairman of the Planning Commission and other officials.

According to Press reports, the Conference took important decisions aimed at making 'Basic Democracies' more effective, especially in the field of development. A high-powered autonomous body would be created at the provincial level for the administration of 'Basic Democracies', including the task of development and village-aid.

The East Pakistan Governor, Lt.-Gen. Azam Khan gave an account of the devastation caused by cyclones in the Noakhali and Chittagong islands and outlined measures taken by the Government and other agencies for the relief of the calamity-stricken areas.

Long-term precautionary measures were also considered to save the Province from cyclones in future. The Provincial Government would prepare a comprehensive scheme in this respect and submit it to the Centre.

It was announced that an important change in the basic functions of the Provincial Development Advisory Councils, the lightest tier of 'Basic Democracies' would be made when they would be divided into committees, entrusted with specific subjects and empowered to take stock in regard to the actual implementation of policies. This would facilitate more strict supervision and better implementation of development schemes. The committees would be only reporting bodies and would not interfere with the actual administration.

The Conference also decided that Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners should be made directly responsible for work relating to 'Basic Democracies,' village-aid and economic development, with emphasis on 'the development of agriculture.

The Additional Commissioners and Additional Deputy Commissioners would look after the routine work of division and district administrations.

It was also laid down that in order to ensure proper execution of the developmental policies of the Government, there should be Inspectors under each commissioner. The Inspectors would operate in the districts and would be permitted to co-opt various officers to assist them. The details of this scheme would be worked out by the Provincial Government.

In respect to the town committees, it was laid down that municipal committees should be empowered to allocate specific functions and give funds to the town committees for the implementation of their programme. The Conference decided that union councils with the best all-round performance in different areas would be awarded cash prizes which would form part of their funds.

It was also decided that cattle and other fairs, particularly in the field of agriculture and village industries, should be organized more frequently and more regularly in the two Provinces.

It devoted a major part of its time to reviewing the progress made so far in the working of 'Basic Democracies' in the two Wings of the country.

Decisions:

The Conference, which ended on October 25, decided that the East and West Pakistan Governments should form Facilities' Boards for providing facilities to foreign investors.

The Boards would maintain direct and regular contacts with the Central Investment Promotion Bureau, obtaining information with regard to offers of foreign investments.

After taking stock of the measures taken by the Government for the promotion of industrial development in the country, the Conference emphasized that special arrangements should be made for speeding up acquisition of lands for new industries. In this connexion it discussed the establishment of industrial estates near important towns where suitable new industries could be installed. It decided that areas should be earmarked by the Provincial Government for the purpose and the information should be widely notified for the benefit of the investors.

It expressed itself in favour of maintaining a regular survey of the requirements of industries in the country and entrusted the matter to the Chairman of the Planning Commission, for further examination. He would consult the Provincial Governments and the Central Ministry in preparing his report.

It reviewed the policy of road development in the country with particular reference to the national highway. It noted that a balance should always be kept for the proper maintenance of the existing roads and future development programmes. The matter would be further examined by the Ministries of Communication and Finance and the Governments of the two Provinces. A full report would be submitted to the Presidential Cabinet.

It also discussed the delegation of powers to the Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners suggested by the Provincial Administration Commission in the recommendations accepted by the Government. While most of the powers had already been delegated during the course of the implementation of the recommendations, some functionary powers remained to be transferred. It was decided that these powers should be delegated immediately to the Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners and if necessary, the rules and regulations should be amended accordingly.

G. Exploitation Of Surplus Man-Power—Inquiry Commission Set-up: The Government on October 18 appointed a nine-man Commission, to be known as the Surplus Man-Power Commission, headed by Maj.-Gen. Fazal of General Headquarters, to investigate the question of exploiting surplus man-power usefully in the service of the nation.

The terms of reference of the Commission were:

(1) To determine for the purposes of this assignment a definition of "surplus man-power;"

(2) To assess generally the extent of surplus man-power available at different periods of the year, in different sectors of the population;

(3) To formulate proposals for the organizational set-up requirements at different levels, to utilize the surplus man-power and to indicate the tasks to which this man-power could be put;

The organizational set-up should be as cheap as possible, effective and not too heavy;

(4) To recommend measures for the utilization of different categories of surplus man-power and to give an idea of the likely cost and economics. Such utilization should be within the local area as far as possible;

(5) To recommend a systematic programme for developing a continuing flow of information on the shifting trends of unemployed man-power from time to time, and further to recommend means for its appropriate utilization;

(6) To recommend ways and means for maintaining a balance between the various competitive requirements for man-power (agricultural and non-agricultural) in the utilization of the total man-power resources of the country;

(7) To examine the avenues of anticipated employment in the immediate future, with a view to planning the training of unemployed man-power for use in such employment and in the process to examine the possibilities of co-ordinating the existing training facilities in the country; and

(8) To suggest what kind of disciplinary courts should be set-up to deal with the delinquents.

A. Turco-Greek Support To NATO: Turkey and Greece in a joint communique issued in Athens on October 22 re-affirmed their support to the North Atlantic Pact (NATO), United Nations and the newly-created Republic of Cyprus.

The communique was issued at the end of two days of talks between the visiting Turkish Foreign Minister, Mr. Selim Sarper and the Greek Foreign Minister, Mr. Evangelos Averoff.

It said that the two countries re-affirmed their fidelity to the NATO defensive alliance and noted their identity of views on Balkan problems.

They expressed good wishes for the prosperity, independence and progress of Middle East countries.

B. New Deputy Prime Minister: The Head of State, Gen. Cemal Gursel, on October 21 appointed one of his chief aides in the May 27 coup d'etat, Gen. Farhy Ozdilep as Deputy Prime Minister in his Cabinet.

Gen. Ozdilek, former Commander of the First Army in Istanbul, was Defence Minister in the present Government.

As Deputy Premier, he would preside over Cabinet meetings in Gen. Gursel's absence. He would also hold the title of Minister of State. He played a major part in planning the May coup d'etat and resigned from the Army when he was appointed Defence Minister.

He was succeeded as Defence Minister by a retired General, Husseyin Ataman (59), formerly in charge of higher military instruction in Istanbul.

INDIA

SUMMARY: White Paper On Sino-Indian Border Dispute; Trade Protocol With Rumania; Ford Foundation Grants; Assam Special Powers (Press) Bill Passed; Credit Facilities To Commercial Banks; Steel Retention Price Increased.

A. White Paper On Sino-Indian Border Dispute—Further Violations Of India's Air-Space And Territory:

Further violations of India's air-space and intrusions into Indian territory by the Chinese were reported in the fourth White Paper consisting of Notes, memoranda and letters exchanged between the Governments of India and China, between March, 1960 and November 1960, which was laid on the table of the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on November 14, by the Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru.

In a Note sent by the External Affairs Ministry to the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi on October 24, the Government of India charged that a Chinese helicopter flew into Indian territory from West Tibet. The helicopter, which was "clearly of Chinese origin", was reported flying over Thratsang La.

The Note said that on October 13 two armed Chinese personnel on horses intruded up to points approximately one and a half miles east of Hot Springs in the Kong Ka Pass area in Ladakh.

The place, which was being patrolled by Chinese personnel is about two miles west of the point where the bodies of Indian personnel killed in the Kong Ka Pass incident were handed over to Indian police.

In a memorandum of the Government of India to the Chinese Government dated September 27, the Government of India charged that on September 22, a Chinese armed patrol consisting of one officer and ten soldiers crossed and intruded "several hundred yards" into Sikkimese territory near Jelepla Pass. The party withdrew after some time on being detected by border administrative personnel in the region.

In reply to this, the Chinese Government had stated that "eight inhabitants of the border area concerned", while gathering medicinal herbs near the Jelepla Pass reached a point "not far to the south of the Jelepla Pass and returned from there soon afterwards."

The Government of India had turned down the Chinese explanation that the Chinese intrusion into the Kameng region in N-EFA in June, 1960 was a mistake made by nine Chinese local working personnel who strayed into Indian territory, having lost their way while felling bamboos.

The Indian Note of October 24 said that this version was untrue and doubted that the intrusion was unintended. It said that the number of personnel involved was 25 and not nine and that they carried arms slung from the shoulder.

Taktsang, where the intrusion occurred, was 12,000 to 15,000 ft. high and was about seven miles south of the MacMahon Line "and there are no trees or bamboos at this height." The Chinese personnel were wearing uniforms and there was nothing to indicate that they were out to cut bamboos.

The Note said that "intrusion by Chinese personnel several miles within Indian territory is a serious matter. It violates the understanding reached by the two Prime Ministers that during the pendency of the official-level talks no action which is likely to lead to friction or clashes in the border areas should be undertaken. Any such intrusion might have very unfortunate consequences."

The Government of India had objected to the Chinese description of Bara Hoti as "China's Wu-je" when it was incontrovertibly "a part of Uttar Pradesh State and has always been a part of India."

If the Chinese Government objected to the dispatch of local Indian administrative personnel there, the Note said, then "the Government of India can equally level the counter-charge that the local administrative personnel of the Tibet Region who visited the area unlawfully, intruded into Indian territory."

The Government of India had also rejected the Chinese contention put forward by Mr. Chou En-lai when he was in Delhi for talks that the aircraft spotted on the Sino-Indian border belonged to USA which "took off from Bangkok, passed over Burma, or China and crossed the Sino-Indian border to penetrate deep into the Chinese interior to parachute Chinese secret agents, weapons, supplies and wireless sets and then flew back to Bangkok, again passing over the Sino-Indian border."

The Indian reply of October 24 stated that the Government of India could not ignore as many as 52 violations of air-space. "More particularly", the Note added, "it is difficult to believe that the planes which violated the Indian air-space in the western sector of the Sino-Indian boundary were based anywhere other than on Chinese territory."

Asking the Chinese Government to instruct subordinate authorities to take scrupulous care that such violations of ground and air-space did not recur, the Note warned: "The Government of India need hardly state that they observe the utmost vigilance about the protection of their frontiers, whether on the ground or in the air and are determined to take action against all intruders, whatever their origin."

Replying to a Chinese Note alleging restrictions on the Chinese Trade Agency in Kalimpong, the Government of India in a Note dated June 14 said that the Trade Agency was not a diplomatic establishment and did not under international law enjoy customary diplomatic immunities and privileges.

It pointed out in this context that the Chinese Government had imposed restrictions "even on the movement of diplomatic and non-diplomatic members of the Indian Embassy in Peking." It added that while the Government of India had not imposed any reciprocal restrictions on the staff of the Chinese Embassy in Delhi, it could not agree to a privileged position for the Chinese Trade Agency in Kalimpong.

stated that the provisions of the Sino-Indian Agreement regarding trade and intercourse between India and the Tibet Region of China had been rendered "virtually nugatory" because of impediments placed by the Chinese.

As an instance, the Note pointed out that the Indian Trade Agency at Gartok had not been established yet because of delay in the conclusion of the lease to enable construction of the Agency.

It stated that the Indian Trade Agent had not been able to carry out his duties because of lack of co-operation from Chinese authorities. Indian pilgrims to Mansarovar and Kailash had been advised by the Chinese authorities not to go to these places.

Similarly, Indian traders had been suffering from various types of disabilities, undermining the customary pattern of trade between Tibet and India. A number of new taxes had been imposed on them and they had been prevented from exporting to India traditional export commodities taken by them in barter like wool, salt, borax and beasts of burden. They had been stopped from bringing their animal property to India and the unsold goods of Indian traders lying in deposit with the Bhutanese Representative had been sealed by the local authorities.

Further, due to non-availability of local currency, the Indian traders had to pay the local taxes in kind at low prices. The value of the articles so realized came to much more than the rate of taxes. These articles had later been sold at cheap rates in Government-sponsored shops in order to ruin Indian traders.

The Chinese Government in its turn charged the Indian Government with 49 violations of Chinese air-space. It also protested at the deportation of certain Chinese, including the Manager of the Bank of China in Calcutta.

The expulsion of the correspondent of the Hsinhua news agency from India was characterized in a Chinese Note as an attack against "the freedom of the Press." The despatches of the Agency were characterized as "factual, objective and fair."

There were a number of exchanges on the nationality of Kashmiri Muslims whom the Chinese called Kajis and Ladakhi lamas now in Tibet. As regards the former, the Chinese Note said that "the Chinese Government has always considered the Kajis to be Chinese and is fully entitled to deal with such questions as their nationality and exist as China's internal affairs."

The Ladakhi lamas, who had remained in China, the Note said, had done so of their own accord.

The 102-page White Paper carried 56 Notes, memoranda and letters, some of which had been laid on the table of the Lok Sabha (House of the People) earlier.

The last memorandum in the White Paper was from the Government of India asking for any information that the Chinese authorities might have about an Indian Hunter aircraft which took off from Ambala on October 4.

The memorandum said that while all Indian aircraft were strictly instructed not to violate Chinese air-space, it was possible that owing to navigational error or mechanical failure, the aircraft have crashed in Chinese territory.

Note On Sikkim And Bhutan:

In an informal Note of April 25, 1960, part of the White Paper, handed over in New Delhi to China's Assistant Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Chiao Kuan-hua, the Government of India reminded the Chinese Government that the external relations of Sikkim and Bhutan, under Treaty obligations, were the responsibility of India.

It said: "Our concern is all the greater because persistent reports have reached us over a period of months that propaganda organs as well as senior Chinese officials in the Tibet Region have been saying that China intends incorporating Sikkim and Bhutan, like Ladakh, into the Chinese People's Republic.

"On some occasions it was even said that China might take military steps to occupy these territories."

It said that the Government of India hoped that the Chinese Government would respect the sovereign rights of the Government of Jammu and Kashmir and therefore of the Government of India over Minsar in West Tibet.

Similarly, in accordance with the representation made in 1959, the control of Bhutan should be restored over the Bhutan enclaves near Kailash in West Tibet.

It requested that Sikkimese nationals who had been residing in certain estates in the Chumbi Valley and were traditionally treated as distinct from Tibetans might continue to receive the treatment which had been traditionally accorded to them and allow facilities of movement to Sikkim.

B. Trade Protocol Signed With Rumania: The Rumanian news agency Agerpress reported in Bucharest on November 11 that India and Rumania had signed a Trade Protocol setting out the goods to be exchanged between the two countries during 1961 under the existing Trade Agreement.

Under the Protocol, India would import from Rumania oil and power equipment, electric and diesel motors, machine tools, diverse chemicals and pharmaceutical products, paper and other goods.

India would export to Rumania items including iron-ore, cotton yarn and fabrics, jute products pepper, tea, hides, shellac, mica and other goods.

The signing took place in Bucharest, following negotiations held for the purpose between trade delegations of India and Rumania.

C. Ford Foundation Grants: The Ford Foundation announced in New York on November 15 grants totalling $169,640 to India for advisory and training services by American universities in fields ranging from teacher education to the administration of economic development.

A total of $64,640 was granted for research relating to problems of worker-management relationship emerging from India's growing industrialization.

This total was split between five institutions: The Indian Institute of Technology ($36,230); Lucknow University ($6,220); Tata Institute of Social Sciences ($5,200); and the Xavier Labour Relations Institute ($15,160).

A total of $105,000 was granted for consultants in India in the fields of extension training, management-association programmes, rural community development, teacher education and urban community development.

E. Assam Special Powers (Press) Bill Passed: The Assam Legislative Assembly, on October 30 adopted by 41 votes to six the Assam Special Powers (Press) Bill, as reported by the Select Committee.

The Bill empowered the State Government to deal with the Press effectively for the purpose of maintaining law and order in an emergency.

Before the Bill was put to the vote, the State Law Minister, Mr. Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, speaking on behalf of the Chief Minister, assured the House that the legislation would be enforced only in an emergency.

He said that the Bill was not an attempt on the part of Government to curb the freedom of the Press.

An amendment moved by Mr. Phani Bora (Communist) to vest the power of notification of an emergency in the President of India instead of the Governor as provided in the Bill, was rejected by the House after Mr. Ahmed had opposed it.

The Bill was introduced in the State Assembly on October 10 and referred to a Select Committee on October 21. The Committee presented its report on the Bill to the Assembly on October 25.

The Bill, as returned by the Select Committee provided that "if the Governor is satisfied that a situation exists whereby maintenance of communal harmony is threatened and by reason thereof it is necessary to use the special powers under the proposed legislation for the purpose of preventing or combating any activity affecting or likely to affect public order, he may make a declaration to that effect by a notification in the official Gazette.

"Upon such a declaration, the State Government or any authority so authorized may, by a written order, prohibit printing or publication of any document relating to a particular subject or class of subjects for a specified period or in a particular issue or issues of a newspaper or periodical.

"At the first instance no such order shall remain in force for more than two months, but the State Government may extend the period by another two months. The printer, publisher or editor concerned may apply to the State Government within ten days for modification or rescission of the order.

"By issuing the order, the Government may also require that any matter covering not above two columns be published on adequate remuneration. The period not exceeding one week for such publication may also be specified.

"The State Government may also require any matter relating to a particular subject or subjects to be submitted for scrutiny before publication and later published only in accordance with the directions given. Disobedience of such an order shall make a person liable to punishment which may be imprisonment for one year or fine up to Rs. 1,000 or both. Besides, copies of the publication and Press or apparatus used in publication may be seized."

Section 3 of the Bill empowered the State Government or a subordinate authority "to prohibit bringing into Assam any newspaper, etc., if such an action is necessary for preventing or combating any activity prejudicial to the maintenance of communal harmony affecting or likely to affect public order."

The period of such an order could be two months, or at the most four months. The penalty for disobedience would be imprisonment up to one year or fine up to Rs. 1,000 or both.

The Communist leader, Mr. G. S. Bhattacharjee, who was a member of the Select Committee, in a note of dissent said that giving certain special and sweeping powers to the Government would impose extraordinary restriction of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Article 19 of the Indian Constitution. Hence the scope of the proposed legislation could be confined to only an emergency situation envisaged under Article 352 of the Constitution.

F. Language Riots In Assam—Commission Of Inquiry Appointed: The Government of Assam on November 9 appointed a one-man Commission of Inquiry consisting of Mr. Justice Gopalji Mehrotra of the Assam High Court to inquire into and report by December 31, 1960 on the incidents of rioting and arson that took place at Goreswar in Kamrup district in July, 1960.

The Commission had been asked in particular to report on the causes and extent of the disturbances at Goreswar; whether adequate measures were taken by the local authorities to maintain public order; whether the disturbances were premeditated and pre-planned and if so, who the persons or groups responsible for the same were and any other circumstances which might appear relevant to the Commission.

Acting Governor of Assam Appointed:

A communique issued from Rashtrapati Bhavan (President's House) on November 4 said that the Cabinet-Secretary, Mr. Vishnu Sahay would officiate as Governor of Assam during the absence abroad of Gen. S. M. Shrinagesh for two months on medical leave.

Official sources in New Delhi said that normally the Chief Justice of the High Court in a State officiated during the absence of the Governor, but a full-time appointment had been considered necessary in Assam on account of the delicate situation in the State and the special position of the Governor of that State in relation to the new State of Nagaland which would be inaugurated shortly.

G. Employees Provident Fund (Amendment) Bill Passed: The Lok Sabha (House of the People) on November 14 passed the Employees Provident Fund (Amendment) Bill after it had received general support from all sections of the House.

The Bill enlarged the scope of the Provident Fund Act which would now be applied to establishments employing 20 or more persons. At present, the Act was applicable only to establishments employing 50 or more persons.

The registered co-operative societies employing less than 50 persons and working without the aid of power were, however, excluded from the purview of the Bill. Small-scale and cottage industries employing between 20 and 50 persons were granted exemption for a period of five years.

The exemption provision was strongly opposed by several Members, who pleaded for raising the contribution rate from 6-1|4 per cent to 8-1|3 per cent and extending the benefits of the Act to clerical employees covered by the Shops and Establishments Act.

The Deputy Labour Minister, Mr. Abid Ali who piloted the Bill, said that a Technical Committee was considering the question of raising the contribution rate to 8-1|3 per cent. While he favoured this demand, it was not without certain dangers. If an increase in the rate was to result in closure of some establishments, that would not be good for the workers.

Justifying the exemption clause for a period of five years, he said that the intention was to help the large number of co-operative societies run by the workers themselves.

H. Credit Facilities To Commercial Banks: The Reserve Bank of India announced in Bombay on November 11 that it had decided to suspend with immediate effect the practice of impounding deposits of commercial banks over and above a prescribed level and to make available to commercial banks half of their impounded deposits lying with it.

The decision was welcomed in banking circles as a timely measure to help the banks meet the growing credit needs of the current busy season.

It was in March, 1960 that the Reserve Bank resorted to this general credit curb measure—as different from its selective credit control measures — of impounding 25 per cent of the additional deposits. The percentage was subsequently increased to 50.

The main idea behind the move was to reduce the "excess" liquidity with the banking structure in the traditional slack season and thus arrest the rise in prices. But the recent change in the lending rates of the Reserve Bank, which was supposed to have to a limited extent the same impact as a rise in the Bank rate, and the consequent depression in the values of gilt-edged markets had made it difficult for the banks to meet the growing credit needs of the busy season.

The bankers had suggested to the Reserve Bank to either relax the rule pertaining to impounding of deposits or actively support gilt-edged to arrest the decline in their values. They had made it clear that with higher lending rates over and above a particular level fixed by the Reserve Bank, the banks would be forced to liquidate in the gilt-edged market to raise funds, keeping the gilt-edged portfolio at the statutory minimum level.

Heavy selling by institutional investors depressed values in gilts and State loans were the worst affected; practically all recently floated State loans were being offered at a discount.

The latest measure announced by the Reserve Bank might, to some extent, check the tendency on the part of institutional investors to liquidate in gilts and thus impart some steadiness to the gilt-edged market.

I. Steel Retention Price Increased: It was officially announced in New Delhi on November 11 that the Government of India had increased the average retention price of steel by Rs. 4.85 a ton.

This increase, payable to the Tata Iron and Steel Company (TISCO) and the Indian Iron and Steel Company (IISCO), would be for the five-year period 1955-56 to 1959-60. This would be the final adjustment under the escalator clause for the five-year price period ended March 31, 1960.

The retention price of steel, including excise duty, payable to TISCO and IISCO prior to this increase was Rs. 470 a ton.

The increase would enable the two companies to augment the contribution to their development funds.

The Government decided to increase the retention price on representations received from the two companies who had asked for an increase on the ground of rising costs.

The Government referred the representations to the cost accounts branch of the Ministry of Finance.

The report of the cost accounts branch, it was stated, showed that the increases on admissible items of costs under the escalator clause would result in an increase of Rs. 2.85 a ton in the average retention price payable to the two steel companies for the five-year period ended March 31, 1960.

Further, the Government admitted the claim of the companies that labour costs had also gone up, following negotiated settlements with unions. This would mean an increase of Rs. 2 per ton in the average retention price for the same period.

J. Jute Production Curtailed: It was announced in New Delhi on November 10 that the representatives of the Indian Jute Mills Association (IJMA) and the Central Government had agreed that the curtailment of production by jute mills should be limited to the equivalent of an additional eight per cent of the looms.

As a result of this decision, about 8,000 of the 12,000 workers thrown out of employment because of the sealing of an additional ten per cent looms fearing shortage of raw jute were expected to go back to work. Details of the curtailment of production, it was said, would be worked out shortly in consultation with the representatives of the West Bengal Government.

In the course of the discussions between the IJMA and Government representatives, questions relating to the supply of raw jute and the maintenance of a reasonable price level both for raw jute and jute goods were fully examined. It was agreed that production should be maintained at stable levels and as high as possible, taking into consideration the supply of raw jute, both local and imported.

The Government felt that the prospects of the jute crop both in India and Pakistan were not unfavourable as compared to 1959. However, in order to maintain stability, the Government admitted that some regulation of production was necessary.

The prices of raw jute would now be sought to be maintained at reasonable levels through a regulated programme of buying by the jute industry and other measures.

IRAN

A. Shah Inaugurates New Oil Terminal: The Shah on November 8 opened a new oil-loading terminal at an island in the Persian Gulf, 20 miles off the mainland.

A consortium of British firms played an important part in this international scheme, which would provide Iran with a new oil terminal capable of taking the world's largest tankers. The £30,000,000 project included a 100-mile pipe-line across mountains and desert and under the sea.

Included in the consortium were American and Dutch companies. The greater part of the materials for the project came from Britain.

The terminal is situated on Kharg Island, in the north-east corner of the Persian Gulf. The pipe-line, the longest and biggest gravity-fed line in the world, would be capable of delivering about 350,000 barrels of crude oil every day to tanks at Kharg.

B. Son And Heir For Shah: A son was born to Queen Farah (22) on October 31, giving the Shah an heir to the throne.

The child, who becomes Crown Prince of Iran, was the first son to be born to the Shah after three marriages, the first in 1939.

A few moments after the birth, the Imperial Guard fired a 41-gun salute to mark the joyous event. There were scenes of great rejoicing in the capital and dancing in the streets.

Commenting on the birth, the Shah said: "I am most grateful to God Almighty for accepting my prayers".

The Iranian Premier, Dr. F. S. Emami ordered a three-day national holiday in honour of the Prince's birth.

In a communique, he said: "The people of Iran express their best wishes to the Empress, the Shah and the Crown Prince".

On November 6, the Shah proclaimed his week-old son, who was named Reza, Crown Prince and heir to the throne.

Ministers, members of Parliament, top Government officials and high Army officers gathered in the Senate building to hear the Prime Minister Dr. Fajar Sharif Emami, read out the Proclamation naming the infant Prince heir to the Throne, "for maintaining the Pahlevi Dynasty, to guarantee the country's progress and in accordance with the country's Constitution."

The Proclamation called on members of the Royal family, Ministers, members of Parliament, Governors and others to honour the Crown Prince and carry out their duties.

The birth of a son is all-important for the Pahlevi Dynasty, founded in 1925. Its continuity is now assured.

Tradition has it that the Coronation of the Iranian King should not take place while succession to the Throne remains uncertain. The Shah has not yet been crowned, though he has been reigning since 1941.

Queen Farah, born on October 14, 1938 became the Shah's third wife in 1959.

The Shah's first marriage was to Princess Fawzia, one of the four sisters of ex-King Farouk of Egypt. They were married in 1939, before the Shah was 20.

His second marriage was on February 12, 1951 to Soraya Asfandiari Bakhtiari, daughter of an Iranian nobleman and a German lady.

The marriage was childless and the Shah divorced Queen Soraya in April, 1958.

JORDAN

A. King Hussein's Offer To Palestinian Inhabitants To Decide Their Future By Plebiscite: The West Asia correspondent of The Statesman, Calcutta, in a despatch to his paper on November 12 reported as follows:

"In offering to let the Palestinian inhabitants of the West Bank of the Jordan decide their future through an internationally supervised plebiscite, King Hussein has taken a bold step towards bringing some order into the confused Palestine question.

"This is not the first time that the King has spoken of a plebiscite but no one took his earlier offer seriously since it was assumed, for one thing, that it would be conducted in the presence of, and probably directly by the Jordan Army who by now is fairly expert in producing a 98 per cent or 99 per cent vote in favour of the regime. For another, no one could believe that King Hussein would relinquish the West Bank without which his kingdom would shrink back to the old Transjordan, little more than a stretch of barren desert between Syria and the Gulf of Aqaba.

"The King must of course, have known that the more educated and sophisticated Palestinians were restive under his rule. Perhaps, at long last, the chronic instability of his country resulting from this, plus the tragic events of the last few months, such as the assassination of his Prime Minister determined him to take the plunge: He has never lacked courage.

"The King has said that he is prepared to have the plebiscite conducted either by UN or the Arab League or both. There can be little doubt what in theory the result of a free vote would be: the mass of Palestinians would plump for an independent State. Many, however, in practice might be deterred by economic and military considerations.

"First, many Palestinian businessmen and Government servants, doing well under the present set-up, would stand to lose. Secondly, a West Bank State would be non-viable. But on its own it would be less non-viable than Jordan is at present constituted, which is chronically dependent on outside help. Today, the West Bank contributes far more to the Central exchequer than it receives from it. Its main asset is tourism to the Holy Places in Jerusalem and Bethlehem and this is expanding very rapidly. In any case, questions of viability have never stood in the way of a country choosing independence; if it had, Somalia, Libya and many other new States would never have come into existence.

"West Bankers have often said that they must stay in Jordan for protection against Israel which has openly threatened to absorb their territory. But if a Palestine State comes into existence through a UN supervised plebiscite, then it would be under the direct protection of the world body, which today is a very different organization from the one which brought the Jewish State into existence through a most dubious vote. It might even insist that its wishes determine the course of events rather than, as hitherto, a military fait accompli imposed by the Israeli Army.

"If King Hussein's offer is taken up and implemented, which will hardly be in the near future, he would lose a great deal materially, but he would put the Arabs permanently in his debt. As a descendant of the Prophet, he is not indifferent to such considerations."

B. Amman-Aqaba Road Built: The completion of a new road between Amman and the port of Aqaba, announced in the last week of October, marked a major step in the development of Jordan's communications.

The 200-mile road cost over 2,500,000 Jordan dinars, most of it financed from interest-free loans made available by UK since the beginning of the construction of the road in 1957.

The only railway in Jordan is the Mafraq-Maan stretch of the single-track Hedjaz Railway passing through Amman and the only modern roads so far were those connecting Amman with the north. In this situation it had been difficult to make full use of the port of Aqaba.

The port was recently opened and re-equipped for the purpose of reducing Jordan's dependence on the costly transit route through Lebanon and Syria. The opening of the Amman-Aqaba road would mean quicker and less expensive transport between Aqaba and the north.

It was announced in Amman that all Jordan's imports from Europe would be handled through Aqaba port.

KOREA (South)

A. Protest Against Extension Of Japan-North Korea Repatriation Agreement: The Government on October 28 sent a protest to Japan over the extension for a year of the Agreement between Japan and North Korea on the repatriation to North Korea of Koreans living in Japan.

The Note said that the South Korean Government would not hold itself responsible for any consequences arising from the extension.

Earlier in the week, preliminary talks were opened between the Japanese and South Korean Governments on the restoration of normal relations between the two countries.

The protest Note said that South Korea now doubted the genuineness of Japan's desire for friendly relations.

The Repatriation Agreement, signed in Calcutta in 1959 (see page 2875) by the Japanese and North Korean Red Cross Societies, was due to expire on November 12, 1960. Representatives of the two Societies met on board the Russian repatriation ship, Nigata, on October 27 and agreed to extend the Agreement.

Japan had previously been reluctant to extend it for more than six months. She had proposed that complete repatriation be carried out of all Koreans in Japan wishing to return to North Korea and had demanded a speed-up in the rate of repatriation.

The only concession made on October 27 to these demands was a verbal undertaking by the North Koreans that they would be willing to discuss speedier repatriation.

The Japanese Red Cross hoped to increase the weekly total of repatriates going to North Korea from 1,000 to about 1,500. It was estimated that there were still more than 50,000 Koreans in Japan who wanted to go to North Korea.

NEPAL

A. Sino-Nepal Boundary Talks: A communique issued in Khatmandu on October 29, at the conclusion of the first round of talks by the Sino-Nepal Joint Boundary Commission, said that an agreement had been reached regarding the disputed areas along the frontier of Nepal and China.

The communique said that a sincere and friendly atmosphere prevailed throughout the talks and friendly consultations were conducted between the two sides in a "spirit of equality, mutual benefit, mutual understanding and mutual accommodation".

Unanimous agreement was reached on the following questions:

(1) Tasks and working procedure of the Joint Commission;

(2) General arrangement for the settlement of the entire boundary question;

(3) Agreement satisfactory to both sides was reached on the settlement of those sections of the boundary on which there were differences between the two sides;

(4) Sending out joint teams to these areas to carry out investigations and surveys and fixing the time schedule, tasks and composition of the joint teams; and

(5) Fixing the location of survey points along the entire boundary line.

The communique stated that the Joint Commission had agreed to hold its second round of talks in the third week of December, 1960 in Peking during which "it will discuss the investigation and survey work along the entire boundary."

The Commission began its first series of talks in Khatmandu on August 12. Its final meeting in the series was held on October 26.

[It was set up under the Sino-Nepalese Border Agreement signed in Peking in March, 1960 by the Chinese and Nepalese Prime Ministers.]

Its work, as stipulated in the Agreement was to "discuss and solve the concrete problem concerning the Nepalese-Chinese boundary, erect boundary marks and draft a Nepalese-Chinese Boundary Treaty".

The frontier, which is roughly 700 miles long and lies through a major portion of its length over rugged Himalayan terrain, would be scientifically delineated and formally demarcated for the first time on the basis of the traditional border line.

B. Revolt In West Nepal Crushed: The Nepalese Government in a Press Note issued on October 27, announced that an attempt by "reactionary elements" on October 25 to overthrow the Government by terrorist and violent methods in the Gorkha district in West Nepal had been crushed and many ring-leaders arrested.

The Note said that an unruly mob of 3,000 armed with khukris, lathis and swords surrounded Government offices and stoned the police, resulting in injuries to 11 policemen. The District Magistrate then ordered the police to fire. Seven people were killed and six injured in the firing.

It was stated that the situation in Gorkha was "under control" and strong steps were being taken to deal with violent activities directed against the Government.

It added that it was the Government's duty to deal strongly with frustrated elements who had "abandoned the path of legal and constitutional opposition" and adopted undesirable methods.

It said that the revolt was fomented by "a reactionary band masquerading as yogis under the leadership and guidance of Yogi Narharinath".

These elements had formed an organization called Karamvir which advocated non-payment of taxes and overthrow of the Government by violent and terrorist methods. Yogi Narharinath had incited the people to acts of vandalism by claiming that he was "the King's man" and by professing that he had relevant papers to support him. He made it known that political groups in Khatmandu were also planning a similar movement to oust the Government.

His followers claimed that their guru was an "incarnation" in deference to whose wishes Government offices must be plundered and district authorities jailed.

The Government, which described Yogi Narharinath as an anarchist, sent orders for his preventive detention, but he absconded. All district authorities in the country, however, had been alerted to watch out for him.

Acting on information that some feudal chiefs of vassal States were being contacted to lend support to the movement, the Central authority sent police reinforcements to Gorkha from Pokhra and Khatmandu and five prominent leaders of the Karamvir movement had been arrested.

Since then, it was stated, information had come to light indicating that some political parties and individuals had a hand in the terrorist activities. Though these had not been named, the Government had asked the local authorities to submit to it all documents for scrutiny.

[Gorkha is the home of the Gorkhas and the place from where the present Shah dynasty of Nepalese kings came to unite Nepal into a single entity.]

A Home Ministry statement on October 27 said that the Gorkha office of the Karamvir organization had been sealed.

A Home Ministry spokesman said in Khatmandu on October 28 that the situation in Gorkha continued to be calm and there was no sign of any threat of violence.

It was reported that about 500 people had been arrested in connexion with the uprising in Gorkha.

Mr. B. P. Koirala's Comment:

Meanwhile, in Bombay on October 28 the Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala told newsmen at Santa Cruz airport that the disturbances in Gorkha on October 25 were not a "very serious affair".

He added: "Had the disturbance been serious, I would not have left the capital to come to Bombay".

He had arrived in Bombay by a special plane from Khatmandu to inaugurate the second Nepali Students' Conference.

He said: "I very much regret the loss of life. The whole thing was very unfortunate".

He denied that there had previously been disturbances in that part of Nepal and did not think that the incident was a challenge to the authority of the Government.

Asked about Yogi Narharinath, he said that the saffron-clad Yogi was a mahant of a shrine and was interested in historical research work, but it seemed that he had started dabbling in politics.

He said that he could not say whether any Ranas were behind the trouble. He was awaiting a fuller report on the incident.

However, he said that there was a class of people, such as the Ranas, Jamedars and landlords who were opposed to land reform measures introduced by his Government. It was possible that this class might be behind the trouble. They had been dispossessed of their extensive landholdings and had to pay taxes on their holdings and were also deprived of their judiciary powers and political rights. It was, therefore not unlikely that the "reactionary" elements might have started the move.

He characterized as "funny" the claim made by Yogi Narahari that he was the King's man and was carrying out royal wishes.

National Democratic Front's Comment:

In a statement issued in Khatmandu on October 30, the National Democratic Front, a three-party alliance composed of the factions led by two former Prime Ministers, Dr. K. I. Singh and Mr. Tanka Prasad Acharya and Mr. Ranganath Sharma of the Prajatantrik Mahasabha, questioned the Government's version of the uprising in Gorkha issued on October 27.

In the statement, the President of the Front, Mr. Ranganath Sharma, said that the Front could not accept the Government's version of the events in Gorkha in which seven people had been killed and six injured.

He considered the Government's action as a manifestation of dictatorial tendencies and said: "This is not only most senseless but is motivated by dictatorial intentions of obliterating opposition. The time has come for the people to get ready to oppose actively the undemocratic acts of the Government."

He demanded that the Government should prove its allegations before an impartial all-party Inquiry Commission. Otherwise, he added, such condemnable acts of the Government could never be tolerated.

Mr. Tanka Prasad Acharya who met some of those arrested in connexion with the incident in Gorkha said in Khatmandu on October 30 that they had told him that Yogi Narharinath, who was said to be the leader of the uprising, had "never preached violence."

The Leader of the Opposition in the Nepalese Parliament, Mr. Bharat Shamsher, in a statement issued on October 30, demanded a judicial inquiry into the incident.

Yogi Narharinath Arrested:

The Nepalese Home Ministry announced on October 31 that Yogi Narharinath had been arrested in Jumla District, adjoining Gorkha District.

The announcement did not give any details of the arrest, but said that the situation in Gorkha "is under control" and calm and peace prevailed in all other districts as well.

It said that some persons had been taken into preventive custody and added: "Violent activities of constituent members of the National Democratic Front are also being investigated".

It deplored the "distorted interpretation" in some circles of official versions of the revolt.

The composition of a special Court for West No. 1 District was also officially announced. (West No. 1 District is adjacent to Gorkha.)

The Court would also try cases arising out of the recent "disorders and looting."

Commission Of Inquiry Appointed:

The Nepalese Government announced on November 6 the appointment of a Judicial Commission to inquire into the Gorkha disturbances on October 25.

Mr. Justice Ratna Bahadur Bisht, Judge of the Supreme Court of Nepal, would constitute the one-member Commission.

C. Development Projects Inaugurated: A number of projects, estimated to cost over Rs. 10 crores, were inaugurated on November 11 all over Nepal by King Mahendra, the Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala and other Ministers to mark the eleventh anniversary of the 1950 Revolution which brought about the fall of the autocratic rule by the Ranas and ushered in the present democratic set-up.

Mr. Koirala laid the foundation-stone of a Rs. 60,000,000 modern 50-bed hospital in Khatmandu to be built under the Nepal-Russia Economic Aid Agreement.

He also inaugurated two diesel power engines in Khatmandu before boarding a plane for Bharatpur and Pokhra with diplomats, including the Indian Ambassador, Mr. Harishwar Dayal, and other officials to perform the opening of several other development projects under the Indian and American aid programmes.

The Home Minister, Mr. S. P. Upadhyaya drove nearly 30 miles through mountains to the East No. 1 District to inaugurate an irrigation project. Another such project was opened by the Food Minister, Mr. Ang Dambe, near Khatmandu.

Other Ministers went to various places in the 54,000-square-mile Kingdom, on a similar mission.

The other projects concerned education, damming of rivers, communication and transport and tourism, most of which were financed by either Indian or American aid. There were also a number of projects which were being financed and worked by Nepal herself.

PHILIPPINES

A. ICFTU Regional Conference: The fifth Asian Regional Conference of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) met in Manila from October 29 to November 4.

Representatives from Japan, Okinawa, South Korea, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Formosa, Malaya, Singapore, Indonesia, Ceylon, Pakistan, Republic of Viet-Nam (RVN), Thailand and Nepal attended.

The Conference requested the Government of India to reconsider the question of the restoration of recognition of free and democratic trade unions as early as possible, as well as the question of punishments inflicted on certain employees.

It expressed shock at the heavy loss of human life and damage to crops and properties caused by cyclones and tidal waves in East Pakistan and its deep sympathy to the affected people.

It protested to the Government of Japan against the fact that it had failed to ratify the ILO Convention No. 87 and furthermore, had repeatedly violated the workers' basic rights through such acts as the "ill-advised revisions of domestic legislation and a series of unjust disciplinary punishments."

By another resolution, it protested "with the strongest indignation over the fact that the military dictatorship in Thailand had defied the existence and operation of trade union organizations."

It requested the Government and people of South Korea to "support the fundamental rights of the free and democratic trade union movement."

It demanded immediate termination of Dutch rule in West Irian. The resolution on West Irian said: "The continuation of Dutch colonialism in West Irian, which is an integral part of Indonesia, is a violation of the rights of Indonesian workers, the whole Indonesian nation and the human right to self-government and full national freedom."

SINGAPORE

A. Relations With Britain: The Prime Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, in a speech to the students of Nanyang University on November 6 criticized Britain for having kept Singapore from the mainland of Malaya.

He said that no one could foresee the political and national divisions of the world by the end of this century, but one thing likely to happen was the alteration of the national boundaries of former colonial territories. When the former colonial Powers divided up Asia and Africa, they had blithely ignored the geography of countries and the histories of nations.

Had the British heeded the history of the peoples of Malaya and her geography and economic realities, he said, they would have integrated Singapore in the Malayan Union, as they did Penang and Malacca.

According to him, they had other considerations—a military base and the fact that it might be possible to maintain power for some time on an island of 224 square miles.

He added: "So, by the fancy of planners and map-makers in London we are today out on a limb, the victim of a freak man-made frontier."

For the time being, he said, the British were in the happy position of saying that it was the Federation Government which did not want Singapore and that was why there was no merger. He would hazard a guess that if tomorrow a Federation Government said that it wanted Singapore, the British would be the most unhappy and unwilling people in the world.

[Britain is still responsible for the foreign affairs of Singapore].

He said that it was trying and difficult to see historical trends checked and reversed by man, but it would be sadder still if out of exasperation Singapore itself joined in trying to distort history. Some impatient and immature political parties were calling for an independent Singapore under some guarantee or other; some "crackpots" wanted Singapore to be under UN protection, like Congo. Independence, he said, would come to Singapore, not a "phoney" independence by itself, guaranteed by UN or some other "benevolent organization", but a real one together with the Federation.

VIET-NAM (RVN)

A. Attempted "Coup" By Paratroopers: Troops loyal to President Ngo Dinh Diem on November 12 foiled an attempt by paratroopers to overthrow the Government.

For 30 hours the paratroopers besieged the Presidential Palace, but Mr. Diem stayed inside, defying the attempt at a coup until the afternoon of November 12, when it failed.

The leader of the coup was Col. Vuong Van Dong, Deputy Commander of the Paratroop Brigade. The rebels had accused President Diem of being autocratic and favouring the Central Viet-Namese at the expense of the southerners. At dawn on November 11 they seized all strong-points and sent fighter planes over the Palace.

An armoured brigade, which President Diem had called to his aid from the south, arrived in Saigon late in the afternoon of November 11 and the Brigade Commander went into the Palace for talks with President Diem. At dusk two Marine companies who had joined with the paratroopers, rolled up to the Palace gates in 15 trucks.

An Army radio broadcast a claim that the coup was successful and "all troops should unite against the communists, who rule in North Viet-Nam".

With heavy fighting raging outside the Palace and around the National Assembly building, the Central Hospital reported that it had admitted 10 dead and 49 wounded and that casualties were coming in "too fast to be counted".

President Diem broadcast an appeal to loyal troops in the provinces in which he said that "some officers of middle rank have betrayed the Government."

The situation in Saigon on November 11 was said to be extremely confused. It was reported that the paratroopers had disarmed all members of the President's elite guard who were off duty in their barracks.

They had also brought an Army Commander, Gen. Le Van Ty, under their control as he was inside Army Headquarters, which had been surrounded by paratroopers.

But the Chief of Staff, Gen. Nguyen Khanh was inside the Palace directing resistance by small units of the Presidential Guard who were on duty when the paratroopers struck.

"Coup" Fails:

The turning point of the coup came in the morning on November 12, when the crews of 15 tanks from the southern provinces switched their support to President Diem. Loyalist forces took over the radio station and called on the paratroops to surrender. At 2 p.m. local time the rebels surrendered.

Government sources said that those who took part in the attempted coup had "agreed to co-operate with the Government."

The Viet-Nam Press Agency reported that the Government had announced that all rebel elements who took part in the attempted coup would be installed in their former units if they reported "within the required deadline."

It did not say whether the amnesty also applied to leaders of the coup.

Meanwhile, the President of the Viet-Namese National Assembly, Mr. Thuong Vinh Le, pledged the full support of the Assembly to President Diem and the armed forces.

In a statement broadcast over Radio Saigon, he said that the rebels had favoured the communists and brought death among the anti-communist forces and the population at large.

A Cambodian communique announced in Pnom Penh on November 13 that a Viet-Namese military plane carrying "armed men" landed there on November 12 and that its passengers were South Viet-Namese "rebel" officers fleeing Saigon, with a loyalist General as their hostage.

The communique, issued by the Royal Cambodian Government, said that all the passengers in the plane had been placed under arrest and were being interrogated by Cambodian military authorities. It said that engine trouble had forced the plane to land at Pnom Penh.

It did not give the names of the Viet-Namese aboard the plane.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Disarmament Debate In UN Political Committee; Mr. N. Khruschev Reports To Nation On His Visit To UN; South Africa Votes To Become Republic; Monckton Commission's Report On Future Of Central African Federation; British Cabinet Re-Shuffle.

A. Disarmament Debate In UN Political Committee: On October 19, the UN General Assembly's main Political Committee began a debate on disarmament.

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Valerian Zorin, criticized the British proposal for studies by technical experts on key aspects of the disarmament problem.

[This proposal was first made in the UN General Assembly by the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, in September, 1960].

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He said that the Soviet Union would walk out of the Political Committee's disarmament debate unless "fruitful work" was done there.

He said that Britain's proposal was "senseless from the point of view of the interests of disarmament, and it was dangerous from the point of view of the interests of peace to start the work with the elaboration of technical details."

Noting that the British proposal had been formulated in a resolution, while Britain had joined USA and Italy in sponsorship of a separate resolution outlining a number of disarmament principles, he said: "The Western Powers understand themselves that the naked and unbecoming substance of the British proposal should somehow be covered.

"And thus simultaneously with the British resolution emerged the tripartite, American-British-Italian resolution.

"This joint resolution really contained beautiful words about disarmament, but nothing else.

"What good can technical experts do if they have neither political instructions nor agreement on principle between States about the substance of the disarmament programme?

"But that is not all. The very fact of the work of technical experts will give rise to illusions as if some serious negotiations on disarmament were going on, whereas in reality it will be a mere waste of ink which covers up the intensification of the armaments race and the rise of a threat of world thermo-nuclear war."

He added: "At the outset, despite statements of the representatives of USA and her allies, which were not in the least encouraging, USSR was ready to undertake another attempt to come to an agreement with the Western Powers on disarmament questions."

He went on to outline the Soviet three-stage disarmament proposals which the Soviet Premier, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, had laid before the Assembly in September, 1960. These proposals looked to general and complete disarmament under international control with an international police force established to maintain world order, following the elimination of national forces and armaments.

He said that the proposals proceeded from the premise that effective international control "should be a pre-requisite for the realization of the disarmament programme."

He said that for "their dishonest purpose," opponents of disarmament had often tried to present the matter in such a way as if the Soviet Union did not want adequate control.

He said: "It is as early as in the first stage of general and complete disarmament that we propose the establishment of international on-site control over the limitation of all means of delivery of nuclear weapons to the targets, including the most modern military rockets."

On the ultimate stage of creation of an international police body, he said that in making this proposal, the Soviet Union could not "pass over in silence the fact that with the present structure of the executive bodies of United Nations its realization would create grave danger for some or other States."

While the executive machinery of UN was headed by one man, who in all circumstances expressed the interests of only one group of States, international forces were bound to be used by him in the interests of that group to the detriment of others.

He asked: "Is this not the case in Congo?"

Introducing the Soviet disarmament resolution tabled on October 13, which would have the Assembly call on Governments to make every effort to achieve a constructive solution of the problem and recommend that a Disarmament Treaty be drawn up on specified principles, he said: "We, without any doubt, are ready to study thoroughly the considerations of delegations which would be aimed at the improvement of these instructions and which would not lead us aside from the speediest elaboration of a Treaty on general and complete disarmament."

He said that as soon as all the basic principles were agreed upon and approved by the Assembly, negotiations might be continued "in a more narrow working body in the Disarmament Committee" composed as the Soviet Union had suggested, of five Western and five communist members, with the addition of the United Arab Republic, Ghana, India, Indonesia and Mexico.

He said that at an appropriate stage it would be necessary to work out a detailed programme of measures for each stage of general and complete disarmament and the corresponding controls and appropriate specialists should be invited to do this.

The British delegate, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore, replied to Mr. Zorin's comments about the British resolution, saying that there was "no implication in it whatever of a desire to delay disarmament negotiations."

Quite the reverse, he said, was true. The sole purpose of the resolution was to establish machinery which would provide the negotiators with the technical information they would need.

It was designed to "help us make progress in the field of disarmament." It was "not designed to bring about delay."

Mr. Howard Green (Canada) one of the Western members of the Geneva 10-Nation Committee, suggested the appointment of a neutral chairman of that body—possibly a Swiss—and the establishment of "a sort of Advisory Committee on disarmament", drawn from a representative group of UN members.

The group, he said, could make suggestions to the main negotiating body in such fields as the following:

(1) They could consider the various principles advanced with a view to finding a common definition;

(2) They could examine specific proposals;

(3) They could consider how best to deal with weapons of mass destruction—nuclear, bacteriological and chemical—and their means of delivery;

(4) They could examine the problems of peace-keeping machinery in relation to the programme of disarmament;

(5) They could explore the relationship between this machinery and the disarmament control organization and the relationship of both to UN; and

(6) They could discuss new ideas, which would be based on their own views about the importance and urgency of various measures of disarmament.

Dealing with his suggestion for an Advisory Committee, he said that it could perhaps be a group of 10 or 12 members representing the main geographical areas.

He said: "I would regard it as a kind of watch-dog committee offering advice and encouragement to the negotiators". Its reports would not conflict with those of the proposed technical group, which would be concerned with administrative, scientific and military details.

Mr. James Wadsworth (USA) said that his country would not walk out "in any circumstances" and would not be intimidated by any Soviet threat to do so.

Any workable disarmament programme, he said, must conform to three simple propositions:

"(1) It should be fairly balanced between the two sides, giving neither a significant military advantage;

"(2) It should have adequate inspection and verification, thus assuring each side that the other was keeping its promises; and

"(3) It should proceed step by step building confidence as it goes, so that more and more far-reaching proposals may be made effective."

He added: "We have no reason to believe that the Soviet Union would refrain from using a military advantage, arising from an unbalanced disarmament programme, in order to pursue her aims of further expansion.

"We are determined that no weakness on our part shall arise to tempt anyone to destroy, either by force or by the threat of force, the independence or territorial integrity of another nation or the freedom of another people. There must be no room for doubt about that. We will not sign any agreement which would lead to such a result."

He said that he would be less than frank if he did not say that "we are yet to be convinced that USSR will accept really effective controls." That could only be tested in concrete negotiations, and US experience with them had "not led us to be optimistic."

USA did not want control for its own sake. It did not ask for control for espionage purposes, as the Soviet Union might charge.

He said: "We do not ask for anything from USSR that we are not willing to concede to USSR."

He submitted that the Soviet draft resolution before the Committee was "intended to forestall rather than promote real disarmament." It put two fundamental obstacles in the way: First, it insisted on a re-organization of the Secretariat and of the Security Council, which Mr. Khruschev had described as a "spittoon."

Secondly, it insisted that progress towards disarmament must be made only through a single Treaty in which all disarmament measures were laid out for all time.

In the US view, the first purpose of negotiations should be to isolate and identify those areas, whether broad or limited, in which agreement and action could clearly serve the interests of both sides, and which would lead towards more ambitious efforts. That was the realistic path. The Soviet Union had supported the approach in the past.

He said: "We see no reason why they should not do so again."

He did not offer any new American disarmament proposals. But, he reiterated the proposal made in the Disarmament Commission in August, 1960 by Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge that all production of fissionable materials for use in weapons be stopped and that USA and the Soviet Union each initially should transfer over 30 tons of highly enriched weapons with "A" grade uranium from weapons stockpiles to peaceful purposes.

He said that USA was prepared to undertake that step without making it contingent on any other disarmament proposals.

The Soviet Union had indicated that the plan was unacceptable to it and he said that if the Soviet Union was not prepared to accept a complete shut-down of its uranium and plutonium production centres, USA was prepared to shut down its plants one by one under international inspection on a reciprocal basis.

He also supported the British proposal of technical studies with a report within six months.

He said that USA also supported the immediate setting up of an upper ceiling of 2,500,000 for the armed forces of USA and USSR, while proposing an early agreement on a reduction to 2,100,000 men each.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He added that a review of the Western proposals would show that the Soviet charge that the West stood for "control without disarmament" was baseless.

Speaking in reply to Mr. Wadsworth, Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) said that USA was maintaining a position on disarmament which gave "no basis for any manner of agreement."

He repeated that the US philosophy continued to be based on the principle of control over armaments rather than disarmament under controls.

He said that the Soviet Union wished to have an agreement, but she was not going to engage in empty talk in the absence of a basis for agreement. Mr. Ormsby-Gore and Mr. Green had centred attention on the need for technical preparations. Mr. Green had spoken of the absolute need to resume talks.

The Soviet Union could not agree with that. There had been talks for 15 years and the Soviet Union did not want to engage in fruitless talks and if there was no basis for talks, there was no point in holding them and "deceiving the peoples of the world."

Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto (Pakistan) said that the time was ripe for a comprehensive study of the economic and social consequences of world disarmament.

He said that widespread fear existed in many nations lest a reversal of the arms race might lead to a world-wide economic crisis.

After reviewing recent disarmament negotiations, he said he believed that the best prospects of an early agreement lay in the following five fields:

(1) Prohibition against placing into orbit or stationing in outer space of vehicles carrying weapons;

(2) Cessation of the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes and the transfer of agreed quantities of such material from past production to non-weapons uses;

(3) Prior notification of proposed launching of missiles as an immediate step to reduce the risk of war by accident or miscalculation;

(4) Appropriate measures to give greater protection against surprise attack as an initial step towards safeguarding the world against such attack;

(5) The prevention of a wider dissemination of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Adam Rapacki (Poland) on October 21 proposed the convening of a special session of the General Assembly in April, 1961 if an East-West Treaty on the suspension of nuclear tests had not been concluded by then.

He denounced Western plans for inspection and control of any disarmament system and said that the type of inspection proposed by the West would encourage "preventive war" by showing the NATO Powers that they were "already weaker than the Soviet Union in some areas and losing ground in others."

He added: "The Government of the Federal Republic of Germany has been authorized by the Council of the Western European Union to raise again the ceiling on its armaments. It has been allowed to build warships of great tonnage, submarines and certain types of rockets.

"The commander of the NATO forces Gen. Laurris Norstad has suggested the creation within NATO of a European atomic striking force with the participation of West German units. Preparations are under way to equip the West German Army with American ballistic missiles of the Polaris type.

"These are signs that their experience in the use of nuclear weapons becomes greater and greater. The net-work of rocket bases on foreign territories becomes larger and larger.

"Last February and March, it was revealed to us that there were plans of the Federal Republic of Germany for installation of bases of the German Army in certain other European countries and we learned that the first German contingents had already been sent into French territory.

"In these conditions, disarmament negotiations can have no constructive result. A continuation of these policies to the infinite can do nothing but increase the danger to peace."

He said that "complete and general disarmament", was a new notion, which alone could apply to present scientific and technical military conditions.

He said he was astonished that the Western Powers had reacted with so little attention and USA with such ill-will to the declaration of Mr. Khruschev, "that he was ready to accept all Western suggestions on control, if the proposals of USSR were also accepted".

He said that Mr. Khruschev's proposal was a "new and essential element in the disarmament debates."

The Western Powers, who were so sensitive on the question of control, should have accepted this declaration as a basis for discussion.

He suggested several measures designed to slow down the arms race. They were:

(1) The rapid conclusion of an agreement on the end of nuclear testing;

(2) An appeal to nuclear Powers to refrain from furnishing atomic arms to other States, or to help them manufacture them;

(3) An appeal to States not possessing atomic arms that they should not accept them;

(4) An appeal to nations to refrain from setting up new military bases, or rocket installations on foreign territory; and

(5) An appeal to nations to refuse bases or rocket installations on their territory, and not to set them up themselves.

On October 21, Dr. Gaetano Martino (Italy), proposed expansion of the 10-Nation Disarmament Committee by the inclusion of non-aligned nations.

He said that negotiations should be resumed in Geneva in the Disarmament Committee, but he would not object to any other forum for discussions. Balanced disarmament should replace the balance of military forces.

Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon) said that in the disarmament question UN delegates bore a great responsibility not only as representatives of their countries, but as representatives of "countless millions of people whose eyes are on this Assembly who are waiting for something to be done which will bring about an era of peace and disarmament for which the whole world is longing."

Mr. V. Zorin Rejects Italy-USA-UK Resolution:

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Zorin, on October 25 rejected the disarmament proposal tabled by Italy, USA and UK (see page 3648).

The three-Power draft would have the General Assembly set six principles which should guide disarmament negotiations and have the Assembly urge "that negotiations be resumed as soon as possible on the basis of this resolution".

Mr. Zorin urged the Western side to get down to the basic principles of a Treaty on general and complete disarmament. He said that the three-Power resolution followed "the vicious and dangerous line of control over arms" instead of disarmament control.

He added: "If our appeal is not heard by USA and her allies this time again, it they will further use the consideration of the disarmament problem in the Political Committee as a screen for covering up the policy of the arms race and brinkmanship, we shall have no other choice but to terminate our participation in the discussion of the disarmament problem in this Political Committee."

He repeated the Soviet proposal for a special session of the UN General Assembly next Spring to discuss the question.

On October 27, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon (India) called upon UN to consider issuing clear directives on the disarmament issues with a view to resumption of disarmament negotiations and stopping the arms race.

He made several proposals, but said that he would formulate these as resolutions for adoption only if there was sufficient support for them.

His proposals included immediate stoppage of development of new nuclear weapons, agreement by both Power blocs not to set up any new military bases and possibly dismantle one or two existing bases, speedy conclusion of agreement to ban nuclear tests of any kind, including underground tests and recognition of the role of smaller Powers in promoting disarmament.

He appealed to the newly-independent countries not to enter the arms race and said that the machinery for enforcing disarmament measures would be the Security Council (with expanded membership but with the retention of the veto) and requested the Soviet Union not to oppose changes in the composition of the Security Council and other bodies.

He said: "My Government regards the gap in the continuity of negotiations itself as catastrophic." He was not concerned whether resumption of negotiations took place "at the summit or the foot-hills", but he did want them to be resumed either in the 10-Nation Committee or the expanded committee in which neutrals participated or in a meeting of the Disarmament Commission at an early date.

Referring to the progress of talks to end nuclear tests, he said that his Government, while welcoming the progress made, did not subscribe to what appeared to be an agreed decision by the two sides for continuing underground explosions.

Secondly, while any method of control and inspection to prevent recurrence of tests might not be water-tight in the sense that any law could be evaded, it was his view that for all practical purposes this difficulty need not stand in the way because of the knowledge already available.

Agreement to ban tests would be an important step towards arms control as it would reverse the process of nuclear armaments. Recent developments had made this matter more urgent than before.

Formerly, countries which had the capacity to build nuclear bombs were estimated at 10. Now it might be 20 and the number was rapidly increasing, thanks to the ingenuity of German scientists. Nuclear weapons might well become a universal menace unless checked in time. Great Powers, he said, might be expected to restrain themselves from using the weapons, but similar restraint might not be exercised by others.

He said that there were still countries which were prepared to wage wars to retain colonial possessions and nuclear weapons could conceivably be used by them against indigenous populations in revolt. For all these and other considerations, it was no longer practicable to think in terms of mere balanced reduction of armaments.

Directives of UN must take notice of the fact that no implementation of disarmament was possible without full machinery for inspection and control without any reservations. At the same time, it should be recognized that no machinery could be 100 per cent perfect.

He appealed to the delegates not to imagine that because the prospects of nuclear war were so horrible, nations would be scared into avoiding war even without agreed disarmament measures. Apart from a few intelligent people, no one could grasp the horror of some of the things being written about the cost of nuclear war, for example "60 megacorpses" or 60,000,000 corpses.

He said that someone had said if one man was killed it was a tragedy; if a million were killed, it was statistics. So long as weapons of annihilation were allowed to be retained in whatever degree, one could not rule out war by mistake or accident or bigger countries being dragged into it by small ones.

He commented favourably on the Polish proposal, which tended generally to aim at freezing nuclear weapons.

He also advocated the establishment of the largest possible number of zones free from military pacts in Europe, Asia and Africa.

Mr. James Wadsworth (USA) said that the speech of the Soviet delegate gave the indication that the Russian attitude had become slightly more favourable.

He said that he saw a certain degree of favourable development in the Soviet attitude since the Soviet delegate, Mr. Zorin, seemed to accept, at present that certain concrete preliminary measures be taken to improve the atmosphere before working out a Treaty on general and complete disarmament.

He declared: "If this is the case, it is imperative to start immediate negotiations on such preliminary measures."

He said that USA was ready to examine the preliminary measures proposed by the Soviet Union and expressed the hope that the Soviet Union would be willing to examine the preliminary measures proposed by the West.

Sir Garfield Berwick (Australia) appealed to both East and West to seek common ground on the disarmament problem and consider the British proposal for a study group of experts.

He said that there was considerable merit in the British proposal for expert technical study. In the system of inspection and control there should be no demand such as the Soviet Union had made for making an agreement on all points of a global disarmament programme. This was not the time for a comprehensive Treaty. He added that the problem of disarmament should be met only by a step-by-step approach.

M. Armand Berard (France) said: "At a moment when urgent decisions were called for, the French delegation wonders with anxiety if the controversy which is being carried on here, often with bitterness, on general formulas, is not somewhat vain and if it is really of such a nature as to bring about progress in the cause of disarmament."

He said that France hoped to resume immediately and without delay the disarmament negotiations at Geneva. He maintained that the Geneva talks had not been worthless and that the 10-Nation Committee must remain in close touch with UN.

He said: "The French Government considers more than ever that it is on the elimination of the principal vehicles for transporting nuclear weapons—satellites, rockets, supersonic aircraft, submarines, aircraft-carriers, launching ramps etc.—that the real disarmament effort should be brought to bear in a primary and urgent way."

Mr. Ismael Toure (Ghana) said that no programme of disarmament could be applied without a solution of the problems of colonialism and imperialism.

It was inconceivable to ask the Algerian people to renounce their armed struggle while more than a million and a half foreign soldiers were opposing the will of these people. Disarmament pre-supposed an end of all wars of conquest, including an end of the Algerian conflict and of racial suppression in South Africa.

The conflict in Congo demonstrated to what an extent the problem of the liberation of peoples concerned international security.

He said that nothing could justify the exclusion of China and it was clear that no Disarmament Agreement was desirable in China's absence.

Mr. Osten Unden (Sweden) said that in view of the present political situation, the Committee should not aim at more than re-establishing suitable machinery for a resumption of negotiations.

He suggested that special experts be appointed by the respective Governments to tackle technical problems as agreed upon in the negotiating body.

Committee Of Non-Nuclear Powers Proposed:

On November 1, Canada, Sweden and Norway proposed that a Committee of non-nuclear Powers be set up to try to get disarmament negotiations resumed.

Mr. Howard Green (Canada) who came to UN Headquarters especially to present the proposal, said that so far the current General Assembly had "not given much promise for the future."

He said: "We must check the drift, so noticeable in recent weeks away from serious talks and in the direction of sterile propaganda debates."

In the resolution, the Assembly would ask the proposed Committee "to examine urgently ways and means of assisting the resumption of serious negotiations and facilitating the attainment of the goal of general and complete disarmament under effective international control."

He said it was proposed that the Committee be set up at once and report back to the 99-nation UN Disarmament Commission not later than April 1, 1961.

The Committee would be composed of "a limited number of States which do not possess nuclear weapons, selected on the basis of equitable geographical distribution."

Dr. Raul Roa (Cuba) said that the 10-Nation Committee should be "revamped" to allow more nations to take part in its discussions, and its chairman should be the Chairman of the Disarmament Commission, Dr. Luis Padillo Nervo (Mexico).

Mr. David Ormsby-Gore (Britain) reiterated on November 4 that it would be impossible to confine a new global war to conventional weapons.

War must be avoided because it would be misleading people to advance the concept that nuclear war could be avoided in a global conflict.

He was answering in the Committee's disarmament debate what he described as "certain misunderstandings" in an earlier statement by Mr. Ahmed Shukairy (Saudi Arabia).

He said: "I want the Committee to understand, that this is not just my view. it was the view which was expressed by very distinguished scientists from the Soviet Union, India, Britain and USA and I will very happily give Mr. Shukairy a copy of the statement if he wants it. This is a matter."

He also commented that Mr. Shukairy had "poured scorn" on Britain's proposal to set up an expert study group to examine the scientific, military and administrative aspects of verified disarmament. Mr. Shukairy had said that there was no evidence that such an approach could arrive at useful conclusions.

Mr. Shukairy told the 99-member Committee in his speech that the British proposal to set up technical studies "added complications to a problem already congested with complications." He said that behind the plan was "a technique which is neither useful nor innocent."

Britain would do better "not to expand the zone of danger and not defeat the main purpose of disarmament."

Referring to a report that Britain would stock-pile nuclear weapons in Aden, Cyprus, Singapore and East Africa, he said: "This is a perilous extension of the area of war, inviting danger to the Arab world, Asia and Africa, simply to save British nuclear bombers from destruction."

Answering Mr Ormsby-Gore's statement that it was impossible for the 99-member Committee to embark on details of how disarmament principles should be translated into measures, he asked: "Have you been able to accomplish the task in your small Committee"?

He said that "nothing could be more desperate" than Mr. Ormsby-Gore's conclusion that the next war would be a nuclear conflict.

He added: "On the question of war and nuclear war he is better qualified to speak. In modern history, the British have been engaged in two World Wars, and the knowledge of war runs in their veins."

U Thant (Burma) told the Committee that a "Pearl Harbour complex governs American thinking in the formulation of its foreign and military policies". He warned the Great Powers of the risks of fear psychosis and said that the Soviet Union was still obsessed with the fear of encirclement and aggression. USA too, was a prisoner of its past.

He said: "For those of us, who do not for a moment think that Russia will ever launch a thermo-nuclear war on USA or, for that matter, on any other country, for the simple reason that it could only bring disaster to all humanity, including the Russians themselves, such frantic and extremely risky precautionary measures are not the path of wisdom.

"The problem of disarmament can be solved only if the Big Powers directly concerned can rid their thinking of fear and suspicion and the terrible obsession that history repeats itself."

Turning to the various disarmament proposals before the Committee, he said that the Soviet plan to liquidate all foreign military bases in the first stage of disarmament was likely to prolong the negotiations unduly.

Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo (Mexico), Chairman of the UN Disarmament Commission, said that the "small nations may constitute a rich source of ideas" and they should be given more opportunity to contribute to the solution of the disarmament problem.

He suggested that the Disarmament Commission should formulate an outline of the areas of disagreement between the East and the West and then recommend possible ways of bridging the gap between conflicting view-points.

Dr. Jose Felix De Lequrica (Spain) said that after listening to the debate he was "more and more convinced that we should reduce our statements to the size of the weapons possessed by the countries speaking."

It was "melancholy" that those States which were not distinguished for the enormity of their own weapons were [illegible] warreduce the stocks of others.

He supported Britain's proposal to set up a group of scientific, military and administrative experts to study various aspects of verified disarmament.

Mr. Endre Sik (Hungary) said that the Committee's debate on the disarmament question was hot promising. The Western nations should return to better methods of negotiation on the disarmament problem. They must show their desire to reach a compromise on the basis of the Soviet resolution on general and complete disarmament or any new proposal containing the essential elements of the Soviet resolution.

On November 7, Dato Nik Ahmed Kamil (Malaya) said that peace based on a nuclear deterrent was "frightfully precarious" and actually took mankind to the precipice of war itself.

He said: "A slight imbalance, a slight misjudgment on our part, will plunge mankind into the ravine of total annihilation."

Pleading for quick resumption of disarmament negotiations, he said that it must be the primary task of UN to use all the moral persuasion and authority in its power to call upon the major military Powers, in whose hands lay the capacity for destroying the world and humanity, to resume their efforts towards this goal.

Communist China, he said possessed the largest conventional army in the world. Therefore, that country must be included in any disarmament programme.

Dr. Victor Belaunde (Peru) said that the best thing the Political Committee could do was to adopt a simple resolution which would urge the two sides to get together for negotiations.

Mr. Fouad Ammoun (Lebanon) said on November 8 that problems like cessation of nuclear tests, prevention of wider dissemination of nuclear weapons and the use of outer space for peaceful purposes only, could be solved without a general Treaty on general and complete disarmament.

He suggested that the smaller nations should refuse to accept nuclear weapons. If this were guaranteed by UN, the nuclear Powers would have to accept it.

The Political Committee adjourned on November 8 after completing the general debate stage of its discussion on disarmament.

B. Mr. N. Khruschev Reports To Nation On His Visit To UN: The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, reported to the nation on his visit to United Nations, in a speech from Moscow's Palace of Sport on October 20.

He said that USA had nuclear submarines armed with rockets and quoted reports that the US Pentagon had decided to send such submarines to cruise near Soviet shores.

He said: "How would it be if we took the same path and our submarines cruised near US shores? The sending of these submarines is a criminal brink-of-war policy, as proclaimed by the late Mr. Dulles (former US Secretary of State) and now pursued by his followers—a path of 'cold war' which can turn into a hot one."

He said that Russia's relations with USA had lately grown worse "through no fault of ours".

But, he stressed: "We are confident that the time will come when the relations between our States, our peoples and our Governments will improve".

He proposed a "Summit' meeting after the American Presidential elections to solve the question of a German Peace Treaty and the problem of Berlin.

He said that the new disarmament proposals of the Western Powers submitted to the UN General Assembly for consideration "are an ill-omen for the future". These proposals showed that the Western Powers still refused to approach seriously the solution of the disarmament problem and were continuing to use disarmament talks to cover up the policy of the arms race.

He declared that his journey to attend the UN General Assembly was "both necessary and justified."

The first stage of the Assembly session, was marked in the main by "the struggle of the new, the progressive with the old and the outworn, which was impeding the growth and development of the new."

The Soviet attitude had found the full support of the socialist States and understanding and sympathy in many other countries. As a result of the success of the Soviet view, President Eisenhower and the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, had to change their decision to ignore the session and had attended it themselves.

The speeches of Dr. Kwame Nkrumah (Ghana), President Sekou Toure (Guinea), President Sukarno (Indonesia), Mr. Nehru (India), President Nasser (UAR) and Prince Norodom Sihanouk (Cambodia) had played a great part in pointing out the dangers of colonialism.

He said that the session was "the most representative gathering of world leaders in contemporary times and a number of questions, such as disarmament, liquidation of colonialism, changes in the structure of UN as well as the admission of communist China and discussion of the Algerian question, had been raised during the proceedings.

He added that if the Heads of Government at the extraordinary session of the Assembly—which it was necessary to call next Spring—agreed in principle on the solution of the question of general and complete disarmament they could indicate the direction for the work of the 10-Nation Disarmament Committee.

In commenting on changes in the world since the establishment of UN, he said: "It is the socialist countries that are leading in the race of production increases, in the conquest of space, in the peaceful uses of atomic energy."

He asked: "By what right can Britain be regarded as a Great Power and India not a Great Power?"

He repeated that it had become necessary to introduce changes in the structure of UN to reflect the new balance of forces between the socialist, imperialist and neutralist States. Listing France and Britain among the Great Powers, he stressed: "We cannot exclude from this list India and Indonesia, not to speak of restoring the rights of People's China."

He added: "The principle of equal rights, equal opportunities and equal representation must also be introduced in the structure of the executive bodies of UN. The UN Secretariat must consist of three Secretaries."

He added that the geographical location of UN Headquarters in USA "presents great inconveniences, even apart from the fact that the conditions existing in USA are not conducive to such an international Organization being located there.

"All these, and many other factors of international life, show that a reappraisal of values, a new approach to the solution of important world problems is in order."

He described the disarmament problem as "the hub of all vital problems of our time" and said that the Soviet Union was "against procrastination on the question and will not agree to deceive the peoples by endless talks."

He repeated his statement concerning the de facto recognition by the Soviet Union of "the Provisional Government" of the Algerian Republic and said he was confident that the policy of the "colonialists" in the Congo would collapse. The recognition by the UN General Assembly of the importance of the question of abolishing colonialism raised by the Soviet Union, "is a great moral satisfaction for the Soviet Union."

He said that the "imperialist Powers" voted only for the discussion of the abolition of colonialism at plenary sessions—"but this does not yet settle the substance of the matter."

Turning to the position of China, he said: "China is not being recognized because she has become a socialist State". The policy of "mechanical majorities" denying China her rightful place in UN would suffer defeat in the near future. Unless the leaders of UN recovered their reason and acted to admit communist China, "they would soon have to swallow the most bitter pill" in their careers by seeing China admitted against their opposition.

He said that the Soviet people did not want a nuclear war because of the terrible sufferings and destruction it would bring. Communists did not want a World War because they were convinced that their system was superior to the capitalist and that the future would bring victory to the socialist system all over the world. Only adventurers, could believe that a changed social system could be brought to others by bayonets or rockets.

A nuclear war would lead to the death of hundreds and hundreds of millions of people and anybody wishing for such a war would bear the terrible responsibility before humanity. That was why the Soviet Government wanted general disarmament linked with strict control.

He said that there were people who might say that since Russia's forces were greater than the enemy's, why not use them to speed up the social changes and the victory of communism? The reply was that, by arguing in this way they were helping the capitalist propagandists who claimed that the communists were only waiting for the right opportunity to impose their system on the world by force of arms.

Socialism did not need force to win. Marxism-Leninism had showed its historical inevitability. The force of example was the greatest and most effective. The development of the Soviet Union from a backward State to her present position was the best means of convincing people all over the world of the superiority of the socialist system.

C. South Africa Votes To Become Republic: A referendum held in South Africa on October 5 decided that the Union should become a Republic.

A Johannesburg report on October 7 said that Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd's Nationalist Party gained a decisive but not handsome victory in its bid to make South Africa a Republic.

Unofficial results of the referendum showed that the Republicans had won with a majority of 76,117. An analysis of the voting figures revealed that teenagers were largely responsible for the Government's victory.

A few years ago, the voting age was reduced from 21 to 18. The Nationalist Government now reaped the reward of this move.

A Johannesburg message said that most Afrikaan-speaking teenagers had been indoctrinated in Government schools. They were ardent Republicans and firm believers in white supremacy.

About 1,600,000 whites voted in the referendum on October 5, and the majority in favour of a Republic was just 76,000 votes.

None of the Union's 12,000,000 non-whites were allowed to take part in the referendum.

Comments:

The South African Minister of Economic Affairs, Dr. N. Diederichs, said at The Hague on October 22 that South Africa intended to remain within the Commonwealth following the referendum in favour of a Republic.

He said: "It is our policy and our intention, to remain a member of the Commonwealth. A public statement to this effect will be made shortly."

He said that even if South Africa were to leave the Commonwealth, her trade pattern would remain the same, if only for purely commercial reasons.

The leader of the South African United (Opposition) Party in Natal, Mr. Douglas Mitchell said in Pietermaritzburg that since October 5 citizens in the province had been "bewildered and fearful" over the future.

Implying that there would be no secession from the Republic, he said in a policy statement issued to the Press: "To deny the fundamental unity of our South African people would be an act of betrayal against the people who share our outlook in every corner of our great land."

On October 8, replying to shouts of "Lead us" from a crowd outside Durban airport, he gave the warning that it would be suicidal for Natal to "go it alone."

He said that the Natal Provincial Council would be asked "to initiate action which will protect the fundamental rights of our people and our province". This, he added, would have the object of obtaining powers needed to enable Natal to make her contribution to national unity.

Appealing to the people of Natal to support the Provincial Council, he said the full terms of the proposed action would be published shortly.

The volume of demands from members of all political parties for action to save the province from the "treacherous consequences" of the establishment of a Republic, he said, left no doubt that they came from the heart of the people as a whole.

In a statement, the leader of the Opposition, Sir de Villiers Graff, said that only some 52 per cent of those who voted in the referendum favoured a Republic.

This slender majority could in no way be described as representing the broad will of the people.

He said: "Any Republic created with such a mandate will, in the nature of things, be a sectional Republic and not a South African Republic."

He added he was certain that many people who voted for the Republic did so in the sincere belief that the Republic would be within the Commonwealth.

D. African "Summit" Conference: A "Summit" Conference of former French African territories—Ivory Coast, Niger, Upper Volta, Dahomey, Senegal, Mauretania, French Congo, Gabon, Central African Republic, Mali, Cameroons and Chad—ended at Abidjan (Ivory Coast) on October 26 with the announcement that the participant-States had agreed unanimously on the most effective means of finding solutions to the Algerian, Congolese and other African problems.

In a communique published following the three-day Conference, the participating Heads of Government said that they had agreed to adopt a common attitude on all international and particularly African questions. Their Governments would send instructions to this effect to their UN delegations.

It said that the countries discussed at length important African problems including the Algerian conflict, the situation in the Congo and Mauretania, a sparsely populated country south of Morocco.

It was agreed to hold similar Conferences periodically, enlarging them to include other States.

E. Monckton Commission's Report On Future Of Central African Federation: The Report of the Monckton Commission on the future of the Central African Federation was published in London on October 11.

The Commission expressed the view that the three African territories of Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland should remain linked in a Federation, but the structure of the present seven-year-old Federation should be recast into a "form more acceptable to its inhabitants."

It said that to break up the Federation "at this crucial moment in the history of Africa would be an admission that there is no hope of survival for any multi-racial society on the African continent, and that differences of colour and race are irreconcilable. We cannot agree to such a conclusion".

Its recommendations were purely advisory and would now be studied by the five Governments concerned—those of Britain, the Federation and the three territories—for discussion at the forthcoming Conference to review the Federal Constitution.

The following are the main points of the Report:

The Commission was of the opinion that the present Constitution did not confer on any of the territorial legislatures any right, express or implied, to secede from the Federation, and that attainment of responsible government did not impart any such right. This right could only be created by an Act of the British Parliament.

It said that to grant the right of secession might provide a safety-valve and make it less likely that secession would be insisted upon and added that it should be made clear before the Review Conference that the question of secession would be discussed there.

It recommended that a new constitution for Northern Rhodesia and constitutional changes for Southern Rhodesia should be negotiated and put into effect without awaiting a full revision of the Federal structure.

It stated that "while the Federation cannot continue unless it commands general acceptance, dissolution would lead to hardship, poverty and distress."

It added: "We have considered and rejected three alternative forms of association and state our view that the three territories could best go forward if they remained linked in a federal association, but that it is too much disliked to survive in its present shape."

The three alternatives considered by it were:

(1) A scheme known as the Central African Alliance, supported mainly by a section of European opinion in Northern and Southern Rhodesia, calling for a self-governing Dominion composed of Southern Rhodesia and the Copper-belt of Northern Rhodesia, with a line of communication;

(2) A loose consultative arrangement similar to the Central African Council set up after the War to co-ordinate policy and action between the three Governments on all matters of common interest;

(3) To bring the Federation to an end and link the three territories in a looser association such as the East Africa High Commission.

The Commission spent three months in the Federation—from February to May, 1960. Its 26 members travelled over 16,000 miles and received well over 1,000 written memoranda as well as oral evidence.

Before giving the details of its conclusions, the Commission in its Report examined "the present attitude towards federation". It found "an almost pathological" dislike of federation among Africans in Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, associated with a picture of Southern Rhodesia as a white man's country. It found that this opposition had grown during the last seven years and was genuine.

In Southern Rhodesia, most African witnesses expressed no opposition to federation, believing that association with African majorities in the North would strengthen their position and that the Federal Government had been more liberal than the Southern Rhodesian Government.

Many Europeans in Southern Rhodesia were hostile to federation, which they believed would lead to a too rapid increase of African political power, while most Europeans in the other two territories valued federation as giving them greater security.

The Commission underlined the economic advantages of federation and said that to break it up would "cause the economy of the area to suffer a setback from which it might take years to recover".

It, however, suggested that in view of the African dislike of federation, a new name should be chosen.

Among the proposals contained in the Report were:

(1) A majority of the Commission members favoured equal distribution of seats between Europeans and Africans in the Federal Assembly of 60 members; and

(2) A common roll, on a qualitative franchise, of African and European voters.

It also made several recommendations about the transfer of some functions, (non-African education, inter-territorial roads, agricultural services and prisons) from the Federal to the territorial Governments.

It called for drastic changes in Southern Rhodesia's racial policies while recognizing, at the same time, that much progress had been made in this direction It said that Pass laws should be abolished, the problem of land apportionment tackled and Africans should take part in urban local government and have wider opportunities in industry and the public services.

It recommended a Bill of Rights to safeguard individual freedoms and a Council of State in each territory to watch for discriminatory legislation.

A minority report was submitted by Mr. W. M. Chirwa of Nyasaland and Mr. G. H. Habanyama, representing the Federation, in which they said that while there was much to agree with in the majority recommendations, continuance of the Federation not based on consent was unacceptable. They urged that a referendum in each territory should be held to decide whether it wished to remain in the Federation.

The following statement was issued by the Commonwealth Relations Office in London on October 11 in connexion with the Monckton Commission's Report:

"The Prime Minister of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland has expressed his view that the Monckton Commission's recommendations in Chapter 16 of their Report go beyond their terms of reference.

"The terms of reference of the Commission, as agreed between the Governments, were not intended to embrace the question of dissolution of the Federation or secession of any of the component territories. Her Majesty's Government made it clear that they were unwilling to extend the terms of reference so as to cover this, since they considered that it would not be in accord with the accepted objects of the Federal constitutional review. This was made clear by the British Prime Minister in the House of Commons. The Federal Prime Minister was, therefore, justified in assuming that in view of these terms of reference the Commission would not recommend secession, or dissolution of the Federation.

"Whatever view may be taken as to whether this recommendation was within the terms of reference of the Commission, it is clear that the Review Conference must be free to discuss this and any other relevant issue."

F. Cuba Withdraws From World Bank: It was announced in Havana on October 18 that Cuba had withdrawn from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

G. Britain's First Atom-Submarine "Dreadnought" Launched: Queen Elizabeth on October 21 launched at Barro-in-Furness Britain's first atomic submarine, the 3,500-ton "hunter-killer", Dreadnought.

Dreadnought, 266 ft. long, with a beam of 32 ft. was the ninth vessel of the Royal Navy to bear the name. It was expected to come into commission late in 1962, and would be the Navy's largest submarine, though not her longest. Her hull would be "tear-drop" in shape, a form described as the naval architect's dream.

The launching of Dreadnought at Vickers Armstrong yard heralded the advent for the British Navy of an age of silent under-water sea-power.

One of the most powerful weapons of war ever produced in Britain, the whale-shaped craft would, if trials proved satisfactory, be the prototype of a first series of nuclear "killer" submarines.

Costing about £40,000,000 between them, they were designed primarily to hunt down and destroy with the latest developments in under-water weapons and detection, enemy submarines lurking in the ocean, possibly armed with H-bomb missiles destined for Allied targets.

Dreadnought herself, designed and made in Britain, but equipped with American nuclear power similar to that used in the US Skipjack submarines, would, as far as was known, carry no nuclear missiles. She had a crew of 11 officers and 77 men.

Though details were still secret, it was known that Dreadnought, the largest submarine ever built in Britain, would be able to travel at about 25 knots submerged for a distance equivalent to about one circuit of the Earth on her nuclear power.

H. British Bank Rate Lowered: The British Bank rate was lowered on October 27 by half per cent to 5½ per cent.

It had been raised to six per cent from five per cent in June, 1960.

A Bank of England spokesman said that the reduction did not imply any change in the policy of credit restrictions. The measure was considered primarily as a goodwill gesture towards USA, but its significance on a practical level would be very limited.

British Government circles said that it should in no case be considered as a sign of renewal of economic expansion in Britain.

I. British Cabinet Re-shuffle: There was a minor Cabinet re-shuffle in Britain on October 28, involving 11 junior Ministers.

There were two resignations—Mr. Harmar Nicholls, Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of Works and Mr. John Rodgers, Parliamentary Secretary in the Board of Trade.

The Prime Minister, Mr Harold Macmillan, decided to upgrade the post of Parliamentary Under-Secretary of the Home Office. Mr. Denis Vosper, who held it, became Minister of State.

Hitherto, the Commonwealth Relations' Office had three Ministers in the Commons. Mr. Macmillan had now decided that one should be in the Lords.

He therefore appointed the Duke of Devonshire to be Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State in the Commonwealth Relations Office.

Other appointments besides the Duke of Devonshire's and Mr. Julian Amery's (as Air Minister) were:

Mr. W. M. F. Vane (51) as Joint Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. He was formerly Joint Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of Pensions;

Mr. Hugh Fraser (42) as Parliamentary Under-Secretary in the Colonial Office, in succession to Mr. Julian Amery. He was formerly Parliamentary and Financial Secretary in the War Office;

Mr. J. B. Godber (56) as Parliamentary Under-Secretary in the Foreign Office, in place of Mr. R. A. Allan, who recently resigned. He was formerly Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of Agriculture;

Mr. Berhard Braine (46) as Joint Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of Pensions and National Insurance, replacing Mr. Vane. It was his first ministerial post;

Mr. Richard Brooman-White (48) as Joint Parliamentary Under-Secretary in the Scottish Office. His previous post was that of a Lord Commissioner of the Treasury;

Mr. N. MacPherson (52) as Parliamentary Secretary in the Board of Trade. He was formerly Joint Under-Secretary for Scotland;

Mr. James Ramsden (36) as Parliamentary Under-Secretary and Financial Secretary in the War Office, in succession to Mr. Hugh Fraser. This was his first ministerial post;

Mr. R. H. M. Thompson (48) as Parliamentary Secretary in the Ministry of works, in place of Mr. Harmar Nicholls. He was formerly Under-Secretary in the Commonwealth Relations Office.

J. Commonwealth-European Space Exploration Plans: Britain's Minister of Aviation, Mr. Peter Thorneycroft, returned to London on October 29 from talks in Paris on the possibility of undertaking a joint space exploration venture between the Commonwealth and certain West European countries. It was proposed to develop and produce launchers capable of putting heavy satellites into orbit.

Mr. Thorneycroft said at London airport: "I think there is a future for space exploration conducted by Europe and the Commonwealth. There are great advantages in expensive projects of this kind, in sharing the costs between friends before embarking on them."

He added that Commonwealth countries would be kept informed of the outcome of his talks in Paris.

A communique issued by the British Embassy in Paris at the end of Mr. Thorneycroft's three-day visit said:

"Mr. Peter Thorneycroft, Minister of Aviation, has had discussions in Paris with M. Debre the French Prime Minister; M. Guillaumat, French Minister in charge of Space Research; and M. Messmer French Minister for the Armed Forces, about the possibility of forming an organization of European countries and of members of the Commonwealth for the development and production of launchers capable of putting heavy satellites into orbit.

"The French Ministers expressed interest in this suggestion and the questions raised by these ideas are now being studied.

"It was agreed that the British Government would inform other Governments who might be interested, of the substance of these conversations."

Plans to launch a Commonwealth satellite using a three-stage rocket combination were announced in September, 1960 in Adelaide (Australia) by Britain's Controller of Guided Weapons and Electronics, Sir Stewart Mitchell.

The first stage would be Britain's Blue Streak rocket and the second a Black Knight rocket of the kind which had made many space explorations to altitudes of more than 500 miles from Woomera (Australia). The third stage would be a smaller rocket for launching the actual satellite, the design of which had not been finally approved.

ASIAN RECORDER

December 10—16, 1960

Regd. No. D-727

Vol. VI. No. 50

BURMA

A. Rice Export Record: Between October 1, 1959 and September 6, 1960, the Burmese State Agricultural Marketing Board exported 2,014,260 tons of rice and rice products.

In September, 1960 arrangements were completed for the shipment of an additional 90,000 tons and if this figure could be incorporated in the annual returns, the total would be well above the target set by the Board as a new record.

A Burmese trade delegation successfully negotiated with Pakistan the disposal of 300,000 tons of rice. In return, Burma contracted to purchase electrical and sports goods, textiles, fish and other articles.

Burma also hoped to enter into a rice deal with China. For the past few years, the trade balance between Burma and China had been in China's favour. At the beginning of 1960, a Trade Agreement was concluded between the two countries by which China would buy from Burma rice, beans, pulses, oil-cakes, timber, rubber, raw cotton, pig lead, zinc concentrates, wolfram, tin and silver, while in return Burma would import from China silk, cotton textiles, coal, tea, eggs, paper, batteries, electric bulbs, cigarettes, canned goods and light industrial products.

It was announced in Djakarta on November 3 that Indonesia had concluded a contract with Burma for the purchase of 250,000 tons of Burmese rice.

JAPAN

A. Parliamentary Elections Results—Liberal-Democratic Party Returned To Power: In the Elections to the House of Representatives held on November 20, the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party was returned to power.

The following are the results (the figures in brackets show the number of seats held in the previous House):

Liberal Democratic Party — 296 (283); Socialist Party — 145 (122); Democratic Socialist Party — 47 (40); Communist Party — 3 (one); Independents and minor parties — 7 (two).

This was Japan's eighth post-War Election. Of the 56.5 million voters, 75 to 80 per cent were estimated to have exercised their franchise.

A feature of the Election was the complete discomfiture of the newly-formed socialist splinter party known as the Social-Democrats. The two Socialist parties together had a total of 161 seats—five less than in 1958.

Out of the total of 467 members of the new Diet, 60 were elected for the first time.

A feature of the poll was the election of Mrs. Kyoko Asanuma, 56-year-old widow of the Socialist Party chairman, Mr. Inejiro Asanuma, who was murdered by a Right-wing fanatic.

Mrs. Asanuma, who had previously taken no part in politics made it clear during her own electoral campaign that she sought only to arouse public conscience and sympathy for her husband.

One effect of the Election was that there could not be any amendment to Japan's Constitution in the new Diet. The Socialists, Social-Democrats and Communists, who all insisted that the MacArthur Constitution forbidding re-armament must be left untouched, would together have the necessary one-third of the seats required to veto any constitutional amendment.

Mr. H. Ikeda's Statement:

The Prime Minister, Mr. Hayato Ikeda, told newsmen on November 21 that his Government had no desire to revise the Constitution because the people were not prepared for it nor did they want it.

He said that the Japanese Government's position on the People's China issue remained unchanged. Japan was willing to establish trade relations with China provided both countries respected each other's policies and observed the principle of non-interference.

He added that Japan adhered to this position as a member of the 'free world'.

Regarding neutralism, he said he believed that the definition of neutralism by the Socialists had been ambiguous. His Government was prepared to discuss neutralism with the Socialists in a public debate, provided they clarified their stand and agreed that neutralism was aimed at world peace.

He said that the overwhelming victory of his party showed that the new Mutual Security Pact signed with USA was "appropriate and justified". It was a clear proof of the endorsement of the Pact by the majority of the Japanese people.

The Election was held against a background of Japan "never having had it so good". A record rice harvest was in, shops were full of high-quality goods and big year-end bonuses were promised by industry.

Mr. Ikeda campaigned on plans for even more economic expansion and close diplomatic and economic association with USA and the West.

From the beginning the Liberal Democrats were optimistic. One leader of the party said that the Liberal Democrats would secure as many as 360 seats—more than the two-thirds majority which the ruling party would have to muster in the next Diet to amend Japan's "no war" constitution.

The Liberal Democrats' optimism was based on the results of the by-elections and the General Elections held on November 15 in Okinawa, in which their Party secured 22 out of the 29 seats in Okinawa's Assembly.

B. Trade Talks With Burma: An official communique issued in Tokyo on November 15 said that a Burmese economic mission and a Japanese delegation had held trade talks between October 31 and November 8, which had "contributed towards a better understanding of the mutual problems relating to trade and other economic matters in the two countries".

It said that the Japanese delegation was headed by Mr. Nobuhiko Ushiba, Director of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Affairs Bureau and the Burmese Economic Mission by U Sein Kyi, Secretary of the Ministry of Trade Development.

It added: "The main purpose of these discussions was to discover ways and means to facilitate and expand trade between the two countries with a view to exploring the possibility of increasing the export of Burmese agricultural and mineral products to Japan."

It did not state if any specific agreements had been reached.

However, Tokyo Press reports said that efforts to remedy the unbalance of Japanese-Burmese trade had failed because of the apparent impossibility of increasing Burmese rice exports to Japan.

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: F-M Ayub Khan's Tour Abroad; CENTO's Naval Exercise; Compulsory Retirement Age Of Government Employees Raised; Cyclone Disaster In East Pakistan.

A. F-M Ayub Khan's Visits To UAR And Saudi Arabia: The President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan arrived in Riyadh, Capital of Saudi Arabia, on November 1 on a four-day visit to Saudi Arabia. He was accompanied by the Education Minister, Mr. Habibur Rehman.

King Saud was the first to greet the President with a warm embrace as he came out of his Viscount.

Crown Prince Feisal and other Princes and Ministers of the Saudi Arabian Government were also present at the airport.

Later, he drove in state in a huge motorcade to Nasriah Palace where he stayed.

Radio Pakistan representatives said that a rare occurrence was the presence of women who had come out in their black veils to greet F-M Ayub Khan.

Soon after his arrival, he returned the King's visit and was with him for a short while in the course of which the King expressed his sympathy for the victims of the East Pakistan cyclone.

Later, he visited the King's School in Riyadh.

Addressing the students and staff of the School, he said that Islam was a very potent unifying force and the gospel of Islam could bring the Muslims all over the world closer together.

He said he was glad to find that in the School Princes and commoners were studying together, which was in accord with the true spirit of Islam.

In the evening, he went round the city with the Amir of Riyadh and showed keen interest in the monumental development of the city from a little village into a sprawling metropolis in a period of five years.

On November 2, a military parade was held just outside Riyadh in honour of F-M Ayub Khan.

He took the salute from an array of tanks, mortar, armoured cars and artillery units. As the Army and Navy battalions swung past, fighters of the Air Force flew overhead, dipping in salute.

The previous evening (November 1) F-M Ayub Khan visited the Abdul Aziz Military Academy in Riyadh.

On November 2, F-M Ayub Khan decorated King Saud with Pakistan's highest civil order, Nishan-i-Pakistan.

He also conferred the order of Nishan-i-Imtiaz on Crown Prince Feisal.

As Saudi Arabia has no orders, the gesture could not be returned by the the King. F-M Ayub Khan and King Saud also exchanged gifts. A copy of the Holy Quran in a silver box, an attar phial, a box full of wood from East Pakistan, two silken head-gears with Kashmiri embroidery work, six sarees and an autographed photograph of himself were presented to King Saud.

King Saud presented a rifle and a sword in a golden sheath with a jewelled handle to F-M Ayub Khan.

After the ceremony, F-M Ayub Khan attended a State banquet given in his honour by King Saud.

After the banquet, they witnessed a fire-works display in the Palace grounds.

On November 3, F-M Ayub Khan arrived in Jedda.

News Conference:

On November 3, he flew to Qaba (Mecca) where he held a news conference.

He told newmen that it should be the common mission of all Muslim countries to set their houses in order and forge a bigger brotherhood of Islam without any rivalries. Muslims everywhere in the world had either achieved independence or were on the verge of achieving it.

Muslim countries should have no political suspicions, economic rivalries and other prejudices. The whole world was now grouping and re-grouping itself on the basis of political and material ideologies. These ideologies were important enough, but they did not fulfil the ultimate needs of mankind. The final salvation of life in this world and the next lay in the ideology of life which provided a good balance between material and spiritual progress.

He added: "Luckily for us, such an ideology is available in the religion of Islam."

He said he was particularly happy to know that King Saud had decided to open an Islamic University at Medina. This was the right thing in the right place and assured Pakistan's full co-operation.

Replying to questions by Arab journalists, he said that there were several reasons for "India's intransigence" on the Kashmir issue.

The first was India's natural desire for more territory. She did not want to give up what she had. Secondly, India was unwilling to give freedom to other people. Thirdly, because of the strategic advantages which Kashmir gave India over Pakistan, India could pose a more direct threat to Pakistan and use them as a means of intimidation.

Answering other questions, he said that Pakistan was directly concerned about the welfare of the people of Afghanistan and had been trying for the last 13 years to improve her relations with that country.

He said the trouble with Afghanistan was that she wanted part of Pakistani territory and the right to interfere in the internal affairs of Pakistan. These were not the ways of seeking friendship and such claims had led to trouble.

Communique:

On November 5, F-M Ayub Khan and King Saud issued a joint communique at the end of their talks.

The following is the text of the communique:

"His Majesty and the President of Pakistan held several conversations on subjects of mutual interest at Riyadh in which His Royal Highness Crown Prince Feisal, Prime Minister of Saudi Arabia, participated.

"They reviewed the international political situation generally and its impact on both their countries and the Muslim world in particular.

"There was complete unanimity in their assessment of the position. They felt that there was great need for understanding and co-operation between countries of the Muslim world and it was only by forbearance and appreciation of each other's difficulties that they could help one another to face the dangers to which they were all exposed. With peace, co-operation and understanding, they could devote their energies to the betterment of their own people and the preservation and promotion of Islamic ideals.

"They discussed the possibilities of increasing commerce, trade and economic co-operation between the two countries. The President of Pakistan explained the Second Five-Year Plan of Pakistan and invited the Saudi Arabian Government and the people to participate in the Plan by investing in the development projects.

"To the mutual advantage of both countries, the response from His Majesty was most sympathetic. It was decided that the Ministries of the two countries should start exploring avenues for co-operation in this respect.

"His Majesty and the President discussed at length the need for understanding the true spirit of Islam and the preservation of Islamic values and culture, particularly in the newly emerging Muslim nations. His Majesty explained that his plan to set up a University at Medina to which students from all the Muslim world would be welcomed was intended to meet this very need.

"The importance of Hajj as a great religious gathering for the exchange of ideas for the good of the Islamic world was discussed. They felt that this aspect of Hajj should receive increasing attention from the Muslim world in the present-day context."

Visit to UAR:

F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan was accorded a warm welcome when he arrived in Cairo on November 5 from Jedda on a seven-day State visit to the United Arab Republic.

He was received at the airport by Col. G. A. Nasser.

F-M Ayub Khan and Col. Nasser held their first round of talks on the evening of November 5 at Abdin Palace.

They met again the following day (November 6) to conclude the first phase of their talks.

State Banquet:

On November 5, Col. Nasser entertained F-M Ayub Khan at a State banquet in Abdin Palace.

Col. Nasser in a toast paid warm tribute to the Pakistani people's attitude during the "aggression against us". (The reference was to the Suez Crisis in 1956, when Britain, France and Israel attacked UAR).

He said: "Thanks to your valuable efforts, all past effects left behind by imperialism to estrange our two peoples have been erased".

He referred to the firm position taken by Pakistan towards Israel and said that his visit to Pakistan early in 1960 had been an attempt to "build a wide bridge for relations between us."

He added that the entire UAR people welcomed F-M Ayub Khan and felt gratitude for the "great moral support extended to us by the people of Pakistan during the grand stand of Arab nationalism."

In his reply, F-M Ayub Khan said: "The warmth with which I have been received demonstrates still further that the bonds between our two countries are deeper and stronger than merely political or other material considerations.

"The most common factor between us is that we bow down before one God and while doing so, we turn towards one common qibla.

"People bound together by ties of faith can always resist the discordant pull of all other forces. When that faith is Islam, there should be no question of their falling apart, because Islam itself is the essence of brotherhood in the face of differences, tolerance in the face of provocation, understanding in the face of misgivings and forgiveness in the face of anger. So long as we can adhere to these cardinal attributes of Islam, no territorial, political or material considerations will separate Muslim from Muslim.

"It is my sincere and humble prayer that God may bless Muslims all over the world with unity of purpose and conviction which their faith enjoins and their destiny requires in the ideologically competitive world of today."

Scientific And Cultural Pact Signed:

On November 6, a Pact on scientific and cultural co-operation between Pakistan and the United Arab Republic was signed.

The Cultural Treaty itself was signed seven years ago. The Pact, signed on November 6 provided for effective implementation of the Treaty.

Under it, the two countries would exchange students, teachers, scholars and ulema. There would be an exhibition of Arab and Islamic art in the two countries as well as film festivals. Each country would promote the study of the other's language, literature and history in its educational institutions and steps would be taken towards recognition of each other's university degrees.

The Treaty laid down that each country would invite a delegation of four members representing scientists, research scholars, professors and educationists for a fortnight's visit to scientific and educational institutions. Each country would grant 10 scholarships to students and research scholars for study in its technical and educational institutions.

Pakistan and UAR would establish cultural centres and invite cultural delegations. There would also be an exchange of visits by sports teams and youth delegations. Further, the two countries would encourage exchange of books, newspapers and radio programmes.

Address At National Union Rally:

Addressing a National Union rally in the Cairo University Auditorium on November 7, F-M Ayub Khan urged the Muslim countries to move with the times to safeguard their freedom and ensure their prosperity.

He said that Pakistan had made no secret of her attitude towards Islam and her support to the Arabs. She would continue to promote the Arab cause. She wanted nothing in return but that the Arabs should know that Pakistan was their friend.

He added that during the Suez Crisis in 1956, as Pakistan's Army Chief he had clearly put his views to the Government, namely, that the days of extra-territorialism were over and the Suez Canal belonged to the Egyptian people.

He said it might be that some of Pakistan's representatives were clumsy, but every sensible man in the country was opposed to the tragedy of the Suez invasion. If Pakistan's position during the Suez crisis disappointed the Arab people, the people of Pakistan felt no less regret at the fact that there was not enough realization of the struggle that Pakistan had to put up to resist pressure from her powerful neighbour (India).

Television Interview:

Speaking in a television interview on November 8, F-M Ayub Khan said he had discussed with Col. Nasser the contribution that their two countries could make towards world peace.

He said that international tensions were on the increase and countries like Pakistan and UAR wanted peace.

He supported the right of the Arab Palestine refugees to return to their homeland and said that Pakistan would never recognize Israel.

In conclusion, he thanked the Government and people of UAR and Col. Nasser personally for the warm welcome given to him during his stay.

Degree Conferred By Cairo University:

At a special convocation on November 9, Cairo University conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws on F-M Ayub Khan.

Addressing the convocation, F-M Ayub Khan said that so long as Islamic ties remained intact, the sufferings of Muslims everywhere—Algeria, Palestine and Kashmir—would always evoke equal response in the hearts of the entire Muslim world.

He called for collaboration among Muslim countries to promote the study and practice of Islam in the light of modern needs without infringing upon each other's national policies and international commitments.

He said that while looking after their material prosperity and progress, the people of Pakistan could not ignore the fact that their country was the product of an ideology—the ideology of Islam. It was for this reason that they were trying to do all they could to promote a true and correct study and understanding of Islam in the context of modern science and knowledge.

Pakistan would pursue these objectives vigorously, but her efforts alone were not enough; in this, she sought the co-operation of Cairo and Damascus, which had long been the seats of learning and enlightenment.

He added: "As Muslims, we owe to ourselves and to Allah a loyalty which is higher than any other loyalty. This is loyalty to our faith. It is this loyalty which, in spite of external disorders and political disputes between Governments, binds the Muslim people all over the world in unbreakable, though invisible, ties of mutual goodwill and sympathy."

He said that Pakistan and UAR had many similarities in their past and present situations. One of the spheres in which the revolution in Pakistan and UAR had brought them together, was that of political and constitutional realism and stability. In their search for a sane and sensible system, both countries had reached solutions which bore close resemblance to each other.

Talks With Col. G. A. Nasser:

On November 9, F-M Ayub Khan and Col. G. A. Nasser met for two hours to conclude their formal talks.

After the talks, a spokesman said that they had agreed to exchange economic delegations to find means of increasing the volume of trade and economic co-operation.

Later, F-M Ayub Khan and Col. Nasser were guests at an Officers' Club dinner given by the Vice-President of UAR, Gen. A. H. Amer.

On November 10, F-M Ayub Khan flew to Alexandria on a brief visit to UAR's naval establishments.

News Conference:

On November 10, F-M Ayub Khan met the UAR and international Press.

He told newsmen that his country's policy was peace with all, including the Soviet Union and added: "There is no harm in accepting Soviet financial aid without strings."

He said that he did not think any deterioration would result in relations between USA and Pakistan as a result of the election of Mr. J. F. Kennedy as US President.

He said: "It is sad that relations have worsened between UAR and Iran and I pray that they will improve."

On Algeria, he said: "Whatever influence we have with France, we will exert to end this senseless war." He said that Pakistan wanted the right of self-determination for the people of Algeria and that the war should end there. In his opinion, it would not be to the advantage of the people of Algeria if Pakistan recognized the "Provisional Government" of Algeria, because thereby Pakistan would lose even that much of influence which she had to help the Algerian people.

Asked if Pakistan's acceptance of help in principle from Soviet Russia in the exploration of oil was not contrary to Pakistan's friendship with USA and her participation in pacts like CENTO and S-EATO, he said that it was not so. If a country offered "friendly aid without strings and without loss of independence", it would be wrong to refuse it. He, however, struck a note of caution and said that the foreign policy of a country could not be ignored.

He added that when he visited Japan shortly, he would discuss the possibility of Japanese capital participating in Pakistan's five-year development projects.

He said that his visits to UAR, Burma, Indonesia and Japan were goodwill visits to strengthen relations between those countries and Pakistan.

Referring to the Afro-Asian countries' role in preserving world peace, he said that Afro-Asian countries should follow the road to peace among themselves because "they are not all angels".

Col. G. A. Nasser's News Conference:

On November 10, Col. G. A. Nasser told visiting Pakistani newsmen that he believed the Kashmir dispute between India and Pakistan should be settled peacefully through negotiations and that his offer of mediation still held good.

He said he had been in touch with this problem since 1955 and had offered his good offices to both parties when he was in India in April, 1960.

Referring to Arab unity, he said that there was a possibility of its quick realization because foreign Powers who had political, strategic and economic interests in the area were opposed to it.

Communique:

On November 12 a communique was issued by Col. Nasser and F-M Ayub Khan on their talks.

The following is the text of the communique:

"During his stay, His Excellency the President of the Republic of Pakistan visited some establishments in Cairo. His Excellency also visited the cities of Damascus and Alexandria.

"Throughout these visits His Excellency was accorded a most cordial popular reception as an expression of the love and esteem the people of UAR have for the brotherly people of Pakistan. The University of Cairo conferred upon His Excellency an honorary doctorate.

"In Cairo, talks were held between His Excellency President Mohammed Ayub Khan and President Gamal Abdel Nasser, attended on the Pakistan side by Mr. Habibur Rehman, Minister for Education, Mr. Mohammed Ikramullah, Secretary in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Khwaja Shahabuddin, Ambassador of Pakistan to UAR and Mr. Qudratullah Shahab, Secretary to the President.

"On the UAR side were El Sayed Hussain El Shafei, Central Minister of Social Affairs and Labour, Dr. Mahmoud Fawzi, Minister of Foreign Affairs, El Sayed Aly Sabri, Minister of Presidential Affairs, El Sayed Mahmoud Riab, Counsellor to the President on Foreign Political Affairs, and El Sayed Taha Fathuddin, the UAR Ambassador to Pakistan.

"The two sides exchanged views on matters of mutual interest and reviewed the international problems facing the world as a whole in an atmosphere of cordiality, brotherhood and friendship based on mutual respect and understanding and taking into consideration the basic facts of the policy of each of the two countries.

"Both parties agreed on the necessity of abiding by the principles of United Nations and its Charter and by the Bandung Conference resolutions as the means to world peace, universal justice and respect for human rights. The two sides also agreed on the urgency of contributing increasingly to the efforts for the removal of world tensions and putting a stop to the 'cold war' and for the creation of an atmosphere of confidence which would permit the realization of the wishes of all peoples for disarmament and for better and more fruitful relations among the countries of the world on the basis of international co-operation.

"The two sides welcomed the emergence of the newly-independent States in Africa and elsewhere which have joined United Nations recently. They re-affirmed the right of all peoples to self-determination and independence.

"The two sides deplored the policy of racial discrimination practised in certain African countries, this discrimination being incompatible with the rights of man and human justice and a threat to security and stability in Africa.

"It was decided that effective steps should be taken to develop closer economic relations between the two countries. In this connexion, it was agreed to exchange trade delegations in the near future.

"An executive plan for the implementation of the Cultural Agreement already existing between the two countries was signed by the Ministers of Education during the visit.

"The two Presidents expressed their satisfaction at the ever-increasing ties of cordiality and friendship between their two countries, which is inspired by the bonds of Islamic brotherhood and of history.

"The two Presidents agreed on the continuance of the efforts to consolidate co-operation between the two countries in all fields for the good and in the interest of both the parties."

F-M Ayub Khan returned to Karachi on November 12.

B. CENTO Naval Exercise "Midlink III": Welcoming the participating maritime forces to the Central Treaty Organization's (CENTO) exercise, Midlink III, which commenced in the Arabian Sea on October 25 and ended on November 10, the Commander-in-Chief of the Pakistan Navy, Rear-Admiral A. R. Khan, said: "It is very heartening to see such an impressive assembly of forces and this indeed reflects well on the strength of the Central Treaty Organization."

Stressing the "defensive role" of CENTO, he said that Midlink III was in continuation f the Midlink series of maritime training exercises launched by CENTO in 1958. The exercise was of immense training value to the participating forces and to the Pakistan Navy, which was responsible for conducting it.

Emphasizing the need for constant training, he said: "For the defence of this area, not only is the availability of adequate forces essential, but equally important, if not more so, is the requirement that the forces should be well trained and fully prepared to fulfil their commitments".

He formally welcomed the senior officers of the participating navies and expressed confidence that the Pakistan Navy and others taking part in the exercise would find it of great value.

Units of the American, British, Pakistan and Iranian Navies took part in the exercise.

It covered various aspects of maritime warfare. It was held in three phases: the first phase consisting of co-ordination conferences and harbour exercises; the second of preliminary work-up at sea; while the third and final phase was a large-scale tactical exercise, bringing into action the full might of the participating forces.

The exercise was conducted by Rear-Adm. A. R. Khan.

Turkey Declines To Participate:

It was learnt in Karachi on November 9 that the Government of Turkey had declined to participate in the naval exercise.

The reason for non-participation by Turkey—one of the members of CENTO—was not known, but it was stated that the refusal came almost at the eleventh hour as Turkey had earlier agreed to take part.

The 36 warships which took part in the exercises included the 45,000-ton US aircraft-carrier Essex and Britain's aircraft-carrier Albion and scores of cruisers, destroyers and submarines of the US and British Mediterranean Command.

Rear-Adm. Frederick Ashworth, Commander of US Carrier Division 18 and anti-submarine carrier Group Three, told newsmen on board the Essex, regarding the absence of the Turkish warships: "I regret that the Turkish Navy could not participate."

He said he did not know the reasons for Turkey's "last-minute withdrawal." There was no official clarification by the Turkish Embassy in Karachi.

Diplomatic observers in Karachi saw the possibility of "cracks in the CENTO links."

According to the observers, although the new regime in Turkey had declared that it would continue to adhere to CENTO and the military pact with USA, recent events had shown that there was an attitude of indifference towards the alliance on the part of Turkey.

They also said that Turkey had not been showing much interest in various projects of CENTO—either proposed or under execution. Two of these, according to diplomatic sources, were the construction of a Karachi-Ankara highway and the setting up of a micro-wave radio communications net-work between Iran, Pakistan and Turkey.

Diplomatic observers in Karachi connected the forthcoming "closed-door" meeting on November 12 between President Ayub and the Shah of Iran with the now visibly cold attitude of Turkey towards CENTO.

C. Compulsory Retirement Age Of Government Employees Raised: According to the President's Order No. 23, 1960, issued on October 25, the age of compulsory retirement of a person in Government service was raised from 55 to 60 years, but under certain conditions. The Order would not apply to persons who had retired before June 22, 1966.

The following is the text of the Order:

President's Order No. 23 of 1960. The Laws (Continuance in Force) (Sixth Amendment) Order, 1960.

In pursuance of the proclamation of the seventh day of October, 1958, and in exercise of all powers enabling him in that behalf, the President is pleased to make the following Order:

(1)—(i) This Order may be called the Laws (Continuance in Force) (Sixth Amendment) Order, 1960;

—(ii) It shall come into force at once;

(2) To Article 6 of the Laws (Continuance in Force) Order, 1958, hereinafter referred to as the Principal Order, the following new clauses shall be included:

(i) But subject as hereinafter provided:

(a) The date of compulsory retirement of a person in the service of Pakistan shall be the date on which he attains his sixtieth birthday obtaining in clause (a) shall effect:

(i) Any term of condition of service applicable to any such person immediately before the twenty-second day of June, 1960 under which he may retire before his sixtieth birthday; or

(ii) Any term or condition of service applicable immediately before the twenty-second day of June, 1960 to a member of the former Indian Civil Service, or to a person who immediately before that day was a Chief Engineer of the Public Works or Railways Department, under which he might be permitted to serve for a limited period beyond the time for compulsory retirement otherwise applicable to him;

—(b) Notwithstanding anything in the two foregoing clauses the President in the case of a person who is a member of the Civil Service of Pakistan or a person serving in connexion with the affairs of the Federation and the Governor in the case of a person (not being a member of the Civil Service of Pakistan) serving in connexion with the affairs of a Province may review the case of any person in the service of Pakistan, when he is about to complete twenty-five years of service qualifying him for a pension, and when he is about to complete the fifty-fifth year of his age, in order to satisfy himself of that person's further usefulness to the public service and if he is not so satisfied, may direct his retirement from service upon his completing the qualifying service or year of age;

—(c) The President or the Governor (as the case may be) with the previous approval of the President may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of sub-clause (c) but nothing in this clause shall affect any disciplinary power vested in the President or a Governor under any law or rule for the time being in force;

For the removal of doubt it is declared that the provisions of the explanation to Clause (1) apply to this clause.

—(d) Notwithstanding anything in clause (1), no person in the service of Pakistan shall enter into marriage or a promise of marriage with a person who is not a citizen of Pakistan except with the previous permission of the Central Government;

—(e) Nothing in this Article or in any rule or enactment relating to conditions of service shall be construed to limit or abridge the power of the President or a Governor to deal with the case of any person in the service of Pakistan in such manner as may appear to him to be just and equitable;

Provided that where anything in this Article or in any such rule or enactment is applicable to the case of any person, the case shall not be dealt with in any manner be less favourable to him than that provided by this Article or the rule or enactment;

"The role of the Air Force is as yet only nominal. It has been asked to lend one of its planes for the air-dropping of cooked food and other essential relief supplies to still inaccessible areas. More help from this quarter will, it is understood, be forthcoming as need arises."

(3) Clause (9) of Article 6 of the Principal Order as added by this Order shall be deemed to have taken effect on the twenty-second day of June, 1960;

(4) Nothing in Clause (9) of Article 6 of the Principal Order as added by this Order shall apply to members of the Armed Forces;

(5) For the removal of doubt it is hereby declared that the provisions of Clause (10) of Article 6 of the Principal Order, as added by this Order, shall apply also to all members of the Armed Forces.

D. Cyclone Disaster In East Pakistan: A 24-hour cyclone, which hit the coastal belt of East Pakistan on October 10, left a trail of disaster.

According to first reports, more than 3,000 people were killed and a large number of cattle washed away to the sea.

The worst-affected areas were the islands of Ramgati, Sandwip Hatiya and Kutubdia. Besides the heavy death toll, thousands of people had been rendered homeless and standing crops damaged. A very large number of tin-sheds and mud-houses were destroyed.

The cyclone, which had a velocity of about 70 m.p.h., capsized many fishing boats and cargo-laden lighters in the sea.

The tidal bore accompanying the cyclone was considered to be the worst of its kind in living memory.

The Commissioner of Chittagong Division, who made an aerial survey of the cyclone-stricken area, described the damage as extensive.

Army-men were drafted to assist the civil authority to render relief to the stricken people in the off-shore islands, five of which were known to have borne the brunt of the high-velocity cyclone and tidal bore.

According to a rough estimate made on October 21, about 6,000 people in these islands had perished.

It was stated that the havoc wrought on these was mainly due to the tidal bore which came in the wake of the cyclone.

The Provincial Governor, Lieut.-Gen. Azam Khan, flew over Ramgati and Hatiya, the two worst-affected islands, on October 21.

Ramgati, where according to reports 3,500 deaths occurred, is one of the biggest and most thickly populated among the group of islands scattered over the estuary of the Meghna and the Bay of Bengal.

Governor's Account :

An account of the devastation caused by the cyclone was given by the East Pakistan Governor, Lieut-Gen. Azam Khan, when he arrived in Lahore on October 23 for the Governors' Conference.

He said that the damage was very extensive, but the situation was under control and every possible relief was being provided to the victims.

A door-to-door check was being carried out in the affected areas to determine the exact damage. Preliminary estimates put the number of dead at 4,000. About 5,000 houses had been wiped out, 15,000 seriously damaged and 20,000 slightly damaged. Of the public buildings, 90 to 95 per cent had been damaged.

He said that 600 to 700 islands, spread over an area of about 1,500 square miles had been hit by the cyclone.

Tidal waves invaded the islands for about 45 minutes. The water-level rose by 8 to 10 ft and the islands were under four feet of water.

He praised the "courageous people" of East Pakistan, who had worked ceaselessly for more than 36 hours to rescue the victims.

Speaking of relief measures, he said that the means of communications were inadequate and everything had to be carried to the affected areas on shoulders. The first phase of the relief operations was progressing smoothly.

He added that a very effective warning system had to be devised to avoid such misery in future and he was consulting experts on protective measures and would soon give effect to them.

He said that animals might have to be taken to East Pakistan from the western Wing since the loss of animal wealth was very extensive. He might request the President F-M Ayub Khan for financial assistance for the rehabilitation of cyclone victims.

Second Cyclone:

A fresh cyclone, with a velocity of 80 to 100 m.p.h. swept over the East Pakistan coast on October 31.

According to official sources in Karachi, fifteen to twenty thousand persons had been killed and over two lakhs rendered homeless in the two disastrous cyclones which had hit East Pakistan during October.

The death-roll in the second cyclone of October 31 was more than caused by the first one of October 10. The havoc caused by the latest cyclone was described in official circles as one of the "greatest tragedies in recent times."

It was learnt that a group of islands off the Chittagong coast including Kutubdia, Ramgati and Kashkhali, with a population of over 10,000 had practically disappeared.

A news despatch in The Statesman, Calcutta said:

"It would now appear from latest reports that the death roll in the Chittagong area, including its off-shore islands of Sandwip and Kutubdia, would run into several thousands. At least 4,000 is the estimate reportedly supplied so far to the Divisional Commissioner, Dr. D. K. Power, by SDOs, Union Council chairmen and individuals. It pertains to a 90-mile area of the coastal belt at Chittagong.

"Units of the Army already in Chittagong town—a battalion in strength—had been reinforced by fresh contingents from the garrison at Comilla, while a specially chartered PLA Dakota was to start moving in more troops from Dacca and other stations."

It was officially learnt in Karachi on November 7 that at least Rs. 2,000,000,000 would be required to rehabilitate the cyclone-affected areas in East Pakistan.

The Minister of the Interior, Mr. Zakir Hussain, said that destruction in the coastal belt was total.

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Resumption Of Diplomatic Relations with Britain: Foreign Ministry sources in Cairo on November 2 said that the UAR Ambassador to the Soviet Union, Mr. Mohammad Awad El Kouni had been designated as the first UAR Ambassador to United Kingdom since 1956.

Mr. El Kouni would be replaced in Moscow by Mr. Nouri El Kurra, Director of the War Plants Section in the Cabinet of Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer, Supreme Commander of the UAR armed forces.

Britain and UAR broke off diplomatic relations during the Suez Crisis in 1956. These relations were re-established on December 1, 1959, but no Ambassadors were exchanged.

B. Population: A Press release by the UAR Embassy in New Delhi on November 3 stated that according to the preliminary results of the UAR census, the total population of the two Regions in September, 1960 was 30,641,000. According to sex breakdown, there were 15,476,000 males and 15,165,000 females.

The figures indicated that there had been a population increase in the southern Region from 19,000,000 to 26,000,000 inhabitants in 13-1|2 years.

The population of that Region was now 26,080,000 (13,124,000 males and 12,956,000 females).

In the Northern Region, the population was 4,561,000 (2,352,000 males and 2,209,000 females).

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. First Five-Year Plan: The first Five-Year Plan to be launched in 1961 aims at establishing a fully socialist economy.

Besides consolidating the gains from the Three-Year Plan ending in 1960, the new Plan has five basic aims:

(1) To develop heavy industry, light industry, communications and transport and to expand State trade;

(2) To complete the socialist transformation of agriculture, handicrafts, small trade, private capitalist industry and commerce;

(3) To raise the cultural level and socialist consciousness of the people;

(4) To improve further the material and cultural life of the working people, so that they had adequate food, clothing, housing and education; and

(5) To strengthen public order and security and to protect socialist construction in the north.

By 1965, the gross value of the industrial and handicraft output is estimated to increase by one and a half times compared with the gross value in 1960. The gross value of the agricultural output is estimated to increase by 61 per cent.

Targets set to be achieved under the Five-Year Plan are as follows:

Industry: By 1965, the total electricity productive capacity will increase by 2.8 times as compared with 1960; 160,000 tons of steel plate will be produced; the output of the machine-building branch will increase by four times as compared with 1960; and 4,200,000 tons of coal will be extracted (71.4 per cent more than in 1960).

Agriculture: Paddy output alone will be 7,000,000 tons. The area under industrial crops will increase by one and a half times. Apart from the existing State farms, 25 others will be established.

Posts and Communications: Efforts will be concentrated on widening the gauge of the Yen Vien-Munankwan line and the Donganh-Thainguyen branch line to 1,435 metres and extending the Hanoi-Thanh Hoa railway to Vinh.

Culture, Education and Public Health: By 1965 North Viet-Nam will have 15 colleges with 40,000 students and 76 intermediate professional schools with 85,000 students. The number of technical workers trained during this period will reach 200,000.

Improvement of the People's Life: The income of the majority of the members of agricultural co-operatives will surpass the present income of the upper-middle peasants. With regard to handicraftsmen and small traders, efforts will be made to stabilize their work and ensure for them a regular and adequately increasing income. The wages of workers, public servants, cadres and other wage earners will continue to be increased and the wage system must be further improved. At the same time, importance will be attached to developing material and cultural welfare and expanding social funds.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: UN Political Committee—Resolutions To Expand Security Council And ECOSOC; UN Trusteeship Committee Debates On Non-Self-Governing Territories; US Presidential Elections; Facilities For US "Polaris" Submarines In Scotland; New Earth Satellite Launched By USA; Nobel Prizes For 1960.

A. UN Special Political Committee—Resolution To Expand Security Council And ECOSOC: Two resolutions aimed at amending the UN Charter so as to permit an increase in the membership of the UN Security Council and the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) were submitted to the Special Political Committee on October 31.

The proposals, one sponsored by 26 countries, and the other by 30 Latin American and African States, provided for an expansion of the Security Council from 11 to 13 members and of ECOSOC from 18 to 24 members.

Dr. Raphael Uruquia (El Salvador), introducing the proposals, recalled that the Latin American countries had for years advocated an enlargement of the two Councils. He and many other speakers in the ensuing debate pointed out that UN membership had substantially increased, while the composition of the two major Councils of the Organization had not changed.

Dr. Mohammed Ali Massoud-Ansari (Iran) emphasized that the new members were mainly Asian and African nations.

Mr. Gaja Wachuku (Nigeria) asked that Africa have at least one seat on the Security Council.

Mr. T. B. Subasinghe (Ceylon) complained that the Asian seat in the Security Council was not "properly filled."

Speaking for the Soviet Union, Mr. A. A. Soldatov agreed that the membership of the two organs should be expanded, since UN membership had substantially increased since 1945. However, a satisfactory solution would first have to be found for the problem of the representation of China and only then would it be possible to amend the Charter.

He said that there had been five Great Powers in 1945, but today there were "many more". France and the United Kingdom could not be considered among the Great Powers unless India and Indonesia were also included. The structure of the Organization should be brought into line with the balance of forces in the world today, now composed of three equal groups of States: "capitalist," "socialist" and "neutralist."

Accordingly, these three groups should be equitably represented in all the UN organs, particularly in the Security Council, in ECOSOC and in the latter's functional Commissions and Sub-Commissions, where the "capitalist" States now held a "predominant position."

He spoke after the Argentine delegate, Dr. L. Tettamanti, had accused the Soviet Union of being "inconsistent" about the proposed revision of the UN Charter.

Dr. Tettamanti had said that the Soviet Union had opposed previous proposals to amend the Charter to allow for an expansion of the world Organization's key organs because she claimed that until communist China was seated, one of the five permanent members of the Security Council was "absent".

Yet now, he said, the Soviet Union had proposed a Charter amendment to allow for changes in the Secretariat and had not mentioned in this case that Chinese concurrence was necessary.

Mr. Josip Djerdja (Yugoslavia) said that his delegation would support any proposal to enlarge the Security Council and ECOSOC.

Senor Carlos Martinez-Sotomay (Chile) also urged the Council's enlargement.

Ghana Proposes Permanent Seat For India In Security Council:

On November 2, Mr. J. E. Jantuah (Ghana) proposed that the permanent seat now held by Kuomintang China should be given to India.

Referring to the Soviet opposition to revision of the UN Charter without acceptance and participation of People's China, he expressed indignation that a revision of the Charter to increase membership in the major organs of UN should be blocked just because one Council seat was held by " a China whose legitimacy is contested by many UN members."

He joined Nigeria in favouring a redistribution of Security Council seats to bring in the African nations.

M Pierre Millet (France) and Mr. Harold Beeley (UK) however, expressed opposition to such re-distribution. They recommended instead that the number of seats in the Security Council and ECOSOC should be increased either during the current General Assembly session or soon after.

Mr. Harold Beeley called on UN member-States to recognize the growing stature and authority of the newer African and Asian members by granting them a greater share of responsibility in the work of the Organization.

He said that in particular, membership of the Security Council and ECOSOC should be enlarged to allow for greater representation of the newly emerging nations.

Since UN was formed in 1945, membership had increased greatly and there had been a disproportionate growth of membership for certain geographical areas. Despite the great increase in Afro-Asian membership, nations from these regions still had only two of the non-permanent seats in the Security Council and three of the 13 non-permanent seats in ECOSOC.

On November 3, the demand for the expansion of these two Councils was supported by the US delegate, Mr. Francis Wilcox.

He said that it was an anachronism that while the members of UN had almost doubled during the past 16 years, membership of its Councils had remained static. UN could now take advantage of the enthusiasm and creative energy of the newly-independent nations. So far there had been procrastination, delay, postponement and refusal to take any constructive action in this regard. Further delay in this, he added, would be intolerable and inexcusable.

Mr. T. B. Subasinghe (Ceylon) stressed the principle of universality which, he said, had been violated both by the absence of China and the lack of Asian representation on the Security Council and ECOSOC.

Thirty States Demand Expansion Of Councils:

On November 3, 30 member-States joined in a formal bid to have the General Assembly call for the expansion of the Security Council and ECOSOC in order to reflect better the greatly increased membership of UN.

Two separate resolutions, one for each Council, were introduced in the Special Political Committee by El Salvador on behalf of the countries.

Dr. Rafael Uruquia (El Salvador) said that the drafts also contained provisions for amending the UN Charter to permit the increase in membership from 11 members to 13 in the Security Council, and from 18 to 24 in ECOSOC.

On November 4, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon (India) urged that UN should establish a Committee made up of the Big Four Powers and others to study how the world Organization might go about amending its Charter.

At the same time, he warned the Special Political Committee that if it went further and adopted two draft resolutions actually recommending Charter amendments to allow for an enlargement of two UN organs, it would result only in a hardening of the 'cold war'.

He pointed out that there was still no reason for believing that the Big Powers, whose assent was needed for any Charter revision, had changed the rigid stand that had prevented this. There was no doubt that the required two-thirds majority support for Charter changes would be forthcoming. Thus, recommendations such as those now before the Committee would throw the onus for non-ratification on the Big Powers.

But the Big Powers would not be "steam-rollered by our vote" and the two resolutions before the Committee "will not achieve any purpose other than to strain the 'cold war' further".

He said that the existing seats in the two Councils had been allocated on a geographical basis under a "gentleman's agreement" of long standing. But, there was nothing in the Charter itself that suggested this must be so. Yet while there had been discussion of revising the Charter, little had been said about revising the "gentleman's agreement" to allow for a fairer distribution of seats.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He recalled that the Assembly had adopted in 1959 a resolution under which it had agreed to establish a Committee to study Charter revision if there was no agreement on actual revision in 1960.

He said: "The purpose of our meeting is to discover whether, if not now, certainly before the next session, we can proceed to a solution of this problem. We cannot get this solution simply by passing majority resolutions". He declared: "The fact is, we must get consent, we must get agreement".

It was very difficult for delegations to explain to the legislative bodies of their countries and to their people why some UN members had "proper representation" in UN and some had not.

He added: "It is as if there has developed some kind of apartheid in United Nations. We pass resolutions against apartheid, then we get apartheid in UN itself".

He said that while he could not now present formal proposals in opposition to those already before the Committee, he wished to invoke the terms of the 1959 resolution.

He said: "Let us not provide an opportunity for promoting the 'cold war'... If there is a relaxation of tensions and a coming together of the Great Powers on other great questions, these matters will fall naturally into place....

"If this situation does end with the creation of a Committee, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and USA must be members. If a working group were formed and they could find a solution, then probably we should get somewhere."

Dr. Miguel Rafael Uruquia (El Salvador), one of the key sponsors of the two 39-Power draft resolutions, said: "I fail to see why at this session we cannot discuss concrete draft resolutions on the desired amendments and I do not see why we cannot vote on them."

Mr. Qassim Hassan (Iraq) said that past debates, as well as the present discussion, showed that the main obstacle was a political one—"the denial of the right of China to be represented in this international Organization. But my delegation strongly believes that until this consideration is met, the existing seats in the Councils should be more equitably distributed. No one can deny that while the two great continents of Africa and Asia are grossly under-represented, others are grossly over-represented."

Mr. Visutr Arthayukti (Thailand) said that the claim for enlarging the two Councils was "just and equitable."

He added: "We cannot consider questions affecting all parts of the world without the effective participation of the countries involved.

"Although the political considerations may delay the outcome of this vital question, let us proceed any way in the direction of our common aim."

He said he would support both the draft resolutions.

Dr. Reis Malie (Albania) said that the "key problem" was of restoring the rights of the "legitimate Government of China. As long as the People's Republic of China do not occupy their rightful seat, there can be no Charter revision."

The two draft resolutions proposing an increase in the membership of the Security Council and ECOSOC were officially released at UN Headquarters on November 4.

The draft on the Security Council, sponsored by 17 nations, stated:

"Of the two additional non-permanent members first elected after the entry into force of the amendment increasing the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 13, one shall be replaced at the first and one at the second regular election thereafter and their terms shall expire at the same time as those of the other non-permanent members replaced at those elections."

It called for the election of the two new members "as soon as possible and if necessary, to hold a special session of the General Assembly for that purpose."

The resolution proposing that membership of ECOSOC be increased from 18 to 24, sponsored by 27 nations called for the replacement of two of the six new members at each of the next three regular elections.

On November 9, Mr. H. Scheltema (Netherlands) urged the Committee to adopt the two draft resolutions recommending Charter amendments to allow for expansion of the Security Council and ECOSOC in spite of Soviet objections.

He said: "What we need is enlargement of these Councils. We refuse to show appeasement and discuss the matter on Soviet terms instead of on majority terms."

Mr. Luis Iturralde Chinel (Bolivia) said he agreed that the present problem of representation could only be solved by an increase in the number of seats on the two Councils and not by re-allocating existing seats.

Mr. F. Pacuraru (Rumania) said that the draft proposals would intensify the 'cold war.' Therefore, his country would reject them.

Mr. El Nur Ali Suleiman (Sudan) said that the rights of one permanent member —China—should not be allowed to affect the rights of others.

He said: "To amend the Charter as asked in these drafts would not affect the right of the Chinese people to their place and it will enhance the prestige of this Organization."

Mr. Luis J. Da Costa (Portugal) said that re-distribution of existing seats on the Councils would lead only to further injustice and not to a positive solution.

Dr. Juan Baptista De Lavalle (Peru) said it was urgent and imperative that the Charter be amended.

Mr. Omar Mohallin (Somalia) said that his and other African States wanted to participate with equality in the principal organs of UN and recommended adoption of the draft resolutions.

Mr. Rishikesh Shaha (Nepal) said he was of the opinion that the draft resolutions might complicate matters further. He believed that the permanent members should try to reach agreement as soon as possible.

On November 10, the Soviet Union rejected the proposals to enlarge the Security Council and ECOSOC.

Mr. A. A. Soldatov (USSR) said that his Government would never agree to such proposals unless China was admitted to UN.

Afro-Asian Resolution:

On November 10, an Afro-Asian resolution tabled by five countries proposed the setting up of a nine-nation Committee to try to seek agreement on the question of increasing the membership of the two Councils.

The resolution was jointly sponsored by India, Burma, Ceylon, Ghana and Iraq.

Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon (India) introduced the resolution in the Committee, proposing the immediate setting-up of a nine-nation Committee composed of USA, UK, the Soviet Union, France and five other countries for the purpose of finding a satisfactory solution of the problem.

The Committee should take into account the views expressed in this connexion in the General Assembly and should report to the 16th session of the Assembly.

The membership of the Security Council and ECOSOC should more truly reflect the increase in the membership of the world body and should ensure a more adequate and equitable distribution of seats in these organs of UN.

Mr. C. S. Jha (India) formally proposed that the Special Political Committee should adjourn its debate on the matter and return to the question only when there was a better chance of adopting a resolution which would represent the largest consensus of opinion.

He believed that there were good grounds for expanding both the Councils, but this should not offend the principle of unanimity among the Big Powers. Since the Soviet Union had said that no amendment of the Charter was possible without representation of China, he said that there was no chance of an amendment being made.

Ghana supported the Indian request for adjournment of the debate.

India's suggestion for adjournment of the debate was accepted on November 14 and the Special Political Committee adjourned until the following week.

UN General Assembly Postpones Council Elections:

On November 11, the UN General Assembly voted to postpone indefinitely elections to the Security Council and ECOSOC.

It adopted a Nigerian motion to that effect by 51 votes to 38, with nine abstentions.

It over-rode British and American opposition to the postponement, which Mr. Jaja Wachuku (Nigeria) sought on grounds that the Special Political Committee was currently debating proposals to increase membership of the two Councils, or failing that, to re-apportion representation so that Africa and Asia had increased representation.

B. UN Trusteeship Committee—Debates On Non-Self-Governing Territories: Debates in the UN Trusteeship Committee on non-self-governing territories, transmission of information to UN on conditions in those territories and allied questions began on October 18.

Mr. I. Hussain (Pakistan) told the Committee that non-self-governing territories should not be associated with the European Economic Community.

He said that such an association could not but be harmful to the interests of these territories. It came in the way of their economic development and might cause major disturbances in the status quo of the world economy.

Referring to colonialism, he said that its essence was to exploit the natural wealth of a country for the benefit of the colonial Power. This, he said, must be stopped.

On October 19, Mr. J. N. Sahni (India) said that the right to independence of the remaining non-self-governing territories must be recognized now and without delay. This matter was of vital concern to India and was very dear to the heart of his countrymen. India, he said, acknowledged the part the Powers administering non-self-governing territories were playing in advancing the economic, social and educational status of those territories. But it was common experience that progress in these fields could multiply many times after a territory had gained independence.

He said it was all too apparent that while the rest of the world was moving forward with the speed of a jet plane, Trust territories were moving at the pace of a snail.

He complained about the lack of information from some non-self-governing territories. Worse still was the fact that there were even now vast territories in Africa in the possession of Portugal from which no information was coming. The fate of these territories should not be forgotten.

He said that there was also the absurd anomaly of Goa. The people of Goa were kith and kin of the rest of the Indian sub-continent. The Government of India had continued to tolerate the situation in the hope that wiser counsels would prevail.

He insisted on the right of the Trusteeship Committee to obtain from Administering Countries information on political and constitutional developments and expressed disappointment that South Africa continued to withhold such information despite the Assembly's renewed appeal in 1959.

He said that the report of the Committee on Information had furnished evidence of the existence of powerful monopolies in some territories and cited the examples of Swaziland, Northern Rhodesia, the former Belgian Congo and several other territories.

Calling for immediate independence for all dependent territories, he said that India was re-inforced in the belief that the longer the independence of these countries was delayed, the slower would be their advancement in the economic, social and educational fields.

He said the argument that a certain territory was not sufficiently advanced economically, socially or educationally to merit independence was no longer valid.

The delegate of Guinea suggested that the Committee pass a resolution setting 1961 as the deadline for granting independence to all non-autonomous territories. These should include the remaining European possessions in Africa, Asia and the Americas.

He warned the colonial Powers that if they delayed the granting of independence by more than a year or two, they would be risking a repetition of the tragic experiences in Congo and would be chased out with riots and gun-fire.

He said that his country was ready to give the African colonial territories all the necessary political and material aid for their liberation.

He also severely criticized the association of non-autonomous territories within the European Economic Community and said that the sole purpose of this organization was to exploit those territories.

US Resolution On Rights Of African Peoples:

On October 20, USA tabled a draft resolution calling on all States to respect the rights of the African peoples "to choose their own way of life and to determine for themselves the course they wish to follow".

It also called on all nations to refrain from intervening, directly or indirectly, in the internal affairs of African States whether by subversion, force, propaganda or any other means.

Additionally, the draft outlined a plan for economic assistance to the newly-emergent countries of Africa.

It read:

"The General Assembly, Recalling that the Preamble to the Charter of United Nations re-affirms faith in the equal rights of nations, large and small and states the determination of the peoples of United Nations to practise tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours;

"Recalling that among the purposes of United Nations are:

"To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen international peace;

"To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion;

"Recognizing that the rapid advancement of the peoples of Africa towards independence has resulted in the creation of a large number of new States which may desire assistance during their first years as independent nations;

"Conscious of the challenge to the international community and to peace and orderly progress in freedom implicit in recent developments on the African continent, so rich in human and natural resources and so bright with promise;

"Convinced that international co-operation in the economic and social fields is of critical importance to assist newly-independent nations in Africa so that they may reap the benefits and assume the responsibilities of Independence;

"Recognizing the urgency of initiating an intensive programme of concerted action in the UN system designed to assist in meeting the educational needs of the countries of Africa;

"Part I:

"(1) Calls upon all States to respect the right of the peoples of Africa to choose their own way of life and to determine for themselves the course they wish to follow;

"(2) Calls upon all States to refrain from intervening directly or indirectly in the internal affairs of these new nations, whether by subversion, force, propaganda or by any other means;

"(3) Calls upon all States to refrain from intervening directly between the States of this area or from encouraging them to wasteful and dangerous competition in armaments.

"Part II:

"(1) Expresses the hope that the new African States will consider carefully ways and means to maintain their security without dangerous and wasteful competition in armaments, which might include examination of the possibilities of the establishment of regional agreements or arrangements;

"(2) Requests the Secretary-General to render such assistance as may be requested to facilitate such an examination;

"(3) Invites the Secretary-General in the light of Resolution 115 (XIV), to give urgent and sympathetic consideration to all requests which he might receive for technical assistance in the security field from the new African States.

"Part III:

"(1) Reiterates the General Assembly Resolution 1474 (ES-IV) in which an appeal was made for urgent voluntary contributions to a UN fund for the Congo to be used under UN control and in consultation with the Central Government for rendering assistance to the Congo for emergency needs;

"(2) Urges all member-Governments to pledge and promptly make available substantial contributions to the fund for the Congo in support of the UN programme in the Congo.

"Part IV:

"(1) Calls attention to the particular importance in present circumstances of providing assistance to African countries to help them, at their request, in shaping long-term social and economic development, specifically through:

"(a) The expansion of the regular technical assistance programmes of United Nations, including those relating to the provision of operating and administrative personnel at the request of newly-independent countries, the establishment of additional high-level resident representatives in such countries and the acceleration of programmes for newly-independent countries under the expanded programme of technical assistance; and

"(b) The acceleration of the appropriate technical assistance and pre-investment activities of the Special Fund and of the expanded programme of technical assistance, particularly the establishment of Training Institutes to meet the urgent needs for training technical personnel:

"(2) Expresses the hope that the newly-independent countries of Africa will become members of the newly-established International Development Association (IDA) and thus become eligible for assistance from IDA;

"(3) Urges member-States of UN or of the specialized agencies and institutions, public and private, in these States, in a position to provide economic aid to the newly-independent countries of Africa, to increase and intensify their efforts toward this end, and to consult with UN and appropriate specialized agencies in the development of their programmes in order to achieve maximum results through co-ordinated efforts;

"(4) Invites all organizations within the UN system in carrying out programmes within their terms of reference, to establish appropriate priorities for programmes and projects designed to aid the newly-independent countries of Africa without prejudice to the possibility of further assistance to other developing countries.

"Part V:

"(1) Urges each African State desiring assistance in education to determine, in co-operation with the appropriate agencies of UN, its educational requirements and to develop action programmes to meet these needs;

"(2) Urges the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to increase its assistance to African educational programmes, particularly in the areas of educational planning and administration and teacher training, and UN, its Special Fund and the expanded programme of technical assistance, and the other specialized agencies to increase their educational activities in African countries;

"(3) Calls on the UN Children's Emergency Fund, in co-operation with the appropriate specialized agencies, to expand its programmes of education in health, nutrition and child care in African countries;

"(4) Urges member-States and non-governmental organizations and agencies, in consultation with UN and the specialized agencies, to increase their programmes for direct educational assistance to the independent countries of Africa and to provide increased facilities in the more highly developed States for the education of Africans;

"(5) Requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) as the specialized agency in the UN system with primary responsibility for education to develop, in consultation with UN and other specialized agencies and in co-operation with the African countries concerned, a programme of further action required to meet the educational needs of the African countries and to submit this programme to the 32nd session of the Economic and Social Council; and

"(6) Requests the Economic and Social Council to forward this programme with its comments to the 16th session of the General Assembly."

Yugoslav Resolution:

On October 22, Yugoslavia moved a resolution in the Committee aimed at permitting non-self-governing countries to send their representatives to different UN bodies.

The resolution, moved by the Yugoslav delegate, Mr. Ilvik, said that member-States of UN governing these countries should ensure the participation of their representatives in the Committees of the world Organization.

The introduction of the resolution was followed by a debate as to whether the question should be discussed immediately or after the General Assembly completed consideration of the draft Soviet resolution calling for the abolition of the colonies (see page 3635).

Indian Resolution On Dependent Territories Adopted:

On October 26, the Committee adopted a resolution moved by India urging member-States which administered dependent territories to take immediate measures aimed at the rapid development of indigenous civil and technical cadres and for replacement of expatriate personnel by indigenous officers.

Voting was 73 in favour, one against, with nine abstentions.

The resolution was co-sponsored by India, Argentina, Burma, Ceylon, Ghana, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Mexico, Nepal, Nigeria, Senegal, Somalia and Sweden.

Mr. Dinesh Singh (India) who moved the resolution and others who supported it contended that it would greatly advance the non-self-governing territories towards the goal of independence.

Representatives of the Soviet Union and the East European countries, on the other hand, regretted that the sponsors of the resolution had not found it possible to include the time-limit of 1961 for the independence of these territories. According to the Soviet delegate, the resolution as it was framed would enable colonial Powers to delay independence for colonial areas.

Resolution Calling For Report On Political Development Of Non-Autonomous Territories Adopted:

On October 28, the Committee adopted by 61 votes to none a resolution calling upon all nations administering non-autonomous territories to report to UN on their political development.

There were 24 abstentions, including Britain, France and the Soviet bloc countries.

Earlier, during the debate on one of the amendments to the resolution, the Guinean delegate said that Spain and Portugal should report political information on the territories under their administration. This was all the more necessary because there had been aggression and bloodshed in the Portuguese territories.

The Portuguese delegate protested against Guinea's assertions, which he called "false and insolent".

Resolution On Racial Discrimination Adopted:

On October 28 the Committee adopted an India-sponsored resolution urging that countries with overseas territories should immediately rescind racial discrimination.

Voting was 72 in favour and none against, with Britain and Australia abstaining.

Moving the resolution, which was co-sponsored by Bolivia and 14 Asian and African countries, Mr. Dinesh Singh (India) said that racial discrimination reflected a sickness of mind which must be destroyed. He cited instances of inequality of opportunity in the economic field in several African territories. In Swaziland some 49 per cent of the total area had been alienated or reserved for Europeans to the exclusion of all local interests. In East and Central African territories, education continued to be organized on racial lines.

He added that racial discrimination was bad anywhere in any circumstances and its existence was objectionable, particularly in the territories which were being administered under a sacred trust.

The Portuguese delegate, who voted for the resolution, claimed that since the 17th century, complete racial equality had prevailed in Portugal and her overseas territories.

The Liberian delegate retorted that the same "dirty" laws which were in existence in other colonial territories and against which the overwhelming majority of the delegates protested, were being enforced in Portuguese territories as well.

Sir Andrew Cohen (Britain) said that Britain supported the spirit of the resolution, but contended that the two concrete measures suggested by the sponsors could be implemented only progressively and not immediately, as desired by the sponsors.

These measures were: (1) Revocation of all laws and regulations which tend to encourage or sanction, directly or indirectly, discriminatory policies; (2) Extension to all inhabitants of full exercise of basic political rights, particularly the right to vote.

Report Of Special Trusteeship Committee:

On November 1, Mr. C. S. Jha (India) commended to the Committee a report of the Special Trusteeship Committee on the obligation of member-States to transmit information on their non-self-governing territories.

The Committee, consisting of India, Mexico, Morocco, the Netherlands, UK and USA, with Mr. Jha as Chairman, came to the conclusion that the obligation of colonial Powers to transmit information regarding their non-self-governing territories as contemplated under Article 73-E of the UN Charter constituted an international obligation which could not be superseded by unilateral action.

Portugal was among those which persistently refused such information on the ground that she had no non-self-governing territories and that her overseas possessions were parts of the metropolitan State.

The Committee did not name individual colonial Powers, but it laid down twelve principles which, according to diplomatic sources, amounted to total rejection of Portuguese and other similar claims.

Mr. Jha told the Committee: "In the course of discussions, the Special Committee decided to confine itself to the enumeration of universal principles without particular reference to any non-self-governing territories. Sometimes, members had to emphasis or prove a point cited the experience in respect of certain existing or former non-self-governing territories, but this was by way of illustration only."

Resolution On Portugal's And Spain's Overseas Possessions:

On November 8, speaking on the resolution sponsored by India, Guinea, Nepal, Nigeria, Afghanistan and Burma on the overseas possessions of Portugal and Spain, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon (India) said that Portugal should either comply with her obligations under the UN Charter regarding her overseas possessions or renounce the Charter and leave the world Organization.

The draft resolution listed ten regions, including Goa, Angola and Mozambique, as "territories administered by Portugal" and four regions "as territories administered by Spain" and urged both the countries to ensure that these regions were given "full freedom for democratic political activities which would accelerate their attainment of independence" and called on them to report annually to United Nations on conditions prevailing in those regions.

Mr. Menon called the Portuguese overseas territories a "slave empire" and said that they were similar to those of other colonial Powers, except that there was "more suppression, more backwardness and more slave labour" in the Portuguese possessions.

He said that the people of Goa, on the west coast of India, were not even allowed to hold prayer meetings without permission. India had done nothing to extend her own liberation movement to Goa because of the impact this could have on world peace and security.

But, he added, the Indian Government reserved for itself the right to free this territory which he called a "reminder of colonialism."

He quoted extensively from the Portuguese State which imposed forced labour and other such practices over the African populations and said that whatever name Portugal gave to these territories—she called Goa "State of India"—there was no doubt that they were colonies. These possessions were "out of date at least by 500 years." Portugal claimed that she was responsible for "the moral uplift" of the indigenous populations and for an unforeseeable future these areas must be under the civilized State. He would not ask whether Portugal was a civilized State because that would be improper. But he would say that Portuguese arguments were reminiscent of the defence of slavery put up by the slave owners.

He added: "We must reject the idea that these conquered territories are an integral part of Portugal. Such an idea has no moral or political basis in the modern conception sanctified by the Charter that sovereignty vests in the people. To say that they cannot have freedom in the foreseeable future is an affront to the Charter. What happens in the case of an empire is that the sovereignty of the people is suppressed. When liberation comes, that latent sovereignty becomes active."

[Spain and Portugal claimed that they have no dependent territories and that the regions listed in the draft were "overseas provinces" enjoying the same degree of independence and rights as the mother countries in Europe. For this reason, they claimed they had no obligation to keep UN informed of the developments in their overseas possessions, as Article 73 (E) of the Charter required of member-States with dependencies.]

The Spanish possessions listed in the eight-Power draft were Ifni, West Sahara, Fernando and Rio Muni. The Portuguese possessions were the Cape Verde archipelago, Portuguese, Guinea, San Tome and Principe, San Joao Baptista de Ajuda, Cabinda, Mozambique, Macao and Timor.

He said that Portugal had argued that Article 73 (E) did not apply to her and that "it enjoys a separate position immune from the provisions of the Charter."

He added: "The arguments appear to be that Portugal has no colonies. I wish that were the case, but we are trying to bring about a situation where Portugal has no colonies, just as no country in the world should have colonies."

Mr. Mahamat Criga (Chad) strongly attacked Portugal for her treatment of the indigenous population of Angola and charged that 700,000 people were exposed to forced labour and to "the most cruel tortures" in concentration camps.

He said that out of 11 million people under "Portuguese domination", only 35,000 had the right to vote.

The delegate of Ghana told the Committee that Portugal was shipping 100,000 workers from Mozambique every year for forced labour in South Africa.

He said that these workers were called volunteers, but, according to his information, they were "bought" and were obliged to work in various colonies and territories.

With Spain giving satisfactory assurances regarding transmission of information under Article 73 of the Charter over territories under her control, India and the other seven sponsors of the resolution on November 10 decided to confine their demand to Portugal.

The amended draft resolution removed the Spanish territories from the list of colonies mentioned by name in the original resolution. Both Spain and Portugal were invited to take part in the work of the Committee on Information.

Resolution On Progress In Territories Adopted:

On November 10, the Committee adopted a resolution declaring that colonial Powers were accountable to UN for the progress in the non-self-governing territories.

Spain, Portugal and South Africa voted against the resolution, while Britain, USA and the Soviet Union were among those who abstained.

During the debate on the resolution, Spain and Portugal were strongly criticized for the administration of the territories under their control. Delegates of these two countries maintained that the territories were not colonies but overseas provinces of the Metropolitan country.

The Committee, however, was of the view that before the statements of Portugal and Spain were accepted, the territories must have attained an advanced stage of self-government and UN must supervise any election on the issue. It was only then that the territories could be considered as part of the Metropolitan country.

Resolution Calling On Portugal To Furnish Information On Her Overseas Territories Adopted:

On November 12, the Committee adopted a resolution demanding that Portugal furnish UN with information on nine of her overseas territories without delay.

The resolution was adopted by 45 votes to six (France, Portugal, South Africa, Belgium, Brazil and Spain) and 24 abstentions and was sponsored by nine members of the Afro-Asian group: Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, Ghana, Guinea, India, Liberia, Nepal and Nigeria.

The countries which abstained in the vote were: Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, New Zealand, Pakistan, Panama, Poland, Rumania, Ukraine, USSR, UK, USA, Albania, Australia, Austria, Bulgaria and Byelo-Russia.

It asked the UN Secretary-General to take the steps required, following the Spanish Government's announcement that it was willing to communicate information to UN on certain overseas territories under Spanish administration.

Before the resolution was put to vote, its sponsors had deleted from the original text any specific mention of the Spanish territories of Ifni, Western Sahara, Fernando and Rio Muni.

This decision was taken after the Spanish delegates, Mr. Manuel Aznar and Mr. Felix De Lequerica, gave repeated assurances to the Committee that the Spanish Government would transmit to the UN Secretary-General information concerning Trusteeship territories as defined in Article 11 of the UN Charter.

Earlier, the countries of the Asian-African Group, with the exception of Guinea, sided with the majority to turn down a series of amendments supported by the Soviet bloc which demanded that Spain report to UN on non-autonomous territories under Spanish administration.

C. UN Budgetary Committee—Debate On Secretary-General's Financial Activities: The 5th Committee (Budgetary Committee) of the UN General Assembly on October 17 began a discussion on the administrative and financial activity of the UN Secretary-General.

Mr. A. Roschin (USSR), opening the debate, pointed to the wrong actions running counter to the UN Charter of the Secretary-General in directing the Secretariat to the one-sided selection of the staff of the Secretariat, with the result that the overwhelming majority of the Secretariat's staff were citizens of countries belonging to the Western bloc and to the inexpedient and unlawful spending of funds of the Organization.

He cited figures showing that over two-thirds of the total staff of the Secretariat were citizens of Western countries. The overwhelming majority of leading officials of the Secretariat consisted of the citizens of USA and representatives of other countries belonging to military blocs held together by USA.

He pointed out that out of 1,170 officials of 'professional' grade, 800 were Americans or citizens of countries allied to USA. Only 84 came from socialist countries. In the under-secretary grade, six out of 28 were American, and only one a Soviet citizen. He insisted that the same weighting held good in UN missions and forces abroad.

He said: "Events of recent times show that the work of the Secretary-General is going more and more beyond the provisions of the Charter.

"In order to send a mission to Laos there should have been a decision of the Security Council, but no such decision was taken."

He said that in this action, the Secretary-General clearly went beyond the authority conferred on him by the Charter.

He added: "The question arises—is not the sending of such a mission to Laos linked with the efforts of USA to bring that country into the S-EATO military bloc?"

He said that Laos "was not merely an exception" and charged that many of Mr. Hammarskjoeld's peace missions or technical missions "took place in areas of concern to USA and her military blocs."

On October 18, the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld denied the Soviet accusation that UN, in recruiting its personnel, gave preference to the citizens of USA and her political and military allies. He also answered Soviet criticism of UN missions.

He said that the UN missions were necessary to keep the Secretary-General informed of dangers to peace in the world.

The UN mission sent to Laos earlier in 1960 had been requested by the Head of State and the legitimate Government of Laos. Another aid mission had been sent to the African Republic of Guinea at the request of the Guinean President, Mr. Sekou Toure.

As for the recruiting of personnel, he said that he had found a de facto situation when he took over his office and had tried to correct it as vacancies occurred.

However, it was sometimes difficult to find the necessary trained personnel in certain countries of the world.

He added that in selecting personnel, his choice was dictated by the criteria of loyalty to UN, honesty and competence.

He rejected charges made by the Soviet delegate, Mr. A. A. Roschin, that he had engaged in extravagant spending to further US policies in the Congo, Laos and Guinea.

He said that his first standard for employment was loyalty to UN, but this was "harder to find in some countries than in others."

Senator George Aiken (USA) backed Mr. Hammarskjoeld completely and said:

"It is time for us to realize that either we want this Organization or we do not. It is time for us to realize that if we want it we are going to have to work for it, and that includes paying the bills and having a workable organization.

"It is a source of regret that certain member-Governments which have considerable resources appear reluctant to use them in this great and common cause. USA believes in United Nations and, I may add, in the high integrity of its Secretary-General."

Mr. Hassan Suliman el Hakeem (UAR) said that increases in the 1961 Budget were "both anticipated and justified in the light of the growing UN membership and responsibilities."

Mr. Andre Ganem (France) reserved opinion on the "unchartered land" of the new Budget." But he said that expenses for the UN Congo operation, which were not covered in the Budget and which were expected to run as high as $150 million for the first year, should be apportioned among all members on the regular scale of assessments.

On October 27, Mr. J. N. Sahni (India) proposed that the UN Secretariat should reflect geographical orientations and the changing emphasis in the membership of the world Organization.

He said that the Secretariat should portray the background and culture of the peoples of the world. This would enable the Secretary-General to have at his disposal the knowledge and ability drawn from various geographical areas. But, he did not agree that the geographical distribution should be based on ideological concepts or divisions.

Speaking of India's role in UN, he said that India had never been reluctant to make her fullest contribution consistent with her capacity. She had responded unhesitatingly, whether the call came for service in Korea, Indo-China, West Asia er Congo. Also, she had this year offered $2,000,000 to the UN expanded programme of technical assistance and the Special Fund.

On October 29, Mr. T. W. Cutts (Australia) warned the Soviet Union that she could lose her voting rights in United Nations if she refused to pay her share of the UN Congo operations.

He accused the Soviet bloc countries of attempting to establish a "financial veto" over UN activities.

He said: "The (Soviet) position is not consistent with the exercise of rights of UN membership."

He said that the financial consequences of the Congo programme — Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld had estimated the expense at more than $66 million for the first six months—"must be borne by all members."

He added: "The fact is, it is an expenditure of the Organization which will be apportioned among all members by the General Assembly."

D. US Presidential Election—Senator J. F. Kennedy Elected: In the poll for the US Presidency on November 8, Senator John Fitzgerald Kennedy (43), Democratic leader and son of a millionaire, was elected the new President.

He defeated his Republican opponent, the Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon.

The Democrats rounded off their Presidential victory by retaining control of the House of Representatives and the Senate, though they lost some seats in the House.

The popular vote of the two candidates on the night of November 12 stood at these figures:

Senator Kennedy: 33,613,583 (50.2 per cent);

Mr. Richard Nixon 33,325,639 (49.8 per cent);

Mr. Kennedy thus had the narrow margin of 288,949 votes—but he had the vital majority of electoral college votes which gave him the Presidency.

Mr. Nixon had 191 electoral votes against 322 for Mr. Kennedy. (The minimum for victory is 269) but Republican leaders claimed Mr. Nixon would win the 32 votes of California when absentee ballots were counted, and the 27 of Illinois when there was a recount there. This would bring Senator Kennedy's total to 273 and some Republicans said that Mr. Nixon could win the Presidency by recounts in South Carolina, Missouri, Minnesota and New Jersey.

A Washington message on November 17 said that late returns from some States and the counting of absentee ballots, especially in California, had cut Senator Kennedy's lead in the Presidential popular vote to 200,000 over his opponent.

Mr. Kennedy would create four "firsts" in American history when he took the oath of office. He would become the first President of USA to be born in the 20th century. He would be the first Roman Catholic to occupy the White House. He would be the first President to have served in the US Navy, though the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt was at one time Assistant Secretary of the Navy and as such headed the service. Mr. Kennedy would also be the first President of pure Irish extraction.

He clinched his election victory by carrying the key States of New York, Pennsylvania and Texas.

He carried North Carolina and Georgia with 14 and 12 electoral votes respectively. He also carried the city of Portsmouth, (New Hampshire) which had picked the Presidential winner for the past 63 years.

While the key States of New York, Pennsylvania and Texas gave Senator Kennedy 45, 32 and 24 electoral votes respectively, New Jersey gave him 16, Delaware 3 and Louisiana 10.

Among the States that gave electoral votes to Mr. Nixon were: Ohio (25), Nebraska (6), New Hampshire (4) and South Dakota (4).

Mr. N. Khruschev's Message:

In a message of congratulations to Senator J. F. Kennedy, the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. S. Khruschev said he hoped that Soviet-American relations would follow the line along which they had developed in President Roosevelt's time.

The message said:

"Esteemed Mr. Kennedy, allow me to congratulate you on the occasion of your election to the high post of the President of USA.

"We hope that while you are in this post, the relations between our countries will again follow the line along which they were developing in Franklin Roosevelt's time, which would meet the basic interests not only of the peoples of the Soviet Union and USA but of the whole of mankind which is longing for deliverance from the threat of a new war.

"I think you will agree that the eyes of many people are fixed on USA and the Soviet Union because the destinies of world peace depend largely on the state of Soviet-American relations. We have declared our respect for the peaceable and gifted people of USA and we are ready to develop the most friendly relations between the Soviet and the American peoples, between the Governments of USSR and USA.

"We are convinced that there are no insurmountable obstacles to the preservation and consolidation of peace. For the sake of this goal we are ready, for our part, to continue the efforts to solve such pressing problems as disarmament, to settle the German issue through the earliest conclusion of a Peace Treaty and to help bring about the easing and improvement of the entire international situation.

"Any step in this direction will always meet with the full understanding and support of the Soviet Government. I wish you fruitful activity in the responsible capacity of US President and prosperity to the American people."

Senator J. F. Kennedy's Reply:

Replying to Mr. Khruschev's message of congratulation, Senator J. F. Kennedy on November 10 said that his main task on assumption of the US Presidency would be the achievement of a just and lasting peace.

At his first news conference since his election victory, he read out the text of his reply to Mr. Khruschev.

It said: "I am most appreciative of your courtesy in sending me a message of congratulations. The achievement of a just and lasting peace will remain a fundamental goal of this nation and a major task of its President. I am most pleased to have your good wishes at this time."

SPORT

A. Olympic Games: The 17th Olympic Games, the biggest Olympics since the Modern Games were founded in 1896, opened in Rome on August 25.

Under a scorching sun with a temperature at 90 degrees F and before a crowd estimated at 100,000—the sporting elite from 85 nations—4,200 men and women marched past the Italian President, Signor Giovanni Gronchi, dipping their flags in salute.

Sgr. Gronchi watched from his seat on the Tribune of Honour in the giant, £1,000,000 Olympic Stadium.

The parade was led by the Greeks, an honour granted them at each Olympiad as the founders of the Modern Games. Then came the other nations in alphabetical order. The Italians, as the host nation, brought up the rear.

The Olympic flag, with the five rings representing the world's five continents, was carried into the arena by eight athletes escorted by 12 Italian sailors. As they marched towards the Tribune, the crowd sang the Olympic Hymn. As the singing reached a crescendo, the flag was hoisted.

Suddenly, cannons boomed and bells tolled when a solitary athlete bearing the Olympic torch ran into the arena.

Hundreds of doves soared into the air as 18-year-old Roman, Giancarlo Peris, entered the Stadium bearing the torch which had been carried by a relay of runners from Greece.

He made a lap of the Stadium, the torch held proudly aloft. As the cheering crowd rose, he lit the Olympic flame, which burned day and night over the Stadium until the Games ended.

The Games ended on September 11 when the Olympic flame was extinguished, leaving the Russians undisputed champions for the third time in a row.

Once again they topped the gold medals tally with 43 to 34 of their closest rivals, the United States.

The flame, in the bowl atop the Stadium, died away as a choir and Italian band came to the end of the stirring Olympic hymn for the last time until the next Olympiad in Tokyo in 1964.

The Olympic flag fluttering in one corner, was slowly hauled down as giant floodlights spread their beams on a crowd of 100,000.

Then a battery of guns on nearby Monte Mario thundered out a salute to 5,900 competitors.

Performances were fantastic and Olympic records fell like autumn leaves. Many world records were broken; many equalled and the Olympic motto of citius altius fortius (faster, higher, stronger) was certainly not belied.

In the track and field events, Wilma Rudolph (USA) scored a notable 'treble' with three gold medals. There was a fantastic 400 metres duel between Otis Davis (USA) and Carl Kaufmann (Germany) before the American triumphed. Australia's Herb Elliott scored an easy 1,500 metres win in a fabulous new world time.

For drama there was the great decathlon duel between Rafer Johnson (USA) and Yang Chuan Kwang (Formosa) and the disqualification of America's 4 x 100 metres men's relay team after winning in world record time.

The greatest shock of all was the failure of the world record-holder, John Thomas (USA) to win the high jump. Other notable failures were Gordon Pirie (UK), in the 5,000 metres heats; Siegfried Valentin (Germany) in the 1,500 metres heats; Hal

Regd. No. D-727

Vol. VI. No. 51

CEYLON

A. Navy Chief Interdicted: The Government announced on November 16 that the Commander of the Navy, Rear-Admiral Royce de Mel and six other Naval officers had been interdicted from service pending investigation of an allegation that two Naval vessels had recently smuggled contraband liquor into the Island.

The announcement was made in both Houses of Parliament—in the Senate by the Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, and in the House of Representatives, by the Finance Minister, Mr. Felix Dias Bandaranaike.

It said: "Two ships of the Ceylon Navy, Parakrama and Mahasena, left Ceylon on August 3 on a cruise of the Far East in the course of which they visited Singapore, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Tokyo and Penang and returned to Colombo on October 7.

"Information was received by the Government that a large quantity of liquor had been purchased at one or more of these ports, brought to Colombo, kept hidden in ships' magazines and not declared to the Customs.

"On October 13, on the instructions of the Government, Customs officers and the police searched both ships, accompanied by the Rear-Admiral of the Navy, whose flagship is Mahasena.

"Subsequently, it was ascertained that only one magazine of each ship was shown to and examined by the search party, while in fact there were several other magazines in the ship which were not shown to the search party and therefore not examined.

"Meanwhile, further investigations were being made.

"Mahasena sailed from Colombo on October 18 towards Puttalam (north of Colombo along the west coast) and returned to base on October 24.

"The further investigations being made reveal that a large quantity of liquor, cigarettes and other articles had been purchased and taken into the two ships at some of the ports that the ships had called. Investigations are proceeding and the police, on the instructions of the Government have taken possession of certain documents from the ships and from Naval Headquarters.

"Pending completion of police inquiries, an order in the nature of interdiction had been made in respect of the following officers:

"Further action will follow as soon as inquiries are completed."

Rear-Admiral Royce de Mel was at that time in Bombay suffering from a "strained heart and fatigue."

According to a report in the Ceylon Observer, he had been ordered to return to Colombo as soon as possible to assist the authorities in the investigations now being made.

Rear-Admiral Royce de Mel, who returned by a special IAF plane to Colombo on November 20 said in a statement: "The announcement of my suspension might have been avoided while I, as head of the Ceylon Navy, was an official guest in India. The Government knew it was a case of suspected coronary thrombosis and it was absolutely heartless to make this announcement while I was in that condition."

He thanked the Indian Navy and the Government of India who, he said, "looked after me with the utmost consideration and with the most efficient care".

On the allegations of smuggling now under investigation, he commented: "Let the normal legal processes take their course."

B. Indian Aid Prospects: The Minister for Home Affairs and Industry, Mr. Maitripala Senanayake, said in Colombo on November 15 that India had assured Ceylon every assistance for her plans of industrialization.

He had returned three days earlier (November 12) after a 12-day tour of India during which he visited some of India's major industrial projects and industrial estates.

He said that the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru had shown keen interest in Ceylon's proposed iron and steel project and assured him every assistance.

He said he had discussed with the Indian authorities the assistance India could give for some of the projects Ceylon proposed to take up shortly, namely: textile mills, a small-scale industries institute, a fertilizer factory and a cement factory. He was gratified by the results of the discussions.

A team of Indian technicians would be made available to Ceylon to help in the setting up the textile mills. Technical help and training facilities had also been promised in connexion with the steel project.

He added that a team of Ceylonese engineers would leave for India shortly, with the Soviet report on the Rs. 150 million steel project. The report would be processed there in consultation with Indian engineers and he expected "to get going with the project" by the end of December, 1960.

CHINA

A. Withdrawal Of US Troops From South Korea Urged: The Government in a statement published on November 13 called for the withdrawal of all US troops from South Korea as the first step towards Korean re-unification.

The statement was in support of a memorandum issued by the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (North) refuting the annual report submitted by the UN Commission on Korea to the UN General Assembly.

It read:

"It is known to all that Korea and China have made unremitting efforts for the realization of the peaceful unification of Korea and the safeguarding of peace in Asia and the world. The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DR) has again and again put forward reasonable propositions for the peaceful settlement of the Korean question.

"On August 15, 1960 Premier Kim Il Sung of North Korea further advanced a new proposal for the peaceful unification of Korea with the formation of a Confederation of the northern and southern parts of Korea as a transitional measure. In order to facilitate the peaceful settlement of the Korean question, the Chinese People's Volunteers completely withdrew from Korea on their own initiative two years ago. These important efforts made by the Korean and Chinese side have won the support and praise of all the peace-loving countries and peoples throughout the world. But US imperialism, insisting on dividing Korea and aggravating tensions in the Far East, not only has refused to pull out its aggressive troops, but has continuously increased its military strength in South Korea and in flagrant violation of the Korean Armistice Agreement, unlawfully introduced into South Korea large amounts of new-type weapons in a deliberate attempt to turn South Korea into its colony and military base.

"The US aggressors' military occupation, political enslavement and economic plunder cannot but arouse the daily growing resistance of the people in South Korea. The South Korean people's just national aspiration of opposing US-Rhee Fascist rule which broke out in April, 1960 showed the bankruptcy of the US policy of aggression. The Korean people's national aspiration of opposing US imperialist aggression and intervention and for the realization of the peaceful unification of their Fatherland cannot be obstructed by any force on Earth.

"The Chinese Government has consistently held that the Korean question should be settled by the Korean people themselves, free from outside interference. The continued stay of US aggressive troops in South Korea is the chief obstacle to the peaceful unification of Korea and a main source of aggravated tensions in the Far East. Therefore, the Chinese Government solemnly states that, to enable the early realization of the Korean people's aspiration for the peaceful unification of their Fatherland, the US aggressive troops must at once withdraw completely from the southern part of Korea and USA must stop interfering in Korea by usurping the name of United Nations or any other means.

"The Chinese Government and people will always unfailingly and resolutely support the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DR) and the Korean people in their just struggle for the peaceful unification of their Fatherland."

B. Agriculture Promotion—Mass Movement Under Way: A mass movement was recently put under way in support of agriculture throughout the country.

In line with the policy put forward by the Central Committee of the Communist Party and its Chairman, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, that "agriculture is the foundation for the development of national economy," the Party had strengthened its agricultural leadership in each province, municipality and Autonomous Region.

An official report on the movement said: "Many leading Party and Government organizations have moved their offices out to the fields, their secretaries and other functionaries going right to the fore-front of production. Factories are turning out machinery for the rural people's communes; workers are teaching their skill to the farmers. Trade and transport groups are doing their utmost to get supplies of tools and other commodities to the countryside on time.

"Medical and scientific workers are making the rounds of water-conservancy project sites and of places where battles are being waged against drought.

"Actors, singers, musicians and dancers tour the villages, bringing encouragement and entertainment for the farming people. Members of all professions and trades are spreading out to the countryside to make their specialized contribution to the general advance.

"From industry, the urgent requirement at the present stage is for irrigation and drainage equipment, chemical fertilizer and insecticides, all kinds of means of transport and help with their repair and maintenance.

"Small power stations, blast furnaces and simple chemical fertilizer and insecticide plants have sprung up near the fields."

HONG KONG

A. Water Supply From China: Representatives of the Hong Kong Administration and of the People's Committee of Paoan County in China signed in Shumchun on November 15 an Agreement under which China undertook to supply 5,000 million gallons of water each year from the reservoir at Shumchun at a standard charge of 23.4 Hong Kong cents per thousand gallons.

Both sides agreed that the water from the reservoir would be supplied for an indefinite length of time.

The supply agreed upon represented about half the maximum storage at present possible in the colony and would thus be a valuable addition, which would come into effect as soon as the necessary engineering work was completed. This was expected to be done in a month.

Meanwhile, the Hong Kong authorities had undertaken to lay a pipe-line beneath the border in the Shumchun river area to link up with the Chinese pipe from the reservoir.

INDIA

SUMMARY: U Nu's Visit; Trade Agreements With Bulgaria And East Germany; Purchase Of Rice From Burma; Foreign Aid To CSIR; Foreign Exchange Position; Expansion Of Private Sector In Coal Industry.

A. U Nu's Visit: The Burmese Prime Minister, U Nu, accompanied by his wife, arrived in Calcutta from Rangoon on November 10 on a 10-day visit to India.

Immediately after his arrival, he left for New Delhi by train.

Speaking to newsmen in Calcutta, U Nu denied suggestions that he might mediate in the Sino-Indian border dispute.

He said: "I do not meddle in other people's affairs".

He, however, said that he would take the opportunity of explaining to Mr. Nehru some of the salient aspects of the Boundary Agreement signed by him and the Prime Minister of China, Mr. Chou En-lai. He declined to comment on their bearing on the Sino-Indian border dispute.

He said: "China and India are competent enough to solve their problems without any assistance from outside".

He added that Mr. Chou En-lai was eager on solving his country's dispute with India. He did not know if there had been any shift in Chinese policy towards India since his visit to China.

He arrived in New Delhi on November 11 and was received at the railway station by Mr. Nehru.

A large gathering of Cabinet Ministers, officials of the External Affairs Ministry and Burmese residents of the Capital was present.

U Nu told newsmen at the station that there were "one or two points in the Burmese Treaty with China (on the border) in which I think India will be interested". He added that he was going to put forward these aspects in the course of his talks with Mr. Nehru.

Asked whether he thought that the Sino-Indian problem would be settled, he said: "It must be, and amicably. There are certain aspects of the problem between Burma and China which I would like to discuss. I mean, there are one or two points in the Burmese Treaty with China in which I think India will be interested. I cannot tell you just now what they are".

He, however, clarified that these aspects of the Sino-Burmese Treaty had "no significance whatever" vis-a-vis India's border problem with China.

Question: "You talked to Mr. Chou En-lai. Did he appear amenable?"

U Nu: "He told me definitely that he must settle the Sino-Indian border problem amicably."

Question: "But he has charged India with intransigence."

U Nu: "It is a question that you must ask him. I have only told you what he told me."

Asked if he himself had the impression that Mr. Chou En-lai was interested in solving the border question with India, he replied with an emphatic "yes".

He said that Burma's border problem with China was also a very big one and "it took us six years to settle it. It was not settled with one stroke of the pen".

U Nu had talks with Mr. Nehru on November 12.

The following day (November 13), he visited Agra and spent a few hours at Fatehpur Sikri, the deserted capital of the Moghul Emperor Akbar.

State Banquet:

The same evening (November 13), Mr. Nehru held a State banquet in honour of U Nu at Rashtrapati Bhavan (President's House).

Speaking on the occasion, Mr. Nehru said: "We have met, as you know, to accord a warm welcome to the Prime Minister of Burma. It has been our privilege to welcome him often in this country and in this city of Delhi. He comes as a friend, a dear friend. He comes casually and he also goes casually, without fuss or ceremony.

"In this world today we live certainly with hope for the future, also certainly often with forebodings of disaster. So this world, Janus-like, is two-faced—the good face and the evil face. When you come, the evil face recedes, the evil face of the world, and only the good face is evident and so our spirits rise within us and our hopes also rise and we feel the better for it.

"Yet, in spite of this evil face of the world which sometimes shows itself, I believe that essentially we are passing through these very difficult phases to something much better for the world and we see this awakening for a better life or better thinking, for better co-operation and more friendliness peeping out in many places. We see and we have seen the whole of Asia astir. We are now seeing Africa in a state of ferment, full of hope and expectation.

"In this moving, dynamic and exciting world, it is good to have the friendship of countries and the friendship of individuals like yourself who are helping so much in various ways."

Replying, U Nu said: "I need hardly say how delighted I am to have this opportunity not only to meet many old friends, but also to make friends with many others whom I have not had the privilege of meeting before.

"There is a special affinity between India and Burma. Indeed, the association between the national leaders of the two countries became stronger as their common struggle for independence advanced and it has paved the way for the development of a strong sense of solidarity between the two countries on the attainment of Independence.

"Happily, on the foundation of the tradition of friendship and of a strong sense of solidarity our two countries have developed in recent years a fundamentally similar approach with which the world is faced today. In this age of super-States and Power blocs India, Burma and other like-minded countries have an indispensable role to play to help preserve world peace and promote friendly relations and co-operation among nations.

"We therefore welcome the gradual increase in the number of States which subscribe to the same basic policy in international affairs."

On November 14, U Nu was given a reception in Parliament House by the Congress Parliamentary Party.

Speaking to newsmen at the function, he said that he had explained to Mr. Nehru "one or two points" about the Sino-Burmese Border Agreement.

He said: "I have explained these points to him (Mr. Nehru), but I do not think I can tell them to you now. I have a duty to explain them first to my Parliament".

He added: "These have nothing to do with the Sino-Indian border dispute".

Asked about Chinese charges that US planes from Bangkok sometimes passed over Burma and the Sino-Indian border to parachute secret agents and weapons into China, he said that outposts in the north sometimes reported flights by unidentified planes. But it was very difficult to say to whom these planes belonged as "they fly very high".

Asked whether he had requested Mr. Nehru to pay a return visit to Burma, he replied: "Mr. Nehru does not need an invitation to come to Burma. Whenever I want to come to India, I do not wait for an invitation. I just come. He can do the same thing".

Address To Indian Council Of World Affairs:

the same day (November 14), U Nu strongly defended the working of democracy in Asian countries, but said that for perpetuation of the democratic system of government it was essential that the leaders elected were dedicated people who did not misuse their position to remain in power.

He declared that any Government in power, even though it had a big majority, must recognize the Opposition's right to express its views. It should resist the temptation to use Government machinery to subdue its opponents.

It was the duty of the Government in power to safeguard democratic methods and procedures and to recognize that the Opposition might be the next Government of the country. It should, therefore, take steps to pave the way for a peaceful change of government.

He added that it was the corrupting influence of power that had led to the failure of many democracies. He defined democracy as "the freedom to do as one pleases, subject to the rights and interests of others" and a corollary of this was, therefore, the practice of principles such as tolerance and consideration for others, however difficult it might be.

He said that if State machinery was misused and the country's leaders became corrupt, conditions would be ripe for the establishment of dictatorship through a violent revolution, as this would be the only alternative left to the people.

He added that democracy could not be forced onto any country and its principles had to be adjusted to suit local conditions and customs. Its successful application depended on the education of the people and this process was inevitably slow and gradual. Democracy in Asia was only about 10 years old and therefore the question whether it had been fully successful could only be answered many years later.

He had often been asked by Westerners: "Do you consider Asians fit for democracy?" He said he resented the insinuation in the question, which was usually asked in a patronizing tone, as though there was some test which only the West had been able to pass.

The question was all the more unfair in view of the fact that democracy was practised in very few Western countries and even there had not been securely established. Asians could just as appropriately ask: "Are Westerners fit for democracy?"

U Nu arrived in Sarnath on November 16 and spent several hours in meditation and prayer before the image of Lord Buddha in the Mulgandha Kuti Vihara.

He also visited Bodh Gaya before returning to Rangoon by air on November 21.

Speaking to newsmen at Rangoon airport immediately after his return, U Nu expressed the hope that an amicable settlement of the Sino-Indian border dispute would be reached.

Asked whether he had invited Mr. Nehru to attend the Burmese Independence celebrations in January, 1961, which Mr. Chou En-lai would be attending, he stated that Mr. Nehru would not be free at that time and that he had not invited him.

About the possibility of holding another "Bandung" Conference, he stated that the Conference should be held as soon as the Sino-Indian border dispute was settled.

He added that though the Conference should be held as early as possible, it should not be convened during the pendency of a border dispute between the two big countries.

B. Planes Violating Air-Space To Be Shot Down—Mr. J. Nehru's Statement: The Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru, told the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on November 21 that, whenever possible, the Government would "certainly try to intercept and shoot down planes violating India's air-space along the northern border."

Replying to questions about Chinese air violations, he, however, pointed out that the planes usually flew at a height of over 70,000 feet at night and it was "not a very easy matter to shoot them down."

Some lights, he explained, were seen for one or two seconds in the dark sky. Unless a vast armada of thousands of planes was kept constantly in the air as in the West, it was not possible to successfully intercept these planes.

It was open to India, he said, to shoot planes violating her air-space and "we may do it whenever we have a chance." Meanwhile, the Government was "trying to pursue the matter through diplomatic means."

Asked by some members whether the Government had thought of doing something apart from sending mild and strong protests against air violations, he replied: "There are no other steps except to shoot down the planes."

An Opposition member said that while refuting the Indian charge that Chinese planes had violated Indian air-space, the Chinese Government in its letter had challenged India to bring down Chinese planes if and when they were spotted over Indian territory. He asked what the Government of India proposed to do with regard to that challenge.

Mr. Nehru replied that what was said by the Chinese was "if you find any plane which is not yours bring it down, the suggestion being that they were not their planes but planes of other countries and they will be very happy if we brought them down."

E. Purchase Of Rice From Burma: It was announced in New Delhi on November 23 that India had agreed to purchase 200,000 tons of rice from Burma's 1961 crop.

A joint communique issued at the end of the talks between a Burmese delegation led by U Hla Gyaw, Parliamentary Secretary of the Burmese Ministry of Trade Development and an Indian delegation headed by Mr. B. B. Ghosh, Secretary in the Central Ministry of Food and Agriculture said that the Burmese delegation had agreed to offer an additional quantity later, if possible.

The two delegations also agreed that the volume of trade between India and Burma should be raised to as high a level as practicable and that the question of entering into another long-term Trade Agreement and also a long-term Rice Agreement should be considered.

The existing five-year Rice Agreement between India and Burma would expire by the end of 1960. Under it, India bought two million tons of rice—an average of 4,00,000 tons a year.

F. Foreign Aid To CSIR: It was made known in New Delhi on November 23 that foreign aid to the tune of Rs. 2.71 crores would be made available to the Council of Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR) for purchase of costly equipment to obtain experts on loan and for the training abroad of young Indian scientists.

The break-up of the aid was: experts Rs. 91,00,000, equipment and models Rs. 1,64,00,000 and fellowships Rs. 16,00,000.

The UN Special Fund, France, Switzerland and other European countries would provide the bulk of the aid. Assistance from the UN Fund would be made available for the Central Mechanical Engineering Research Institute, the Central Public Health Engineering Research Institute, the Central Mining Research Station and the National Aeronautical Laboratory.

As a result of the discussions between the Director-General of Scientific and Industrial Research and the General Manager of the UN Fund, financial assistance to the Mechanical Engineering Research Institute was raised from $573,000 to $672,000. Of this, $445,000 would be utilized for obtaining equipment and apparatus, $172,000 for getting experts and $25,000 for the training abroad of graduate engineers.

The Fund agreed to allocate $500,000 for equipment for the Public Health Engineering Research Institute.

As a major part of the equipment required for the Central Mining Research Station would come from outside India, the Fund approved assistance to the tune of $657,000 for the purpose.

The question of assistance from the Fund for the National Aeronautical Laboratory was examined by Mr L. P. Coombes, a representative of the Fund. On his report, the Managing Director of the Fund recommended an allocation of $1,390,000 for the laboratory. This would include provision for the supply of one wind-tunnel, 1 ft. by 1 ft.

G. Foreign Exchange Position—Mr. Morarji Desai's Statement: The Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, on November 21 called for re-doubling of efforts to increase India's foreign exchange earnings and restrain consumption in order to find resources for the Third Five-Year Plan.

In a statement to the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on his recent visit abroad, he said that the foreign exchange situation continued to be one of serious concern. The country's foreign exchange earnings, the bulk of which were derived from exports, were barely adequate to meet the maintenance needs of the economy and other essential demands on external resources, for which normally no foreign assistance was available.

While every possible step was being taken to expand exports, tangible results in this field could be expected only over a period.

He said that the country's foreign exchange reserve was already down to rock-bottom.

He added: "We have thus to depend wholly on foreign aid for financing our development Plans. Over the entire period of the Third Plan, it is going to be a continuous and difficult quest for foreign exchange resources to match the external cost of projects included in the Plan and to meet other commitments".

He estimated the foreign assistance likely to be available for the Third Plan at nearly Rs. 750 crores, both committed and indicated. This included aid from all sources.

All the same, he said, efforts were called for not only to increase foreign exchange earnings to the utmost, but to conserve and develop both internal and external resources. There was need for more and more investment domestically, as a growing volume of external debt had to be serviced. Those claims could be met only by increased savings which, in turn, required intensification of production efforts and exercise of maximum restraint on consumption.

He said that the country's sterling balances, which had stood at Rs. 189 crores at the beginning of the financial year, had now fallen to Rs. 141 crores.

Even at the beginning of 1960, it was known that there would be a large balance of payments gap. Since May, 1960 the Government had been negotiating with the World Bank, USA, UK, West Germany and Canada so that the gap could be bridged.

He added that following his discussions with the British Chancellor of the Exchequer in London, UK had agreed to give a further loan of £5 million to finance a broad range of imports from that country during 1960-61, thus bringing the total amount of British loans to India during 1960-61 to £15 million.

For the Third Plan, he said that the British Chancellor had informed him that UK would be prepared to make further loans by way of initial assistance to the tune of £30 million to finance orders to be placed in that country for capital goods required for the Plan.

In addition, it was agreed that further discussions should take place to explore the possibilities of finance from the British Government and private sources to meet the foreign exchange cost—roughly estimated at £20 million—of the proposed expansion of the Durgapur Steel Works.

The US Development Loan Fund (DLF) had agreed to advance loans totalling $187 million to finance the foreign exchange cost of certain power projects, Railways, fertilizer factories, etc. As the equipment which would be financed from the loan would be supplied over a period of time, he explained that only a fraction of that sum would go to relieve the balance of payments situation during 1960-61.

As a result of his discussions at the Paris meeting held under the auspices of the World Bank and further discussions, he said that DLF had agreed to two further loans of $70 million to the Railways and $25 million each for financing imports of steel and machinery.

Discussions were in progress with the US Government on the possibilities of further PL 480 aid for the import of cotton. The World Bank had given a loan of $70 million to the Railways and $20 million to the Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation (ICICI).

The West German Government had given two loans of $30 million each and had also agreed to a re-phasing of re-payments in respect of the Rourkela debt. The Canadian Government had, as in the past, given a grant of $25 million to finance the import of capital equipment for power projects, non-ferrous metals and wheat.

He said that though as a result of all the assistance, the balance of payments gap would be reduced, the country was faced with a fairly large deficit, to cover which no assistance was in sight.

As a result of the assistance, the balance of payments gap, estimated at the beginning of 1960, would be considerably reduced. A gap would, however, remain and it would be necessary to endeavour to secure further assistance to cover it—or, in the alternative, some foreign exchange expenditure would have to be carried into the next Plan.

H. Import Policy For October, 1960—March, 1961 On Held-Over Items: The import policy for 12 out of the 20 items, which had been held over at the time of the announcement of the half-yearly policy on October 1, 1960 (see page 3593) was announced in New Delhi on November 21.

The items included machine tools, surgical instruments, apparatus and appliances, agricultural tractors, watches, photographic negatives and printing paper, printing, packing and wrapping paper, giant motor, motor-cycle and bicycle tyres and tubes and unset and uncut diamonds.

For machine tools, the import quota for established importers was reduced from 30 per cent general and 30 per cent soft to 20 per cent general and 20 per cent soft. In the case of surgical instruments, apparatus and appliances, while there was no change in the import quota, the concession extended during the last half-year period in the shape of supplementary licences was withdrawn. For tractors, there would be no import quota for the current half-year.

The import quota in respect of complete watches was halved to 5 per cent general and 5 per cent soft. For photographic negatives and printing paper, excluding X-ray films, the reduction would be from 33-1/3 per cent general and 33-1/3 per cent soft to 25 per cent general and 25 per cent soft.

For printing paper, the quota was reduced from 12-1/2 per cent to 7-1/2 per cent and for packing and wrapping paper from 7-1/2 per cent to 5 per cent. In the case of filter paper, there was no change as compared with the April-September, 1960 quota. For paper not otherwise specified, the quota had been maintained as during the last half-year, but the additional licences which were being issued during the last half-year would not be granted now.

For giant motor, motor-cycle, bicycle tyres and tubes and flaps and solid tyres, the quota would continue to be as during the last half-year—75 per cent.

The licences would, however, not be valid for the import of bicycle tyres and tubes. There would be no import quota for diamonds, unset and uncut, excluding bort and industrial diamonds.

The import policy for card clothing and card accessories would continue to be the same as before—66-2/3 per cent general and 66-2/3 per cent soft.

I. Expansion Of Private Sector In Coal Industry: The Central Minister for Steel, Mines and Fuel, Sardar Swaran Singh, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on November 17 that the Government had decided to permit the expansion of the private sector in the coal industry because of "national considerations."

He maintained that this did not represent a "radical change" in the Government's policy on coal and was fully within the scope of the Industrial Policy Resolution.

Explaining the Government's intention to permit private units to raise coal in new areas, he said that the Government's policy was based on a realistic assessment of the two sectors' capacity to produce coal. He explained that the Third Five-Year Plan allocations for coal production for the two sectors would not be "rigid" and if there were shortfalls in one sector, the other sector would be asked to come to the nation's help.

He said: "The basic policy in regard to coal production, which was adopted during the Second Plan and had the approval of Parliament, was to assess the total requirements of coal in our national economy and then to apportion responsibility between the private and public sectors to achieve this production according to their capacity. The policy still remains the same.

"Our main objective being to produce all the coal that is needed, the allocation of the respective shares of the private and public sectors cannot be on the basis of a pre-determined target for each. The proper course is to make an assessment of the capacity of each and then to work out what contribution it should be called upon to make in order to achieve the total production needed. This has been our approach in deciding the part that each of these sectors has to play in the Third Plan.

"Our estimate of coal requirements during the Third Plan works out to 95 million tons, exclusive of an extra 2.5 million tons required for the projected fourth Steel Plant at Bokaro. This means an additional production of 35 million tons over the target of 60 million tons in the Second Plan.

"A working group comprising the Coal Controller, the Coal Mining Adviser attached to the Ministry of Steel, Mines and Fuel and a representative of the coal industry was set up recently to invite offers from individual units, through the joint working committee of the industry in regard to the additional production they were capable of achieving during the Third Plan. This working group, after securing the necessary information from the industry and scrutinizing the individual offers from the point of view of feasibility, made an assessment of the total capacity of the private sector.

"The final estimate of the said group is that the private sector is capable of producing about 4.87 million tons of coking coal and about 11 million tons of non-coking coal, thus making a total of 16 million tons approximately. Of this total, about 12 to 13 million tons are estimated to be produced from the existing workings in the collieries in question and the rest from areas adjacent to them as well as from non-contiguous or proximate areas. This estimate can be considered fairly realistic, based as it is on an examination of what individual units are capable of producing.

"Similarly, the capacity of the public sector comprising the National Coal Development Corporation and the Singareni collieries has been estimated at 19 million tons. This assessment is again based on a careful examination of what the public sector is capable of achieving, taking into account such important factors as the availability of the necessary equipment, man-power and technical know-how.

"It is proposed to keep a close watch on the progress of each unit that is participating in the programme of additional production, and if shortfalls are noticed in one sector, adjustments would be made in the programme of the other sector, the basic objective being to ensure that the total production planned for is actually achieved.

"A realistic assessment having been made of the optimum production that can come from existing mines and areas immediately contiguous to these mines in the private sector, our intention is to give special permission to individual units to work new or non-contiguous areas where the raising of coal from such areas has to be ensured to make up the total production required. This is quite in consonance with what the Industrial Policy Resolution of 1956 states, namely, that where the national interests so require, private enterprise may be allowed to expand."

Coal Prices:

Explaining the Government's policy with regard to coal prices, he said: "We have adhered to a policy of holding the price line.

"It will be recalled that some time ago the Government had constituted a Coal Price Revision Committee which went into the entire price structure of coal and besides recommending an economic price for coal made certain other recommendations, the object of which was to create the right conditions for the expansion of coal production and assurance of supplies to consumers. These recommendations were accepted by the Government and are being implemented.

"A very important one among these is the introduction of a scheme of subsidy to collieries which are handicapped by adverse factors such as the presence of gas, very deep workings, difficult geological conditions, excessive accumulation of water, etc., which cannot be worked economically at the existing coal prices, although it is in the national interest to keep them in production."

He added: "Another important measure is the raising of the ceiling for stowing subsidy from 75 per cent|85 per cent to 100 per cent. The Government is also going ahead with the scheme to put up central rope-ways both in Jharia and Raniganj coal-fields for extraction of sand from the river-beds and distribution to individual collieries. The scheme is expected to be put into effect by the end of the first quarter of 1963. All these schemes will benefit the private and public sectors alike."

J. Clearance Certificates Abolished: The Government of India, in a Press release issued on November 17 announced that it had decided to abolish the rule under which Indian nationals going abroad had to produce income-tax exemption or clearance certificates.

From December 1, 1960, a clearance certificate would be needed only when the income-tax authority concerned declared that a particular person was not likely to return to India.

The relaxation would apply only to Indian nationals. There would be no change in procedure for people of non-Indian domicile.

K. Punjab Official Language Bill Passed: The Punjab Legislative Assembly on November 16 adopted the Official Language Bill.

The Bill sought to implement Clause 10 of the Regional Formula of 1956 and enforce the regional languages (Hindi in the Devanagri script and Punjabi in the Gurmukhi script) as the respective official languages in the Hindi and Punjabi Zones of the State at the district level and below.

The measure replaced the Punjab Official Language Ordinance promulgated by the Governor with effect from October 2, 1960 (see page 3586).

The State Education Minister, Mr. Amar Nath Vidyalankar, introducing the Bill said that the district administration should be in the language used and spoken by the people.

He said that the language policy of the State Government, as outlined in the Bill, had been approved by the electorate at two General Elections. The Sachar Formula was formulated in 1951 and came before the electorate in the General Elections of 1952. In 1956 it was embodied in the Regional Formula and was again submitted to the verdict of the people in the 1957 Elections.

He admitted that the implementation of the Regional Formula had been delayed. The regional languages should have been declared the languages of administration at the district level by the beginning of 1960, according to the language Formula schedule. But he blamed the Akali and Hindi agitations for the delay.

In reply to some of the critics of the Bill, he gave two assurances. First, he said that whatever the language of the region concerned, the administration would reply to any communication in the language of the communication. A Hindi-speaking person in the Punjabi region would be entitled to communicate with the administration in Hindi and would receive replies in Hindi.

Secondly, the Bill related only to the language of the administration at the district and divisional levels. It would have no effect on the language of the administration at the Secretariat level.

LAOS

A. Pathet Lao To Join Cabinet: After talks lasting more than six weeks between the delegations of the Government and the dissident Pathet Lao movement, it was officially announced in Vientiane on November 18 that the two sides had reached Agreement on forming a Coalition Cabinet.

The Agreement was finalized after a meeting between the Prime Minister, Prince Souvanna Phouma and the Pathet Lao leader, Prince Souphanouvong.

The official announcement said that cease-fire orders would be given to all commanders of Government and Pathet Lao forces. A Sub-Committee with members from both sides would also be set up to mediate between military units in case of conflicts. Any unit commander who disobeyed the cease-fire order would be transferred.

The Coalition Government would be formed as soon as possible with members from all classes and all political parties including the Pathet Lao's political organization, the Neo Lao Haksat Party. It was also agreed that the Government would accept aid from China and the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam (North) and thus strengthen Laos' relations with those two countries.

In a joint communique issued in Vientiane on November 23 explaining their accord, Prince Souvanna Phouma and Prince Souphanouvong said they had agreed that a Coalition Government "of all nationalities and patriotic parties and groups" was necessary for Laos.

The Right-wing leaders, Prince Boun Oum Champassak and Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, would not get posts in the Coalition Government, but other members of the Savannakhet-based Right-wing Revolutionary Committee would be "given suitable posts if they respect the lawful Government."

The communique appealed to the King for a "firm stand against the traitorous group and to create favourable conditions for the lawful Government."

It said that the two Princes had agreed that "aid without strings" should be accepted and that in addition to aid from Britain, France and USA, Laos "must now request aid from countries following a policy of peace and neutrality and the socialist countries."

On November 11, Right-wing insurgents seized control of the Royal Capital, Luang Prabang.

The military garrison there rallied to Prince Boun Oum Champassak's Revolutionary Committee at Savannakhet.

[The group at Savannakhet, led by Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, had been fighting against the Vientiane Government].

Major Bounpheun Isixiengmay, Commander of the infantry unit which formed most of the garrison in Luang Prabang, on November 11 broadcast a proclamation saying that he no longer recognized the authority of Prince Souvanna Phouma. Prince Souvanna was to have gone to Luang Prabang on November 11, but on learning of the coup d'etat in advance while spending the night at Muong Say in the upper Mekong province, he flew back to Vientiane.

Although official reports said that loyalist forces had been deployed, Luang Prabang could not be immediately recovered. At this stage the Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Oune Rattikone, also defected to the Rightist rebel camp.

On November 18, Prince Souvanna Phouma told a news conference in Vientiane that USA was backing the Right-wing movement. He said: "The Laotian problem is no longer an internal problem, but an international problem.

"Its solution no longer depends on us, but on USA. USA alone can act on the Savannakhet (Rebel) Committee, on which it has great influence."

He said that he had on several occasions urged the US Embassy in Vientiane to give its support to the Royal Government. However, his representations had had no effect.

Asked if he thought USA was at the origin of the Luang Prabang army defection, he said: "I do not know."

The US Embassy later declared in a statement that the US Government had always supported the legal Government of Laos and opposed the division of the country.

Chinese Reaction:

Welcoming the decision of the Laotian Government to strengthen relations with China, an official communique issued in Peking on November 20 said:

"Everyone knows that the People's Republic of China was a participant in the 1954 Geneva Conference, a guarantor of the Geneva Agreement and also a close neighbour of the Kingdom of Laos. The Chinese Government has consistently and strictly abided by the Geneva Agreements, the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the spirit of the Bandung Conference, respected the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Laos and supported the pursuance by the Royal Laotian Government of a policy of peace and neutrality and to bring about domestic unity. China and Laos are friendly neighbours historically; after the Geneva Conference, friendly relations between our two countries underwent a new development.

"The visit paid to China in August, 1956 by the delegation of the Royal Laotian Government headed by Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma was a concrete expression of this development of friendly relations. In their Joint Statement, Prime Minister Phouma and our Premier, Chou En-lai stated that the two Governments agreed to observe the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and develop their good-neighbourly relations and their economic and cultural relations.

"The boundary between our two countries has always been one of peace and friendship and it should always remain so in the future. There exist between our two countries favourable conditions for developing economic and trade relations on the basis of equality and mutual benefit. We are convinced that the proposals made recently by the Royal Laotian Government, if realized, would surely be conducive to the establishment and development of friendly and good-neighbourly relations between China and Laos as well as their economic and cultural relations.

"The Chinese Government considers that the present unstable situation in Laos is a result of US imperialist support to the Phoumi Nosavan rebel group. The Chinese Government sternly condemns the crude intervention by US imperialism in the internal affairs of Laos and resolutely supports the legal government of the Kingdom of Laos, headed by Prince Phouma. It believes that, so long as the Laotian people will strengthen their internal unity and resolutely oppose foreign interventionist and subversive activities, they will certainly be able to overcome difficulties in their way ahead, realise the peace, neutrality, national amity and unity of Laos and build the Kingdom of Laos into a prosperous and strong country.

"The Chinese Government hopes that all the participants of the Geneva Conference will strictly abide by the Geneva Agreements and respect the national rights of the Laotian people so as to safeguard the peace, neutrality, independence and unity of Laos."

Soviet Assistance:

On November 23 Prince Souvanna Phouma told a news conference in Vientiane that Russia would begin an airlift of foodstuffs and petrol to the Capital.

After a meeting with the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Alexander Abramov, Prince Souvanna said that the Russians would fly 220,000 gallons of petrol and also sugar, milk and flour from Hanoi.

Vientiane had been short of foodstuffs and petrol because Thailand had placed an embargo on goods crossing the Thai frontier.

Earlier, on November 22 Mr. Alexander Abramov said on arrival in Vientiane that the Soviet Union was "ready to aid Laos in every field".

In Washington, a US State Department spokesman, commenting on November 23 on the Soviet offer of assistance to Laos, said:

"If it could be demonstrated that communist economic and military assistance does in fact preserve the independence and even the true neutrality of any country, then we could welcome this ready Soviet response.

"Unhappily, experience has taught us to have reservations on this score. Therefore, I can only say that we hope that the Laotians will consider carefully the course upon which they seem to be steered."

Trade With North Viet-Nam:

On November 23, the Prime Minister of North Viet-Nam (DR) Mr. Pham Van Dong sent to Prince Souvanna Phouma a telegram suggesting that the frontier between the two countries be opened for trade.

He also invited a friendship delegation to Hanoi.

He said that Laos and North Viet-Nam could have commercial exchanges and co-operate by trading along a frontier region as well as on aviation and meteorology.

Prince Souvanna Phouma replied that he agreed on frontier trading and would authorize Laotians in that region to cross into Viet-Nam to buy salt.

LEBANON

A. Executive Committee Meeting On Afro-Asian Solidarity: The week-long meeting of the Executive Committee for Afro-Asian Solidarity ended in Beirut on November 12.

At the meeting, the Committee accused USA of intervention by repression of liberation movements and by "new attempts to colonize" countries which were rich in raw materials or had strategic value.

It wound up its work after passing resolutions on world problems.

One resolution called for the implementation of decisions taken by the Afro-Asian Solidarity Conference in Conakry (Guinea) in Spring of 1960 concerning the granting of funds to "African liberation movements."

It recommended that the permanent Secretariat-General of the Conference "ensure immediate relations with the peoples' organizations in Latin America to form a unified front against imperialism."

It congratulated the Cuban people on their "heroic struggle against imperialist forces" and invited "all Afro-Asian peoples to support the Cuban people."

One of the resolutions proposed the setting up of a "reparations fund to finance under-developed countries." Under the proposal, an International Fund, directed by a neutral committee, would administer long-term loans (of not less than 30 years) granted by the major nations.

In another resolution, the Committee demanded the revocation of all un-equitable Treaties imposed by Britain on Arab States in the Persian Gulf and southern Arabia.

It also demanded the "liquidation" of all "imperialist" military bases in Africa.

It condemned US "intervention" through United Nations in the Congo and attacked USA for "opposing the principle of disarmament and supporting the 'cold war'."

It also demanded that UN adopt the Soviet proposals of "definitive and immediate liquidation of colonialism."

MALAYA

A. Proposal For Seating "Two Chinas" In UN: In an interview in London on November 12 on his way home from USA, the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, proposed that both China and Formosa hold seats in United Nations.

He said he had told President D. D. Eisenhower that the Western Powers would be "compelled" by events to change their policy towards China.

His solution would be for the Peking regime to be recognized by UN as the legal Government of China and for Taiwan (Formosa) to hold equal membership as a sovereign State without the name of Nationalist China.

He noted that the Chinese question was one of the most challenging issues for the Western world to solve in the near future.

He explained that Formosa represented an independent sovereign State and ought to be recognized in UN as such under just such a name, "not as Nationalist China." This, he said, would make it possible for the Peking regime to qualify for membership.

He said that this represented a $10,000,000 increase over the figures for 1958 and added that during his visit to USA he had been assured by influential members of the Democratic Party that aid to Pakistan would be stepped up as a result of the Party's victory in the US Presidential elections.

B. Specialists And Administrative Officers To Be Supplied By UN: Pakistan and United Nations on November 17 signed an Agreement under which UN would make available to Pakistan the services of specialists and administrative officers.

Officers provided by UN would be responsible to and under the exclusive direction of the Pakistan Government. In certain respects, they would enjoy diplomatic privileges.

Officers provided under this Agreement would be available to perform operational, executive or managerial functions.

C. Through Train Service Between East And West Pakistan —Agreement Reached: A five-member Indian delegation, led by the Chairman of the Railway Board, Mr. Karnail Singh, arrived in Rawalpindi on November 15 to resume discussions with representatives of Pakistan on the introduction of a through train service between East and West Pakistan.

The Pakistan delegation was led by the Chairman of the Railway Board, Mr. S. A. Suhrawardy.

The introduction of railway traffic between East and West Pakistan across Indian territory and between West Bengal and Assam was further examined by the delegations on November 17 and 18.

At the end of the three-day talks, a communique was issued on November 18 saying that the two delegations had reached agreement on the introduction of a direct rail link for the movement of civilian traffic between East and West Pakistan and between West Bengal and Assam over each other's railway net-work.

It said that the two delegations, which held their discussions in "a spirit of cordiality," had reached agreement as regards "the procedure to be followed for transit traffic."

The proposed arrangements would now be submitted to the respective Governments for approval.

Although the communique did not specify "the procedure to be followed," it was reliably learnt that two composite bogies (passenger-cum-goods) from West Pakistan would be allowed to proceed to East Pakistan in exchange for similar facilities for travel between West Bengal and Assam through Pakistan territory. These bogies would be attached to trains of either country.

The two sides were also understood to have agreed on simplification of passport, visa and customs formalities for through passengers.

Under this arrangement, heavy luggage would be deposited in the luggage van and sealed. This van would not be subject to customs check. Passengers would have to be in possession of passports. They, along with luggage in hand, would be examined at the customs check-post on the western and eastern borders.

The Pakistan delegation was stated to have agreed to lay small stretches of track in the East Pakistan-West Bengal border at Hilli, Silchar and at another point to enable through traffic in this region.

It was the expectation of both the delegations that given early approval to the proposed arrangements by the two Governments, through coaches would start running by April, 1961.

It was also learnt that during the talks, Pakistan made a proposal for the first time to provide facilities to run a through bogy from Khokharapar, in the Sind area of Pakistan, to Agra via Ajmer. The Indian delegation was understood to have agreed to consider this request at a later stage.

D. Social Reforms—Inquiry Commission Appointed: The Government announced on November 18 the appointment of an 11-man Commission, with Mr. Ghulam Mohiuddin Kasuri as Chairman, to report on measures to be adopted for the eradication of social evils and economically oppressive practices in Pakistani society.

The terms of reference of the Commission were:

(1) To examine the nature and origin of the social customs and practices prevalent in the country which produced ill-health in society or were economically oppressive and act as obstacles to individual welfare and social progress and assess the extent of their effect on individual and social life;

(2) To examine measures so far adopted by the Government or other agencies to combat them and assess the effect of these measures;

(3) To examine and analyze the factors responsible for the continuance of these evils and for the resistance, if any, encountered in combating these;

(4) To suggest ways and means of

(a) Minimizing the effects of the social evils and the economically oppressive customs (as a short-term measure), and

(b) eradicating them completely.

TURKEY

A. National Union Committee Dissolved and Re-Constituted: The Chief of State, Gen. Cemal Gursel, on November 13 dissolved and reconstituted the National Union Committee set up to help govern the country after the military overthrow of the regime of Mr. Adnan Menderes on May 27, 1960.

The new Committee is composed of 23 "moderate" members of the earlier Committee. The other 14 members of the old Committee, considered as extremists, were ordered to retire and placed under house arrest.

The first public announcement of the move came from Gen. Gursel himself, who in a radio broadcast said:

"I have decided to dissolve the National Union Committee.... at the demand of members of the Committee itself and also upon the urgent request of the Turkish armed forces." He explained that the activities of some Committee members had "endangered the country's higher interests".

He then announced the re-constitution of the Committee, now reduced by 14 members, and read the list of the 23 who were to resume their Committee functions. The new Committee would work closely with the Constituent Assembly which was to be formed in order to re-establish democratic order in the country".

Several ousted Committee men who succeeded in leaving their homes despite the order were arrested by the police and escorted to the Ankara Garrison Command, which had meanwhile broadcast a summons to all troops to rejoin their units.

The move meant a revolution in terms of the Provisional Constitution (of June 13, 1960) written by the original 37-member Committee.

This Constitution stipulated that the National Union Committee was to be composed of the President and the members who had signed the article into law. Fourteen of them were retired by a simple decree.

Observers in Ankara pointed out that under the Constitution, Committee members could be removed only upon their voluntary resignation or upon conviction of a serious crime. It was reported that some ousted members had been brought to the National Assembly building, the seat of the Committee and it was rumoured that they might resign "in a patriotic spirit" to keep the move within constitutional limits.

The two conflicting groups in the former Committee appeared to have been grouped around a few key figures. The 14 ousted "extremists" were mainly young men and lower-ranking members: three captains, five majors, four lieutenant-colonels and two colonels. The key figure was Col. Alparslan Turkes.

The 23 re-instated members included four generals (among them Gen. Gursel and his deputy, Gen. Fahri Ozdilek), eight colonels, six lieutenant-colonels, three majors and two captains. Key figures in this faction were Gen. Madan Oglu, Commander of the Ankara Garrison and Col. Sami Kucuk, who had gone to Istanbul on, as he put it, "urgent personal business". It was believed in Ankara that he went to make arrangements with the Istanbul Garrison Command for precautionary measures in preparation for Gen. Gursel's announcement regarding the re-constitution of the National Committee.

According to observers, indications of this move were first seen six weeks ago when Col. Turkes, considered as "the brains of the May 27 Revolution", was forced out of the post of Under-Secretary to the Prime Minister. This had been followed three weeks ago by the removal of 147 university professors or instructors believed to be influenced by the "extreme" faction.

Gen. C. Gursel's Statement:

Gen. C. Gursel in a statement on November 13 said that he had asked a Committee of Experts to speed up a draft Bill for the creation of a legislative body to work with the National Union Committee. He called this legislative body an "Assembly of Establishment".

He said that the work of the Assembly would be to prepare legislation, while the National Union Committee would act as an Upper House to approve such legislation.

The creation of this Assembly had been one of the points at dispute between Gen. Gursel and his supporters and the 14 younger officers on the National Union Committee, who were dismissed.

He said: "My decision to dismiss these officers will certainly help to speed the creation of the Assembly".

The Assembly would be a transitional body pending national elections which the National Union Committee had pledged, would be held before October 29, 1961.

He said that during the past three weeks the situation within the former National Union Committee was such that not only was nothing constructive achieved, but also "our countrymen were plunged into doubt and worry."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

He said: "Recent discussions within the Committee took the form rather of open war than of constructive exchanges".

In the presence of 22 members of the new Committee, he added: "It would be wrong to keep within the Committee people who are likely to allow a great nation to fall into dangers.... the decision to dismiss 14 (members) was hard, but the time comes when a man of responsibility must take decisions.

"We promised the first day on our honour that we will bring in democratic rule in Turkey. We shall keep our word.

"Turkey's only future lies within the framework of a democratic regime and an atmosphere promoted by it.

"No one has the right to interrupt our road and seek to denigrate our clean thoughts."

Answering questions, he said: "We have given our word of honour that Elections will be held by October 29, 1961 and this will be done."

He said that the question of the recently dismissed professors would be reconsidered and new decisions taken where necessary and added: "We don't associate ourselves with injustice."

He said that the dismissed NUC officers might be given all kinds of jobs and added: "They are honourable, worthy friends."

He denied earlier reports that the 14 dismissed officers were under house arrest or interned. Following the delivery of his letters dismissing them, he said, he had received replies from some of them accepting his decision and expressing the hope that it would help the country's future.

Asked what was the dismissed men's status at present, he said: "That of any other Turkish citizen."

Among these 14, the first to receive a visa for a new post was Col. Alparslan Turkes, leader of the dissidents who was posted to New Delhi (India).

Two others were reported to have declined the diplomatic posts offered them abroad. An official spokesman said in Ankara that other arrangements would be made for them.

A special cadre had been created in the Turkish Foreign Service for the 14 dismissed officers, which would be known as the "Cadre of Experts". They would be posted as counsellors in Turkish Embassies and Legations.

B. US Aid In Financing Imports: The US State Department announced on November 25 that USA had made available $12,000,000 in Mutual Security funds to assist Turkey in financing imports during the current fiscal year.

This would bring to $46,400,000 the amount which the International Co-operation Administration had made available from Mutual Security defence support funds so far during 1960 to help Turkey maintain her import programme.

C. Twenty Thousand Convicts Freed: Under an Amnesty Law promulgated on November 21, nearly 20,000 convicts were set at liberty.

In an explanatory statement, Col. Sami Kucuk, a member of the National Unity Committee, said that the new Law would also apply to foreign nationals convicted for fishing in Turkish territorial waters.

The Law virtually pardoned all convicted criminals except murderers of relatives. Life imprisonment was replaced by 24 years' imprisonment.

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Col. G. A. Nasser Visits Sudan: President Gamal Abdel Nasser arrived in Khartoum on November 15 on a 10-day State visit to Sudan on the occasion of the anniversary of Sudan's 1958 Revolution.

He was welcomed at the airport by the Sudanese President, Gen. Ibrahim Abboud and members of the Sudanese Cabinet.

Col. Nasser was accompanied, among others, by the Foreign Minister, Dr. Mahmoud Fawzi and the Minister for Presidential Affairs, Mr. Ali Sabri.

Col. Nasser and Gen. Abboud began talks in Khartoum aboard a Nile steamer on November 1.

The Sudanese military regime celebrated its second anniversary on November 17 in the Palace Square in Khartoum where a large gathering was present.

The President, Gen. Ibrahim Abboud, drove into the Square accompanied by the guest of honour, Col. Nasser and took the salute at a parade of Sudanese armed forces held in the Square.

In his speech on the occasion, Gen. Abboud said that he had already signed a law for constitutional reform which would give the citizens an effective part in the Government of the country and local Councils more powers in the development of each region.

In a joint communique issued simultaneously in Khartoum and Cairo on November 25, Gen. Abboud and Col. Nasser pledged their loyalty to a policy of neutrality in international affairs.

The communique said that the two Arab leaders undertook to support disarmament measures and any proposals that would help reduce international tensions.

It called for the return of Palestinian Arabs to their fatherland, pledged support for the struggle of African peoples seeking independence and condemned the imperialist attempt to split up the Congolese Republic.

It said that Gen. Abboud had accepted Col. Nasser's invitation to visit the United Arab Republic.

Col. Nasser returned to Cairo on November 25.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Bolshevik Revolution's Anniversary Celebrations In USSR; Soviet Union Creates New Rouble; World Court Elections; Tele-Communication Cables Round The World; "Tiros" And "Discoverer XVII" Launched By USA.

A. Bolshevik "October" Revolution Anniversary Celebrations: Celebrations to mark the 43rd anniversary of the Bolshevik "October" Revolution began in the Soviet Union on November 6.

Party and Government leaders from all socialist and other countries took part in the celebrations.

Mr. F. Kozlov's Speech:

On November 6, the Soviet Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. F. Kozlov, addressed a rally in the Lenin Stadium in Moscow where 12,000 visitors and Muscovites were present.

He said: "The transition from capitalism to socialism, inaugurated by the October Revolution is the main feature of our time. Soviet victory in peaceful economic competition with capitalism will come in the near future. This is as inevitable as the coming of dawn after night.

"Our domestic position has never been so stable and promising as it is today. Lenin's prediction that Russia will become a mighty land of plenty has come true."

He said that the Soviet Union was gaining confidently on USA in the annual growth of industrial production and its total volume. He added: "We are advancing at a rate which is beyond the powers of the Americans."

Referring to the Anglo-American Agreement on facilities for Polaris submarines in Scotland, he said that USA planned to send her nuclear submarines to prowl near the sea-boundaries of the Soviet Union. Such actions "tie Britain even more strongly to the American chariot" and "sharply increase the danger to Britain herself in case of conflict".

He questioned Britain's sincerity in wanting relaxation of international tension and accused the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan of negotiating the Polaris base Agreement in New York while attending the UN General Assembly (where disarmament was discussed as one of the main questions), and at the same time conducting talks with the Soviet delegation on solving international problems.

He added: "Apparently, the British Government is trying to move in opposite directions all at once.

"We offer the Western Powers to conduct honest negotiations among States on outstanding questions of international relations and consider that this is a highly reasonable way of reducing international tensions.

"Some Western leaders, in particular the British Prime Minister, have more than once spoken in favour of such negotiations. The latest steps of the British Government, however, make us question seriously the sincerity of Mr. Macmillan's statements about the efforts of the British Government to reduce international tensions.

"Only a few days ago, Mr. Macmillan announced in Parliament the signing of an Agreement between Britain and USA under which the American Navy will get a base near Glasgow, Britain's second biggest city, for submarines armed with missiles and nuclear weapons."

He declared it was time that the Western Powers understood the Soviet position and stopped trying Russia's patience. The strength was on the side of the Soviet Union and imperialism could no longer dictate whether there should be war or peace.

Mr. Liu Shao-Chi's Speech:

The Head of the Chinese State, Mr. Liu Shao-Chi, who arrived in Moscow on November 5 to attend the celebrations, said in a speech at the airport that there should be unity in the socialist camp under the leadership of the Soviet Union.

He conveyed friendly greetings to the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, and President L. Brezhnev.

He also paid tribute to the results of the Leninist revolution which, he said, was a turning point in the history of mankind. He congratulated the Soviet Union on her brilliant success in building up socialism.

He said that the Soviet Union through her achievements in the fields of science and industry and culture had become a first-rank Power which had left USA far behind.

He noted that the Communist Party of USSR, under the leadership of Mr. N. Khruschev had successfully applied the Soviet Seven-Year Plan and supported the struggle of the oppressed nations for peace.

The world situation at the present time favoured the socialist camp and this evolution had encouraged the nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America to believe in the progress of the socialist camp in the struggle for peace.

Now, he said, the forces of peace were sufficiently strong to check the reactionary ones and those of the camp of war. If all peoples united their forces, the socialist camp led by USSR could prevent imperialist forces, led by USA, from sparking off a war.

He affirmed that the unity and firm friendship between China and USSR had stood the test of history and appealed to all socialist countries to strengthen by joint efforts the unity and ties between them.

He added: "Long live the great union between our two countries, long live the unity of the socialist camp under the leadership of USSR."

In a statement on November 6, the Vice-Chairman of the Chinese People's Republic, Madame Soong Ching Ling, stressed the "unbreakable and eternal friendship" between China and the Soviet Union.

She denied that China had given up the policy of peaceful co-existence.

Her article in all Peking newspapers entitled: "Solidarity of the socialist camp is the hope of mankind", was the main official comment on the Russian Revolution anniversary.

Madame Soong, widow of Sun Yat-Sen, founder of modern China, said in her article that the "imperialist Powers" were failing in their attempt to "split our two great countries, with the final objective of wrecking the unity of the entire socialist camp".

She added: "The imperialists have been exerting a prodigious amount of energy in spreading rumours trying to sell the idea that China considers peaceful co-existence no longer a valid policy. This is a deliberate distortion.

"The policy of upholding peace and doing our utmost for peaceful co-existence among countries of different social systems is the basis of the foreign policy of China and other socialist countries. The socialist nature of our society determines that."

Military Parade:

On November 7, the traditional military parade was held in Moscow's Red Square.

Missiles ranging from 10 feet high "silver needles"—including the type that brought down the American U-2 spy-plane on May 1—to 60-ft giants, were paraded before Soviet leaders and foreign guests. Tanks, conventional artillery and 20-ft.-long atomic cannon also rolled across the Square.

Opening the 25-minute parade, the Defence Minister, Marshal Rodin Malinovsky said that Soviet forces could deal imperialists a retaliatory blow if they violated the peace and from which they would never recover.

He said that opposition led by USA to Russia's peace policy had forced the Soviet Union to strengthen her defences and improve her armed forces.

He said that Mr. Khruschev's attendance at the UN General Assembly in October, 1960 was a great contribution to the Soviet desire for peace.

He added: "At present, as regards weapons and equipment, our Army and Navy have everything needed to guard the frontiers of our State."

He said that the Soviet people were greeting the 43rd anniversary of the Revolution with new economic and scientific successes.

He added: "The genius of Soviet man launched a space-ship with living creatures on board and brought it back successfully."

The Soviet people were successfully carrying out the Seven-Year Plan, thus laying the foundations for a communist society. The world socialist system was exerting an ever-growing influence on the course of world events.

Mass bands then played the Soviet national anthem and a 20-gun salute was fired in honour of the celebrations. A fanfare of trumpets sounded and troops formed up for the parade.

Leading the parade was Gen. Krylov, followed by the cadets of the Officers' Schools and massed drums. Sailors of the Black Sea Navy followed the military academies.

Detachments of the Frontier troops drew special attention from the Soviet leaders on the Mausoleum stand. Then cadets from military schools, young boys in their early teens, marched past, followed by mechanized troops.

After the Soviet paratroopers came the artillery. Guns, increasing in calibre, rolled into the Red Square. Then came rocket troops. Rockets of various shapes and sizes were carried on gigantic lorries.

Civilians participating in the parade carried models of their industrial work—a column carrying a completed flat was popular with the crowds.

Order Of The Day:

In an Order of the Day issued on November 6, the Soviet Defence Minister, Marshal Rodin Malinovsky said that the Soviet Union was selflessly fighting for international peace and security.

He declared: "The peace-loving efforts of the Soviet Union and other nations are running up against the stubborn resistance of the US imperialists and their henchmen, who do not want the easing of international tensions. They are pursuing an arms race policy, a policy of dangerous war gambles and of plundering colonial peoples. Soviet servicemen must be extremely vigilant and ready to administer a worthy rebuff to the aggressors".

The Order said that Mr. Nikita Khruschev's speeches at the UN General Assembly and the proposals submitted to the Assembly by the Soviet Government "show convincingly that the Soviet Union is sincerely striving for peace and international co-operation".

Messages:

On the occasion of the anniversary of the Russian Revolution, the US President, Mr. D. D. Eisenhower sent best wishes to the Russian people—but not to the Soviet leadership.

Customarily, he congratulates the Head of a foreign nation as well as its people in greetings sent on the country's National Day.

His message, addressed to President Leonid Brezhnev said: "On the occasion of the National Day of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the people of USA join me in sending best wishes to the people of the Soviet Union."

The President and the Prime Minister of India, Dr. Rajendra Prasad and Mr. J. Nehru, sent messages of greetings to the Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet and the Prime Minister of USSR respectively.

The mesasge from Dr. Rajendra Prasad said:

"On behalf of the Government and the people of India and on my own behalf, I have great pleasure in extending to Your Excellency and through you, to the people of USSR, our heartiest felicitations on this day of your national rejoicing and our best wishes for Your Excellency's long life and personal happiness and for the continued advancement and prosperity of your people.

"I have happy recollections of my recent visit to your great country, which has further strengthened the bonds of friendship between the peoples of our two countries."

Mr. Nehru's message said:

"On behalf of my colleagues in the Government of India and myself, I extend to you, Mr Prime Minister, our most cordial greetings on the anniversary of the Great October Revolution, together with our sincerest wishes for Your Excellency's health and personal welfare and for the continued prosperity of your great country.

"I take this opportunity to express the hope that the friendship between the peoples of India and USSR, already so happily and firmly established, will continue to grow stronger in the interests of our two countries and in the wider interests of peace and happiness of all peoples of the world."

B. Soviet Union Creates New Rouble: The Soviet Government on November 14 issued a decree creating a rouble equivalent to 10 old roubles as from January 1, 1961 and changing the foreign exchange rate from the present four roubles per dollar to 90 kopecks per dollar (one rouble has 100 kopecks).

The Decree said: "The Council of Ministers of USSR has resolved to increase the gold content of the rouble and the foreign exchange rate of the rouble as from January 1, 1961.

"The gold content of the rouble shall be established as 0.987412 gramme of pure gold and the purchasing price of the State Bank of USSR for gold as one rouble per gramme of pure gold.

"The rouble-dollar exchange rate has been established as 90 kopecks per one US dollar.

"The Council of Ministers of USSR has instructed the State Bank of USSR to increase the rate of exchange of the rouble with the currency of other capitalist countries in conformity with the higher gold content of the rouble. If the gold content of the currency of those countries or their foreign exchange rate is changed, the State Bank of USSR has been instructed to establish the exchange rate of the rouble with due consideration for these changes."

Mr. V. Garbuzov's Statement:

The Finance Minister of USSR, Mr. V. Garbuzov issued the following statement on the new exchange rate of the rouble:

"As a result of the economic progress of our country and the realization by the Communist Party and the Soviet Government of measures designed to increase the purchasing power of the rouble and to strengthen the Soviet monetary system, at the present time conditions have been created for increasing the gold content of the rouble and its exchange rate with regard to foreign currencies.

"The present gold content of the rouble, 0.222168 gramme of pure gold, was established in 1950. The new gold content of the rouble, beginning with January 1, 1961, will be 0.987412 gramme of pure gold. The rouble's exchange rate compared with the US dollar is also being increased. One dollar will now be equivalent to 90 kopecks instead of the four roubles as established in 1950.

"The rouble's new rate of exchange compared with the dollar conforms to the real co-relation of the purchasing value of the currencies.

"In conformity with the increased gold content of the rouble, the State Bank of USSR will raise the rate of exchange of the rouble with regard to currencies of other capitalist countries too.

"In view of the setting of a new exchange rate of the rouble with regard to the currencies of capitalist countries beginning from January 1, 1961 there will be no need for any premiums to the official exchange rates of these currencies with regard to the rouble applied now in the exchange of currencies as well as in clearing of non-commercial payments.

"The raising of the gold content and of the exchange rate of the rouble with regard to the currencies of capitalist countries reflects the Soviet Union's tremendous achievements in peaceful competition with capitalism.

"Inflation is increasingly used in capitalist countries as the most tested and common form of attacking the standard of life of the people, of lowering the real wages of the workers, of shifting to their shoulders the burden of military expenditures and of re-distributing the national income in favour of capitalist monopolies.

"Our Soviet rouble is today the only currency in the world whose gold content has increased compared with the gold standard period when bank notes were exchanged freely for gold. The new gold content of the rouble will be 27.5 per cent higher than it was in 1913. Meanwhile, the gold content of the US dollar is now only 59.1 per cent of the 1913 figure, the £ sterling 34.0 per cent, and the West German mark 59.0 per cent. The greatest devaluation has been suffered by the Italian lira and the Japanese yen whose gold content has dropped to 0.49 and 0.33 per cent of the 1913 parity respectively. The gold content of the French franc, despite the 100 old francs for one new denomination in January, 1959, is still only 62 per cent of the 1913 figure.

"In view of the increase of the gold content of the rouble from January 1, 1961, the exchange rate of the US dollar with regard to the rouble will be 90 kopecks for one US dollar as compared with one rouble 94 kopecks in 1913; the exchange rate of the £ sterling will be 2 roubles 52 kopecks, against 9 roubles 46 kopecks in 1913; the exchange rate of the French franc will be 18 kopecks against 37.5 kopecks; of the Japanese yen—0.25 kopecks against 95.9 kopecks in 1913. The Soviet people who under the leadership of the Communist Party created the most stable currency in the world may be justifiably proud of these successes.

"The monetary circulation in the Soviet Union is stable. The amount of currency in circulation is planned in strict accordance with the commodity funds at the disposal of the State.

"The amount of commodities sold to the population is rapidly increasing. Under the Seven-Year Plan, the output of consumer goods will increase by 62 to 65 per cent against the 1958 level. The results of the first two years prove that this target of the Seven-Year Plan will not only be fulfilled, but even considerably over-fulfilled. The daily concern of the Party and the Government for raising the living standards of the Soviet people is also evident from such measures as the reduction of working hours and the adjustment of the wages and salaries which involves an increase in the earnings of workers and employees in the relatively low income brackets and the gradual abolition of taxes on workers and employees.

"The raising of the rouble's gold content and exchange rate is of serious importance for the solution of economic problems connected with the Soviet Union's foreign economic relations.

"The rouble's new exchange rate provides the possibility for a comparison of the world prices with the wholesale prices in USSR, as the mean world market prices will in the main be levelled through this exchange rate with the mean wholesale prices in USSR. This will make it possible to estimate more correctly the relative profitability of the exports and imports of separate commodities and the profitability of the Soviet Union's foreign trade as a whole, and its trade with separate countries. At the same time, conditions will be provided for strengthening the cost accounting system in the work of Soviet foreign trade organizations.

"The raising of the gold content and of the exchange rate of the rouble will not affect the material interests of other countries. The lowering of the exchange rate of the currencies of capitalist countries in relation to the rouble will entail a corresponding reduction of foreign trade prices expressed in roubles and consequently a corresponding re-calculation of all sums expressed in roubles on the basis of foreign trade prices—credits, clearing account saldos and some other reciprocal payments. As a result of such a re-calculation neither side will suffer any losses or gain any advantages.

"The setting of the rouble's gold content at a level higher than the gold content of the dollar is a reflection of the major economic victories scored by our people under the leadership of the Leninist Central Committee of our Communist Party.

"According to our calculations, Nikita Khrushchov said: 'We shall achieve the task of surpassing the United States of America in per capita production of principal goods in 1970, that is, in 10 years' time. As estimated by economists, we shall produce considerably more per head of the population in 1980 than the United States. In 1965, our per capita consumer production will be at the level of the European countries or even higher.'

"The raising of the rouble's gold content and the establishment of its exchange rate on the basis of its purchasing power will contribute to the further growth of the rouble's international prestige and to ensuring stability in international currency operations."

British Reaction:

A London report on November 15 said: "The revaluation of the rouble announced by the Soviet Union is the most far-reaching and potentially the most important move in the Soviet Union's economic history.

"The currency reform could make the rouble a currency in the Western meaning of the word. It has never been one hitherto.

"By far the most important aspect of the reform is the aim of putting both the internal and external aspects of the Soviet Union's international trade on a cost accounting, instead of an arbitrary, basis.

"There have been some previous tentative moves towards organizing Russia's trade on a basis of relative profitability and cost accountancy. But there has been nothing comparable with the news of revaluation of the rouble from Moscow.

"The immediate effect on foreigners and on foreign trade is relatively trifling. Probably it will be no more than to make the cost of living in Russia a little dearer for diplomatic and foreign visitors.

"The important change is in the Soviet Union's own trading system.

"The official announcement that the new exchange rate will obviate the need for any premiums on foreign currencies implies that the move is a unification of Russia's exchange rates. As such, it is a substantial devaluation of the official exchange rate which has long been meaningless, and a minor revaluation of the tourist rate.

"The latter is the more significant, since the tourist rate is relevant for foreigners in Russia, while the official rate has had no known relevance for anybody.

"On the basis previously announced for January 1, the official exchange rate would have been 40 kopecks to a dollar and the tourist rate 100 kopecks. By the new move, it appears that they will both be 90 kopecks. A foreigner who would have got 100 kopecks for his dollar will instead get 90, and living in Russia will cost him a ninth more.

"Formally, the gold content of the rouble will be a ninth more than the dollar's. This is evidently intended to have some prestige value."

C. World Court Elections: With the election on November 16 of Mr. Kotaro Tanaka (Japan) to the World Court after the first ballot in the UN Security Council and the second in the UN General Assembly, Mr. Radha Binod Pal (India) and Sir Zafrullah Khan (Pakistan) who were seeking re-election were practically out of the race for geographical reasons.

The Security Council had nominated Sir Gerald FitzMaurice (Britain), Mr. Philip Jessup (USA), Mr. Vladimir Koretsky (USSR), Mr. Gaetano Morelli (Italy), Mr. Sapena Pastor (Paraguay) and Mr. Kotaro Tanaka (Japan) to fill the six vacancies in the World Court.

According to observers at United Nations, India and Pakistan knocked each other out in the Assembly, leaving the field to Japan. However, Japan's convincing victory in the Security Council had seemed to indicate that neither of them had a chance, even if it was a straight contest against Japan.

Lobby sources recalled that in 1959 India had yielded to Japan in the election to the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) after a deadlocked ballot. They said that the latest victory of Japan was a tribute both to Japanese thoroughness—they reportedly began lobbying a year earlier than India—and their ability to canvass votes, particularly in Western Europe, Latin America and parts of Africa, areas where India was relatively weak.

The background to the defeat of Mr. Radha Binod Pal (India) was given in the following despatch to The Hindu, Madras, from New York on November 18:

"Comment is necessary on the elections to the six vacancies in the International Court of Justice which have just been completed by United Nations. In choosing Judges, members once again seem to have ignored one of the basic guiding principles laid down in the Court's Statute.

"Article IX of the Statute lays down that members, in choosing Judges should ensure that the Court is representative of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world.

"One has only to look at the composition of the Court as it has been and will be following the current elections to realise that this mandate has been dishonoured. The Court will consist of a Judge from each of the five permanent members, USA, the Soviet Union, Britain and China, four from Latin America and one each from Italy, Greece, Japan, Australia, UAR and Poland. This means that the whole of Asia and of Africa and all the civilizations and legal systems they encompass have been allotted two places on the Court, while the remaining 13 Judges come from Europe and the Americas. If the Soviet Union, which has been demanding the revamping of the entire UN structure on the ground that it is at present weighted in favour of the West, wants additional ammunition for her propaganda guns, she could point to the International Court and say that out of its 15 Judges, 12 are from countries of the Western alliance.

"India's nominee, Mr. Radha Binod Pal, fared badly in the current elections, finishing last among the candidates. This result, however, was no surprise to UN observers. The Judges are supposed to be chosen purely on the basis of their recognized competence in International Law, but politics has always played an important part in the elections. The election is by secret ballot, but it is reasonable to guess that USA and West European members did not support Mr. Pal. Even among the Afro-Asian group a majority did not vote for him. With all deference to Mr. Pal's legal attainments, it has to be said that, if India had put forward a candidate who was more widely known at UN, he would have fared better. Two years ago, when Mr. Venkataraman stood for re-election to the UN Administrative Tribunal, he was easily elected and no one said it was the turn of the national of some other country to be given that place. This was because Mr. Venkataraman and his work are known to the UN members.

"When Sir Benegal Narsing Rao was elected to the International Court in 1951, the first Asian to sit on that bench since the Second World War, he was elected not because he was India's nominee, but because he was Sir Benegal. He was so well-known and respected at UN that even Western bloc members supported him, enabling him to defeat a formidable Belgian opponent. But when Sir Benegal died in 1953, they elected Sir Mahomed Zafrullah for the remainder of the former's term on the ground that a Pakistani should be given a chance. Sir Mahomed's term expires at the end of this year and even though he sought re-election, they have elected Justice Tanaka in his place to give a Japanese a turn. If Asia is to have only one representative on the Court, then it will be nine years before another Asian can get on The Hague bench, because Mr. Tanaka has been elected for the full term of nine years.

"There is a good case for the expansion or at least re-allocation of the seats in the International Court. This will have to receive attention when the larger question of the re-organization of the UN structure is considered."

D. Tele-Communication Cables Round The World—Commonwealth Tele-Communications Board Announcement: The Commonwealth Tele-Communications Board announced in London on November 14 that plans were being pushed ahead for the construction of the proposed "round-the-world" system of large capacity tele-communication cables to meet future needs of the Commonwealth.

The Board's annual Report, published on November 14 said that the first link would be a trans-Atlantic cable to be laid in 1961 by Britain and Canada.

This would be followed by a large-capacity cable system right across the Pacific Ocean—at some points four miles deep—to link Australia and New Zealand with Canada and thence, through a micro-wave system across Canada and the trans-Atlantic cable, with Britain.

The announcement said: "It is hoped to complete the laying of the Australia-Canada cable by 1964." After that the cable would go from Australia via Singapore back to Britain, linking India and Pakistan. "There might be spurs into Africa and the West Indies."

The trans-Pacific cable would be over 8,000 nautical miles long, with over 300 under-sea repeaters and would have capacity for at least 80 simultaneous telephone conversations. Any of these channels could be used to provide some 40 to 50 telegraph channels.

The cost of the round-the-world system was estimated at the Commonwealth Tele-Communications Conference in 1958 at £80,000,000. Of this, Britain had provisionally agreed to contribute 50 per cent. The remainder would be shared in various proportions among Commonwealth countries.

In view of the growing number of cable projects, two extra cable ships would be built for Cable and Wireless Limited, one for repairs and the other for laying cables.

E. Facilities For US "Polaris" Submarines In Scotland: The British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, announced in the House of Commons on November 1 that Britain would provide facilities for American Polaris missile-firing submarines.

He said that the Government had undertaken to provide sheltered anchorage for a submarine depot ship and floating dock. These facilities would be used by US submarines on routine patrol in peace-time.

The anchorage would be provided in the Holy Loch on the River Clyde and a depot ship would be established there during February, 1961. A floating dock would follow later, while supporting facilities would be provided by the Royal Navy.

He said that the US naval authorities in London and the British Admiralty would co-ordinate routine measures to govern operations of US submarines to prevent the risk of any difficulties arising.

He added that stringent safety precautions would be adopted to prevent any risk to health or safety in normal conditions.

A Liaison Committee would be set up to ensure the fullest possible consultations with the local authorities and interests concerned. Individual submarines would only visit Britain between patrols. Their real home port and their re-fitting base would still be on the other side of the Atlantic.

As regards general control, he said: "We shall continue to rely on the close co-operation and understanding between us and USA on all defence matters. Wherever these submarines may be, I am perfectly satisfied that no decision to use these missiles will ever be taken without the fullest possible previous consultations".

He therefore, felt it right to conclude this Agreement which was in the tradition of Anglo-American co-operation in joint defence carried on by successive British Governments. It would serve and strengthen the NATO alliance.

He added: "At first sight, the addition of these facilities might seem to bring added anxiety, but on reflection I hope the House will feel that this new arrangement does not add to the risks to which we are all inevitably exposed in this nuclear age."

On November 8, he told the House that Britain would have exactly the same control in an emergency on American submarines equipped with Polaris missiles in British territorial waters as she had over American bomber or missile bases in Britain.

Answering questions about Britain's decision to allow the US Government to set up a base for its Polaris submarines in Scotland, he said he was satisfied that the US Government would not use these missiles anywhere in the world without the fullest possible previous consultation with Britain and her allies. He said he was using the words "fullest possible consultation" because it might obviously be impossible to have prior consultations in case of a sudden surprise attack against the West. Britain would not insist on such consultations because it was the absolute certainty of retaliation which deterred aggression.

The Labour leader, Mr. Hugh Gaitskell, said the Opposition felt that the fateful decision to use nuclear weapons for the first time by the allies should not be taken by a single Government alone, but only by collective agreement.

Mr. Macmillan replied that it would be nonsense to say that if the enemy attacked America or the allies with nuclear weapons, all the 15 NATO countries should sit around a table to decide about retaliation.

Asked why the base could not be in some other NATO country, he said: "We cannot wriggle out of these responsibilities by saying: 'Let us put it in Holland, France, Germany or Italy'. We had far better exercise our influence by playing our full part in the alliance."

On November 9, Labour members of Parliament approved by an overwhelming majority the view of their "Shadow Cabinet" that the Agreement to provide a base in Scotland for Polaris—carrying US submarines must be accepted as an obligation inherent in the NATO alliance.

The approval was subject to proper arrangements for consultations between USA and her allies before the missile was fired.

The US State Department in a statement on November 7 said that the Agreement under which Britain would provide support facilities for US Polaris submarines was part of the defence measures necessitated by the Soviet Union's global ambitions.

A British Admiralty spokesman said on November 1 that no stock of

Polaris missiles would be landed in Scotland.

He said that several safeguards had been provided to ensure that missile warheads were not fired accidentally.

According to him, operational control was still under joint discussion, but it was felt that there would have to be some form of movement control.

Soviet Comment:

Moscow Radio said on November 1 that Britain was serving the aggressive plans of the US Pentagon by allowing US atomic submarines to be based in British ports.

It declared there was no doubt that the bases would be used for aggression against peace-loving nations and warned that "they will inevitably be the object of retaliatory measures".

F. "X-15" Rocket Plane Attains New Speed Record In USA: USA's X-15 rocket plane made a successful first flight on November 15 with the most powerful rocket engine ever built.

The pilot, Mr. Scott Crossfield, made a brief flight with the engine throttled right down and brake flaps open, but the plane still attained a speed of 2,000 m.p.h. and reached a height of 80,000 feet.

At full throttle, the new engine had 57,000 lbs of thrust, four times that of the previous engine, which took the X-15 to record heights and speeds.

The new engine, XLR-99, was eventually expected to exceed 4,000 m.p.h. at nearly 100 miles up.

G. New Earth Satellite Launched By USA: USA on November 3 launched from Cape Canaveral (Florida) a 90-lbs instrument-packed Earth satellite to investigate some of the problems of radio communications in the near reaches of space.

The satellite, shaped like two buckets joined at the mouth, was designed specifically to measure the positive ion and electron composition of the ionosphere.

A Juno II rocket combination, consisting of a modified Jupiter ballistic missile and three upper stages of solid propellant rockets in clusters, was used in the bid to hurl the pay-load into orbit.

Scientists hoped that the satellite would go into a path with an apogee of about 1,000 miles above the Earth's surface and a perigee of at least 200 miles up.

The US National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said that this was the first attempt to take direct, continuous readings on conditions in the ionosphere at such altitudes.

The ionosphere begins about 50 miles above the Earth and extends several hundred miles into space.

H. "Discoverer XVII" Launched By USA: USA on November 12 put into orbit a satellite carrying a "data capsule", which the US Air Force hoped to catch in the air near Hawaii the following day (November 13).

The satellite, Discoverer XVII, went into a Polar orbit. Officials said that the second stage, weighing 1,100 lbs should cross East European countries several times daily.

It was planned to separate the capsule from the second stage by a signal from the ground.

The capsule was recovered in the sky on November 14 by US Air Force flying box-cars.

The 300-lb gold-plated capsule was separated from its carrier-rocket by a radio signal and was slowed by reverse rockets before parachuting down over the Pacific, where a squadron of flying box-cars equipped with trapeze-like catching devices were waiting.

Maj.-Gen. O. J. Rutland, Commander of the US Air Force's Ballistic Missile Division in Inglewood (California) said that the capsule carried instruments to record sun-spot activity in space.

This was USA's second successful aerial catch by a flying box-car. The first was on August 19, 1960, the day after the launching of Discoverer XIV.

I. Atom-Powered Submarine Launched In USA: The 21st atom-powered submarine of the US Navy was launched at Pascagoula (Mississippi) on October 31.

The 252-ft. submarine was the sixth in the streamlined Skipjack class. It brought to 21 the number of atom-powered submarines the US Navy had so far launched.

Thirteen such submarines had already been commissioned, while eight others were waiting to be commissioned.

Among those commissioned were three Polaris missile-firing submarines, George Washington, Patrick Henry and Theodore Roosevelt. Two others had been launched, bringing to five the Polaris type submarines.

J. Launching of US Space-Ship Fails: Seven US astronauts on November 21 watched an abortive attempt at Cape Canaveral (Florida), to launch a Mercury space-ship of the type in which men might travel through space in 1961.

There were no animals or biological specimens aboard the rocket capsule, which misfired. This was the first US attempt to fire a fully-instrumented Mercury capsule on a ballistic path over the Atlantic Ocean.

Three seconds before the missile was due to leave the launching pad, a minor rocket on its nose ignited. The one-ton capsule and its launching vehicle stayed on the launching pad, but the flaming rocket carried away a 15½-ft-high escape tower, designed to hurl the capsule clear for a parachute landing in the event of an explosion or similar mishap during take-off.

The escape tower crashed to the ground about 700 yards from the launching site.

K. Shape Of The Earth—Observations Of US Satellite: A Calcutta paper, The Statesman, carried the following article by the Science Correspondent of The Times, London on October 21, on the shape of the Earth:

"Between Isaac Newton and artificial satellites we have progressed a long way in knowledge of the shape of the Earth. Newton made the first good estimate of the extent of polar flattening or equatorial bulge, using a purely theoretical argument. He was right within 25 per cent and could have done better still if he had known the density of the Earth.

"At the contemporary end of the story, an analysis of only one month's observations of the American satellite Transit I-B launched on April 23, has confirmed an earlier suggestion that the Earth is not only flattened at the Poles but is also pear-shaped, the North Pole being the one that is farther from the Equator.

"The first estimate of polar flattening based on satellite observations was made by Mr. D. G. King-Hele of the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough.

"Polar flattening is calculated from satellite observations by making use of the fact that the plane in which a satellite travels in its orbit does not remain fixed in space while the Earth turns about its axis, but itself rotates slowly about the axis of the Earth. The greater the inclination of the satellite's orbit to the Equator, the greater is this effect. It was therefore important as a test of the method to use a pair of satellites with markedly different inclinations. The orbit of Sputnik II was inclined at an angle of about 65 degrees to the Equator; that of Vanguard I at an angle of 34 degrees. Vanguard I therefore provided a good test.

"Mr. O'Keefe's suggestion that the Earth was pear-shaped—the North Pole being about 100 ft. further from the Equator than the South Pole—arose from the fact that the distance of Vanguard I from the centre of the Earth was not the same at successive nearest approaches but oscillated in a regular way at intervals of 32 days, the greatest difference in height being about six miles. The period of 32 days corresponds with the time taken by the point of nearest approach to complete one circuit of the Earth, so that the satellite, in effect, had sampled all regions.

"The corresponding analysis in the case of Transit I-B has been made by C. J. Cohen and R. J. Anderle, of the US Naval Weapons Laboratory (Virginia.). Again there is a satisfactory difference between the orbits of the two satellites. Whereas the nearest approach of Vanguard I was about 410 miles, that of Transit I-B is 230 miles, and the inclination of its orbit to the Equator is also different—51° instead of 34°. In addition, the methods both of observation and calculation were different in the two cases. By special analyses covering longer periods of time, it is suggested that much more accurate results can be obtained.

"Lack of symmetry between the two Hemispheres has important implications in relation to the structure of the Earth. Classical geodesy has been based on the assumption that the variation of gravity over the Earth's surface is very nearly the same as if the Earth were entirely fluid. A departure from symmetry to the extent deduced implies, as O'Keefe and his colleagues point out, that there is a very substantial load on the surface of the Earth. Following arguments used by Sir Harold Jefferys, FRS, they calculate that this load is in the neighbourhood of 300 lbs a square inch."

A. Afghan Pilot Seeks Asylum In Pakistan: A Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman said in Karachi on November 28 that an Afghan pilot had landed at Quetta on November 24 to seek asylum in Pakistan.

He said that according to a preliminary inquiry report, a Piper Cub aircraft piloted by an Afghan national, Abdus Samad Fazli had landed at Quetta at 4.14 p.m. It appeared from reports reaching Karachi that the landing was not the result of any navigational error or mechanical defect in the aircraft. The pilot was still in Quetta, but not under arrest.

On December 1, Kabul Radio said that the Afghan Government had asked Pakistan to return the trainer aircraft belonging to Aryana Airlines and its pilot.

It added that the plane had landed at Quetta airport owing to a navigational error.

A. Government Takes Over 2,500 Schools: The Government on December 1 assumed control of about 2,500 aided schools under the powers conferred on it recently by Parliament.

These schools were hitherto under 450 different managements.

The Prime Minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, told the Senate that legislation on the take-over would be eventually extended to cover the estate schools used largely by plantation workers of Indian origin.

The acting Minister of Education, Mr. V. T. G. Karunaratne, hailed the take-over as "the first step in the Government's programme towards establishment of a system of national education."

The Trotskyist Lanka Sama Samaj Party in a statement welcomed it as "a very desirable step" and appealed to the working classes to give their fullest support to the Government in effecting the transfer of schools, and not "to be provoked into acts of retaliation by vested interests."

With 54 aided schools opting to remain private without State aid and as non-fee-levying institutions, Ceylon would now have five different sets of schools: eight fee-levying private schools which had been operating without State aid, 54 private schools which had now opted to remain private forfeiting State aid and the right to levy fees, over 6,000 free State schools, about 700 schools on the plantations, financed by estate employers and private schools attached to Buddhist temples.

Meanwhile, the Roman Catholic agitation against the take-over of schools continued along the western coastal belt, with parents moving into about 60 school premises to resist the take-over.

CHINA

A. Economic Agreement With Cuba: The President of the National Bank of Cuba, Maj. Ernesto Guevara, paid a visit to China from November 18 to December 1 as head of an Economic Mission.

During the visit, he and other members of the Mission were received by the Chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai and the Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi.

A significant development during the visit was the conclusion of an Economic Agreement under which China would provide Cuba with an interest-free loan of 240 million roubles between 1961 and 1965.

Maj. Guevara and members of the Mission had talks with the Vice-Premier, Mr. Li Hsien-nien and other Chinese Ministers on trade and other subjects of common interest.

A joint communique issued on November 30 said:

"The two parties note with great pleasure that the present development of the international situation tends to become more and more favourable to the peoples of all countries in their cause for world peace, national independence, democracy and progress and to the disadvantage of imperialism. An international united front of the people of the world against the imperialist aggressive forces headed by USA is taking shape and growing stronger day by day.

"Both parties consider that to relax international tensions and safeguard world peace is a common aspiration of all the peoples of the world, including the people of USA. All the threats and obstacles to world peace come from imperialism. The nature of imperialism has not and will never change. The peoples of the world must not have any illusion about imperialism. Both parties resolutely condemn and oppose the criminal activities of US imperialism in intervening in Cuba and suppressing the national and democratic movement in Latin America, using the United Nations flag to dismember and swallow the Congo, engineering and expanding the civil war in Laos, aggravating international tensions and menacing world peace. Both parties solemnly declare that China and Cuba unswervingly support the peoples of Latin America, Asia and Africa in their just struggles to oppose imperialism and colonialism, strive for and safeguard national independence and develop their national economy and culture and that they will strive unremittingly in defence of world peace.

"During the talks, the Chinese side expressed admiration for and joy over the great victories achieved by the Cuban people in upholding unity and persisting in their armed struggle, have increased their forces from small to big and from weak to strong and finally succeeded in overthrowing the reactionary dictatorship of Batista. It considers that the Cuban people's struggle and victory have provided abundant experience and set an example to all the oppressed peoples in the world, particularly the Latin American peoples, in their struggles to win and safeguard national independence. The Cuban people's struggle and victory are also a strong support to the Chinese people in opposing US imperialist aggression and building socialism. The Chinese side is very glad to see that the Cuban Government and people, under the correct leadership of Prime Minister Castro, have achieved a series of important successes in suppressing counter-revolutionary activities, carrying out agrarian reforms, developing the national economy, organizing the armed militia and wiping out the economic influence of US imperialism. The Chinese side holds that the Cuban Government and people have made tremendous contributions in support of the other Latin American peoples in safeguarding their national independence and State sovereignty and promoting solidarity among the Latin American peoples. The Chinese side praises and supports the revolutionary Havana Declaration adopted by the Cuban people and expresses admiration and thanks for the resolute and courageous step taken by the Republic of Cuba to establish diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China. The Chinese side sympathizes with and supports the unremitting efforts made by the Cuban Government and people to carry out peaceful construction and eliminate tension in the Caribbean area, firmly opposes and sternly condemns the US imperialist intervention and aggression against Cuba and re-affirms the unshakable stand of the Chinese Government and people that they will do everything possible to support and assist the Cuban people's just struggle. The Chinese side is of the firm belief that the heroic Cuban people, under the leadership of Prime Minister Castro and with the support of the other peoples of Latin America and the rest of the world, including the brotherly assistance of the countries in the socialist camp, will certainly be able to defeat all the attacks of the enemy and realise the great revolutionary aims set in the Havana Declaration by firmly upholding unity and persisting in struggle.

"The Economic Mission of the Cuban Revolutionary Government expresses its admiration for the great achievements obtained in all the fields of socialist construction by the Chinese people who, under the leadership of Chairman Mao Tse-tung and the Chinese Government, have overcome all kinds of difficulties and advanced along the correct path of the general line, the big leap forward and the people's commune with unparalleled enthusiasm. The Mission acclaims the fact that the Chinese Government and people have stood steadfastly at the forefront of the struggle against imperialism and colonialism and in defence of world peace. It is very glad to see that the Chinese Government, together with friendly countries, has made unswerving efforts in the struggle for bringing about peaceful co-existence among nations with different social systems. The Chinese leaders point out with emphasis that relaxation of international tensions, elimination of the state of 'cold war' and the achievement of a peaceful international environment are essential to China's economic construction. The Economic Mission of the Cuban Revolutionary Government fully understands and supports this correct stand of China's. The Mission conveys the Cuban people's profound friendship for the Chinese Government and people who resolutely support the Cuban revolution; it condemns US imperialism for continuing to manipulate United Nations to unlawfully deprive the People's Republic of China of its rightful position in United Nations. The Mission states that Cuba fully supports the Chinese people's just struggle for the liberation of their own territory, Taiwan.

"During the talks, the Economic Mission of the Cuban Revolutionary Government, on behalf of the Government of the Republic of Cuba, invited the Government of the People's Republic of China to send a Government delegation to visit Cuba and the Chinese Government accepted this invitation with honour.

"Both parties point out with great pleasure that the relations of friendship and co-operation between the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Cuba are being constantly developed and strengthened in accordance with the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the spirit of the Bandung Conference in their common struggle to defend national independence and world peace.

"During the visit of the Economic Mission of the Cuban Revolutionary Government led by Maj. Guevara to China, there was concluded between China and Cuba an Agreement on Economic Co-operation between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Cuba, under which the Chinese Government will provide the Republic of Cuba with a loan of 240 million roubles without interest between 1961 and 1965 for the use of supplying complete sets of equipment and other technical aid to help Cuba develop her economy. On the basis of the Trade and Payments Agreement between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Cuba of July 23, 1960, the two parties signed the Trade Protocol for 1961 between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Cuba which provides that in 1961, the Chinese Government will buy one million tons of sugar from Cuba and other Cuban exports, while the Cuban Government will buy Chinese exports of an equivalent value.

"On the basis of the Agreement on Scientific and Technical Co-operation between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Cuba of July 23, 1960, the two parties signed the Protocol between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of Cuba on the implementation of the Agreement on Scientific and Technical Co-operation between the two countries, under which the Chinese Government will help Cuba train her technical personnel. The signing of these Agreements and Protocols will further consolidate and expand the relations of mutual help and co-operation between China and Cuba and benefit the common upsurge in the economy and culture of the two countries as well as the further development of friendship between the two peoples. Both parties consider that the consolidation and development of friendship between the Chinese and Cuban peoples not only are in the vital interests of the two peoples, but will also help promote friendship between the Chinese people and the other Latin American peoples and the common cause of safeguarding world peace."

On November 26, Cuba's first Ambassador to the People's Republic of China, Mr. Oscar Pinto Santos, presented his credentials to the Vice-Chairman of the People's Republic, Madame Soong Ching-ling.

B. CPPCC Tibet Committee Session: It was made known in Lhasa in the third week of November that the second plenary session of the Tibet Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC) had decided to organize people's communes for the first time in the Region.

The Committee called on "members of the middle and upper strata in Tibet to carry out ideological re-moulding, work hard and rally round the Chinese Communist Party and march forward under the illumination of Mr. Mao Tse-tung's thinking and the three Red flags of the general line for building socialism, the great leap forward and the people's communes."

The Chairman of the Tibet Committee, Mr. Tan Kuan-san, in a report to the session said that the "democratic reform in the agricultural districts and the movement in the pastoral districts against rebellion, unpaid forced labour and slavery and for the interests of both the herdsmen and the livestock-owners" had spread to an area with a population of 1,010,000.

He said: "The movement against rebellion, feudal privileges and exploitation and oppression has been carried out among most of the monasteries and monks and nuns and this has enabled the Tibetan people to enjoy genuine freedom of religious belief.

"The million emancipated serfs have shown an unprecedented patriotic spirit and enthusiasm in production after they became the masters of the new society and the land. Over 100,000 households have organized themselves into mutual-aid teams and have achieved a bumper harvest this year (1960).

"As a result of the success of the democratic reform, the carrying out of the buying-out policy by the Communist Party and the Government and the strengthening of the united front work with the members of the upper strata, Tibet's united front has been consolidated and expanded".

The future tasks in Tibet, he stressed, would be to lay a firm foundation for building a new socialist Tibet. This would be achieved through continuing to mobilize the masses, strengthening national defence in every aspect and the people's democratic dictatorship, carrying the democratic reform to its conclusion, gradually developing the mutual-aid and co-operative movement, greatly promoting production in agriculture and animal husbandry and correspondingly developing the work in communications, transport, culture and health.

SUMMARY: Crown Prince Akihito's Visit; US Farmer Team's Report On Aid For Agriculture; International Electro-Technical Commission Meeting; Pension Scheme For Central Government Employees; Chiefs Of Army And Air Force Staffs Appointed; Increase In Sugar Production.

A. Crown Prince Akihito's Visit: Crown Prince Akihito of Japan, accompanied by his wife, Princess Michiko, arrived in New Delhi on November 29 on a nine-day goodwill visit to India.

They were received at the airport by the President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, the Vice-President, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, the Prime Minister, Mr. J. Nehru, Cabinet Ministers, diplomats and the Mayor of Delhi.

The State reception at the airport included a 21-gun salute and an inter-Services guard of honour which was inspected by the Crown Prince.

Welcoming the Royal couple, Dr. Prasad described their visit as "a most auspicious and significant event in the history of Indo-Japanese relations."

He expressed the hope that the visit would bring India and Japan "yet closer together in spirit and in endeavour towards our common ideal of world peace."

Crown Prince Akihito, who was representing the Emperor of Japan and returning Dr. Prasad's visit to Japan two years ago, thanked Dr. Prasad on his behalf and on behalf of Princess Michiko for his welcome speech.

He said it was their long-cherished desire to visit this country "where one of the great civilizations of mankind originated."

During the State drive from the airport to Rashtrapati Bhawan (President's House) Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko were given a warm reception by large crowds that lined the route.

Within a few minutes of their arrival at Rashtrapati Bhawan (President's House) Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko called on the President. Later, Mr. Nehru paid a courtesy call on the Royal couple.

State Banquet:

In the evening on November 29, the President, Dr. R. Prasad held a State banquet in honour of Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko.

In a speech on the occasion, he said:

"May I on behalf of the people and the Government of India extend to Your Imperial Highnesses once again in a most hearty welcome to our country. We welcome you as the personal representative of His Imperial Majesty and also as the shining symbol of the new era in Japan. We have been looking forward to your visit for some time, and as I said earlier in the day, it signifies an important stage in the history of Indo-Japanese relations.

"For me, who had the privilege of visiting your country some two years ago, this occasion brings back cherished memories of a great and beautiful country and a charming and dynamic people. I returned to India with the lasting impression that the bonds that link us will grow stronger as time passes, for our ideals are the same and spring from the same ancient traditions. The visit of Your Imperial Highnesses will reinforce these ties of understanding and mutual regard and strengthen our efforts for the establishment of lasting peace in the world."

Prince Akihito, replying to Dr. Prasad's speech, said:

"The Princess and I are very grateful to you for the warmth of your welcome. We have been deeply touched by the kind words of the President, which I believe have been addressed, not only to us personally, but to my father, the Emperor, and to the Japanese people whose unity the Emperor symbolizes.

"Mr President, it is my great privilege to return on behalf of my father the Emperor, the courtesy of your memorable visit to Japan, which has left upon our people's mind a very deep impression of your great and benevolent statesmanship."

On November 30, Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko visited Rajghat and placed a wreath on Mahatma Gandhi's Samadhi.

The same day (November 30) they were the guests of the Prime Minister Mr. Nehru at lunch.

In the evening, Prince Akihito laid the foundation stone of the India International Centre in New Delhi.

The Centre, which is being built with the help of the Rockefeller Foundation, is being established for the promotion of understanding and amity among the different communities of the world.

Speaking on the occasion, Prince Akihito said that India had become one of the most important cross-roads of Eastern and Western cultures and the functioning of the International Centre could be of great significance, not only for the cultural development of India, but for the world.

He recalled the address by Mr. Nehru at a similar institution in Japan three years earlier and said that "the relationship between these sister institutions will be most cordial and profitable in the years to come".

Civic Reception:

On November 30, Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko were given a civic reception at Delhi's historic Red Fort.

The Mayor of Delhi, on behalf of the citizens of the city, presented Princess Michiko with a Banarasi stole and Prince Akihito with a sandalwood casket.

There were shouts of "Kangei" (Japanese for "welcome") and cheers as Prince Akihito rose to reply to the civic address.

He said that though India and Japan had evolved different patterns of culture, the two countries had always had close cultural contacts through religion, philosophy and the fine arts from ancient times. This provided the basis for the goodwill the Japanese people had for India and also the "necessary foundation for co-operation in the new age between the peoples of the two countries".

India, he said, was making rapid economic progress which was the culmination of the historical and cultural traditions of the country.

He added: "The whole Japanese people believe that India will achieve massive success in the near future and they hope that this country will strive for the peace and progress of Asia and thus contribute to world peace".

Mr. Nehru in a speech on the occasion said that despite the differences that India sometimes had with Japan, the two countries had the same basic approach to the problems of the world, namely, "to prevent the use of nuclear power for evil purposes. This means that war, whether on a small scale or a large scale, must be avoided".

He said that often, relations between countries were based on temporary reasons, such as expediency or fear, which foundered when these reasons no longer existed. Such were the ties based on military alliances. He hoped that Indo-Japanese relations continued to be based on more permanent factors.

On December 1, Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko visited a Community Development block at the village of Niatulli, ten miles from Delhi.

In the evening (December 1), Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko were accorded a reception by the India-Japan Friendship Association.

In a brief address, Prince Akihito said that, despite the different methods adopted by India and Japan in tackling various political problems, the basic approach of both countries to problems like world peace were essentially the same.

He said that the relations between the two countries were being rapidly enlarged from cultural to economic and political co-operation and he was convinced that the bonds between India and Japan would be strengthened in the coming years.

On December 2, the President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, held a reception in honour of the Royal visitors in the Mughal Gardens of Rashtrapati Bhawan (President's House).

In the evening (December 2), Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko held a banquet at which Dr. Prasad, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan and Mr. Nehru were among the 200 guests present.

Speaking on the occasion, Prince Akihito said that he had been convinced during his current visit to India that "there is a very wide field of co-operation" between India and Japan.

He said he could now better appreciate the strenuous efforts being made by the leaders and the people of "this great Republic for their own interest and for the common good of mankind".

He added that he and Princess Michiko had received the "warmest welcome" wherever they went and "we have received the benefit of the kindest attention of the President himself and the thoughtful arrangements of the Government of India".

He added: "All this has made us feel quite at home and has made our stay pleasant and fruitful".

The President, Dr. Prasad, replying to the toast proposed by Prince Akihito, said he was also convinced that the field of co-operation between India and Japan "is ever widening".

He said: "Like your people, we too are dedicated to the belief that human progress and happiness are indivisible and can be attained only by the common efforts of all nations to live together in friendship, co-operation and mutual understanding".

On December 3, Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko left Delhi for Agra where they visited the Taj Mahal and Agra Fort.

They arrived in Gaya on December 5 and visited the Buddhist shrines there.

With their departure from Patna for Khatmandu (Nepal) on December 6, their visit to India came to a close.

Farewell Message:

In a farewell message on December 6, Prince Akihito expressed his "heart-felt thanks for the most cordial welcome" accorded to him and Princess Michiko during their stay in India.

He said that with the friendly sentiments shown to him and Princess Michiko by the Government and the people of India, he believed that the existing friendly relations between India and Japan would be further strengthened year after year.

He added: "We have seen many things in India which gave us deep impressions, and we have met a great number of people of India who will ever remain in our hearts.

"The very warm, friendly sentiments shown us by the Government and people of India are not for us alone but they are also, I am firmly convinced, towards the Japanese people. These and other personal experiences makes me believe that the existing friendly relations between India and Japan will be further strengthened year after year.

"This happy relationship will certainly contribute to the prosperity of our two countries and eventually serve the greater cause of world peace. We are extremely happy to be able to go back to Japan with very pleasant memories of our visit to India. I wish to thank you all again for your wonderful hospitality".

B. US Farmer Team's Report On Aid For Agriculture: It was made known in New Delhi that the 12-member team of American farmers which visited India early in 1960 had recommended that the aid programmes of the US Government for agriculture should be on a long-range basis and "geared to fit into India's Five-Year Plans."

The team, which visited all parts of the country, made several recommendations for the future pattern of US agricultural aid to India.

It was suggested that the aid given under the TCM programme should be continued and strengthened and the sending of high-calibre personnel and practical help in know-how and equipment should be maintained.

The team suggested that the US Government should also assist in the improvement of highways and the transport system in India. It also urged a more rapid movement of goods and a more efficient system of traffic.

It added that the US authorities should continue assistance in research and make certain that the practical demonstration method was used.

It also stated that help should be given to Indians in the production of improved implements, including small tractors that could be manufactured in India at a low cost, serviced by trained mechanics and operated economically.

The US Government should also help in providing good seeds, expand exchange programmes to provide for "person-to-person contacts," with greater emphasis on selecting genuine farmers in exchange programmes and suitable persons in other fields.

D. International Electro-Technical Commission Meeting: The 25th annual meeting of the International Electro-Technical Commission (IEC) was inaugurated in New Delhi on October 31 by the Vice-President, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan.

The IEC, which was meeting in an Asian country for the first time, is the oldest international standardization organization. It was founded "to facilitate the co-ordination and unification of national electro-technical standards and to co-ordinate the activities of other international organizations in the field".

About 400 delegates from 25 countries attended the 12-day meeting.

Inaugurating the meeting, Dr. Radhakrishnan said that while there was need for standardization in the field of sciences, such as electricity, in which IEC was engaged, there was even greater need for exact meanings of words used in the context of international relations.

Many differences between nations existed because people meant different things when they used terms or phrases like 'cold war', "socialism" and "democracy". Many of the tempestuous debates in UN, he said, were due to the ambiguity in the meaning of words used. A proper definition of these would help greatly in bringing about peace and progress.

He said that with technological developments the people of the world were coming closer and stressed the need for bringing about a world community but, he added, mankind had failed so far in achieving this object. He hoped that science would help in bringing about a unified world by means such as the present Conference, as "every step which helps the exchange of information across frontiers is a gain".

The Central Minister of Commerce and Industry, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, who presided, said that the drawing up of international standards for manufactured goods would help countries like India to increase exports in view of the severe competition facing them in foreign markets.

While welcoming the laying down of international standards, he said that they should, as far as possible, suit India's requirements as local industries had to operate under different circumstances than those prevailing in other countries.

The President of IEC, Dr. Ivar Herlitz, said that the fact that the current meeting was being held in Asia for the first time was a source of great satisfaction and reflected the changing character of the organization. There were now 35 members of IEC, representing more than three-fourth of the world's population, and the meeting in India was the natural consequence of the organization's expansion.

During its meeting, the IEC finalized international standards concerning several electrical goods.

These standards, which would be published as IEC recommendations, related to a wide range of subjects such as thermal endurances of enamelled wire, insulation resistance of solid insulating materials, unification of sizes and tolerances of round cells, crystal units, rotary wafer switches, toggle switches, connectors, isolators, and earthing switches.

It also approved a large number of draft recommendations for circulation to member-nations for their comments.

E. Pension Scheme For Central Government Employees: According to a Pension Scheme finalized on the basis of the recommendations of the Pay Commission, tens of thousands of Central Government employees who had put in long terms of temporary service were expected to benefit.

Under the Scheme, temporary employees would get pension for the entire period of their service and not on the date of their confirmation or on the basis of 50 per cent of the temporary service, as had been done earlier.

It was also decided that, for purposes of pension calculations, all allowances other than those eligible for full accounting should be counted on the basis of 50 per cent.

Under the existing dispensation, some allowances were taken into account fully, some others to the extent of 50 per cent and the rest not recognized at all.

The new Scheme would combine administrative convenience with a fair measure of justice to the several thousand temporary employees who would otherwise have been denied some legitimate benefits because of the exclusion of some service periods and allowances for the computation of pension.

With the simplification of pension computation under the new Scheme, arrangements would be made to ensure payment of pensions to employees immediately on retirement. It was decided that in each department or office, an officer of appropriate rank should be specifically charged with initiating action on the completion of pension records and documents of every employee one year before his retirement.

Besides preparing every six months a list of officers attaining the age of superannuation in 12 to 18 months, the Special Officer would ensure finalization of pension cases in time.

A procedure was also evolved whereby in cases in which some dues are outstanding against an employee on the date of his retirement, the payment of his pension and gratuity would be made on the due date on his furnishing a suitable surety or cash deposit or on his agreeing to a portion of his death-cum-retirement gratuity being withheld.

It was learnt that the additional burden would be of the order of nearly Rs. 2 crores annually in the initial stages. It was expected to be considerable, particularly after 1970, when larger and larger numbers of the so-called temporary employees would retire.

H. Sindri Fertilizers Ltd. Amalgamated With Hindustan Fertilizers Ltd.: According to a Government order issued in New Delhi on November 27, Sindri Fertilizers Limited would be amalgamated with Hindustan Fertilizers and Chemicals Limited to form the Fertilizer Corporation of India as from January 1, 1961.

The new Company would have an authorized capital of Rs. 75 crores and would have its headquarters in Delhi. Mr. Damle, Secretary in the Ministry of Agriculture and Chairman of both the amalgamating companies, would head the new Corporation.

The Corporation would take over the Sindri, Nangal and Trombay Fertilizer Plants in the first instance and possibly the Rourkela and Neiveli Fertilizer Plants as well at a later stage. It would be responsible for all new fertilizer projects in the public sector, including the proposed Nahorkatiya plant.

The headquarters organization of the new Corporation would consist of the Chairman, a financial adviser and a chief accounts officer. Each plant would be placed under a resident director or general manager.

The formation of the Fertilizer Corporation marks another step in the reorganization of the public sector in holding corporations managing a number of producing units. Hindustan Steel, the Heavy Engineering Corporation (the Heavy Machine Building Plant, the Heavy Forge and Foundry and the Mining Equipment Plant), the National Coal Development Corporation, Hindustan Insecticides (the Delhi and Alwaye D.D.T. Plants), the Heavy Electricals Corporation (the Bhopal, Soviet and Czech Plants) and the Drugs Corporation are all the result of the integration of two or more companies or projects in a single parent body.

I. Two Aluminium Plants To Be Set Up: It was announced in New Delhi on December 1 that the Government had approved the establishment of two new plants for the manufacture of aluminium. It also sanctioned the expansion of two existing units.

This programme was expected to add 44,000 tons of capacity, making a total of 80,000 tons by the end of the Third Five-Year Plan.

The actual demand in 1965-66 would be of the order of 150,000 tons, or roughly twice the capacity planned.

The new plants would include a 20,000-ton unit for Tendulkar Industries in Bombay. This would be sited in the Koyna area, being dependent on the local bauxite deposits and electric power.

The second smelter would be set up at Mettur in Salem district by Mr. R. Venkataswamy Naidu of Coimbatore and was expected to produce 10,000 tons.

These would be in addition to the 20,000-ton Hindustan Aluminium Corporation smelter proposed at Rihand, in UP.

Under the expansion scheme, Indian Aluminium would double the capacity of its Hirakud smelter to 20,000 tons and the Aluminium Corporation of India would go up to 7,500 tons at Asansol.

The new plants and the expansion programme were expected to materialize by 1965-66, raising the indigenous capacity to 82,300 tons per annum, which would yield a production of 80,000 tons.

J. Pig-Iron Plants In Private Sector: It was announced in New Delhi on November 27 that the Government had decided to permit the setting up in the private sector of pig-iron plants with a capacity of up to 100,000 tons per annum each.

This, it was stated, might assist the realization of the Third Five-Year Plan target of 1.5 million tons of saleable iron by 1965-66.

Production from such units would not be subject to the price and distribution controls which applied to the major producers. This incentive was proposed to compensate for the disadvantages of small-scale production.

The Industrial Policy Resolution stipulated that all new iron and steel plants should be in the public sector, although private participation in specified cases was not ruled out in the national interest.

Hitherto, it had been the Government's policy to license private iron plants of only up to 15,000 tons per annum capacity. Six such units had been licensed, of which only two had actually gone into production in Orissa and Coimbatore respectively.

It was on account of the desirability of improving the economics of the small iron units that it had been felt necessary to raise the permissible capacity to 100,000 tons.

It had been calculated that the requirements of pig-iron would be of the order of 1.5 million tons per annum by the end of the Third Plan.

The draft outline of the Third Plan had stated that this demand would be met as follows: Bhilai—300,000 tons; Durgapur—300,000 tons; Indian Iron and Steel—200,000 tons and the Bokaro Plant—350,000 tons. The remaining 35,000 tons would be produced by small units in the private sector and also in the low shaft furnace pig-iron plant that might be set up at Neiveli.

K. Increase In Sugar Production During 1959-60: The Indian Sugar Mills Association announced in Calcutta on November 26 that the total sugar production in India for the period 1959-60 (November, 1959—October, 1960) amounted to 2,420,000 tons as against 1,918,000 tons of the 1958-59 period.

These figures excluded 51,000 tons produced prior to November, 1960, for the period 1960-61 as against the corresponding figure of 31,000 tons of the period 1958-59.

The off-take from factories during October, 1960 was 169,000 tons as against 172,000 tons during the corresponding period in 1959. The total despatches in the period 1959-60 were 2,018,000 tons as against 2,105,000 tons in 1958-59, which also included about 30,000 tons of sugar despatched by the factories for export.

The closing stocks with the factories on October 31, 1960, were 549,000 tons (excluding 41,000 tons of stocks out of the 1960-61 season's output produced before November, 1960) as against 153,000 tons on the same date in 1959 (this also excluded stocks of 20,000 tons produced for the 1959-60 season before November, 1959).

MALAYA

A. Tengku Abdul Rehman's Visits To Canada, USA, UK And Holland: The Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, arrived in Canada in the third week of October.

On October 24, he addressed the Royal Commonwealth Society at a dinner in Toronto and uttered the warning that the British Commonwealth must tighten its links or face disintegration.

He said that the changing face of the Commonwealth, from a small number of member-nations confined to the same racial group, was going to make unanimity increasingly difficult at a time when the world was torn by a conflict of opposing aims and ideals.

He said: "I consider that unless the principle of agreement by majority is accepted, there is a danger that the present association may become a farce, disintegrating into a coffee-house discussion because of indecision.

"Only by agreeing to the majority principle will the association of the Commonwealth be able to cope with its increasing size and be of durable value to all members."

He hinted that he would like to see the Commonwealth vote en bloc at United Nations. Tighter links would allow the Commonwealth "to present a united front on major issues of world concern." This had not been done, he added, except on economic or financial matters.

He pointed out that one of the major issues facing the world at the moment was apartheid in South Africa, whose actions "run completely counter to the partnership of the Commonwealth."

He indicated that his nation was not in favour of admitting South Africa, which was to become a Republic, back in the fold of the 12-member Commonwealth.

He said: "If the other members of the Commonwealth are agreed that she should be admitted, then Malaya will be reluctant to exercise her veto out of respect for the views of other members, but we will continue with our trade boycott of South African goods.

"A multiracial Commonwealth must live and work in the spirit of multi-racial ideals."

He added: "Another reason for seeking a new direction for the Commonwealth is that we must not be misled by our common ideals of peace and progress and freedom into believing that we have achieved some kind of Utopia.

"Anomalies do exist in the Commonwealth and without any doubt at all, the most extraordinary one of these is South Africa's policy of apartheid.

"Apartheid is not only a mockery, but a violation of faith. And I am happy to say here that your Prime Minister shares my views."

He said that Commonwealth members could help South Africa see the folly of her policy and help her mend her ways. "She must be brought to realize that apartheid is a most tragic mistake because there is no knowing where such a policy may lead."

In USA:

Tengku Abdul Rehman arrived in Washington on October 25 to begin a three-day official visit to USA.

Welcoming him, the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter said that in the task of unifying diverse groups and communities, Malaya had set an example to many young countries and some older ones, too.

On the second day of his visit (October 26) Tengku Abdul Rehman had an hour's conference with President D. D. Eisenhower and senior American officials.

Later in the day (October 26) he had a meeting with the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter. He later said that he had asked for the moral support of USA in backing his plan to solve the problem of West New Guinea. He declined to go into details of his proposal before he had discussed it with Indonesian and Dutch officials.

In a speech at a National Press Club luncheon in Washington on October 27, Tengku Abdul Rehman proposed that USA should call an international conference to discuss the "vexing problem" of communist China.

He said that UN recognition of the Peking regime was necessary if the communists were to agree to an East-West Disarmament Agreement. China could not be ignored because she could easily put 25,000,000 men into the field of battle.

He added that the West New Guinea (Irian) dispute between Indonesia and the Netherlands must be settled to avert possible communist exploitation of the situation and the resulting trail of disaster and misery.

He said that Malaya could not join S-EATO, although she would not be neutral in the struggle between communism and freedom.

In UK:

Tengku Abdul Rehman arrived in London on November 12 on a 10-day visit to UK.

Speaking to newsmen at London airport, he re-iterated his suggestion that both the Chinese People's Republic and Formosa should hold seats in United Nations. Formosa should be recognized as an independent sovereign State and should not be called Nationalist China.

On November 17, he told a news conference in London that he had written to the Dutch Prime Minister, Prof. Jan de Quay, that he would like them to meet to discuss the West Irian issue.

When a newsman asked if his plan included a temporary international trusteeship administration for the disputed territory, he said he could not disclose what his proposals were until he had discussed them with Dutch leaders. He had discussed his ideas with Indonesian leaders and their reaction had been encouraging to a certain degree.

He said that the Indonesian authorities had to a certain extent agreed that he should use his good offices to try and bring about a settlement of the question of West Irian.

Referring to South Africa's policy of apartheid, he said: "Our stand against South Africa has not changed. We are carrying out an extensive economic boycott." He had recently written to various Prime Ministers of countries in the non-communist world asking them to do the same and replies had been received from many. Most of the countries of Asia had admitted that they had no economic and trading relations with South Africa. These countries included India and Indonesia.

Replying to questions about Congo, he said that Malayan troops would be kept there as long as they were required by United Nations.

On his Government's attitude towards communist China, he said that his country did not have any diplomatic relations with Peking. His country would have no dealings with communist China even if she was made a member of UN. But, he added, it was unreal and impractical to exclude communist China from UN. Unless China was admitted to UN, there was not much chance of achieving success in disarmament.

In Holland:

Tengku Abdul Rehman and the Dutch Prime Minister, Prof. Jan de Quay, met at The Hague for two hours on November 25 for talks on the West Irian dispute between Holland and Indonesia.

The Dutch Foreign Minister, Dr. J. M. A. H. Luns, also took part in the, talks.

A joint communique issued at The Hague on the night of November 25 said that Tengku Abdul Rehman "noted with satisfaction that Holland was willing to subject her policies in West Irian to the scrutiny and judgment of United Nations".

It added that Holland "greatly appreciated the activities and constructive interest" in the matter by Tengku Abdul Rehman.

It said that the Tengku, who had similar talks on the question with other Governments, as well as the UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, would, in the light of the outcome of these various talks, consider whether at a later stage further talks might be useful. If so, he would inform the Dutch Government.

Tengku Abdul Rehman said that the communique issued after his talks at The Hague did not mean that Holland was prepared to allow UN to decide the question of the sovereignty of West Irian.

Returns Home:

He returned to Kuala Lumpur on November 28.

He told newsmen on arrival that he was disappointed to note that the Indonesian Foreign Minister, Dr. R. Subandrio, had rejected his plan of sending a United Nations Mission to West Irian for an on-the-spot study of the situation in the territory.

He said that he would not have made his plan public if he had known Dr. Subandrio's attitude earlier, but he doubted whether the Indonesian Government shared the same views on the matter.

In any case, he said he was ready to go to Djakarta if President Sukarno wanted to discuss the matter with him. Before he started on his tour, he had understood that Indonesia was agreeable to his plan and he had worked hard to persuade Holland to agree to it.

He said that after his talks at The Hague, the Dutch Government had been willing to agree to send a study team to examine the situation in West Irian and it only remained for the Indonesian Government to approve of the idea.

The Indonesian Foreign Minister. Dr. Subandrio had been quoted as saying that the sending of a UN mission to West Irian was not a solution and that the only solution was a quick transfer of administration from Holland to Indonesia.

The Tengku commented: "If Dr. Subandrio represents the official view of the Indonesian Government, then my next move is to sleep in bed happily."

He said that his only interest in undertaking the mission was the preservation of peace in South-East Asia. In the ultimate analysis, he said that it entirely depended on the two nations directly concerned whether to come to an amicable settlement or not.

On December 6, he said that he had given up his plan to mediate in the West Irian dispute.

NEPAL

A. Oil Survey In Nepal: It was announced in Khatmandu on November 23 that the Nepalese Government had permitted India's Oil and Natural Gas Commission to conduct oil surveys within Nepal.

The Commission, which was conducting surveys for oil and gas in Indian territory, was understood to have requested the Nepalese Government for permission to extend its work to the adjoining Nepalese territory.

The Commission's experts would survey areas in Nepalganj, Dang, Deokhuri and Puthan along the Churia mountain range. A Nepalese Government geologist would be associated with the Indian team.

B. New Tariff Regulations: The main features of Nepal's new tariff regulations were announced in Khatmandu on November 21.

They included a high duty on consumer goods and a nominal levy on capital goods like machinery. The main purpose of the regulations was to promote export and at the same time assist industry.

The new tariff rates took retrospective effect from November 1, the date on which the new Indo-Nepalese Trade Treaty became operative.

Consumer goods would be subjected to high import duty. On biscuits, chocolates, canned foodstuffs and dry fruits, it would be 85 per cent and on woollen carpets and cosmetics 100 per cent.

For silken goods the duty would be 75 per cent, for watches 85 per cent, motor-cars 50 per cent, motor-cycles 35 per cent and trucks 25 per cent. The levy would be 25 per cent on capital goods like machinery.

On rhino horns, a commodity which fetches a high price in many East Asian countries where its power is used as a powerful aphrodisiac, the highest export duty had been levied—Rs. 250 per lb. Jute goods would be exempted from export duty.

PAKISTAN

A. Indo-Pakistan Joint Information Consultative Committee Session: The Indo-Pakistan Joint Information Consultative Committee began a two-day session in Rawalpindi on November 26 to review the implementation of agreed decisions taken at its meeting in New Delhi in April, 1960 and to consider further measures to create an atmosphere of understanding and cordiality between the two countries.

The Indian delegation was led by the Minister for Information and Broadcasting, Dr. B. V. Keskar and the Pakistan delegation by the Information Minister, Mr. Z. A. Bhutto.

Mr. Bhutto, welcoming the Indian delegates at the plenary session said that the Press both in India and Pakistan could profitably report on the economic activities in the two countries which would greatly contribute to the fund of goodwill already expanding satisfactorily.

He added that the present Committee should devote itself, among other things, towards making a positive approach for achievement of Indo-Pak amity and goodwill instead of indulging in negative charges and counter-charges.

Replying, Dr. Keskar said that he fully reciprocated the sentiments of goodwill and friendliness expressed by Mr. Bhutto. He said that the Indian Government was truly appreciative of efforts made by President Ayub Khan towards bringing the two countries closer in an atmosphere of peace and friendliness.

He agreed with Mr. Bhutto that the joint Press Code should be made more positive and Press and other information media in the two countries should play their full part in developing happier relations between the two countries.

The Committee ended its deliberations on November 27 after achieving a "large measure of agreement" on measures to be taken to create an atmosphere of cordiality and understanding between the two countries.

The following is the text of the communique:

"The Indo-Pakistan Information Consultative Committee, which reviewed trends in the Press, radio, films and publications in India and Pakistan appreciated the work being done in the two countries to implement the Indo-Pakistan Agreements.

"In the inaugural session on November 25, Mr. Z. A. Bhutto, leader of the Pakistan delegation, while welcoming the leader and members of the Indian delegation, the Indian Minister for Information and Broadcasting, Dr. B. V. Keskar, acknowledged the significant improvements that had taken place in the relationship between the two countries. He said that the climate of friendship could be further improved if, in addition to observing voluntarily the joint Press Code, some thought was given to the positive aspects of the problem, and the information media in both India and Pakistan stressed on the work being done in both countries in the fields of economic and social development.

"The leader of the Pakistan delegation emphasized the need for broad agreement on principles and a better approach to the problems. He pointed out that while there might be infringements here and there of an all-embracing Code in both the countries, the Committee should concern itself more with flagrant violations that cause a sense of anger and animosity between the two peoples. He said that in order to create a more harmonious understanding, personal attacks on national leaders should be avoided.

"The leader of the Indian delegation reciprocated the sentiments of friendship and goodwill expressed by the leader of the Pakistan delegation and said that the initiative taken by the President of Pakistan and the recent visit of the Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan, as also instances of greater co-operation in economic and trade relations had done a lot to lessen the tensions between the two countries. There was now greater understanding of each other's view-point. He agreed with the leader of the Pakistan delegation that in addition to the observance of the joint Press Code, the Press in both the countries should strive to see the positive side of the work that was being done in India and Pakistan. As regards other media of information, the two Governments could take steps and evolve a procedure much more easily because they were under their control. He emphasized that these media could give the lead by avoiding attacks on the personalities of the leaders of both the countries. In his view, there was an all-round improvement, but there was room for further improvement.

"Both delegations agreed that the violation of the joint Press Code should be looked at from the view-point of getting the broad picture in order to assess the progress made towards a more friendly atmosphere and understanding.

"In the field of the Press, the Committee reviewed the working of the joint Press Code since its adoption in April, 1960 and noted the steps taken to implement it. While the Committee was satisfied that the Press as a whole had tried its best to contribute towards friendly feelings between the two countries, it noted with regret that some newspapers in both the countries had not acted in consonance with the joint Press Code.

"It felt that the time had come when positive steps should be taken to promote a more cordial atmosphere by reporting on and reviewing constructive and developmental activities in both countries.

"It also felt that efforts of the two Governments to promote friendly relations should be supplemented by the Press in both the countries collaborating to ensure implementation of the joint Press Code.

"It held that better understanding between the two countries would be promoted by broadening the basis of facilities given to journalists for reporting on activities in each country. It held the present procedure to be unduly restrictive.

"It recommended increased facilities for circulation of newspapers published in each country to promote better appreciation of the achievements of the two peoples.

"It was informed by the Pakistan representatives that the question of the removal of ban on the entry of three Indian newspapers into East Pakistan was under active consideration.

"On broadcasting, films and publications, it noted the distinct improvement in the tone and complexion of broadcasts of the two organizations and agreed that efforts to maintain this trend and to make further improvements should be continued.

"In this connexion, it discussed some specific broadcasts where selection of material and its editing and treatment called for further improvement. They exchanged views with regard to the ways and means of effecting this improvement.

"It also discussed and favoured the exchange of visits by personnel of the two broadcasting organizations and wherever possible, the joint production of programmes.

"It further recommended that there should be exchange of radio programmes, documentary films and publications reflecting the economic, social and cultural progress of the two countries."

B. Indian Visitors To Pakistan—Travel Curbs Relaxed: The Government on November 30 decided to remove the restrictions applying to Indian citizens in order to make their travel in Pakistan easier.

Indian citizens would henceforth be subject to the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939 and would be treated as other foreigners in Pakistan.

The following classes of visa holders from India would henceforth be entitled to certain exemptions from the said rules:

(A) Citizens of India holding 'A', 'D' or in the case of a transport worker, holding 'E' category visa for Pakistan; (B) Citizens of India visiting Pakistan on 'C' category visas shall be accorded facilities admissible to tourists under the Registration of Foreigners Rules. These facilities would exempt them from reporting their movements, etc., within the country.

The following classes of Indian citizens were also exempted from obtaining residential permits during their stay in Pakistan:

(1) Persons holding 'A' category visas;

(2) Persons holding 'D' category visas;

(3) Transport workers holding 'E' category visas;

(4) Persons visiting Pakistan for a period not exceeding 15 days. If the period of stay was extended to more than 15 days, a residential permit would become necessary; and

(5) Persons granted gratis or courtesy visas.

Indian citizens would be issued only single residential permits, instead of two as was the case in the past, by the Civil Authority of the first of the several places for which the visa was valid. The Registration Officer at the Check Post of entry would make an endorsement on the Registration Form and state therein the period within which the journey to the destination should be completed. He would, however, not issue a residential permit. To facilitate quick disposal at the Check Post of entry, visa-holders should previously fill in the Registration Forms except column Nos. 12 and 13 and present them to the Officer-in-charge at the Check Post.

C. Dr. R. Subandrio's Visit: The Foreign Minister of Indonesia, Dr. R. Subandrio, left Pakistan for Djakarta on November 26 after a two-day visit.

A joint communique issued by him and the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Manzoor Qadir said that they had agreed to strengthen the friendly relations existing between Pakistan and Indonesia.

They also agreed to extend economic and cultural contacts between the two countries.

Before leaving, Dr. Subandrio said that there was great scope for political and economic co-operation between Indonesia and Pakistan, despite differences in approach in their foreign policies.

D. Congress Of Pan-Indian Ocean Science Association: The fourth Congress of the Pan-Indian Ocean Science Association (PIOSA) was inaugurated in Karachi on November 16 by the Minister for Industries, Mr. Abdul Kasem Khan.

Scientists from 18 countries, including India, Australia, France, Ceylon, Indonesia, Malaya, Holland, Portugal, Thailand, UK, Turkey and New Zealand and representatives of UNESCO, FAO, WHO, the Science Council of Africa and the Indian Ocean International Historical Association attended.

In his inaugural speech, Mr. Abdul Kasem Khan stressed the need for tackling the most important and baffling problems of food and multiplying populations in the countries around the Indian Ocean.

He expressed the hope that the economically advanced countries of Europe and America would share with the Asian countries their greater knowledge and experience.

During its one-week session, the Congress discussed problems relating to the well-being of the peoples and progress of the countries around the Indian Ocean and promotion of feelings of brotherhood among them.

Dr. Salim-uz-zaman Siddiqui, leader of the Pakistani delegation, in his presidential address said that while international bodies like UNESCO and FAO were serving the under-developed countries to strengthen their economy, PIOSA could promote balanced progress in various sectors of the national life.

The closing session of the Congress was addressed by the leaders of the various delegations, which included eminent scientists like Professor A. D. Ross (Australia), founder of PIOSA; Professor J. Millot, retiring President of PIOSA; Dr. K. Chandrasekharan (India); Dr. R. Tojib Hadiwisjaja (Indonesia) and Dr. G. H. Vander Kolff (Holland).

The Congress considered the reports of the meetings of the Council held in the course of the present session and in the light of recommendations made by the Council, unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

(1) The Congress, feeling the need for a Secretariat, decided to form a Secretariat whose expenses would be met by voluntary contributions from the member-countries. The Secretariat would be located immediately at Karachi in Pakistan;

(2) A Working Committee of four would be entrusted with the drafting of suitable rules for the working of PIOSA and its Secretariat. The Committee would consist of Dr. S. Siddiqui, Prof. A. D. Ross, Prof. M. S. Thacker and Prof. J. Millot. The draft rules would be circulated to the members of the Council before the end of May, 1961, and the draft finalized before May, 1962. The draft rules would be placed before the fifth Congress for ratification;

(3) Pending the ratification of these rules, the office of the Secretariat would be governed by such of them as would be applicable to it;

(4) The Secretariat would work under the guidance of the President and would be responsible to the Council;

(5) The Secretariat of PIOSA would collect and distribute among member-countries information relating to scientific matters of topical interest in co-operation with other appropriate bodies. Also, it would bring out a quarterly bulletin or a news-letter;

(6) The Secretariat would work out some modus operandi to facilitate the obtaining of scientific materials, micro-films, exchange of publications, reports on the educational systems in these areas, preparation of a bibliography of the Indian Ocean areas, etc., and facilitate the expeditious supply of such materials to the member-countries;

(7) The Congress noted that after the adoption of Resolutions 10, 11 and 12 by the third Congress, held at Tananarive in 1957, extensive oceanographic studies had been projected by the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) through its Special Commission (SCOR), and that high priority had been assigned to the study of the Indian Ocean. It resolved that member-countries desirous of participating in the ICSU might get in touch with ICSU and SCOR through appropriate national agencies, and that PIOSA would lend whatever support it could to the Indian Ocean expedition; also that the Secretariat would collect all relevant information in this connexion and make it available to the member-countries;

(8) The Working Committee would take such measures as might be necessary for effecting liaison with the Pan-Pacific Ocean Association, the Scientific Council for Africa and similar other organizations, and arrange for exchange of information with the bodies;

(9) The Working Committee would explore the possibilities as to the venue of the fifth Congress, and of the following two Congresses if possible, make a recommendation at an early date, but not later than July, 1961 and submit it to the Council for decision;

(10) The scientific programme of future Congresses would comprise symposia, invited addresses and research papers, the organization of which programme would be entrusted to a Programme Committee to be appointed by the Working Committee of the Council after the venue of the Congress had been decided upon. Further, the work of the Congress would be organized under three major heads, namely: (a) Physical sciences; (b) Biological sciences (both basic and applied) and (c) Social sciences. These would cover all the subjects coming under the purview of the present seven sections;

(11) The Congress resolved that a panel of experts in the different scientific fields covered by the work of PIOSA be constituted, whose advice might be sought by the Secretariat and the various Committees of PIOSA; and

(12) The Congress noted that in the teaching of science at the Secondary School level, the Biological Sciences did not seem to receive at present the same attention as the mathematical and the physical sciences and wished to emphasize the importance of the keeping of a suitable balance between the mathematical, the physical and the biological sciences.

The Congress considered a letter from the Secretary-General of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics inviting PIOSA to nominate a scientist for liaison work with the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics. The Congress resolved that Mademoiselle G. Pillet be nominated the Liaison Scientist, it being understood that this appointment would not involve any financial commitment for PIOSA.

SINGAPORE

A. Higher Taxes Announced: The Finance Minister, Dr. Goh Keng Swee, in his Budget statement to the Legislative Assembly on November 29 announced increased maximum rates of income-tax and a reduction in tax-free personal allowances.

He also announced that the Government would introduce a property tax, business registration tax, stamp duty on import and export declarations, increased assessments on rubber estates, increased rates on gambling machines and sweepstakes, higher fees for professional people in private practice and a passenger tax on embarking air travellers.

The tax-free allowances for a wife would be halved to 1,000 Straits dollars. The maximum rate of individual income-tax would be increased from 40 to 45 per cent and to 55 per cent on incomes above 100,000 Straits dollars. Reduced tax-free allowances would be offset by relief on earned income designed, to protect the lower income groups.

He announced the new revenue measures after giving a broad outline of the Government's new development plan, which would involve an expenditure of 876 million Straits dollars in the four years 1961-64.

The tax changes would produce about 10,500,000 Straits dollars in additional revenue.

SUDAN

A. Plea To End Martial Rule: An appeal to end the "state of alert" under which a military junta ruled Sudan was made in a Note signed by leading politicians and handed to the Supreme Armed Forces Command on November 29.

The Note declared that "government is not the function of the Army" and that a new Parliament should be set up and draw up a permanent Constitution following elections.

The Cabinet was convened to consider the Note, which was signed by 20 political representatives, including Siddik El Mahdi, leader of the powerful Ansar Sect, the leader of the Unionist Party, Mr. I. Azhary and the former Prime Minister, Mr. Abdullah Khalil.

A Government spokesmen, Gen. Tallat Farid, told newsmen in Khartoum on December 1 that the President, Gen. Ibrahim Abboud, had rejected the Note. He said: "We decided to ignore the Note completely and shall pursue the course of our Revolution."

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Preservation Of Nubian Monuments: Details of the removal of the Nubian monuments to places of safety, so that they might not be lost in the waters of the Nile when the Aswan High Dam was built, were made available by UNESCO on September 16.

The UNESCO Press release said:

"The dismantling of the first temples endangered by the waters of the Aswan High Dam has begun in Egyptian Nubia. These temples are being removed to safety under the direction of experts who are co-operating in UNESCO's campaign to save the threatened monuments.

"In Lower Nubia, the Egyptian Antiquities Service, with the assistance of two architects, a Pole (Mr. Dabrowski) and a Belgian (Mr. Stienon), has started to dismantle the temple of Debod so that it may be re-erected on Elephantine Island at Aswan.

"A smaller temple has already been removed from Taffeh and transported to Aswan by the Antiquities Service.

"Apart from these major operations, other important work is being carried out by teams from many nations now in the field in Nubia.

"An international team is studying all the technical problems involved in the removal of the monuments. Some temples are built of soft sand-stone which crumbles when touched and it is necessary to consolidate the stone before the dismantling starts. In other temples, which have already been restored 40 or 50 years ago, the problem is how to remove the cement binding the stones together without breaking them in the process.

"Another team is at present recording Greek and Roman inscriptions on the island of Philae, near Aswan. Also at Philae is a team of five French specialists in photogrammetry, while two other experts are there on behalf of the Netherlands Government to carry out a preliminary survey with a view to building a series of dykes which would enclose the island within an artificial lake, thus protecting its monuments from erosion by the Nile waters.

"As to the great rock temples of Abu Simbel—which rank among the most magnificent examples of architecture to come down to us from the ancient world—a preliminary survey on their protection has been completed by a firm of consulting engineers and their report will be submitted shortly to the Director-General of UNESCO."

through the sale of $7.5 million worth of US cotton and wheat flour to importers in Viet-Nam.

The Agreement made the commodities available without any use of Viet-Nam's foreign exchange. Piasters paid by the importers would go to the Government of Viet-Nam, plus additional customs and taxes, for use in development projects. Part of the amount would also be made available for industrial development loans.

Meanwhile, under another Agreement, the US Development Loan Fund (DLF) advanced $17.5 million to finance the foreign exchange costs of a project to improve Saigon's water supply.

The 3½ per cent interest on the loan would be paid half-yearly in Viet-Namese currency at free exchange rates applicable on the date of payment, the first of which would be due on December 1, 1961. The water system, getting its source from the Donai river, would be completed in four years.

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: UN Trusteeship Committee Meeting On Portuguese Trust Territories; UN Faces Financial Crisis; USSR Launches Third Space-Ship; USA Launches "Tiros"; Nobel Prizes for 1960; FAO Report On Agricultural Production In 1961.

A. UN Trusteeship Committee—Portugal Asked To Transmit Information To UN On Trust Territories: The UN Trusteeship Committee on November 11 recommended that the UN General Assembly request the Government of Portugal to transmit to UN information on territories under its administration in accordance with its obligations under the UN Charter.

It adopted a 12-nation draft resolution sponsored by Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, Ghana, Guinea, India, Iran, Liberia, Libya, Nepal, Nigeria and Senegal by a vote of 45 in favour, 6 against with 24 abstentions.

The resolution as adopted said that the General Assembly recalled "with satisfaction" a statement by Spain that it would transmit information to UN on its territories, and recommended that the UN Secretary-General "take the necessary steps in pursuance" of the declaration of Spain. The resolution also invited the Governments of Portugal and Spain to participate in the work of the Committee on Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories.

After the Committee had voted on the draft resolution as a whole, Mr. Alberto Franco Nogueira (Portugal) said he "categorically reserved the position of his Government." He also requested that these words be quoted in the Summary Records.

The Committee adopted another resolution on November 10 which would have the Assembly approve a set of principles concerning the obligation of member-States to transmit information on non-self-governing territories, in conformity with Article 73(e) of the Charter, in which this obligation and certain limitations to it were defined. This draft was sponsored by Bolivia, Iraq, Ireland, Nigeria and Venezuela. The voting was 38 in favour, 24 against, with 26 abstentions.

The set of twelve principles referred to in the resolution was drawn up by a Committee of Six, following a recommendation endorsed by the General Assembly in 1959.

The question of the obligation of Spain and Portugal to submit information to UN on current conditions in their territories in Africa, Asia and the Atlantic islands had been the subject of a nine-day debate in the Committee.

During the debate, in which more than fifty delegations were heard, a majority of representatives were critical of the stand taken by Spain and Portugal that the territories concerned did not fall under UN jurisdiction.

The 14 territories listed in the five-nation resolution were:

Spanish administration: Ifni, West Sahara, Fernando Po and Rio Muni (the last two islands in the Gulf of Guinea);

Portuguese administration: The Cape Verde Archipelago (including the Madeira Islands); Guinea (called Portuguese Guinea); Sao Tome and Principe and their dependencies. Sao Joao Baptista de Adjuda; Cabinda; Angola, Mozambique; Goa and dependencies (called "State of India"); Macao and dependencies; and Timor and dependencies.

Since attaining membership in UN in 1955, Portugal and Spain had maintained that the territories involved were "overseas provinces" of the homeland and as such did not come within the scope of the Charter's provisions for non-self-governing territories.

In the Committee's debate, the representative of Portugal, Mr. Alberto Franco Nogueira, again adduced a number of legal arguments on the issue. He held that the principles enumerated by the Committee of Six did not apply to Portugal.

He contended that the question before the Assembly concerned the strict interpretation of Article 73 of the Charter. Divergent interpretations had been placed on Article 73. The Committee of Six had tried to establish a set of principles which sought to implement the Article "without interpreting it."

He rejected the findings of the Committed of Six, which he described as being "one-sided," for they appeared to apply only to Spain and Portugal. He said he wondered whether the Committee's report would also apply to countries which used to be independent, but had been integrated without UN supervision, for instance, "the Baltic States."

His arguments were rebutted by a succession of speakers. A majority of representatives assailed Portugal and Spain for what they described as "old-fashioned colonialism" and for being "completely out of step with the times."

Several speakers pointed to the "wind of change" now sweeping across Africa and the movement for freedom. Such a movement, said Mr. Joseph A. Braimah (Ghana), could not be stopped by "legal and juridical formulas." He added that the so-called "overseas possessions" of Portugal could not be indefinitely isolated from the changes sweeping Africa.

Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon (India) noted that Portugal's claim for exemption from the provisions of Articles 73 and 74 of the Charter was "based on a play on the word 'territory'." He suggested that the word was intended to mean "areas." Articles 73 and 74 placed on UN the responsibility of demanding that such places were administered according to the Charter's provisions.

He also referred to Goa, the territory on India's west coast and said: "We have not as a Government taken any steps to spread the liberation movement into Goa, largely out of consideration for the repercussions it would have on national peace and security." But Goa was a "remnant of colonial rule and India reserved her right of liberation."

Other speakers felt that the time had passed for legal arguments and a discussion of general principles. Mr. M. I. Kuchava (USSR) held that the Committee should not waste time, but immediately take note of the fact that Portugal and Spain had since 1955 been under an unconditional obligation to transmit information about their colonies.

He said that the General Assembly should deal with the vital question of granting independence to all non-self-governing territories, including those of Portugal and Spain, where so many millions of people were victims of cruel oppression and deprived of all rights.

Mr. Manuel Aznar (Spain) stressing his country's desire to co-operate in the work of United Nations and regretted that political emotionalism had characterized the debate and prevented the Committee from seriously discussing the juridical problems dealt with by the Portuguese representative.

He had been "saddened and alarmed" by the trend which he considered to contradict the "true co-existence" aimed at in United Nations. He re-affirmed his offer made in the Assembly in 1959 to make available information to the Secretary-General information on all Spanish territories "within the peninsula" overseas. He added: "We have nothing to hide."

[The General Assembly set up in 1959 a Committee of Six to spell out "certain obligations of United Nations members" toward the peoples of non-self-governing territories. The Assembly, in a resolution on the subject, observed that member-States differed on the application of Chapter XI of the Charter, "including the obligation to transmit the information called for under Article 73(e)." It would, therefore, be desirable, if the General Assembly could enumerate the principles that should guide members in determining whether or not they were under an obligation to transmit information on non-self-governing territories.

The Committee of Six, composed of an equal number of administering and non-administering member-States, drew up in September, 1960 a series of 12 principles, as asked for by the Assembly.]

Vice-Admiral V. L. Alves' Comment:

The Portuguese Overseas Minister, Vice-Admiral Vasco Lopes Alves, said in a televised speech in Lisbon on November 15 that Portugal would not consent to any international control of her overseas territories.

Outlining his Government's attitude to the motion approved by the UN Trusteeship Committee asking Portugal to supply information about her overseas territories, he said: "We still keep our door open in Europe, in Africa or in Asia for all who may wish to visit us and see in good faith how we work and live, but we refuse to accept misinterpretations of the principles by which we are guided.

"We do not allow anyone to inspect us, nor do we permit any interference in the solution of internal problems. No one with any knowledge of the facts could expect from us a different attitude in any circumstances.

"Our position corresponds not only to the rights we have but, beyond them, to the responsibilities we have assumed, which, today as always, we shall know how to fulfil.

"The persistent conspiracy that has been in progress against Portugal aims at continuing the surrender of Western lands and peoples to the oppression and domination of international communist forces."

Dr. Salazar On Goa:

The Portuguese Prime Minister, Dr. Salazar, in a televised speech in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Lisbon on December 1, said it was "shocking" that India's leaders would not recognize Portugal's historical rights in Goa.

He said: "We noted that the Indian Union sought to restore its shaken prestige by eagerly assuming in UN the leading role in the Afro-Asian opposition to Portugal." It was India's hope that by multiplying difficulties faced by the various Portuguese territories she would be able to create greater facilities for her claims on Goa.

He added: "Not only on Goa, but on East Africa, on which it (India) also has designs. It also wishes to hand over Macao to China and Portuguese Timor to the Indonesian Republic, which has more than once stated that it has no claims to it.

"So it gave us great satisfaction to see that thousands of Goans in Kenya, in spite of the tempting offers and the pressure put upon them by Indian agents and in spite of their delicate situation in a foreign land revealed a few weeks ago at the inauguration of the Forte de Jesus at Mombasa and the statue of Vasco da Gama at Melinde, in the presence of our Ministers of the Presidency, how live, how deep and how sincere was their Portuguese spirit and devotion.

"We respect the Indian Union as a great Asian Power and in desiring to maintain relations of good neighbourliness, we are only doing our duty. We do not make a display of its rebellions, its famines, its epidemics, nor the victims of all kinds of shortages there.

"It is our duty to believe that the Indian Government does its utmost not to let its people die of hunger, to raise their standard of living, to diminish social differences.

"Yet it does not seem to us right and it is manifestly unjust, that the Indian Union should seek to disparage the civilization which breathes in our State of India by establishing a parallel between the two.

"It is, above all, shocking that the leaders of the Indian Union should declare that they do not recognize the historical right of Portugal or that they consider it forfeited by its very antiquity and that they should disregard the expressed wish of the population by insisting on annexation or absorption of others' territories.

"It is shocking to note the difficulty it has confessed to feeling in clearly understanding the scope of the verdict of the International Court of Justice on the right of transit to Dadra and Nagar Haveli.

"That verdict was given in our favour and now we have to see how it will be carried out. Because at present we are convinced that the international community needs to develop in terms of right and not in terms of force, it is our duty to do all that we can to bring this about.

"Goa is a little jewel that holds no interest for the Indian Union by its size and only interests us by virtue of the dictates of history; and interests the West by what it represents of the idea of fraternization or world intercourse that we planted there, which spread from it and which, much later, others think they have invented and seek to impose.

"That is why, if it was unwise to create the question, it would be even less wise to create a conflict, since we can neither negotiate nor compromise."

Trusteeship Committee—Debate On South-West Africa:

On November 23 Mr. Alpha Diallo (Guinea) told the Trusteeship Committee that he would table a resolution calling for sanctions against South Africa.

He said that other nations should subscribe to the resolution calling for the imposition of the "minimum sanction" or revoking the Union's mandate over South-West Africa.

The Committee was considering the situation in the territory, handed to South Africa in 1920 by the League of Nations.

Once the Mandate was revoked, he said, in explaining the outline of his resolution, South-West Africa should be placed directly under UN trusteeship, with a view to preparing it for independence as soon as possible.

He suggested that the first step towards such independence should be the establishment of an autonomous government and a legislative body.

Mr. S. I. Hussain (Pakistan) said that South-West Africa was "both a paradise and a hell". It was a paradise for the rich and hell for the poor. The rich were the Europeans and the poor the indigenous people, the children of the soil, to whom the territory really belonged.

He said: "The administration of South-West Africa is based on the policy of apartheid. The right of suffrage is the exclusive monopoly of Europeans. The native and coloured races have virtually no share in the administration of the territory in all its executive, legislative and judicial branches. The welfare of the natives and the coloured people has been subordinated to the policy of white supremacy."

He said that all far-sighted statesmen had read the writing on the wall and conceded the right of independence of the people under their subjugation.

He added: "Let us hope that the Union Government will do likewise before it is too late".

Resolution On South-West Africa Adopted:

A draft resolution, submitted by the Standing Committee on South-West Africa to the Trusteeship Committee, expressing concern that leaders of the South-West African People's Organization and other Africans in the territory were being subjected to arbitrary imprisonment and deportation and calling on the South African Government to see that this ceased and ensure the free exercise of political rights and freedom of expression by all sectors of the population, was approved by 62 votes to none by the Committee.

Eight nations abstained—Australia, Belgium, France, Italy, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Portugal and Britain.

Mr. Ali Yavar Jung (India) supported the idea of appointment of a Fact-Finding Committee to visit South-West Africa.

He also endorsed the view expressed by some delegates that specialized agencies of UN should play a "definite and well-directed role, assisting the well-being and development of the people of South-West Africa."

He urged that as an immediate measure, there should be a transition from mandate to trusteeship system provided for in the Charter.

Re-iterating India's objection to the integration of South-West Africa and South Africa, he said that the days of empire-building were gone.

On November 23, the US delegate told the Committee that USA supported the demand that South-West Africa should be given the status of Trusteeship.

He said that his country would back any resolution which would recognize a move by Ethiopia and Liberia to bring the issue before the World Court.

Also on November 23, Mr. Oddmund Hoel (Norway) described South Africa's policies in the territory of South-West Africa as more obsolete than ever.

He said that the Report of the Committee on South-West Africa offered very few indications, if any, that the Union was prepared to heed the appeals of the international community.

Ethiopia and Liberia Ask For World Court Ruling On South-West Africa:

The Governments of Ethiopia and Liberia, which had accused the Union of South Africa of practising a policy of apartheid in the territory of South-West Africa, on November 4 asked the International Court of Justice for a ruling.

Proceedings were filed in the Court at The Hague by representatives of the two countries.

At a news conference in New York, Mr. Ernest A. Gross, Counsel for Ethiopia and Liberia, said that the purpose of the step taken by the two Governments was to obtain from the Court an order that would prevail upon the Government of South Africa to cease the practice of apartheid in South-West Africa and to desist from this and other policies of discrimination in the territory. The question of South-West Africa had been with UN for 15 years, he said, and it was only logical that an effort was now made at attempting a solution through a legal approach.

The institution of proceedings before the World Court was unanimously recommended by representatives of independent African States at a Conference held in Addis Ababa in June, 1960.

In their applications filed in the Court, Ethiopia and Liberia invoked the Court's jurisdiction under Article 7 of the League of Nations Mandate for South-West Africa. In that Article, the Union had agreed to submit to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the fore-runner of the World Court, any dispute with "another member of the League of Nations relating to the interpretation or the application of the provisions of the Mandate...." Ethiopia and Liberia were members of the League of Nations.

B. UN Faces Financial Crisis: A message from UN Headquarters on November 27 said that United Nations was facing a new crisis—a threat of bankruptcy.

With costs of UN operations in Congo alone running to almost $10,000,000 a month, and only a trickle of cash coming in, the international Budget could be $20,000,000 by December 31.

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, in a Report which UN delegations and their Governments were urgently considering, said that the financial crisis was grave.

According to informed sources at UN Headquarters, there was a prospect that UN might have to borrow from commercial banks. Mr. Hammarskjoeld himself spoke cautiously of seeking funds from "special accounts".

Breaking down the complicated financial statistics of the world Organization, Mr. Hammarskjoeld said in his Report to the Budgetary Committee that without allowing for further expenditure in 1960 in the Congo, there would be a deficit of $2,000,000 by December 31. This compared with a credit balance of $16,500,000 on January 1.

Observing that the outlook was "somewhat worse" than this estimate indicated, he explained that it was vital to maintain a minimum balance of not less than $2,000,000 in the general fund and $1,000,000 for the Emergency Force in the Middle East.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In addition, an estimated $15,000,000 would be required for the Congo until the end of 1960, raising the total estimated deficit to $20 million.

He said that unless this money was found, UN might be forced to withdraw its forces from the Congo. He declared: "The choice must be squarely faced".

The main financial burden borne by UN at present was the Congo operation, which would have cost an estimated $66,000,000 by the end of 1960, more than the world Organization's usual Budget. In addition, a special fund to cover the young Republic's budget and trade deficits aimed at $100,000,000.

States were making voluntary contributions to this Fund. But so far, only about $12,500,000 had been donated. The Soviet bloc countries had refused to contribute, claiming that Mr. Hammarskjoeld had exceeded his authority and favoured "colonialist" policies. The Soviet Union and her allies had also refused to pay towards the UN Emergency Force in the Middle East. Arrears in contributions since this force was established amounted to $22,500,000.

Apart from these special costs, UN had to find cash for its normal day-to-day functions. For 1961, the estimated Budget was almost $67,500,000. This money came from member-States which were assessed on a percentage basis, with USA paying one-third. The Soviet Union came next with 13.62 per cent, followed by Britain and France who paid 7.78 per cent and 6.40 per cent, respectively.

At the other end of the scale were the newly-emergent African countries, most of which paid 7.4 per cent of the Budget —about $17,000.

The Soviet Union was more than $3,500,000 in arrears in its 1960 contributions, while Kuomintang China owed UN $2,500,000 for 1960. Most of the other States owed smaller amounts, but the total arrears now ran to more than $11,000,000. Britain, France and USA were among those who had paid up all their debts.

As a rule, little more than 10 per cent of Budget assessments was paid by the end of March and UN was lucky if it received half its Budget by the end of June.

He said that there would be a "virtually empty treasury" unless Governments produced $20,000,000 in the next six weeks.

He added that the 10-million-dollar-a-month Congo operation was in danger of liquidation and immediate measures must be taken if solvency was to be preserved.

In his statement to the Budgetary Committee, he did not allude specifically to the Soviet bloc countries' refusal to finance either the Congo operation or the UN Emergency Force in West Asia, but he did rebut Soviet charges that he had "pursued a lavish and extravagant spending policy". He said that there had been no extravagant expenditures or uncalled for expansion of the UN structure.

He said that while "the operation" in the Congo was unanimously considered "essential and vital", it was a different matter when it came to agreeing on cash contributions or extra assessment. The "rate of disbursement" of finances for the Congo would have to be increased. The current civil operation there was operating on such modest resources that it could "only keep the head of the Congolese economy above water" and the Republic needed much more money.

If UN did not fill the vacuum there under its own flag, he warned that it would be filled from other sources.

Senator George Aiken (USA) announced in the Budgetary Committee on November 29 that USA would pay more than her share of the UN Congo operation costs so as to halve the burden on less wealthy States.

The Committee was considering supplementary estimates totalling $66,625,000 for the organization, operation and maintenance during 1960 of the UN force in Congo.

It also had before it a recommendation from the Advisory Committee on the Congo that the expenses during 1960 should be held at $60,000,000. The Advisory Committee also expressed the hope that if countries that had helped to transport and supply UN troops would forgo payment, the 1960 expenditure could be substantially reduced.

Mr. Aiken said that over and above her assessed share of the Congo costs, USA would contribute between $3.5 to $4 million in cash. In addition, he announced that his Government would waive repayment of more than $10 million for the airlifting of UN contingents.

He said that the exact cash pledge would depend on the final assessments, which in turn would be determined by whether or not other Governments waived claims against UN.

The cash contribution would be made on the understanding that it would be used to provide a 50 per cent reduction of the contributions of Governments whose capacity to pay was limited.

C. UN Mission On Hungary Fails: The UN General Assembly's Special Representative on Hungary, Sir Leslie Munro, submitting his Report to UN on December 2, said that he had failed in his mission to try to promote Hungarian and Soviet compliance with UN General Assembly resolutions on the question.

He said that Hungary was under foreign domination and the presence of Soviet troops denied the people the elementary human right of freely choosing their Government.

He described the issue confronting UN over Hungary as that of "the right of a small people to shake off oppressive and alien domination in order to freely determine its destinies."

He said that the UN record in the case of Hungary contrasted sadly with successes achieved in other instances in which members had "loyally responded to the resolutions of the General Assembly or the Security Council."

The Report contained the texts of communications between Sir Leslie and the Hungarian and Soviet authorities, in which he sought an opportunity to visit Budapest, but they had ignored his request.

A letter from the Hungarian Mission in New York to Mr. Hammarskjoeld said that it was not "possible to give an answer to the letter of Mr. Munro."

The Mission also asked Mr. Hammarskjoeld to "use his authority to put an end to the recurring attempts at interference, highly offending the sovereignty" of Hungary.

D. USSR Launches Third Space-Ship With Two Dogs Aboard: The Soviet Union on December 1 sent two dogs into space in its third space ship—a five-ton satellite equipped with delicate scientific equipment.

It circled the Earth once every 88.6 minutes.

A Tass announcement on the launching said:

"In accordance with the programme of scientific research, the third space-ship was orbited as an Earth satellite from the Soviet Union on December 1, 1960.

"For medical-biological research in the conditions of a space flight, experimental animals—dogs named Pchelka and Musha —have been placed in the cabin of the space-ship. In the cabin there are other animals, insects and plants.

"The experimental animals are being watched by means of radio, television and telemetric systems, which play back objective physiological data characterizing the state of the animals. The scientific measuring instrumentation installed in the space-ship provides for several scientific investigations of outer-space physics.

"The weight of the third Soviet space-ship, without the last stage of the carrier-rocket, amounts to 4,563 milograms (nearly five tons). It moves along an elliptical orbit; according to preliminary data, the initial rotation period of the sputnik-ship along its orbit equals 88.5 minutes.

"The orbit's inclination to the equatorial plane is 65 degrees.

"The sputnik-ship is provided with a signal transmitter, which operates on the frequency of 19.995 megacycles in the regime of telegraph signals of variable duration.

"The instrumentation is fed from chemical and solar sources of electricity. According to available preliminary data, all the instrumentation on board the ship functions normally. The ground radio technical stations are tracking the third Soviet sputnik-ship regularly."

Tass added that the space-ship would pass over Rome, Leningrad, Paris, Peking, London and Hanoi.

Burns Up:

Moscow Radio said on the night of December 2 that the third Soviet space-ship had been given orders to land and had been destroyed while entering the denser layers of the atmosphere.

It added that the last stage of the carrier-rocket continued to orbit.

A statement issued by Tass said: "By noon (Moscow Time) on December 2, the third Soviet space-ship satellite continued its movement around the globe. By that time, the planned programme had been fully accomplished for testing the design of the ship with the systems installed in it, for medical-biological research and also the planned volume of outer space exploration.

"Supplementary data had been obtained on the effect of the organism of animals of various factors arising at the time of the orbiting of the Sputnik and on the behaviour of test animals in the conditions of space-flight.

"Measuring and television equipment has yielded scientific information on the functioning of the cardiac-vascular and respiratory systems of the test animals and their behaviour while affected by vibration, over-load noise and weightlessness.

"The results of the processing of the information received from aboard the space-ship satellite show that the dogs bore easily enough the period of orbiting, and that the activity of their organism soon returned to normal.

"The results of the tests transmitted to Earth confirmed that the systems designed to secure subsequently the necessary conditions for the normal life of man in flight —air-conditioning, heat regulation, communications, etc. — functioned quite reliably.

"The information obtained yielded fresh data for manned space flight in the near future."

Tass added that after the receipt of the necessary data, the signal was given for the return to Earth of the space-ship. The space-ship did not descend along the calculated trajectory and, therefore, burned out while entering the dense layers of the atmosphere.

E. USA Launches "Tiros": US scientists on November 23 launched a 280-lb satellite, Tiros.

Designed to orbit 400 miles above the Earth, it would send back information about the weather, which would be relayed to about 15 countries.

Tiros was expected to circle the Earth once every 100 minutes.

F. US "Polaris" Submarine Launched: The US nuclear-powered submarine, George Washington, left its harbour on November 16 for two years at sea, armed with Polaris missiles with hydrogen bomb warheads.

The submarine, said to be the most heavily-armed vessel ever, is the first Polaris submarine sent into the Atlantic on what the US Navy called a "war deterrent mission".

Earlier, in Augusta, President D. D. Eisenhower issued a statement hailing the mission, which, he said, inaugurated a new technique of deterring war.

The Commander of the US Navy's Sixth District, Rear-Admiral K. M. MacMames said that the 380-ft-long George Washington would carry a destructive capacity "equal to all the bombs dropped during World War II".

G. Moon's Reverse Side—Soviet Map Published: Moscow Radio reported on November 6 that an Atlas of the reverse side of the Moon had been published in the Soviet Union.

It had been completed after a team of astronomers had worked on the signals received from the automatic inter-planetary station, Lunik IV, launched on October 4, 1959.

The Atlas contained a catalogue of newly-discovered objects and a map of the reverse side of the Moon.

H. Centre For World Religions Inaugurated In USA: The Vice-President of India, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan on November 21 inaugurated a new Centre for the study of world religions at Harvard University (USA).

In his inaugural address, he said that knowledge of other religions was essential if people wanted to live in harmony with others and commended the idea of providing a meeting place for scholars of all faiths.

He said: "In every religion, we have people who do not believe in provincialism, who emphasize religion as an experience to be attained by self-conquest and self-transformation, an appreciation of other faiths and a sense of loyalty to the world community.

"We must set aside differences caused by accidents of geography and history and accept universal ideas transmitted by common heritage. It should become as normal for an American or a European student to be familiar with civilizations of the East—Chinese, Japanese and Indian—as he is now with the basis of European civilization in Greek, Roman and Judaic cultures".

The Centre was started in 1959 as a pilot project with four participants, including India.

The $500,000 two-storey building, constructed out of donations bequeathed in their wills by persons who desired to remain anonymous, has 18 apartments, each with a separate kitchen, so that the inmates, if they have any dietary restrictions, can observe them according to their religion.

The Centre would be part of the Harvard Divinity School, which trains future Christian ministers.

I. Nobel Prizes For 1960: It was announced by the Nobel Prize Committee in Stockholm on October 20 that the Nobel Prize for Medicine for 1960 had been awarded jointly to Professor Peter Bryan Medawar (Britain) and Professor Frank Macfarlane Burnet (Australia).

Literature:

The French poet, Saint John Perse, was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature.

The 70-year-old French poet writes under the name of Saint John Perse, but his real name is Alexis Leger. He is a former member of the French diplomatic service.

Chemistry:

It was announced on November 3 that Professor Willard F. Libby (USA) had been awarded the Nobel Prize for Chemistry.

The Colorado-born chemist was a member of the US Atomic Energy Commission from 1954 until 1959.

The Nobel award was for "his method of using carbon-14 for age determination in archaeology, geology, geophysics and other branches of science."

Physics:

The Nobel Prize for Physics was awarded on November 3 to Professor Glaser of the Ann Arbor University (Michigan) for his discovery of the "bubble chamber".

The "bubble chamber" is a chamber containing transparent liquid—such as liquid hydrogen—so highly super-heated that an ionizing particle moving through it starts violent boiling by initiating the growth of a string of bubbles along its path.

No Peace Prize:

The Nobel Prize Committee on October 28 decided not to award a Peace Prize for 1960.

About 30 candidates had been recommended to the Committee for the Prize, which would have been worth 225,936 Swedish kroner (about £15,585).

This was the third year since 1955 that the Nobel Peace Prize had not been awarded. In 1959, it went to Mr. Philip Noel-Baker, the British Labour member of Parliament.

In 1958, it was awarded to the Belgian refugee worker, Father Pire and the previous year the recipient was Mr. Lester Pearson of Canada.

The Prize was not awarded in 1955 or 1956.

K. Agricultural Production In 1961—FAO Report: A Report by the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) released in Rome on October 24 said that world agricultural production was likely to increase in 1960-61.

It predicted record outputs for wheat, sugar, fats and oils, meat, cotton and some other commodities.

A Report by the Organization's economic analysis division said that the large grain crops in exporting countries in Autumn, 1960 made it certain that stocks of wheat and coarse grains would rise sharply in 1960-61 and coffee stocks would also rise further.

It said that prices for agricultural products had varied little in 1960 as compared with 1959, but there might have been "a slight further worsening" in their relation to the prices of manufactured goods.

It added that near-record wheat and coarse-grain yields in North America and large exportable supplies from the Southern Hemisphere would make it almost certain that stocks of coarse grains would continue to rise sharply and that increase in wheat stocks, halted in 1959-60, would be resumed.

Prospects for Indian and Pakistani rice had been worsened by droughts and floods, but Japan was expected to harvest a record crop. Near Eastern grain crops were again below average, though better than those of 1959.

The main uncertainties of the grain situation related to the Soviet Union and mainland China. Earlier prospects of a larger grain harvest in the Soviet Union had been upset by bad weather, while East Germany and Poland were likely to have smaller crops. Official information from mainland China showed that its grain production would fall below production goals due to bad weather.

Milk production in Western Europe had recovered from the 1959 setback and butter production was likely to be 8 to 10 per cent higher. But butter consumption had not yet fully recovered from the effects of high prices in 1959. Appreciable stocks had accumulated and there were signs of "a possible glut" in the United Kingdom market.

Regarding other commodities, world coffee production would be smaller in 1960-61 than the very large crop of the preceding period, while cocoa production might be somewhat lower.

ANNUAL INDEX 1960

(COPYRIGHT)

This ANNUAL INDEX of ASIAN RECORDER for 1960 amalgamates the three quarterly indices issued to you during the year and incorporates the index for the last quarter-period of September 10 to December 31, 1960. It is, therefore, a FULL INDEX of ASIAN RECORDER covering the complete Volume No. VI (issues Nos. 1 to 52 of 1960).

Immediately on receipt of this ANNUAL INDEX, please DISCARD the three quarterly indices in blue and pink colours from your file and insert this at the end of the Volume.

The INDEX has been compiled on the Dictionary Method and arranged alphabetically with certain form-headings under different countries. Some new form-headings have been adopted in the quarterly indices for the year 1960 and followed up in this ANNUAL INDEX. The former form-heading FOOD AND AGRICULTURE has been bifurcated into two form-headings—as FOOD and as AGRICULTURE. IRRIGATION AND POWER becomes a new form-heading. The form-heading of EDUCATION now includes SCIENCE as well. Apart from these and the usual departmental form-headings, some of the special form-headings used as previously are: ATOMIC ENERGY, CANAL WATERS, CENTO, COMMUNISM, COMMONWEALTH, DISARMAMENT, KASHMIR, MISSILES, OUTER SPACE and ROCKETS.

Ten new countries have been included in this INDEX, namely CHAD, DAHOMEY, FIJI, FRENCH CONGO, GUINEA, IVORY COAST, MALAGASY (formerly Madagascar), MALI, NIGER and UPPER VOLTA under the respective alphabets.

The Sino-Indian border developments and further correspondence on the subject are dealt with both under CHINA and under INDIA. The Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference is dealt with under C and under GREAT BRITAIN. The racial demonstrations in South Africa merit a separate entry under APARTHEID, under A. The African Foreign Ministers' Conference is dealt with both under alphabet A and Ethiopia. The American U-2 and RB-47 reconnaissance bomber plane incidents are given under USA and USSR as well as under U and R respectively.

The abbreviations for countries as well as the usual form-headings are given in the explanatory note on how to use the INDEX pasted on the inside of the back-cover of the binder under the heading INDEX EXPLAINED.

INDEX EXPLAINED

For easy use of material in ASIAN RECORDER, a Dictionary Index is provided.

The material is arranged alphabetically by countries under the following main form-headings: Accidents and Disasters; Agriculture; Atomic Energy; Budget (with see also cross-reference to Finance); Civilization and Culture; Commerce and Industry; Communications; Constitution; Defence; Economic Conditions; Education; Elections; Finance; Fine Arts; Foreign Relations; Health and Hygiene; International Meetings; Labour and Labour Classes; Land Reforms; Legislation; Planning; Politics and Government; Religion; Social Conditions; and Sport.

To find the exact location of a text, you can see under the first alphabet of the first word of an item, or under the country to which an item refers under the appropriate form-heading.

This is how it is done. After describing the item in a slug-line, its page-number is given, followed by the abbreviation of the country and the index alphabet allotted to it, each separated by a colon.

Example : (Under I)
INDIA

INTERNATIONAL MEETINGS
Asian-Lawyers' Conference 45 :INI :U

In the case of material listed under ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA and SPORT, individual countries and items are mentioned alphabetically. Besides, SPORT is listed under the countries participating.

The following are abbreviations of the countries used :

Aden	—ADN	Israel	—	ISR	Philippines	—	PHI
